Case Notes

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

Pursuit of Traffic Offender Onto Reservation Allowed — Good Faith Exception to Exclusionary Rule Applicable to Evidence Seized During Arrest of Tribal Member by Nontribal Officers on Reservation: Bird was observed by city police officer Olson driving recklessly in Cut Bank, but when Olson attempted to stop Bird, a chase ensued onto the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, where Bird was eventually stopped and held by the city police officer and an assisting county officer. When the officers were informed that Bird was an enrolled tribal member, they notified a tribal police officer, who arrested Bird and a passenger, and transported them off the reservation and back into Cut Bank in violation of the extradition provision of the Blackfeet Tribal Code. Bird was subsequently charged in City Court with reckless driving and was convicted. Bird appealed to District Court, moving to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction and to suppress evidence of activities and statements after the vehicle crossed onto the reservation. The District Court found that the city officer did not have jurisdiction to arrest Bird on the reservation and granted Bird's motion to suppress. The state appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Pursuant to U.S. v. Patch, 114 F3d 131 (9th Cir. 1997), under the doctrine of hot pursuit, once the officer observed an offense occur within his jurisdiction, he had authority to pursue the violator onto the reservation in order to make an arrest. Further, the evidence was erroneously suppressed because the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule, discussed in St. v. Nahee, 745 P2d 172 (Ariz. App. 1987), applied. The city and county officers acted in good faith reliance that the tribal officer would carry out the arrest and extradition in a manner conforming to tribal code procedures, and it was the tribal officer who neglected to follow the tribal code. The primary purpose of the exclusionary rule—to ensure that law enforcement is not rewarded by violating a defendant's constitutional rights and to deter such conduct in the future—would not be served by sanctioning the city and county officers for a mistake in which they had no part. Failure to follow tribal extradition procedures did not warrant exclusion of the evidence in this case. Cut Bank v. Bird, 2001 MT 296, 307 M 460, 38 P3d 804 (2001). See also State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976).

Gambling — Non-Indian Defendants for Crimes Committed on Reservation — Criminal Law Jurisdiction — Standing: The state has jurisdiction over non-Indian defendants for crimes committed on the reservation when there is no Indian victim. Non-Indian defendants do not have standing to raise the argument that the action of the state interferes with the self-government of the Blackfeet Reservation. The state has authority to regulate gambling by non-Indians on the Blackfeet Reservation. State ex rel. Poll v. District Court, 257 M 512, 851 P2d 405, 50 St. Rep. 387 (1993).

No Federal or Tribal Recognition as Indian — Not Indian for Purposes of Criminal Jurisdiction: Defendant who was adopted by an Indian parent but who failed to submit proof that his adoptive parent's tribe recognized him as an Indian and who is not an enrolled member of any Indian tribe and receives no federal benefits as an Indian is not an Indian for purposes of criminal jurisdiction. State ex rel. Poll v. District Court, 257 M 512, 851 P2d 405, 50 St. Rep. 387 (1993).

Two-Prong Test Adopted for Determining Indian Status: In a criminal case, the defendant argued that his conviction should be overturned on the basis that he was an Indian and the state did not have jurisdiction to prosecute him. The Supreme Court specifically adopted the two-prong test for determining Indian status established in U. S. v. Rogers, 45 US 567, 11 L Ed 1105 (1846), in ruling that the defendant was not an Indian. The test adopted by the court was: (1) the defendant must have a significant amount of Indian blood; and (2) the defendant must have federal or tribal recognition as an Indian. St. v. La Pier, 242 M 335, 790 P2d 983, 47 St. Rep. 760 (1990), followed in State ex rel. Poll v. District Court, 257 M 512, 851 P2d 405, 50 St. Rep. 387 (1993).

Federal Employers' Liability Act Suits Brought in State Court — Governed by Federal Decisions: The Supreme Court held that its decision in Anderson v. Burlington N., 218 M 456, 709 P2d 641 (1985), concerning a federal employer's right to an offset for sickness payments to an employee was no longer controlling in light of the federal court of appeals decision in Folkestead v. Burlington N., 813 F2d 1377 (9th Cir. 1987). The court stated that although a FELA suit may be brought in either state or federal court, federal court decisions control with respect to the interpretation of federal laws. Kalanick v. Burlington N. RR Co., 242 M 45, 788 P2d 901, 47 St. Rep. 532 (1990).

Tort Suits Against Production Credit Associations — Applicability of Federal Tort Claims Act: The District Court properly dismissed a tort claim against a production credit association (PCA) for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. A PCA is properly considered an instrumentality under 12 U.S.C. 2091, and tort claims against instrumentalities acting primarily as agents of the United States must be pursued under the Federal Tort Claims Act according to 28 U.S.C. 2679. Tooke v. Miles City Prod. Credit Ass'n, 234 M 387, 763 P2d 1111, 45 St. Rep. 1993 (1988), citing In re Sparkman, 703 F2d 1097 (9th Cir. 1983).

Crow Tribal Court — Exclusive Jurisdiction Over Divorces: The Crow tribal court exercises exclusive jurisdiction over divorce actions between tribal members living on the reservation by virtue of the duly enacted Crow tribal code. State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290 (1980). See also In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998).

Arrest of Indian on the Reservation Valid if Crime Committed off the Reservation: Petitioner, a Crow Indian, was arrested within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation for a crime committed off the Reservation. The court followed State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976), which held that the arrest of an Indian on a reservation for a crime committed off the reservation was a valid arrest. In re Little Light, 183 M 52, 598 P2d 572 (1979).

U.S. Sovereignty Over Airspace: The Airborne Hunting Act, 16 U.S.C. § 742j-1 is a constitutional exercise of Congressional authority over national airspace. The United States exercises complete and exclusive national sovereignty in the airspace of the United States under the commerce clause of the United States Constitution and implementing legislation. U.S. v. Helsley, 615 F2d 784 (9th Cir. 1979), reversing U.S. v. Helsley, 463 F. Supp. 1111 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Arrest Within Boundaries of Reservation: When a Sheriff arrested a member of the Crow Tribe within the boundaries of the Crow Indian Reservation under authority of a warrant issued by a Justice of the Peace of the state and the tribal judge refused to authorize an arrest, the arrest was valid and not an interference with the right to self-government of the Tribe because the Tribe had not adopted an extradition procedure. State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976).

Attorney General's Opinions

Canadian Indians: The state has jurisdiction over the prosecution of offenses committed by Canadian Indians within the Fort Peck Indian Reservation when those offenses are committed against a non-Indian. 37 A.G. Op. 7 (1977).

Cession and Retrocession of Jurisdiction

Part Case Notes

Offense on Federal Forest Property — No Reservation of Exclusive Federal Jurisdiction or Preemption by Federal Law: Wagner was observed by federal officials while he was trying to collect marijuana grown in the Kootenai National Forest and was subsequently arrested and convicted under state law for attempted sale of the drug. After conviction, his counsel filed a petition for postconviction relief, alleging that Wagner's former counsel was ineffective for failing to raise a lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Citing section 4 of The Enabling Act and 16 U.S.C. 480, the Supreme Court found that there was no intent by Congress to reserve exclusive federal jurisdiction over national forest property. Citing 21 U.S.C. 903, 21 U.S.C. 841, and cases from other jurisdictions, the Supreme Court also held that there is no conflict between federal drug laws and 45-9-103. The Supreme Court therefore concluded that the state courts had jurisdiction over the offense and that Wagner's counsel was not ineffective for failing to raise the issue of lack of jurisdiction. Wagner v. St., 270 M 26, 889 P2d 1189, 52 St. Rep. 61 (1995).

2-1-201. Jurisdiction in federal enclaves.

Case Notes

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court

erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

Tribal Jurisdiction Over Nontribal Railroad for Ad Valorem Taxation — Application of Montana Versus U.S. Exception Requires Rule 56(f) Limited Discovery to Meet Motion for Summary Judgment: The tribes on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation (the tribes) appealed from a summary judgment by the U.S. District Court in favor of the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroad Co. (BN) finding that under the holding of the U.S. Supreme Court in Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544 (1981), the tribes had no jurisdiction to impose an ad valorem tax upon the BN right-of-way originally granted by Congress to BN's predecessor in interest. The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals held that because under Strate v. A-1 Contractors, 520 US 438 (1997), a federally granted right-of-way is to be treated as non-Indian fee land, either of the two exceptions granting Indian jurisdiction over non-Indian fee land within a reservation that were discussed in the Mont. v. U.S. case must apply if the tribes were to lawfully collect the tax on BN. The court of appeals held that the first Mont. v. U.S. exception did not apply because there was no consent by BN to the exercise of tribal jurisdiction. The second exception, jurisdiction based upon conduct that threatens the political integrity, economic security, or health or welfare of the tribes, the court of appeals held, could be found to exist if the facts showed such a threat to exist in any of the trains that carried toxic or hazardous material across the reservation. However, because the District Court had denied the tribes' motion under Rule 56(f), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the tribes were unable to present sufficient facts demonstrating a threat as the basis for jurisdiction. The court of appeals therefore reversed the District Court and instructed it to allow such discovery as the tribes needed in order to demonstrate the required threat to the tribes posed by the existence of BN trains on the reservation. Burlington N. Santa Fe RR Co. v. Assiniboine & Sioux Tribes of the Fort Peck Reservation, 323 F3d 767 (9th Cir. 2003).

Common-Law Recognition and Sovereignty of Little Shell Tribe — Suit Against Tribal Officials Barred: Plaintiffs were candidates in an election of the Little Shell Tribe of Indians and sued in Montana District Court for tort damages and injunctive relief against the incumbent candidates, claiming that plaintiffs had won the election. The District Court dismissed on grounds of lack of jurisdiction, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court noted that the tribe had been pursuing federal tribal recognition since the 1930s, but as yet, the tribe is not recognized by the federal government. Nevertheless, Montoya v. U.S., 180 US 261 (1901), establishes criteria for common-law recognition of a tribe. The court examined the Montoya criteria and held that the Little Shell Tribe satisfied each element of the test for common-law recognition, so the tribe is entitled to sovereignty. Tribal members are of the same or similar race, are united in a community, exist under one leadership or government, and inhabit a particular though sometimes ill-defined territory. Further, under Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 US 49 (1978), Indian tribes and their officials enjoy sovereign immunity from suit unless expressly limited by Congress. Thus, because the tribal officials in this case were acting in their official capacities, suit against them in state court was barred under the doctrine of sovereign immunity. Dismissal of the action by the District Court for lack of jurisdiction was affirmed. Koke v. Little Shell Tribe of Chippewa Indians of Mont., Inc., 2003 MT 121, 315 M 510, 68 P3d 814 (2003).

Imposition of Corporate License Tax on Tribally Chartered Corporation Conducting Business Entirely on Indian Reservation Considered Infringement of Tribal Sovereignty and Self-Government Authority: The Department of Revenue sought to impose the state corporate license tax on Flat Center Farms, Inc. (Flat Center). The District Court found that the tax may not be imposed on an Indian-owned corporation that does business entirely within the boundaries of an Indian reservation. The state appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Flat Center was incorporated pursuant to the laws of Montana and chartered by the Fort Peck Tribe as a tribal corporation, with its sole business activity consisting of farming located entirely within the exterior boundaries of the Fort Peck Reservation. The corporation was wholly Indian owned, the beneficiaries of the corporate income were ultimately Indians, and the assets generating the income were Indian trust lands. The longstanding rule set out in Mescalero Apache Tribe v. Jones, 411 US 145 (1973), is that a state is without power to tax reservation lands and Indian income generated from on-reservation activities without the express authorization of Congress. Further, under Williams v. Lee, 358 US 217 (1959), the exercise of state jurisdiction over activities occurring entirely on Indian lands is an infringement on inherent tribal authority and is contrary to principles of self-government and tribal sovereignty. Nevertheless, the state contended that, as a nontribal member with a corporate identity distinct from its stockholders, Flat Center did not enjoy the shield from state taxation afforded to tribes and tribal members. However, under LaRoque v. St., 178 M 315, 583 P2d 1059 (1978), tribal membership is not essential to a determination of whether income earned on a reservation is taxable. Flat Center did not "carry on business in the state" because all of its activities were conducted in Indian country, so its income was not earned in Montana. The state's taxation authority is statutorily limited based on the situs of the activity from which income is earned. Thus, the District Court correctly concluded that the corporation license tax may not be imposed on a tribally chartered corporation that does business entirely within a reservation. Flat Center Farms, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, 2002 MT 140, 310 M 206, 49 P3d 578 (2002).

Pursuit of Traffic Offender Onto Reservation Allowed — Good Faith Exception to Exclusionary Rule Applicable to Evidence Seized During Arrest of Tribal Member by Nontribal Officers on Reservation: Bird was observed by city police officer Olson driving recklessly in Cut Bank, but when Olson attempted to stop Bird, a chase ensued onto the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, where Bird was eventually stopped and held by the city police officer and an assisting county officer. When the officers were informed that Bird was an enrolled tribal member, they notified a tribal police officer, who arrested Bird and a passenger, and transported them off the reservation and back into Cut Bank in violation of the extradition provision of the Blackfeet Tribal Code. Bird was subsequently charged in City Court with reckless driving and was convicted. Bird appealed to District Court, moving to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction and to suppress evidence of activities and statements after the vehicle crossed onto the reservation. The District Court found that the city officer did not have jurisdiction to arrest Bird on the reservation and granted Bird's motion to suppress. The state appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Pursuant to U.S. v. Patch, 114 F3d 131 (9th Cir. 1997), under the doctrine of hot pursuit, once the officer observed an offense occur within his jurisdiction, he had authority to pursue the violator onto the reservation in order to make an arrest. Further, the evidence was erroneously suppressed because the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule, discussed in St. v. Nahee, 745 P2d 172 (Ariz. App. 1987), applied. The city and county officers acted in good faith reliance that the tribal officer would carry out the arrest and extradition in a manner conforming to tribal code procedures, and it was the tribal officer who neglected to follow the tribal code. The primary purpose of the exclusionary rule—to ensure that law enforcement is not rewarded by violating a defendant's constitutional rights and to deter such conduct in the future—would not be served by sanctioning the city and county officers for a mistake in which they had no part. Failure to follow tribal extradition procedures did not warrant exclusion of the evidence in this case. Cut Bank v. Bird, 2001 MT 296, 307 M 460, 38 P3d 804 (2001). See also State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976).

Indians — Subject Matter Jurisdiction Over Dissolution of Marriage — Different Residences of Parties — Factors to Be Considered — Bertelson Followed: Stacey, an enrolled member of the Fort Peck Tribes, married Shane, a non-Indian. After the marriage ceremony, Stacey returned to the Fort Peck Indian Reservation and Shane went to Forsyth, where his parents lived and where he worked. Some time later, Stacey had a child who also became an enrolled member and lived with Stacey on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation. Still later, Shane filed a dissolution action in a state District Court. The District Court ordered joint custody and ordered that Shane would be the primary residential custodian. Approximately 1 month later, the Fort Peck Tribal Court awarded temporary custody to Stacey. She then filed a motion in District Court under former Rules 12(h) and 60, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), to dismiss Shane's dissolution action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The District Court held that it had subject matter jurisdiction over the case and issued a final decree of dissolution. In that decree, the District Court held that the parties' child had significant contacts both off and on the reservation, held that the District Court shared concurrent jurisdiction with the tribal court, and therefore denied Stacey's motion to dismiss. The Supreme Court reviewed its previous holdings regarding tribal jurisdiction and child custody jurisdiction under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. The Supreme Court also reviewed the purposes of the Indian Child Welfare Act, which, while not strictly applicable to the case before it, cautions that state courts should be careful not to erode the sovereignty of tribes and tribal courts. In reliance upon In re Bertelson, 189 M 524, 617 P2d 121 (1980), the Supreme Court held that the best interests of the child should be determined and followed in deciding whether a state or tribal court has jurisdiction for the purposes of awarding custody but that when an Indian child resides off the reservation, state courts and tribal courts share concurrent jurisdiction. The Supreme Court then held, in further reliance upon Bertelson, that even when jurisdiction is concurrent, it does not mean that states courts should exercise jurisdiction and that in deciding whether to exercise concurrent jurisdiction, the state courts should consider: (1) 40-4-102, 40-4-107, 40-4-211, and 40-7-108; (2) certain policy issues; and (3) the residence of the parties pursuant to 1-1-215. For this reason, the Supreme Court remanded the case to the District Court for a determination of the residence of Stacey and her child, saying that if the District Court determines that both reside on the reservation, the District Court must dismiss the case. However, if the District Court finds that Stacey's child is not a resident of the reservation and that the District Court shares jurisdiction with the tribal court, the District Court must then consider factors from Bertelson, previously discussed by the Supreme Court, to determine whether the District Court or the tribal court is better able to determine the best interests of the child. In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998).

Sale of Trust Lands Within Flathead Reservation — No Jurisdiction Found for Purposes of Breach of Contract, Fraud, and Negligent Misrepresentation: Neuman, an enrolled member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, sought assistance from the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) to clear the title to trust land within the Flathead Reservation so that Neuman could sell it. He also engaged a real estate broker. Both Neuman and prospective buyers, the Krauses, made considerable efforts to consummate the sale, but Neuman was informed by the BIA that there was a substantial cloud on the title. Neuman therefore terminated the listing agreement, and the Krauses sued for damages, alleging breach of contract, fraud, constructive fraud, fraud in the inducement, and negligent misrepresentation. The District Court, on the recommendation of a special master and after applying the test laid out in State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973), found a lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The Supreme Court held that 25 U.S.C. 345 and 28 U.S.C. 1353 vest exclusive jurisdiction in the federal courts over disputes involving allotted lands within Indian reservations and that 28 U.S.C. 1360 preempted its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court also held that the Krauses' lawsuit was a dispute involving title to allotted lands even though the action was a tort claim and breach of contract claim because all of the Krauses' claims could not be separated from questions of title to Indian trust lands. Noting that it had already held in In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559 (1993), that an attempt by state courts to adjudicate rights in Indian trust land for the purpose of money damages was precluded by federal law, the Supreme Court held that it made no difference that the Krauses had deleted from their complaint a prayer for specific performance. The claims could still not be separated from the issue of title to Indian lands. Krause v. Neuman, 284 M 399, 943 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 937 (1997). In In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, the Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear in its entirety and Krause v. Neuman to the extent it relied on the Iron Bear test.

Previous Assumption of Jurisdiction by Tribal Court — Jurisdiction Improperly Sustained by State District Court: It was error for a state District Court to continue to exercise jurisdiction when a tribal court had previously assumed jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter by issuing a temporary restraining order against plaintiff. Abstention, as a matter of comity, was exercised by the Supreme Court in holding that jurisdiction was retained in the tribal court. Agri W. v. Koyama Farms, Inc., 281 M 167, 933 P2d 808, 54 St. Rep. 118 (1997), following State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290 (1980), In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266 (1981), and In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559 (1993).

Marriage Dissolution Brought by Tribal Member Against Non-Indian Spouse — Jurisdiction to Apportion Indian Trust Land: Wife who was a member of the Blackfeet Tribe sought a marriage dissolution in state court from her husband who was a non-Indian. The District Court granted the dissolution but held it did not have jurisdiction to apportion the parties' marital estate, which consisted of about 4,000 acres of Indian trust land on the Blackfeet Reservation, and granted wife's motion to dismiss. On appeal, husband contended that the state court had jurisdiction, relying on a provision in the Blackfeet Tribal Law and Order Code that all divorces must be consummated in accordance with Montana law. However, that provision did not cede jurisdiction to the state but merely governed the tribal court's choice of law. While the state has an interest in ensuring the existence of a forum in which marital property within its borders may be apportioned upon a dissolution, that interest is met by the availability of an alternative forum in the Blackfeet Tribal Court. The state's interest in the property and proceedings is inconsequential compared with the federal and tribal interests at stake. Therefore, the District Court did not err in concluding that it lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the disposition of the Indian trust land that was the parties' only significant marital asset. In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559, 50 St. Rep. 462 (1993), following White Mtn. Apache v. Bracker, 448 US 136, 65 L Ed 2d 665, 100 S Ct 2578 (1980), and N. Mex. v. Mescalero Apache Tribe, 462 US 324, 76 L Ed 2d 611, 103 S Ct 2375 (1983), and distinguishing Sheppard v. Sheppard, 655 P2d 895 (Idaho 1982). In re Marriage of Wellman was followed as to lack of jurisdiction over trust lands, in context of sale of real property, in Krause v. Neuman, 284 M 399, 943 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 937 (1997).

Subsurface Minerals in Crow "Ceded Strip" — Part of Crow Reservation — State Coal Tax Prohibited: The subsurface minerals in the "ceded strip" adjoining the Crow Reservation are legally a part of the Crow Reservation, and state taxation derived from the "ceded strip" is prohibited because the state lacks congressional consent and because the taxes interfere with tribal development and self-government and autonomy. Crow Tribe v. Mont., 819 F2d 895 (1987), affirmed, 108 S Ct 685 (1988).

Crow Tribal Court — Exclusive Jurisdiction Over Divorces: The Crow tribal court exercises exclusive jurisdiction over divorce actions between tribal members living on the reservation by virtue of the duly enacted Crow tribal code. State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290 (1980).

Arrest of Indian on the Reservation Valid if Crime Committed off the Reservation: Petitioner, a Crow Indian, was arrested within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation for a crime committed off the Reservation. The court followed State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976), which held that the arrest of an Indian on a reservation for a crime committed off the reservation was a valid arrest. In re Little Light, 183 M 52, 598 P2d 572 (1979).

Arrest Within Boundaries of Reservation: When a Sheriff arrested a member of the Crow Tribe within the boundaries of the Crow Indian Reservation under authority of a warrant issued by a Justice of the Peace of the state and the tribal judge refused to authorize an arrest, the arrest was valid and not an interference with the right to self-government of the Tribe because the Tribe had not adopted an extradition procedure. State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976).

Jurisdiction Over Indian Divorce:

State court had jurisdiction over petition for divorce filed by one Indian against another where Indian tribal court had not attempted to exercise jurisdiction over marriage and divorce; the courts of this state are open to all Indian citizens, and they are entitled to the protection of the state laws and utilization of state courts. Bad Horse v. Bad Horse, 163 M 445, 517 P2d 893 (1974), overruled in In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266, 38 St. Rep. 1885 (1981). See also In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998).

State has jurisdiction over divorce action brought by an Indian plaintiff against an Indian defendant, both residing on reservation, since the power to grant a divorce has not been preempted by the federal government and does not interfere with reservation self-government. State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973). See also Krause v. Neuman, 284 M 399, 943 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 937 (1997), and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998). In In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, the Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear in its entirety and Skillen in part and overruled Krause and Bad Horse to the extent they relied on Iron Bear or Skillen.

Extent of Jurisdiction Qualified by Terms of Cession: Section 83-102, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-1-102 and 2-1-201), recognizes the power of the state to qualify its cession of federal jurisdiction. St. v. Rindal, 146 M 64, 404 P2d 327 (1965).

Territory Under Control of United States: Under section 40, Pol. C. 1895 (now 2-1-102 and 2-1-201), the state consents to the purchase, condemnation, or acquisition of lands by the United States. Where, however, the United States still retains its original ownership of the land, neither purchase, condemnation, nor acquisition is necessary, but actual occupation for any purpose indicated in these sections stands in lieu thereof. Mere occupancy of government land by the military for any purpose not indicated in the law or the United States Constitution would not of itself be sufficient to divest the state of the sovereignty granted to it by Congress, nor does the right reserved to serve state process on these reservations infringe on the exclusive jurisdiction of the United States. St. v. Tully, 31 M 365, 78 P 760 (1904).

Canadian Indians: The state has jurisdiction over the prosecution of offenses committed by Canadian Indians within the Fort Peck Indian Reservation when those offenses are committed against a non-Indian. 37 A.G. Op. 7 (1977).

Saving Clause: Section 503, Ch. 418, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

Case Notes

Crime Committed on Air Force Base: There is nothing in the language of this section indicating legislative intent to restrict jurisdiction this state had previously exercised over crimes committed on land purchased by the federal government. St. v. Stewart, 175 M 286, 573 P2d 1138 (1977).

Criminal Jurisdiction: Montana has retained criminal jurisdiction over crimes committed on land purchased by federal government for missile site. St. v. Rindal, 146 M 64, 404 P2d 327 (1965).

Ceding Statutes to Be Strictly Construed: The filing of the map and description of the land taken is a condition precedent to transfer of jurisdiction to the United States. The mere fact that sections 24, R.C.M. 1935 (since repealed), and 83-108, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-1-202 and 2-1-203), consent to the purchase of state land for governmental purposes does not imply that the state ipso facto is divested of sovereignty, and exclusive control over the area is assumed by the federal government; jurisdiction does not pass until notice of assumption is given and other conditions required by the ceding statutes have been performed. Valley County v. Thomas, 109 M 345, 97 P2d 345 (1939).

General Ceding Statutes Not Applicable to Fort Peck Dam Project: The general cession statutes, found within this part, have no application to the Fort Peck Dam project, the purposes of which are flood control and improvement of navigation, and therefore do not fall within the provision of the federal Constitution relative to cession of jurisdiction over lands purchased by it "for the erection of forts, arsenals, etc., and other needful buildings", the earthfill dam in course of construction not being a "building", though buildings are incidentally necessary for the work. Valley County v. Thomas, 109 M 345, 97 P2d 345 (1939).

Constitutionality: The failure of this section to reserve to the state the right to tax the personal property of persons and private corporations located upon lands acquired by the federal government as provided therein does not render the statute unconstitutional as violative of Art. XII, sec. 1, 2, and 11, 1889 Mont. Const., providing for the levy of uniform taxes upon all property within the state except such as is exempted. State ex rel. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Valley County v. Bruce, 106 M 322, 77 P2d 403 (1938), overruled on another point in Valley County v. Thomas, 109 M 345, 97 P2d 345 (1939).

Exclusive Jurisdiction of United States: By section 43, Pol. C. 1895 (now 2-1-202 and 2-1-203), the state gives its consent to the purchase, and exclusive jurisdiction is ceded to the United States over and with respect to any lands within the limits of the state that shall be acquired by the United States for the purposes described in the federal Constitution. St. v. Tully, 31 M 365, 78 P 760 (1904).

Malmstrom Air Force Base — Enforcement of Plumbers' Licensing Law: The plumbers' licensing law, Title 37, ch. 69, may be enforced on Malmstrom Air Force Base as to nonfederal entities, so long as application of the state law does not interfere with the U.S. government's use of the property for military purposes. 38 A.G. 2-1-205. Glacier national park.

Compiler's Comments

Boundaries of Glacier National Park: The boundaries of Glacier National Park, as defined in the act of Congress of May 11, 1910, referred to in this section, compiled in the United States Code as Title 16, sec. 161, 162, are as follows: Commencing at a point on the international boundary, between the United States and the Dominion of Canada, at the middle of the Flathead River; thence following southerly along and with the middle of the Flathead River to its confluence with the middle fork of the Flathead River; thence following the north bank of said middle fork of the Flathead River to where it is crossed by the north boundary of the right-of-way of the Great Northern Railroad; thence following the said right-of-way to where it intersects the west boundary of the Blackfeet Indian Reservation; thence northerly along said west boundary to its intersection with the international boundary; thence along said international boundary to the place of beginning.

Case Notes

Federal Jurisdiction: Although the agreement of September 26, 1895, allowed Indians to cut wood for certain enumerated purposes, the defendant, a Blackfeet Indian who cut wood in Glacier National Park for the express purpose of testing the Indian rights had no defense based upon the purposes in the agreement. U.S. v. Momberg, 378 F. Supp. 1152 (D.C. Mont. 1974).

Jurisdiction of State: There are no words in this section which can be interpreted as excluding the Glacier National Park lands from the state or terminating the state's sovereignty or jurisdiction over them, and any such intent is negatived by the reservation of certain powers. State ex rel. St. Bd. of Equalization v. Glacier Park Co., 118 M 205, 164 P2d 366 (1945).

Workers' Compensation: Workers' compensation law was applicable to injuries sustained in construction work on road extending from point in the state to a point in Glacier National Park. State ex rel. Loney v. Indus. Accident Bd., 87 M 191, 286 P 408 (1930).

The court further found no requirement of any formal state legislative action to reclaim jurisdiction over the former federal area before taxation could begin. Olson v. County Entitled to License Automobiles Owned by Residents of Fort Peck Townsite: Where motor vehicle's owner resided on Fort Peck townsite, Valley County sought to enjoin McCone County and the Treasurer thereof from issuing automobile license upon car owned and taxable within Valley County and to cancel such license already issued or to recover from McCone County the sums Valley County would have received if the license had been issued by it. If the motor vehicle's owner resides on Fort Peck townsite, its situs for license and tax purposes is ordinarily in the county of its owner's actual residence or domicile. Its owner's voting residence or place of habitual or permanent keeping of the motor vehicle is immaterial. Valley County v. Thomas, 109 M 345, 97 P2d 345 (1939).

Statute Applicable to Fort Peck Dam Reservation: Sections 24, R.C.M. 1935 (since repealed), and 83-108, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-1-202 and 2-1-203), are inapplicable to the Fort Peck Dam reservation. This section, specially providing for cession for that project, is controlling and the powers reserved to the state by this section, including the taxing power, continue to reside in the state and in the respective counties in which the ceded lands are situated. Valley County v. Thomas, 109 M 345, 97 P2d 345 (1939), overruling State ex rel. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Valley County v. Bruce, 104 M 500, 69 P2d 97 (1937), and 106 M 322, 77 P2d 403 (1938).

GENERAL

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

Value of Tribal Trust Land Improperly Included in Marital Estate: The District Court erred in including in the wife's share of the marital estate the value of tribal trust land upon which the parties' mobile home and garage were located. Neither the wife nor the husband held title to the tribal trust land, and the husband was not an enrolled member of the tribe. A state District Court cannot adjudicate Indian trust land by bringing it into state court for valuation prior to a division of proceeds. In re Baker, 2010 MT 124, 356 Mont. 363, 234 P.3d 70.

Negligence Claim by Nonmember Against Montana Bar Located Within Flathead Reservation — No Tribal Jurisdiction Found — Error in District Court Dismissal on Jurisdictional Grounds: Zempel, a nontribal member who was repeatedly served alcoholic beverages by bartenders at Tiny's Tavern of Charlo (TTC), a Montana corporation located within the Flathead Reservation, was injured in a one-car accident when another TTC patron attempted to drive him home. Zempel filed a negligence action against TTC and its tribal-member owner, Liberty, alleging that TTC and Liberty acted negligently in continuing to serve Zempel alcohol and allowing another intoxicated patron to drive him home. Liberty argued that TTC, an Indian-owned business, was entitled to tribal jurisdiction. When the District Court dismissed the claims on jurisdictional grounds, Zempel appealed. The Montana Supreme Court held that the jurisdictional issue had to be analyzed under the guidelines adopted in Strate v. A-1 Contractors, 520 US 438 (1997), which established that tribal adjudicatory civil jurisdiction does not extend to a civil suit involving nonmembers unless one of the two exceptions outlined in Montana v. U.S. is present. The court held that the first Montana exception did not apply because TTC's alleged negligence in serving alcoholic beverages to Zempel and failing to prevent an intoxicated patron from attempting to drive him home did not involve a consensual relationship with the tribe or tribal members because the tribal constitution does not allow corporations to obtain memberships. The second exception, tribal jurisdiction based upon conduct that threatens the political integrity, economic security, or health or welfare of the tribe, did not apply because TTC's alleged negligence in serving alcoholic beverages to Zempel and failing to prevent another intoxicated patron from attempting to drive him home, although potentially dangerous to individual tribal members, did not pose a threat to tribal self-government. Because TTC failed to demonstrate a qualifying consensual relationship or a threat to tribal self-government to overcome the Montana general rule prohibiting tribal jurisdiction, the District Court erred in dismissing Zempel's claim against TTC and Liberty on jurisdictional grounds. Zempel v. Liberty, 2006 MT 220, 333 M 417, 143 P3d 123 (2006).

Action by Tribal Nonmember Against Indian College for Negligence and Products Liability and for Spoliation of Evidence — Neither Claim Arising on Reservation — Tribal Court Jurisdiction Found: Smith, a nonmember of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes who was involved in a one-car accident on Highway 93 running through the Flathead Indian Reservation, sued for an injunction against the Flathead Reservation Tribal Court, alleging that it had no jurisdiction over his cross-claim against Salish and Kootenai College (SKC), the owner of the vehicle he was driving at the time of the accident. The federal District Court held that SKC was a tribal entity for purposes of jurisdiction and that the case arose on the reservation, so that the tribal court had jurisdiction. Then, in reliance solely on Williams v. Lee, 358 US 217 (1959), the District Court dismissed Smith's action for an injunction. The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that the jurisdictional issue had to be analyzed in accordance with Montana v. U.S., 450 US 544 (1981), and the Court of Appeals' previous holding in Yellowstone County v. Pease, 96 F3d 1169 (9th Cir. 1996) (in which the Ninth Circuit held that a tribal court has no jurisdiction over a litigant if either one party is not a member of the tribe or the claim arose on nontribal land), because one of the parties to the claim was a nonmember of the tribe. The Court of Appeals, following Montana, analyzed the facts and determined that the claims for negligence and product liability and for spoliation of evidence did not arise on reservation land. However, Smith was acting as a plaintiff and availed himself of tribal court jurisdiction. Therefore, the decision of the District Court was affirmed. Smith v. Salish Kootenai College, 378 F3d 1048 (9th Cir. 2004), affirmed in 434 F3d 1127 (9th Cir. 2006).

Doctrine of Abstention Properly Applied by District Court Over Matter Subject to Tribal Court Jurisdiction: Defendants who were enrolled tribal members brought suit in tribal court, seeking damages for plaintiff's failure to timely close the purchase of real and personal property described in a buy-sell agreement. Plaintiff was also a tribal member who resided on the reservation. The tribal court concluded that it had subject matter and personal jurisdiction over the litigation. Plaintiff contended that the tribal court did not have jurisdiction, and while the matter was pending in tribal appellate court, filed the present action in state District Court, alleging various claims based on or arising out of buy-sell agreements. The District Court dismissed the state action, and plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court noted that Montana courts are open to all Montana citizens, including Indian citizens, who may sue in state court as long as Congress has not expressly retained jurisdiction in the United States, particularly if the Indian is a Montana citizen and the matter does not interfere with tribal self-government. Conversely, the court also recognized the sovereignty of a tribe to maintain the right of self-government and to control the internal relations of tribal members and recognized that tribal courts have jurisdiction over tribal members conducting business on tribal land with other tribal members. Thus, because the tribal court exercised jurisdiction and because the subject matter of plaintiff's state suit was based on or arose from the same sales agreements that were the subject of the tribal court case, the District Court properly exercised the doctrine of abstention and deferred to the tribal court opinion on the basis of comity. Dismissal of the state suit by the District Court was affirmed. Nielsen v. Brocksmith Land & Livestock, Inc., 2004 MT 101, 321 M 37, 88 P3d 1269 (2004). See also State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290 (1980), In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266 (1981), and Agri W. v. Koyama Farms, Inc., 281 M 167, 933 P2d 808 (1997).

Common-Law Recognition and Sovereignty of Little Shell Tribe — Suit Against Tribal Officials Barred: Plaintiffs were candidates in an election of the Little Shell Tribe of Indians and sued in Montana District Court for tort damages and injunctive relief against the incumbent candidates, claiming that plaintiffs had won the election. The District Court dismissed on grounds of lack of jurisdiction, and plaintiffs appealed. The Supreme Court noted that the tribe had been pursuing federal tribal recognition since the 1930s, but as yet, the tribe is not recognized by the federal government. Nevertheless, Montoya v. U.S., 180 US 261 (1901), establishes criteria for common-law recognition of a tribe. The court examined the Montoya criteria and held that the Little Shell Tribe satisfied each element of the test for common-law recognition, so the tribe is entitled to sovereignty. Tribal members are of the same or similar race, are united in a community, exist under one leadership or government, and inhabit a particular though sometimes ill-defined territory. Further, under Santa Clara Pueblo v. Martinez, 436 US 49 (1978), Indian tribes and their officials enjoy sovereign immunity from suit unless expressly limited by Congress. Thus, because the tribal officials in this case were acting in their official capacities, suit against them in state court was barred under the doctrine of sovereign immunity. Dismissal of the action by the District Court for lack of jurisdiction was affirmed. Koke v. Little Shell Tribe of Chippewa Indians of Mont., Inc., 2003 MT 121, 315 M 510, 68 P3d 814 (2003).

Tribal Jurisdiction Over Nontribal Railroad for Ad Valorem Taxation — Application of Montana Versus U.S. Exception Requires Rule 56(f) Limited Discovery to Meet Motion for Summary Judgment: The tribes on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation (the tribes) appealed from a summary judgment by the U.S. District Court in favor of the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroad Co. (BN) finding that under the holding of the U.S. Supreme Court in Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544 (1981), the tribes had no jurisdiction to impose an ad valorem tax upon the BN right-of-way originally granted by Congress to BN's predecessor in interest. The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals held that because under Strate v. A-1 Contractors, 520 US 438 (1997), a federally granted right-of-way is to be treated as non-Indian fee land, either of the two exceptions granting Indian jurisdiction over non-Indian fee land within a reservation that were discussed in the Mont. v. U.S. case must apply if the tribes were to lawfully collect the tax on BN. The court of appeals held that the first Mont. v. U.S. exception did not apply because there was no consent by BN to the exercise of tribal jurisdiction. The second exception, jurisdiction based upon conduct that threatens the political integrity, economic security, or health or welfare of the tribes, the court of appeals held, could be found to exist if the facts showed such a threat to exist in any of the trains that carried toxic or hazardous material across the reservation. However, because the District Court had denied the tribes motion under Rule 56(f), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the tribes were unable to present sufficient facts demonstrating a threat as the basis for jurisdiction. The court of appeals therefore reversed the District Court and instructed it to allow such discovery as the tribes needed in order to demonstrate the required threat to the tribes posed by the existence of BN trains on the reservation. Burlington N. Santa Fe RR Co. v. Assiniboine & Sioux Tribes of the Fort Peck Reservation, 323 F3d 767 (9th Cir. 2003).

Tribal Jurisdiction Over BIA Road — BIA Road Considered Tribal Road Not Governed by State: Means, a member of the Northern Cheyenne Tribe, was injured when the car that he was driving on a Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) road on the Northern Cheyenne Indian Reservation struck a horse owned by McDonald, a tribal nonmember who ran a ranch within the reservation. McDonald filed an action in Federal District Court, and the court enjoined Means from pursuing a civil action in tribal court. The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals noted that according to 25 CFR 170.1, White Mtn. Apache Tribe v. Bracker, 448 US 136 (1980), and U.S. v. Mitchell, 463 US 206 (1983), a road constructed by the BIA is considered an "Indian reservation road" held in trust for the use of the tribe. The court of appeals also considered those factors examined by the U.S. Supreme Court in Strate v. A-1 Contractors, 520 US 438 (1997), in determining whether the tribe had lost its right to exclude others and occupy the property on which the road was located and held that the tribe had not lost those rights, thereby retaining jurisdiction over the highway. McDonald v. Means, 300 F3d 1037, amended by 309 F3d 530 (2002).

Land Below High-Water Mark of Flathead Lake Tribal Property Not Subject to Distribution by Estate: When she died, Hobbs owned property on the south shore of Flathead Lake. Her will designated that three nieces divide one parcel of about 1 acre above the high-water mark and that a fourth niece and her husband, the Conrads, receive an adjacent 1.9-acre parcel from the high-water mark inland. A survey established the boundary between the parcels, but did not include any land below the high-water mark to the meander line of the lake. The District Court approved the survey, distributed the property, and closed the estate. The parties later became involved in a dispute over zoning and building regulations. The personal representative petitioned to reopen the estate for the purpose of filing a corrected survey and to distribute the portion of land lying below the high-water mark to the meander line, thereby increasing the acreage of both lots. The personal representative presented exhibits and affidavits verifying that Hobbs had paid taxes on the land out to the meander line. The Conrads objected on grounds that Hobbs's will specifically left land above the high-water mark and that because the estate did not own the land below the high-water mark, it could not be distributed to anyone. Nevertheless, the District Court approved the corrected survey and distributed the land below the high-water mark to the meander line between the heirs. The Supreme Court noted that the bed and banks of Flathead Lake within Indian reservation boundaries are held by the United States in trust for the tribes, and that any private title to Flathead Lake shore property extends only to the high-water mark. The District Court erroneously distributed the land below the high-water mark to the meander line, because the court did not have jurisdiction to distribute the tribal trust property. The estate could not distribute property that it did not own. In re Estate of Hobbs, 2002 MT 85, 309 M 308, 46 P3d 594 (2002), following Mont. Power Co. v. Rochester, 127 F2d 189 (9th Cir. 1942), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation v. Namen, 665 F2d 951 (9th Cir. 1982).

Jurisdiction Over Nonmember in Tort on Railroad Right-of-Way on Reservation Land: Beverly Nadine Red Wolf and Regina Bull Tail were killed when a Burlington Northern Railroad Company ("Railroad") train car collided with their automobile at a railroad grade crossing south of Lodge Grass, Montana, within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation. The train was traveling along a right-of-way, extending 75 feet on either side from the center of the tracks, granted to the Railroad's predecessor by Congress in 1889. The court held that a tribal court does not have civil jurisdiction over a nonmember in a tort claim arising from an accident on a right-of-way granted to a railroad by Congress over reservation land. Burlington N. RR Co. v. Red Wolf, 196 F3d 1059 (9th Cir. 1999).

Tribal Court Jurisdiction Unclear — Exhaustion of Tribal Court Remedies Before Proceeding in Federal Court: A dispute arose between the estates of deceased members of an Indian tribe and an off-reservation insurer over the insurer's allegedly bad faith denial of insurance coverage for a fatal automobile accident. The accident occurred on a road maintained by the tribe and located on tribal land. The insurer, Allstate, filed a declaratory judgment action in District Court to challenge tribal court jurisdiction over the estates' suit against Allstate for failure to settle. The District Court held that the tribal court had jurisdiction and entered judgment for the defendant estates. The Ninth Circuit Court held that there was a genuine dispute over whether the estates' claim arose on the reservation, where the accident occurred and the insureds resided, or off the reservation, where the insurer was located. Because it was not plain that the tribal court lacked jurisdiction, the Ninth Circuit Court concluded that the insurer was required to exhaust its remedies in tribal court before challenging tribal jurisdiction in federal court. Allstate Indem. Co. v. Stump, 191 F3d 1071 (9th Cir. 1999).

Indian Juvenile — Jurisdiction Not Precluded by Lack of Specific Mention of Juvenile Offenses and Cession and Partial Retrocession of Jurisdiction: After pleading guilty in District Court to several offenses, Spotted Blanket, a juvenile member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, argued that the District Court did not have jurisdiction over him because Pub. L. No. 280, pursuant to which the state exercises partial jurisdiction over criminal offenses within the Flathead Reservation, made no specific mention of "juveniles" as a class of persons committing offenses. Citing Wash. v. Confederated Bands & Tribes of the Yakima Indian Nation, 439 US 463 (1979), the Supreme Court held that the state could assume partial jurisdiction over offenses upon the reservation, including offenses falling under the jurisdictional category of "juvenile delinquency", even though Pub. L. No. 280 makes no specific mention of that category of offenses. Further, the Supreme Court noted that the tribal ordinance extending jurisdiction to the state provided that jurisdiction included "Juvenile Delinquency and Youth Rehabilitation". St. v. Spotted Blanket, 1998 MT 59, 288 M 126, 955 P2d 1347, 55 St. Rep. 253 (1998).

Sale of Trust Lands Within Flathead Reservation — No Jurisdiction Found for Purposes of Breach of Contract, Fraud, and Negligent Misrepresentation: Neuman, an enrolled member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, sought assistance from the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) to clear the title to trust land within the Flathead Reservation so that Neuman could sell it. He also engaged a real estate broker. Both Neuman and prospective buyers, the Krauses, made considerable efforts to consummate the sale, but Neuman was informed by the BIA that there was a substantial cloud on the title. Neuman therefore terminated the listing agreement, and the Krauses sued for damages, alleging breach of contract, fraud, constructive fraud, fraud in the inducement, and negligent misrepresentation. The District Court, on the recommendation of a special master and after applying the test laid out in State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973), found a lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The Supreme Court held that 25 U.S.C. 345 and 28 U.S.C. 1353 vest exclusive jurisdiction in the federal courts over disputes involving allotted lands within Indian reservations and that 28 U.S.C. 1360 preempted its jurisdiction. The Supreme Court also held that the Krauses' lawsuit was a dispute involving title to allotted lands even though the action was a tort claim and breach of contract claim because all of the Krauses' claims could not be separated from questions of title to Indian trust lands. Noting that it had already held in In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559 (1993), that an attempt by state courts to adjudicate rights in Indian trust land for the purpose of money damages was precluded by federal law, the Supreme Court held that it made no difference that the Krauses had deleted from their complaint a prayer for specific performance. The claims could still not be separated from the issue of title to Indian lands. Krause v. Neuman, 284 M 399, 943 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 937 (1997). In In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255

P.3d 121, the Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear in its entirety and Krause v. Neuman to the extent it relied on the Iron Bear test.

Previous Assumption of Jurisdiction by Tribal Court — Jurisdiction Improperly Sustained by State District Court: It was error for a state District Court to continue to exercise jurisdiction when a tribal court had previously assumed jurisdiction over the parties and the subject matter by issuing a temporary restraining order against plaintiff. Abstention, as a matter of comity, was exercised by the Supreme Court in holding that jurisdiction was retained in the tribal court. Agri W. v. Koyama Farms, Inc., 281 M 67, 933 P2d 808, 54 St. Rep. 118 (1997), following State ex rel. Stewart v. District Court, 187 M 209, 609 P2d 290 (1980), In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266 (1981), and In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559 (1993).

On-Reservation Accident Involving Non-Indians — Jurisdiction Over Wrongful Death and Survivorship Claims: The tribal court of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation had subject matter jurisdiction over wrongful death and survivorship claims arising from an on-reservation automobile accident involving nonmembers of the tribe and also had personal jurisdiction over the tortfeasor, a resident of the reservation who was not a member of the tribe. Hinshaw v. Mahler, 42 F3d 1178 (9th Cir. 1994).

Authority of Tribal Police to Investigate Violations of State and Federal Law — State Jurisdiction on Reservation Not to Preclude Power of Tribal Police: With respect to crimes committed by non-Indians in Indian country, prosecution must be accomplished by either the state or federal government and the state may assume criminal jurisdiction over such crimes with the consent of the affected tribe. However, simply because the state has jurisdiction over these cases does not mean that tribal police officers are precluded from investigating and gathering evidence of reservation offenses and then turning that evidence over to the proper jurisdiction with authority to prosecute the crime. Tribes have authority to enact ordinances regulating the conduct of their members and to employ officers to enforce those ordinances and to keep the peace. Tribal police officers have authority to restrain non-Indians who commit offenses within the exterior boundaries of the reservation and to eject them by turning them over to the proper authorities. Further, under Ortiz-Barraza v. U.S., 512 F2d 1176 (9th Cir. 1975), tribal police officers also have authority to investigate violations of state and federal law. As set out in St. v. Zackuse, 253 M 305, 833 P2d 143 (1992), the fact that a criminal investigation was conducted by a tribal law enforcement officer has no relevance in determining jurisdiction of the case. The fact that admissible evidence was gathered by peace officers employed by a jurisdiction without authority to prosecute does not render the evidence inadmissible per se for use by a jurisdiction that does have authority to prosecute. St. v. Haskins, 269 M 202, 887 P2d 1189, 51 St. Rep. 1474 (1994).

Marriage Dissolution Brought by Tribal Member Against Non-Indian Spouse — Jurisdiction to Apportion Indian Trust Land: Wife who was a member of the Blackfeet Tribe sought a marriage dissolution in state court from her husband who was a non-Indian. The District Court granted the dissolution but held it did not have jurisdiction to apportion the parties' marital estate, which consisted of about 4,000 acres of Indian trust land on the Blackfeet Reservation, and granted wife's motion to dismiss. On appeal, husband contended that the state court had jurisdiction, relying on a provision in the Blackfeet Tribal Law and Order Code that all divorces must be consummated in accordance with Montana law. However, that provision did not cede jurisdiction to the state but merely governed the tribal court's choice of law. While the state has an interest in ensuring the existence of a forum in which marital property within its borders may be apportioned upon a dissolution, that interest is met by the availability of an alternative forum in the Blackfeet Tribal Court. The state's interest in the property and proceedings is inconsequential compared with the federal and tribal interests at stake. Therefore, the District Court did not err in concluding that it lacked jurisdiction to adjudicate the disposition of the Indian trust land that was the parties' only significant marital asset. In re Marriage of Wellman, 258 M 131, 852 P2d 559, 50 St. Rep. 462 (1993), following White Mtn. Apache v. Bracker, 448 US 136, 65 L Ed 2d 665, 100 S Ct 2578 (1980), and N. Mex. v. Mescalero Apache Tribe, 462 US 324, 76 L Ed 2d 611, 103 S Ct 2375 (1983), and distinguishing Sheppard v. Sheppard, 655 P2d 895 (Idaho 1982). In re Marriage of Wellman was followed as to lack of jurisdiction over trust lands, in context of sale of real property, in Krause v. Neuman, 284 M 399, 943 P2d 1328, 54 St. Rep. 937 (1997).

Lack of Jurisdiction in Civil Dispute Arising Between Indians on Reservation: In the absence of an express directive giving the state jurisdiction over tribal members, the state courts of Montana do not have subject matter jurisdiction over a civil dispute, brought by an Indian alleging tortious conduct by another Indian, arising on the reservation where both are members of the same tribe. Liberty v. Jones, 240 M 16, 782 P2d 369, 46 St. Rep. 1905 (1989).

State Regulation of Reservation Pawnshops: Montana has a substantial and important interest in protecting all of its citizens, Indian and non-Indian alike, from dishonest pawnbrokers, regardless of whether the pawnshop is located on or off the reservation. This purpose is effectuated by requiring accurate and detailed records of transactions in order to prevent the charging of excessive interest rates and to facilitate tracing of stolen merchandise. Because pawnshops are open to the entire public, the state has a substantial interest in regulating these businesses, including those located within the exterior boundaries of an Indian reservation. St. v. Schaefer, 239 M 437, 781 P2d 264, 46 St. Rep. 1811 (1989), distinguishing St. v. Greenwalt, 204 M 196, 663 P2d 1178 (1983).

Authority of State to Regulate Railroads on Indian Reservation: The court, citing White Mountain Apache Tribe v. Bracker, 448 US 136, 65 L Ed 2d 665, 10 S Ct 2578 (1980), held that the proper test to determine whether the state had regulatory jurisdiction over a railroad operated by non-Indians on an Indian reservation involved balancing state versus federal/tribal interests in the particular circumstances. It found that the state of Montana had exercised comprehensive regulatory authority over all railroads in the state, including on-reservation lines, for over 70 years, whereas there had been no federal or tribal regulatory action for nearly 100 years. The court therefore held that the state's interest predominated and that the state Public Service Commission had jurisdiction. Burlington N. RR. v. Dept. of Pub. Serv. Regulation, 221 M 497, 720 P2d 267, 43 St. Rep. 1005 (1986).

State Not Tribal Court to Have Jurisdiction Over Non-Indians for Tortious Injury Not Occurring on Indian Land — Injunction Issued: Where the plaintiff, a minor and enrolled member of the Crow Indian Tribe, brought an action for damages for injuries he sustained in a motorcycle accident on the grounds of an off-reservation school, the tribal court had no jurisdiction over the defendant school district and therefore could not issue or enforce a default judgment against the district. The U.S. Congress has not delegated authority to the tribal court to exercise jurisdiction on a non-Indian, nor has the tribe, under the analysis suggested by the U.S. Supreme Court, in Mont. v. U.S., 450 US 544 (1981), retained inherent sovereign power to exercise jurisdiction in this case, as there is neither a consensual relationship between the plaintiff and defendant nor is the political or economic security or health of the tribe threatened. Nat'l Farmers Union Ins. Co. v. Crow Tribe, 560 F. Supp. 213, 40 St. Rep. 783 (D.C. Mont. 1983).

Separate Adjudication of Federal and Indian Water Rights: It was error to dismiss consolidated water actions brought to adjudicate federal and Indian water rights in favor of state court proceedings. N. Cheyenne v. Adsit, 668 F2d 1080 (9th Cir. 1981), certiorari granted, 103 S Ct 566 (1982).

Indian Control Over Southern Half of Flathead Lake: The Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes have beneficial title to and hence may regulate non-Indian use of the southern half of Flathead Lake. Namen v. Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes, 665 F2d 951 (9th Cir. 1982), certiorari denied (with dissenting opinion), 103 S Ct 314 (1982).

Big Horn River — No Indian Control: The treaty establishing the Crow Indian Reservation did not convey to the Indians beneficial ownership of the bed of the Big Horn River flowing through the reservation. Montana v. U.S., 450 US 544, 101 S Ct 1245, 67 L Ed 2d 493 (1981), followed, as to method of analyses of jurisdictional issue, in Smith v. Salish Kootenai College, 378 F3d 1048 (9th Cir. 2004), affirmed in 434 F3d 1127 (9th Cir. 2006). See also Burlington N. Santa Fe RR Co. v. Assiniboine & Sioux Tribes of the Fort Peck Reservation, 323 F3d 767 (9th Cir. 2003), containing a discussion of Mont. v. U.S. as it relates to jurisdiction over non-Indian fee lands consisting of railroad federally chartered right-of-way.

District Court Jurisdiction Over Probate of and Claim and Delivery Action by Estate of Enrolled Tribal Indian: Where, following the death of an enrolled member of an Indian tribe, the decedent's wife petitioned the District Court to probate her deceased husband's estate and estate property consisting of a road grader was later unlawfully sold by the deceased's wife to her brother, the District Court erred in holding that it did not have jurisdiction over the claim and delivery action instituted on behalf of the estate to recover the road grader or its value. The fact that there is no federal treaty or statute preempting the jurisdiction of the District Court and the fact that the tribal court has not had and is not exercising jurisdiction over the case properly resulted in the District Court's taking jurisdiction of the probate of the estate. Because the action for claim and delivery is the enforcement process to recover property within the jurisdiction of the probate court, the District Court should have exercised subject matter jurisdiction over the claim and delivery action as well. Estate of Standing Bear v. Belcourt, 193 M 174, 631 P2d 285, 38 St. Rep. 1064 (1981), overruled in part in In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121.

Scope of Part: The Northern Cheyenne Reservation was not within the scope of this part, and in the absence of action by the state and the tribe in strict compliance with congressional requirements for transfer of jurisdiction, the Tribal Council could not waive to the District Court jurisdiction of juvenile delinquency on the Reservation. Blackwolf v. District Court, 158 M 523, 493 P2d 1293 (1972), distinguished in State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1972).

CRIMINAL ACTIONS

Federal Crime Defined by State Law Considered Federal Offense — Incorporation of State Law Definition: An Indian juvenile was charged with burglary under the federal Indian Major Crimes Act, 18 U.S.C. 1153, by reference to Montana's burglary statute only for the purpose of definition. The Act creates federal jurisdiction over 14 major offenses, including burglary, committed by Indians against Indians or any other person in Indian country, but does not define residential burglary. However, under the Act, if an enumerated crime is not defined and punished in accordance with federal law, the offense is defined and punished in accordance with the laws of the state in which the crime occurred. The juvenile argued that because the burglary was determined by reference to substantive state law, the violation of 18 U.S.C. 1153 did not constitute a violation of federal law. The Ninth Circuit Court disagreed. The fact that no federal residential burglary statute exists, requiring incorporation of Montana's definition of burglary, does not strip the commission of burglary on an Indian reservation of its federal character. Therefore, offenses defined by state law are nevertheless treated as federal offenses under the federal Act. U.S. v. Male Juvenile, 280 F3d 1008 (9th Cir. 2002).

Pursuit of Traffic Offender Onto Reservation Allowed — Good Faith Exception to Exclusionary Rule Applicable to Evidence Seized During Arrest of Tribal Member by Nontribal Officers on Reservation: Bird was observed by city police officer Olson driving recklessly in Cut Bank, but when Olson attempted to stop Bird, a chase ensued onto the Blackfeet Indian Reservation, where Bird was eventually stopped and held by the city police officer and an assisting county officer. When the officers were informed that Bird was an enrolled tribal member, they notified a tribal police officer, who arrested Bird and a passenger, and transported them off the reservation and back into Cut Bank in violation of the extradition provision of the Blackfeet Tribal Code. Bird was subsequently charged in City Court with reckless driving and was convicted. Bird appealed to District Court, moving to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction and to suppress evidence of activities and statements after the vehicle crossed onto the reservation. The District Court found that the city officer did not have jurisdiction to arrest Bird on the reservation and granted Bird's motion to suppress. The state appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Pursuant to U.S. v. Patch, 114 F3d 131 (9th Cir. 1997), under the doctrine of hot pursuit, once the officer observed an offense occur within his jurisdiction, he had authority to pursue the violator onto the reservation in order to make an arrest. Further, the evidence was erroneously suppressed because the good faith exception to the exclusionary rule, discussed in St. v. Nahee, 745 P2d 172 (Ariz. App. 1987), applied. The city and county officers acted in good faith reliance that the tribal officer would carry out the arrest and extradition in a manner conforming to tribal code procedures, and it was the tribal officer who neglected to follow the tribal code. The primary purpose of the exclusionary rule—to ensure that law enforcement is not rewarded by violating a defendant's constitutional rights and to deter such conduct in the future—would not be served by sanctioning the city and county officers for a mistake in which they had no part. Failure to follow tribal extradition procedures did not warrant exclusion of the evidence in this case. Cut Bank v. Bird, 2001 MT 296, 307 M 460, 38 P3d 804 (2001). See also State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976).

State Court Prosecution for Criminal Liquor Law Violations: Montana may maintain criminal prosecutions of Indians in state court for on-reservation violations of state liquor laws. Fort Belknap Indian Community v. Mazurek, 43 F3d 428 (9th Cir. 1994).

Necessity of Membership in Federally Recognized Tribe: A defendant whose only claim of Indian group membership or affiliation is with an Indian group that is not a federally recognized Indian tribe cannot be an Indian for criminal jurisdiction purposes. LaPier v. McCormick, 986 F2d 303 (9th Cir. 1993).

Gambling — Non-Indian Defendants for Crimes Committed on Reservation — Criminal Law Jurisdiction — Standing: The state has jurisdiction over non-Indian defendants for crimes committed on the reservation when there is no Indian victim. Non-Indian defendants do not have standing to raise the argument that the action of the state interferes with the self-government of the Blackfeet Reservation. The state has authority to regulate gambling by non-Indians on the Blackfeet Reservation. State ex rel. Poll v. District Court, 257 M 512, 851 P2d 405, 50 St. Rep. 387 (1993).

No Federal or Tribal Recognition as Indian — Not Indian for Purposes of Criminal Jurisdiction: Defendant who was adopted by an Indian parent but who failed to submit proof that his adoptive parent's tribe recognized him as an Indian and who is not an enrolled member of any Indian tribe and receives no federal benefits as an Indian is not an Indian for purposes of criminal jurisdiction. State ex rel. Poll v. District Court, 257 M 512, 851 P2d 405, 50 St. Rep. 387 (1993).

Two-Prong Test Adopted for Determining Indian Status: In a criminal case, the defendant argued that his conviction should be overturned on the basis that he was an Indian and the state did not have jurisdiction to prosecute him. The Supreme Court specifically adopted the two-prong test for determining Indian status established in U. S. v. Rogers, 45 US 567, 11 L Ed 1105 (1846), in ruling that the defendant was not an Indian. The test adopted by the court was: (1) the defendant must have a significant amount of Indian blood; and (2) the defendant must have federal or tribal recognition as an Indian. St. v. La Pier, 242 M 335, 790 P2d 983, 47 St. Rep. 760 (1990), followed in State ex rel. Poll v. District Court, 257 M 512, 851 P2d 405, 50 St. Rep. 387 (1993).

No Jurisdiction by State Over Crimes Committed Against Indians by Non-Indians Within Reservation: Where the defendants, two non-Indians, were charged with the theft of a calf belonging to an enrolled member of the Crow Indian Tribe and the theft occurred on a reservation, the District Court did not err in dismissing the charges against the defendants. As expressed in the dicta in St. v. Youpee, 103 M 86, 61 P2d 832 (1936), the general rule, to be followed by this state, is that states have no jurisdiction over crimes against Indians by non-Indians committed within the reservations. This is true unless the enrolled Indians have accepted state jurisdiction, and as no tribal consent had been given in this case by the Crow Tribe, the charges arising from the theft of the Indian's calf were properly dismissed. St. v. Greenwalt, 204 M 196, 663 P2d 1178, 40 St. Rep. 767 (1983).

Tribal Courts Not to Issue "Federal" Search Warrant: Because of involvement of federal agents in a search on an Indian reservation, the search was a federal search governed by Rule 41(a), Federal Rules of Criminal Procedure, and hence a search warrant must be issued by a federal court or state court of record. A tribal court is neither a federal court nor a state court as enumerated in 3-1-102; thus the warrants were invalid and subsequent evidence seized pursuant to the warrants is inadmissible. U.S. v. Messerly, 530 F. Supp. 751, 39 St. Rep. 183 (D.C. Mont. 1982).

Arrest of Indian on the Reservation Valid if Crime Committed off the Reservation: Petitioner, a Crow Indian, was arrested within the exterior boundaries of the Crow Reservation for a crime committed off the Reservation. The court followed State ex rel. Old Elk v. District Court, 170 M 208, 552 P2d 1394 (1976), which held that the arrest of an Indian on a reservation for a crime committed off the reservation was a valid arrest. Termination of Parental Rights to Indian Children — Tribal Court to Affirmatively Decline Case Prior to State Court Proceedings — Jurisdiction Transfer Hearing Required Prior to Ruling on Jurisdictional Transfer of Children: The District Court erred in terminating the parental rights of a mother of four Indian children without first holding a jurisdiction transfer hearing under the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) after the mother requested the matter be transferred to tribal court at the outset of the proceedings. The Supreme Court ruled that a tribal court, and not the tribe, must affirmatively decline to accept a case before a state court can proceed with termination of parental rights to Indian children. A District Court must hold a jurisdiction transfer hearing before it grants or denies a request for a jurisdictional transfer of Indian children to tribal custody. In re J.W.C., L.W.C., K.W.C., and C.W.C., 2011 MT 312, 363 Mont. 85, 265 P.3d 1265.

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

Failure of District Court to Determine Indian Status of Children Prior to Termination of Parental Rights Warranting Reversal: Absent a conclusive determination from the affected tribes, it was reversible error for the District Court to terminate a mother's parental rights without definitely resolving the threshold question of whether the children were Indian children within the meaning of the Indian Child Welfare Act. In this case, the District Court was presented with insufficient evidence regarding the children's status because of the mother's failure to present crucial evidence regarding the children's possible tribal affiliation and the tribe's delay in intervening. However, the tribe's right to intervene was not impaired by the delay, and the court should not have proceeded absent a conclusive determination that the children were not tribal members. In re A.G., W.G., T.A., & J.A., 2005 MT 81, 326 M 403, 109 P3d 756 (2005).

Sufficient Evidence That ICWA Standards Met in Terminating Parental Rights — Termination Affirmed Absent Abuse of Discretion: An Indian father contended that the state did not present sufficient evidence under the federal Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA) to warrant termination of his parental rights. The Supreme Court determined that: (1) there was sufficient evidence that continued custody of the children was likely to result in serious emotional or physical damage to the children; (2) the evidence was supported by testimony from qualified experts; (3) active but unsuccessful efforts had been made to provide remedial services and rehabilitative programs to prevent the breakup of the Indian family; and (4) the children had lived in foster care a sufficient time to create the presumption under 41-3-604 that the children's best interests would be served by terminating parental rights. The ICWA requirements having been followed, parental rights were properly terminated. In re S.R., R.R., & G.R. Jr., 2004 MT 227, 322 M 424, 97 P3d 559 (2004).

Letter From Tribe Conclusive as to Tribal Membership of Children in Parental Termination Proceeding: During parental termination proceedings, a question arose as to whether two of the children involved might be Indian children by virtue of their father's tribal membership. In order to comply with the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA), the state contacted the tribe to determine if the children were tribal members. The tribe responded by letter and stated that the children were not tribal members and were not eligible for membership based on blood quantum. Under In re Adoption of Riffle, 277 M 388, 922 P2d 510 (1996), the tribe's determination was conclusive, but even aside from the letter, testimony from the children's father and several social workers affirmed that the children were not eligible for tribal membership. Because the children could not be considered Indian children by definition, the ICWA did not apply to the termination proceedings. In re T.J.H., J.H., J.L., & A.L., 2003 MT 352, 318 M 528, 81 P3d 504 (2003). See also In re C.H., S.H., & D.H., 2003 MT 308, 318 M 208, 79 P3d 822 (2003).

Belated Notice of Possible Indian Heritage of Child Subject to State Parental Termination Proceedings — Notice to Tribe Required to Allow Future Tribal Involvement if Appropriate: Only after parental termination proceedings were completed did the mother raise the issue of the possible Indian heritage of one of her children and the possible applicability of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA). One purpose of ICWA is to afford tribes the opportunity to intervene by providing a tribe with notice before proceedings begin; but in this case, that purpose could not be honored because the District Court did not know or have reason to know of the child's possible heritage until after the termination hearing had concluded. Faced with a silent record and because the issue was not raised in the trial court, the Supreme Court declined to undermine the entire termination proceeding, but the court did order that notice be given to the tribe of which the child might be a member so that the tribe could intervene in any future proceedings if it was determined that the child was indeed an Indian child. In re C.H., S.H., & D.H., 2003 MT 308, 318 M 208, 79 P3d 822 (2003).

Indian Child Welfare Act Inapplicable to Child Ineligible for Membership in Federally Unrecognized Tribe: The state sought to terminate a mother's parental rights, but the mother contended that the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA) should apply because the father of the child was an enrolled member of the Little Shell Band of Chippewa. The Supreme Court held that ICWA did not apply for two reasons: (1) the father qualified for membership in the Little Shell Band based on the minimum one-quarter blood quantum, but the child, having only one-eighth blood quantum, did not qualify for enrollment, and tribal membership of an Indian child is required for ICWA to apply; and (2) ICWA applies only to federally recognized tribes, and as of the date of the proceeding, the Little Shell Band of Chippewa was not recognized by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior as eligible to receive services. Dismissal of Petition for Temporary Investigative Authority Without Review of Guardianship Action — Harmless Error in Light of Requirements of Indian Child Welfare Act: In compliance with 41-3-403 (renumbered 41-3-423), the District Court ordered a show cause hearing at which to consider a petition for temporary investigative authority (TIA) regarding two Indian children. At the hearing, the Deputy County Attorney offered an order and memorandum from a previously dismissed guardianship proceeding as evidence. The court did not admit the documentation as evidence, but took judicial notice of it. However, at the end of the hearing, the court dismissed the petition for TIA without reviewing any records from the guardianship proceeding and ordered the Department of Public Health and Human Services to immediately place the children with their father. The mother contended that it was error to dismiss the petition without reviewing the guardianship file. In order for courts to grant TIA petitions when Indian children are involved, the requirements of the Indian Child Welfare Act must be met. Under 25 U.S.C. 1912, active efforts must be made to provide remedial services and rehabilitation programs to prevent the breakup of the Indian family. In addition, any finding that continued custody of the child by the parent or Indian custodian is likely to result in serious emotional or physical damage to the child must be based on the testimony of qualified expert witnesses. Because these requirements were not met, the court could not have granted TIA even if it had reviewed the guardianship file, so its failure to do so, if erroneous, was harmless. In re M.P.M. & A.R.M., 1999 MT 78, 294 M 87, 976 P2d 988, 56 St. Rep. 327 (1999).

Error in Placing Custody With One Parent Following Dismissal of Petition for Temporary Investigative Authority: In compliance with 41-3-403 (renumbered 41-3-423), the District Court ordered a show cause hearing at which to consider a petition for temporary investigative authority (TIA) regarding two Indian children. At the end of the hearing, the court dismissed the petition for TIA and ordered the Department of Public Health and Human Services to immediately place the children with their father. The Department argued on appeal that the court exceeded its authority in ordering transfer of custody to the father after the petition for TIA was dismissed. The Supreme Court held that when the District Court vacated the orders issued following filing of the petition for TIA, it did not have authority to place custody with the father because nothing in the statutory framework or legislative intent authorizes the placement of a child with one parent, as opposed to the other, following dismissal of a petition for TIA. The order transferring custody to the father was reversed. In re M.P.M. & A.R.M., 1999 MT 78, 294 M 87, 976 P2d 988, 56 St. Rep. 327 (1999).

Jurisdiction Over Indian Divorce:

Stacey, an enrolled member of the Fort Peck Tribes, married Shane, a non-Indian. After the marriage ceremony, Stacey returned to the Fort Peck Indian Reservation and Shane went to Forsyth, where his parents lived and where he worked. Some time later, Stacey had a child who also became an enrolled member and lived with Stacey on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation. Still later, Shane filed a dissolution action in a state District Court. The District Court ordered joint custody and ordered that Shane would be the primary residential custodian. Approximately 1 month later, the Fort Peck Tribal Court awarded temporary custody to Stacey. She then filed a motion in District Court under former Rules 12(h) and 60, M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), to dismiss Shane's dissolution action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. The District Court held that it had subject matter jurisdiction over the case and issued a final decree of dissolution. In that decree, the District Court held that the parties' child had significant contacts both off and on the reservation, held that the District Court shared concurrent jurisdiction with the tribal court, and therefore denied Stacey's motion to dismiss. The Supreme Court reviewed its previous holdings regarding tribal jurisdiction and child custody jurisdiction under the Uniform Child Custody Jurisdiction Act. The Supreme Court also reviewed the purposes of the Indian Child Welfare Act, which, while not strictly applicable to the case before it, cautions that state courts should be careful not to erode the sovereignty of tribes and tribal courts. In reliance upon In re Bertelson, 189 M 524, 617 P2d 121 (1980), the Supreme Court held that the best interests of the child should be determined and followed in deciding whether a state or tribal court has jurisdiction for the purposes of awarding custody but that when an Indian child resides off the reservation, state courts and tribal courts share concurrent jurisdiction. The Supreme Court then held, in further reliance upon Bertelson, that even when jurisdiction is concurrent, it does not mean that states courts should exercise jurisdiction and that in deciding whether to exercise concurrent jurisdiction, the state courts should consider: (1) 40-4-102, 40-4-107, 40-4-211, and 40-7-108; (2) certain policy issues; and (3) the residence of the parties pursuant to 1-1-215. For this reason, the Supreme Court remanded the case to the District Court for a determination of the residence of Stacey and her child, saying that if the District Court determines that both reside on the reservation, the District Court must dismiss the case. However, if the District Court finds that Stacey's child is not a resident of the reservation and that the District Court shares jurisdiction with the tribal court, the District Court must then consider factors from Bertelson, previously discussed by the Supreme Court, to determine whether the District Court or the tribal court is better able to determine the best interests of the child. In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998).

In 1979, the Northern Cheyenne appellate court issued an advisory opinion holding that the tribal court has exclusive jurisdiction over dissolution of marriage actions arising between members of the tribe residing within the reservation. The Supreme Court applied the doctrine of abstention as a matter of comity with the Northern Cheyenne Tribe. It held that there is no basis for the state to assume jurisdiction that would interfere with tribal self-government. The Supreme Court expressly overruled Bad Horse v. Bad Horse, 163 M 445, 517 P2d 893 (1974), because of the interpretation of tribal law in the advisory opinion. In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266, 38 St. Rep. 1885 (1981). See also In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998).

State had jurisdiction over divorce action brought by an Indian plaintiff against an Indian defendant, both residing on an Indian reservation, since federal law has not preempted state activities in the area of marriage and divorce and the tribe had determined not to exercise jurisdiction in that area by virtue of a tribal enactment. State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973), distinguished in Fisher v. District Court, 424 US 382, 47 L Ed 2d 106, 96 S Ct 943 (1976), and overruled in In re Marriage of Limpy, 195 M 314, 636 P2d 266, 38 St. Rep. 1885 (1981). See also In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 M 399, 956 P2d 1, 55 St. Rep. 147 (1998). In In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, the Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear in its entirety and Skillen in part and overruled Krause and Bad Horse to the extent they relied on Iron Bear or Skillen.

Applicability of Indian Child Welfare Act to Adoption Anonymity Considerations — Conformity With Act Required: Baby Girl Jane Doe was born at the Northern Montana Hospital in Havre. She was of Indian descent and eligible for membership in the Chippewa Cree Tribe on the Rocky Boy's Reservation. After the child's birth, her mother refused to sign the birth certificate, indicated her intent to relinquish the child to the Hill County Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), and left the hospital. The Department filed for an order terminating parental rights and giving the Department the right to consent to the child's adoption. The tribe intervened and moved for disclosure of the mother's identity in order to ensure that any child placement conformed to the preferences provided in the federal Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA). The District Court denied the motion based on the mother's stated preference for anonymity. On appeal, the tribe asserted that its right to intervene and advocate enforcement of the ICWA was meaningless when the first preference under the ICWA is for placement with the child's extended family, yet the court would not reveal the identity of the natural parent. The Supreme Court cited Miss. Band of Choctaw Indians v. Holyfield, 490 US 30, 104 L Ed 2d 29, 109 S Ct 1597 (1989), in holding that, absent good cause to the contrary, the ICWA mandates that adoptive placements be made preferentially with: (1) members of the child's extended family; (2) other members of the same tribe; or (3) other Indian families. Permitting individual tribal members to avoid tribal exclusive jurisdiction by the simple expedient of giving birth off the reservation would to a large extent nullify the purpose of the ICWA. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court and ordered that the tribe be informed of the identity of the mother and her extended family, respecting her right to privacy to the extent possible without interfering with the tribe's rights under the ICWA. In re Baby Girl Jane Doe, 262 M 380, 865 P2d 1090, 50 St. Rep. 1555 (1993).

Right to Intervene in Adoption of Indian Child — State Commitment to Indian Child Welfare Act: Prior to birth, Nellie Silk, paternal aunt of M.E.M., expressed an interest in caring for the child because she was aware of the parents' problems with parenting; however, after the child was born he was placed in foster care by the Hill County Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services). Upon learning of the placement, Silk wrote to the Department requesting custody. The Department responded that placement with Silk would be inappropriate because of Department efforts to reintegrate the family, but that Silk would be considered if adoption were to occur. After parental rights were terminated (see In re M.E.M., 209 M 192, 679 P2d 1241, 41 St. Rep. 636 (1984)), Silk was not informed of the proceedings, of M.E.M.'s availability for adoption, or of M.E.M.'s preadoptive placement with a non-Indian family. Silk's subsequent petition for adoption and motion to intervene were denied by the District Court. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that Silk had an interest in adoption stemming from the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA), 25 U.S.C. 1901, et seq., and that the state had a strong and independent commitment to the principles embodied in the ICWA. Silk also had a right to intervene under former Rule 24(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and although the District Court had ruled that her motion was not timely, the Supreme Court held that the motion must be granted in light of the fact that she was kept in ignorance and could not have been more diligent or earlier in her petition or motion. In re M.E.M., 223 M 234, 725 P2d 212, 43 St. Rep. 1684 (1986). See also In re K.H. & K.L.E., 1999 MT 128, 294 M 466, 981 P2d 1190, 56 St. Rep. 515 (1999).

Federal Indian Child Welfare Act — Temporary Custody Not in Compliance With Act — Otherwise Valid Parental Termination Not Invalidated: Child of Indian parents was placed in the temporary custody of the state in proceedings that may not have complied with the federal Indian Child Welfare Act (25 U.S.C. § 1901, et seq.). Later, in proceedings that complied with the Act and before a different judge with different witnesses, the parents' rights were terminated and permanent custody was granted the state. The Supreme Court held that any failure to comply with the Act in the temporary proceedings would not invalidate the later termination because the proceedings are separate actions involving separate petitions and statutory guidelines. In re M.E.M., 209 M 192, 679 P2d 1241, 41 St. Rep. 636 (1984).

URESA Action — Personal Jurisdiction Over Tribal Member — Motion to Dismiss Improperly Denied:

Where the respondent had previously married the appellant, an enrolled member of the Crow Indian Tribe living on the Crow Indian Reservation in Colorado, and had been separated from him there and brought a URESA action in Colorado for enforcement of child support payments, the District Court erred in denying the appellant's motion to dismiss for lack of personal jurisdiction over the appellant. All of the appellant's off-reservation contacts are with Colorado, not with Montana. Under the reasoning of State ex rel. Flammond v. Flammond, 190 M 350, 621 P2d 471, 37 St. Rep. 1991 (1980), the court had neither subject matter nor personal jurisdiction. State ex rel. Three Irons v. Three Irons, 190 M 360, 621 P2d 476, 37 St. Rep. 2016 (1980).

The wife appealed the dismissal of her action seeking to enforce child support payments under URESA. The District Court ruled it had no jurisdiction, and the Supreme Court agreed there was neither subject matter jurisdiction nor personal jurisdiction. The husband was a Blackfeet Indian living on the reservation in Montana. Jurisdiction could not be found in federal enabling statutes because neither the tribe nor the state complied with them; there were no off-reservation acts in Montana sufficient to vest state courts with jurisdiction over the husband; and a reservation Indian's domicile on the reservation is not an in-state contact that grants jurisdiction to state courts. The father had not acquiesced in state jurisdiction and has challenged state court jurisdiction from the outset. The fact that there was no appeal from the tribal court, the only avenue open to the wife, to the federal court system was not an argument in favor of state court jurisdiction. There must be a legal basis supporting state jurisdiction. State ex rel. Flammond v. Flammond, 190 M 350, 621 P2d 471, 37 St. Rep. 1991 (1980).

TAXATION

Tribal Jurisdiction Over Nontribal Railroad for Ad Valorem Taxation — Application of Montana Versus U.S. Exception Requires Rule 56(f) Limited Discovery to Meet Motion for Summary Judgment: The tribes on the Fort Peck Indian Reservation (the tribes) appealed from a summary judgment by the U.S. District Court in favor of the Burlington Northern Santa Fe Railroad Co. (BN) finding that under the holding of the U.S. Supreme Court in Mont. v. U.S.,

450 US 544 (1981), the tribes had no jurisdiction to impose an ad valorem tax upon the BN right-of-way originally granted by Congress to BN's predecessor in interest. The Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals held that because under Strate v. A-1 Contractors, 520 US 438 (1997), a federally granted right-of-way is to be treated as non-Indian fee land, either of the two exceptions granting Indian jurisdiction over non-Indian fee land within a reservation that were discussed in the Mont. v. U.S. case must apply if the tribes were to lawfully collect the tax on BN. The court of appeals held that the first Mont. v. U.S. exception did not apply because there was no consent by BN to the exercise of tribal jurisdiction. The second exception, jurisdiction based upon conduct that threatens the political integrity, economic security, or health or welfare of the tribes, the court of appeals held, could be found to exist if the facts showed such a threat to exist in any of the trains that carried toxic or hazardous material across the reservation. However, because the District Court had denied the tribes' motion under Rule 56(f), Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, the tribes were unable to present sufficient facts demonstrating a threat as the basis for jurisdiction. The court of appeals therefore reversed the District Court and instructed it to allow such discovery as the tribes needed in order to demonstrate the required threat to the tribes posed by the existence of BN trains on the reservation. Burlington N. Santa Fe RR Co. v. Assiniboine & Sioux Tribes of the Fort Peck Reservation, 323 F3d 767 (9th Cir. 2003).

Imposition of Corporate License Tax on Tribally Chartered Corporation Conducting Business Entirely on Indian Reservation Considered Infringement of Tribal Sovereignty and Self-Government Authority: The Department of Revenue sought to impose the state corporate license tax on Flat Center Farms, Inc. (Flat Center). The District Court found that the tax may not be imposed on an Indian-owned corporation that does business entirely within the boundaries of an Indian reservation. The state appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Flat Center was incorporated pursuant to the laws of Montana and chartered by the Fort Peck Tribe as a tribal corporation, with its sole business activity consisting of farming located entirely within the exterior boundaries of the Fort Peck Reservation. The corporation was wholly Indian owned, the beneficiaries of the corporate income were ultimately Indians, and the assets generating the income were Indian trust lands. The longstanding rule set out in Mescalero Apache Tribe v. Jones, 411 US 145 (1973), is that a state is without power to tax reservation lands and Indian income generated from on-reservation activities without the express authorization of Congress. Further, under Williams v. Lee, 358 US 217 (1959), the exercise of state jurisdiction over activities occurring entirely on Indian lands is an infringement on inherent tribal authority and is contrary to principles of self-government and tribal sovereignty. Nevertheless, the state contended that, as a nontribal member with a corporate identity distinct from its stockholders, Flat Center did not enjoy the shield from state taxation afforded to tribes and tribal members. However, under LaRoque v. St., 178 M 315, 583 P2d 1059 (1978), tribal membership is not essential to a determination of whether income earned on a reservation is taxable. Flat Center did not "carry on business in the state" because all of its activities were conducted in Indian country, so its income was not earned in Montana. The state's taxation authority is statutorily limited based on the situs of the activity from which income is earned. Thus, the District Court correctly concluded that the corporation license tax may not be imposed on a tribally chartered corporation that does business entirely within a reservation. Flat Center Farms, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, 2002 MT 140, 310 M 206, 49 P3d 578 (2002).

Non-Indian Owner of Pipeline Located on Reservation Without Standing to Raise Federal Preemption Issue of Tribal Self-Government: A non-Indian company that owned a pipeline on a reservation argued that the state's tax interfered with the tribes' rights of self-government and was therefore preempted by the federal constitution. The Supreme Court ruled that while the company had standing by virtue of its taxpayer status to challenge the property tax, it did not have a sufficient personal stake in the self-government interests of the tribes to argue the federal preemption issue of tribal self-government. N. Border Pipeline Co. v. St., 237 M 117, 772 P2d 829, 46 St. Rep. 668 (1989), followed in Hagener v. Wallace, 2002 MT 109, 309 M 473, 47 P3d 847 (2002).

Preemption Clause Not Violated by State Tax on Pipeline Located on Reservation and Owned by Non-Indian Company: The state sought to collect property tax from a non-Indian company that owned a pipeline located on a reservation. The pipeline was on trust property held by the federal government for the benefit of several tribes. The Supreme Court found that the specific federal regulations cited by the company represented only slight federal and tribal interests and did not of themselves preempt the state's tax. The court also found that much of the revenue generated by the tax was used by the state to fund education of tribal members, to maintain roads, and to undertake certain law enforcement duties for some crimes by non-Indians on the reservation and for any vandalism to the pipeline. The court ruled that the state's interest in funding the school districts and in providing local services outweighed the federal or tribal interests asserted by the company. N. Border Pipeline Co. v. St., 237 M 117, 772 P2d 829, 46 St. Rep. 668 (1989).

Property Tax on Pipeline Owned by Non-Indians and Located on Reservation Not in Violation of Federal Due Process Clause or Indian Commerce Clause: The Supreme Court ruled that the property tax at issue was assessed based on the value of the pipeline found within the state and that the revenue obtained was used to provide governmental services to the tribes and the pipeline owner, thus creating a sufficient nexus to withstand a due process challenge. The court went on to find that the allegations of the pipeline owner that the tax would create future injury to tribal revenue did not rise to the level of undue discrimination or burden on Indian enterprise and therefore did not render the tax void under the Indian commerce clause. N. Border Pipeline Co. v. St., 237 M 117, 772 P2d 829, 46 St. Rep. 668 (1989).

Subsurface Minerals in Crow "Ceded Strip" — Part of Crow Reservation — State Coal Tax Prohibited: The subsurface minerals in the "ceded strip" adjoining the Crow Reservation are legally a part of the Crow Reservation, and state taxation derived from the "ceded strip" is prohibited because the state lacks congressional consent and because the taxes interfere with tribal development and self-government and autonomy. Crow Tribe v. Mont., 819 F2d 895 (1987), affirmed, 108 S Ct 685 (1988).

Application of New Car Tax and Personal Property Tax to Indian Tribes and Individuals: The Assiniboine and Sioux Tribes of the Fort Peck Indian Reservation and the enrolled members of those tribes residing on that reservation are exempt from payment of the new car sales tax imposed by 61-3-502 (now repealed) and the personal property tax imposed by 61-3-503. Indians residing on that reservation and not enrolled in either of the tribes are subject to the taxes. The Assiniboine & Sioux Tribes v. Mont., 568 F. Supp. 269, 40 St. Rep. 1318 (D.C. Mont. 1983).

Coal Severance Taxes — Indian-Owned Coal: It was error for the District Court to dismiss action by tribe challenging Montana's severance tax on coal owned although not extracted by them. The severance tax may infringe upon a tribe's right to govern itself if the taxes substantially affect its ability to offer governmental services or its ability to regulate development of tribal resources. Crow Tribe v. St., 650 F2d 1104 (1981), opinion amended and rehearings denied, 665 F2d 1390 (9th Cir. 1981), certiorari denied, 103 S Ct 230 (1982).

State Taxation of Indian Trust Properties Valid — No Repeal by Implication Found: Where the plaintiff Indian tribe sought declaratory and injunctive relief against the levy and collection of certain taxes by the state and several counties on the production of oil and gas owned by the United States in trust for the plaintiff by non-Indian lessees within the boundaries of the plaintiff's reservation, the court held that the provisions of 25 U.S.C. § 398 specifically authorized state taxation of oil and gas on tribal lands and that the provisions of the statute had not been impliedly repealed by 25 U.S.C. § 396. The sovereign right asserted by the plaintiff to be free from state taxation has been controlled by Congress, and the plaintiff has not shown that there is such a repugnancy between the two federal statutes as to satisfy their burden of proving a congressional intent to repeal the former by enactment of the latter or that there is an ambiguity in the law which should be construed in favor of the plaintiff. Blackfeet Tribe v. St., 507 F. Supp. 446, 38 St. Rep. 238 (D.C. Mont. 1981).

Jurisdiction for Purpose of State Income Tax: The state lacks jurisdiction to tax income derived on a reservation by an Indian, even though the Indian is not an enrolled member of the tribe on whose reservation he is living. LaRoque v. St., 178 M 315, 583 P2d 1059 (1978), followed in St. v. Bird, 252 M 438, 829 P2d 941, 49 St. Rep. 339 (1992), with regard to lack of state authority to impose individual income taxes on enrolled tribal member residing within reservation who was employed mining coal in "ceded strip", and Crow Tribe v. Mont., 650 F2d 1104 (9th Cir. 1981), in accord with Crow Tribe v. Mont., 819 F2d 895 (9th Cir. 1987).

Case Notes

Criminal Jurisdiction Over Tribal and Nontribal Indians: Campbell petitioned the federal court for a Writ of Habeas Corpus on the grounds that he is an Indian and therefore the state has no criminal jurisdiction over him. This contention fails for two reasons. First, Campbell is not a member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes. Second, the United States permitted the assumption of jurisdiction by the state, and the Montana Supreme Court has held that jurisdiction was properly assumed. Writ denied. Campbell v. Crist, 491 F. Supp. 586, 37 St. Rep. 1328 (D.C. Mont. 1980).

Indians — Habeas Corpus — Exhaustion of State Remedies: Federal habeas corpus relief was denied where petitioner, an Indian residing on the Flathead Reservation, claiming constitutional violations failed to exhaust state remedies in accordance with 28 U.S.C. § 2254(b). Since a lack of state jurisdiction over the petitioner could also have been tested by state habeas corpus proceedings but was not, the habeas corpus complaint for lack of state jurisdiction was also denied. Campbell v. Crist, 36 St. Rep. 1690 (1979) (apparently not reported in Federal Supplement).

Effect of Section: This section constitutes valid and binding consent of people of Montana pursuant to federal statute to assume jurisdiction over crimes committed by or against Indians on Indian territory. State ex rel. McDonald v. District Court, 159 M 156, 496 P2d 78 (1972), followed in St. v. Haskins, 269 M 202, 887 P2d 1189, 51 St. Rep. 1474 (1994). See also St. v. Spotted Blanket, 1998 MT 59, 288 M 126, 955 P2d 1347, 55 St. Rep. 253 (1998).

Legislative Action Sufficient to Establish Jurisdiction: Federal statute providing for state jurisdiction over offenses committed by or against Indians on Indian reservations did not require constitutional amendment for valid and binding consent of people of Montana to assume jurisdiction; where Congress retained power to reassume federal jurisdiction through repeal of same statute, state legislative action was sufficient to establish jurisdiction. State ex rel. McDonald v. District Court, 159 M 156, 496 P2d 78 (1972). See also St. v. Spotted Blanket, 1998 MT 59, 288 M 126, 955 P2d 1347, 55 St. Rep. 253 (1998).

Tribal Council Action: Failure of Legislature to take affirmative legislative action concerning either civil or criminal jurisdiction over Indians on Blackfeet Reservation, as permitted under 28 U.S.C. § 1360, was not remedied by unilateral Tribal Council action, which provided that tribal and state courts have concurrent jurisdiction in all civil suits against members of Blackfeet tribe. Kennerly v. District Court, 400 US 423, 27 L Ed 2d 507, 91 S Ct 480 (1971), distinguished in State ex rel. Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 M 335, 512 P2d 1292 (1973).

State Nepotism Law Applicable to School Districts on Reservations — Prosecution of Tribal Members — Contracts Voidable: Montana's nepotism statutes apply to members of public school boards for districts lying wholly or partially within an Indian reservation. Criminal prosecution of Indian members for nepotism law violations with respect to decisions made and implemented wholly on-reservation may be initiated only in federal court by the United States pursuant to 18 U.S.C. 13, except for violations occurring on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Furthermore, contracts entered into in contravention of the nepotism statutes are voidable. 43 A.G. Op. 23 (1989).

Case Notes

No Jurisdiction by State Over Crimes Committed Against Indians by Non-Indians Within Reservation: Where the defendants, two non-Indians, were charged with the theft of a calf belonging to an enrolled member of the Crow Indian Tribe and the theft occurred on a reservation, the District Court did not err in dismissing the charges against the defendants. As expressed in the dicta in St. v. Youpee, 103 M 86, 61 P2d 832 (1936), the general rule, to be followed by this state, is that states have no jurisdiction over crimes against Indians by non-Indians committed within the reservations. This is true unless the enrolled Indians have accepted state jurisdiction, and as no tribal consent had been given in this case by the Crow Tribe, the charges arising from the theft of the Indian's calf were properly dismissed. St. v. Greenwalt, 204 M 196, 663 P2d 1178, 40 St. Rep. 767 (1983).

Jurisdiction — Highway Tort Cases: A vehicle driven by Larrivee, a non-Indian, collided with a vehicle driven by Morigeau, a member of the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes. The accident occurred on Montana 200 located within the exterior boundaries of the Flathead Indian Reservation. Larrivee brought an action against Morigeau in state District Court. Morigeau argued that the state court lacked subject matter jurisdiction. The court found that Montana assumed partial jurisdiction over the Flathead Reservation pursuant to Public Law 280. Tribal Ordinance 40-A consented to the assumption by the state of jurisdiction over certain subjects, including jurisdiction over the "operation of motor vehicles upon . . . highways". The court found this to include civil jurisdiction in highway tort cases. Larrivee v. Morigeau, 184 M 187, 602 P2d 563 (1979), certiorari denied, 445 US 964, 64 L Ed 2d 240, 100 S Ct 1653 (1980).

Case Notes

Termination of Parental Rights to Indian Children — Tribal Court to Affirmatively Decline Case Prior to State Court Proceedings — Jurisdiction Transfer Hearing Required Prior to Ruling on Jurisdictional Transfer of Children: The District Court erred in terminating the parental rights of a mother of four Indian children without first holding a jurisdiction transfer hearing under the Indian Child Welfare Act (ICWA) after the mother requested the matter be transferred to tribal court at the outset of the proceedings. The Supreme Court ruled that a tribal court, and not the tribe, must affirmatively decline to accept a case before a state court can proceed with termination of parental rights to Indian children. A District Court must hold a jurisdiction transfer hearing before it grants or denies a request for a jurisdictional transfer of Indian children to tribal custody. In re J.W.C., L.W.C., K.W.C., and C.W.C., 2011 MT 312, 363 Mont. 85, 265 P.3d 1265.

Analysis for Jurisdiction of District Court Over Tribal Member and Tribal Property: The correct analysis in both regulatory and adjudicatory actions involving tribal members or lands is whether the exercise of jurisdiction by a state court or regulatory body is preempted by federal law or, if not, whether it infringes on tribal self-government. If either element is met, a state may not assume civil jurisdiction or take regulatory action over Indian people or their territories within the boundaries of their reservations. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

No Subject Matter Jurisdiction for District Court in Probate for Tribal Member — Jurisdiction Presumptively With Tribal Court — Proceedings Before District Court Void: The District Court erred when it assumed subject matter jurisdiction over the probate of an enrolled Blackfeet Tribal member's estate when all of the decedent's estate property was located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation. The Supreme Court overruled Iron Bear and held that civil jurisdiction over non-Indians and Indians on reservation lands presumptively lies in the tribal court. Absent express congressional limitation, the tribe maintained sovereign power and exclusive jurisdiction over the probate of the decedent. A state court has an independent obligation to determine whether it has jurisdiction in a case involving an Indian person and Indian Country. The court declared void the 7 years of proceedings before the District Court with reference to the decedent's estate. In re Estate of Big Spring, 2011 MT 109, 360 Mont. 370, 255 P.3d 121, overruling Iron Bear v. District Court, 162 Mont. 335, 512 P.2d 1292 (1973), in its entirety and In re Marriage of Skillen, 1998 MT 43, 287 Mont. 399, 956 P.2d 1, in part and overruling numerous cases to the extent they followed the principles of Iron Bear or Skillen.

Standards Applicable to Termination of Indian Parental Rights — Active Department Efforts to Provide Services Required: The District Court terminated the parental rights of an Indian father after the children were removed from the father's custody a fourth time because of the father's abuse and neglect. The father appealed on grounds that: (1) the state did not make active efforts to provide remedial services; (2) the District Court relied on expert testimony based on the Department file rather than personal interviews; and (3) it was error not to grant the father's request for an extension of temporary legal custody. The Supreme Court affirmed on all issues. The father left no phone number or address with the social worker and moved multiple times. Without any involvement, the father prevented the Department from making active efforts at providing more intensive services. Second, the federal Indian Child Welfare Act requires testimony from a qualified expert witness, but does not require a specific form of that testimonial evidence or personal interviews, and a District Court need not conform its decision to a particular piece of evidence or a particular expert's report or testimony as long as a reasonable person could have found beyond a reasonable doubt that continued custody by an Indian parent or custodian is likely to result in serious emotional or physical damage to the child. Last, the District Court did not abuse its discretion in refusing to extend temporary custody because the Department had already provided active efforts and did not need more time to assist the father in attaining his goals. The District Court had an accurate perspective on the father's parenting abilities, and refusal to extend the temporary placement did not make the court's decision any less reasonable. Letter From Tribe Conclusive as to Tribal Membership of Children in Parental Termination Proceeding: During parental termination proceedings, a question arose as to whether two of the children involved might be Indian children by virtue of their father's tribal membership. In order to comply with the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA), the state contacted the tribe to determine if the children were tribal members. The tribe responded by letter and stated that the children were not tribal members and were not eligible for membership based on blood quantum. Under In re Adoption of Riffle, 277 M 388, 922 P2d 510 (1996), the tribe's determination was conclusive, but even aside from the letter, testimony from the children's father and several social workers affirmed that the children were not eligible for tribal membership. Because the children could not be considered Indian children by definition, the ICWA did not apply to the termination proceedings. In re T.J.H., J.H., J.L., & A.L., 2003 MT 352, 318 M 528, 81 P3d 504 (2003). See also In re C.H., S.H., & D.H., 2003 MT 308, 318 M 208, 79 P3d 822 (2003).

Belated Notice of Possible Indian Heritage of Child Subject to State Parental Termination Proceedings — Notice to Tribe Required to Allow Future Tribal Involvement if Appropriate: Only after parental termination proceedings were completed did the mother raise the issue of the possible Indian heritage of one of her children and the possible applicability of the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA). One purpose of ICWA is to afford tribes the opportunity to intervene by providing a tribe with notice before proceedings begin; but in this case, that purpose could not be honored because the District Court did not know or have reason to know of the child's possible heritage until after the termination hearing had concluded. Faced with a silent record and because the issue was not raised in the trial court, the Supreme Court declined to undermine the entire termination proceeding, but the court did order that notice be given to the tribe of which the child might be a member so that the tribe could intervene in any future proceedings if it was determined that the child was indeed an Indian child. In re C.H., S.H., & D.H., 2003 MT 308, 318 M 208, 79 P3d 822 (2003).

Indian Child Welfare Act Inapplicable to Child Ineligible for Membership in Federally Unrecognized Tribe: The state sought to terminate a mother's parental rights, but the mother contended that the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA) should apply because the father of the child was an enrolled member of the Little Shell Band of Chippewa. The Supreme Court held that ICWA did not apply for two reasons: (1) the father qualified for membership in the Little Shell Band based on the minimum one-quarter blood quantum, but the child, having only one-eighth blood quantum, did not qualify for enrollment, and tribal membership of an Indian child is required for ICWA to apply; and (2) ICWA applies only to federally recognized tribes, and as of the date of the proceeding, the Little Shell Band of Chippewa was not recognized by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior as eligible to receive services. In re C.H., S.H., & D.H., 2003 MT 308, 318 M 208, 79 P3d 822 (2003).

Land Below High-Water Mark of Flathead Lake Tribal Property Not Subject to Distribution by Estate: When she died, Hobbs owned property on the south shore of Flathead Lake. Her will designated that three nieces divide one parcel of about 1 acre above the high-water mark and that a fourth niece and her husband, the Conrads, receive an adjacent 1.9-acre parcel from the high-water mark inland. A survey established the boundary between the parcels, but did not include any land below the high-water mark to the meander line of the lake. The District Court approved the survey, distributed the property, and closed the estate. The parties later became involved in a dispute over zoning and building regulations. The personal representative petitioned to reopen the estate for the purpose of filing a corrected survey and to distribute the portion of land lying below the high-water mark to the meander line, thereby increasing the acreage of both lots. The personal representative presented exhibits and affidavits verifying that Hobbs had paid taxes on the land out to the meander line. The Conrads objected on grounds that Hobbs's will specifically left land above the high-water mark and that because the estate did not own the land below the high-water mark, it could not be distributed to anyone. Nevertheless, the District Court approved the corrected survey and distributed the land below the high-water mark to the meander line between the heirs. The Supreme Court noted that the bed and banks of Flathead Lake within Indian reservation boundaries are held by the United States in trust for the tribes, and that any private title to Flathead Lake shore property extends only to the high-water mark. The District Court erroneously distributed the land below the high-water mark to the meander line, because the court did not have jurisdiction to distribute the tribal trust property. The estate could not distribute property that it did not own. In re Estate of Hobbs, 2002 MT 85, 309 M 308, 46 P3d 594 (2002), following Mont. Power Co. v. Rochester, 127 F2d 189 (9th Cir. 1942), and Confederated Salish & Kootenai Tribes of the Flathead Reservation v. Namen, 665 F2d 951 (9th Cir. 1982).

Non-Indian Owner of Pipeline Located on Reservation Without Standing to Raise Federal Preemption Issue of Tribal Self-Government: A non-Indian company that owned a pipeline on a reservation argued that the state's tax interfered with the tribes' rights of self-government and was therefore preempted by the federal constitution. The Supreme Court ruled that while the company had standing by virtue of its taxpayer status to challenge the property tax, it did not have a sufficient personal stake in the self-government interests of the tribes to argue the federal preemption issue of tribal self-government. N. Border Pipeline Co. v. St., 237 M 117, 772 P2d 829, 46 St. Rep. 668 (1989), followed in Hagener v. Wallace, 2002 MT 109, 309 M 473, 47 P3d 847 (2002).

Preemption Clause Not Violated by State Tax on Pipeline Located on Reservation and Owned by Non-Indian Company: The state sought to collect property tax from a non-Indian company that owned a pipeline located on a reservation. The pipeline was on trust property held by the federal government for the benefit of several tribes. The Supreme Court found that the specific federal regulations cited by the company represented only slight federal and tribal interests and did not of themselves preempt the state's tax. The court also found that much of the revenue generated by the tax was used by the state to fund education of tribal members, to maintain roads, and to undertake certain law enforcement duties for some crimes by non-Indians on the reservation and for any vandalism to the pipeline. The court ruled that the state's interest in funding the school districts and in providing local services outweighed the federal or tribal interests asserted by the company. N. Border Pipeline Co. v. St., 237 M 117, 772 P2d 829, 46 St. Rep. 668 (1989).

Property Tax on Pipeline Owned by Non-Indians and Located on Reservation Not in Violation of Federal Due Process Clause or Indian Commerce Clause: The Supreme Court ruled that the property tax at issue was assessed based on the value of the pipeline found within the state and that the revenue obtained was used to provide governmental services to the tribes and the pipeline owner, thus creating a sufficient nexus to withstand a due process challenge. The court went on to find that the allegations of the pipeline owner that the tax would create future injury to tribal revenue did not rise to the level of undue discrimination or burden on Indian enterprise and therefore did not render the tax void under the Indian commerce clause. N. Border Pipeline Co. v. St., 237 M 117, 772 P2d 829, 46 St. Rep. 668 (1989).

Right to Intervene in Adoption of Indian Child — State Commitment to Indian Child Welfare Act: Prior to birth, Nellie Silk, paternal aunt of M.E.M., expressed an interest in caring for the child because she was aware of the parents' problems with parenting; however, after the child was born he was placed in foster care by the Hill County Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services). Upon learning of the placement, Silk wrote to the Department requesting custody. The Department responded that placement with Silk would be inappropriate because of Department efforts to reintegrate the family, but that Silk would be considered if adoption were to occur. After parental rights were terminated (see In re M.E.M., 209 M 192, 679 P2d 1241, 41 St. Rep. 636 (1984)), Silk was not informed of the proceedings, of M.E.M.'s availability for adoption, or of M.E.M.'s preadoptive placement with a non-Indian family. Silk's subsequent petition for adoption and motion to intervene were denied by the District Court. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that Silk had an interest in adoption stemming from the Indian Child Welfare Act of 1978 (ICWA), 25 U.S.C. § 1901, et seq., and that the state had a strong and independent commitment to the principles embodied in the ICWA. Silk also had a right to intervene under former Rule 24(a), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and although the District Court had ruled that her motion was not timely, the Supreme Court held that the motion must be granted in light of the fact that she was kept in ignorance and could not have been more diligent or earlier in her petition or motion. In re M.E.M., 223 M 234, 725 P2d 212, 43 St. Rep. 1684 (1986). See also In re K.H. & K.L.E., 1999 MT 128, 294 M 466, 981 P2d 1190, 56 St. Rep. 515 (1999).

Determination of Heirs of Intestate Indian Decedent: A determination, pursuant to 25 U.S.C. § 372, by the Secretary of the Interior of the legal heirs of an Indian who dies intestate while holding an allotment of land before the expiration of the trust period is final and conclusive. Crawford v. Andrus, 472 F. Supp. 853 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

Jurisdiction for Purpose of State Income Tax: The state lacks jurisdiction to tax income derived on a reservation by an Indian, even though the Indian is not an enrolled member of the tribe on whose reservation he is living. Part Attorney General's Opinions

Public School District Trustee as Private School Employee — No Conflict of Interest: There is no direct link between being employed by a private school and acting as a trustee for a public school district. The mere fact that a school trustee is employed by a private school located in the public school district results in no inherent conflict of interest, ethical problem, or breach of fiduciary duty. 42 A.G. Op. 44 (1987).

City Employee as Councilman — No Conflict of Interest: There is no inherent conflict of interest when a city employee is also an elected city councilman in a council-mayor form of municipal government. The opportunity to commit the breach of a fiduciary duty does not constitute a conflict of interest. 41 A.G. Op. 81 (1986).

Prohibitions and Penalties Not Exclusive: The prohibitions and penalties of this part do not preempt prior statutory provisions that may make other activity by public employees unlawful such as 2-2-201, regarding public contracts, and the criminal provisions for official misconduct, 45-7-401, especially the provisions for knowingly performing an act prohibited by law. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 77 in definition of public officer inserted (b) to include a commissioner of an airport authority; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 122 inserted definitions of local government and special district; in definition of public employee at end of (a) deleted "or any subdivision of the state" and inserted (b) relating to local government employees; in definition of public officer substituted reference to elected officer of a local government for elected officer of any subdivision of the state; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1995 Amendments: Chapter 18 in definition of public officer substituted "The term includes an" for "or any"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 562 in definition of compensation, after "money", deleted "thing of value"; deleted definitions of employee and financial interest (see 1995 Session Law for text); inserted definitions of gift of substantial value, private interest, and public employee; in definition of public officer, after "state officer", deleted "except a legislator or member of the judiciary"; in definition of state agency, in (a)(v) after "state government", deleted "except the courts" and inserted (b) excluding the Judicial Branch; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 562, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Article XIII, section 4, of the Montana Constitution is unambiguous in its intent of prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest for members of the Legislature and for all state and local government officers and employees."

Severability: Section 25, Ch. 562, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

Gift Properly Defined — Improper Influence — Money Given to PSC Incumbent Violated Ethics Code: A sitting commissioner of the Public Service Commission personally received two $1,000 checks by NorthWestern Energy and PPL Montana to help support an event concerning energy conservation. The commissioner cashed both checks, personally made out to him, and used the money for brochures for the event. After the event was over, he used remaining brochures as part of his campaign for reelection by distributing them to potential voters. The commissioner argued that "gift" should be narrowly construed as a transfer of items or money "without restrictions" to the donee, rather than applying the term to transferred funds donated for legitimate purposes. The Supreme Court noted that the code of conduct places the onus on public officers and employees, not the intent of donating parties. Therefore, the Supreme Court concluded the Commissioner of Political Practices had properly defined gift to broadly mean "something voluntarily transferred by one to another without compensation." The Supreme Court applied an objective standard and further found that such gifts would tend to improperly influence a reasonable person in the commissioner's position. The commissioner argued that the money should fall into an exemption for educational activity, but the Supreme Court found that the money was transferred personally and directly to the commissioner and was not direct educational activity. Molnar v. Fox, 2013 MT 132, 370 Mont. 238, 301 P.3d 824.

Communications to Parole Officer Not Privileged: After his arrest for burglary, the defendant called his parole officer and told him of the crime. The defendant's motion to suppress the parole officer's testimony was denied on the basis that the parole officer was not an elected officer or director and therefore communications made to him were not subject to a statutory privilege. The Supreme Court also held that the probative value of the evidence outweighed the relatively slight prejudicial impact the evidence carried in showing the jury that the defendant had been convicted of a prior crime. St. v. Higareda, 238 M 130, 777 P2d 302, 46 St. Rep. 1146 (1989).

State Auditor as Member of Hail Board — No Conflict of Interest: The State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is required to approve the form of all hail insurance policies issued in Montana and at the same time is required by law to sit as a member of the Board of Hail Insurance (Hail Board). The State Auditor is not compensated for service on the Hail Board, nor is there any compensation from any source for such duties. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is not financially interested in the Hail Board within the meaning of 2-2-102. Mtn. States Ins. Co. v. St., 218 M 365, 708 P2d 564, 42 St. Rep. 1657 (1985).

Sheriff Authorized to Accept Compensation From Federal Agency for Performance of Services Outside Official Duties: A Sheriff may receive compensation from a federal agency under the terms of a cooperative law enforcement agreement without violating any Montana statutory or constitutional provision, so long as the services rendered by the Sheriff fall outside the scope of the Sheriff's official duties. 49 A.G. Op. 12 (2001).

Disclosure Voluntary: Disclosure of a potential conflict of interest by a local government official is purely voluntary and may be done prior to taking any official action, as defined in 2-2-102. 40 A.G. Op. 28 (1983).

Elected City Council Member — Public Officer: The definition of "public officer" in this section includes an elected member of a City Council. 38 A.G. Op. 103 (1980).

County Commissioners — Fiduciary Duty: A County Commissioner who is a voting member of the board of an organization that actually receives county contract funds does not have a prohibited conflict of interest under 7-5-2106 unless the Commissioner receives a personal pecuniary or proprietary benefit from the contract. He does, however, breach his fiduciary duty under 2-2-125 (now repealed) by acting officially to award county contracts to the organization unless he complies with the voluntary disclosure requirements of 2-2-125 (now repealed). 38 A.G. Op. 55 (1979).

County Commissioners — Prohibited Interests: A County Commissioner who is a voting member of a board that channels county contract funds to other organizations but does not itself derive any economic benefit from the contract does not have a prohibited interest in the contract under 7-5-2106 and does not breach his fiduciary duty under 2-2-125 (now repealed) by acting officially to allocate funds to that board for subsequent disbursement. 38 A.G. Op. 55 (1979).

Discretionary Acts of Coroner/Mortician: A County Coroner who is also a mortician violates the provisions of 2-2-125 (now repealed) if he directs that a body be taken to a funeral parlor in which he has a substantial financial interest, unless he has no discretion to select the funeral parlor. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978), overruling 35 A.G. Op. 92 (1974).

1995 Amendment: Chapter 562 in (1) and (2), before "employees" or "employee", inserted "public"; in (2) substituted "the person's public" for "his fiduciary", after "of the state" deleted "as a trustee of property, is liable to a beneficiary under 72-34-105", and substituted "is subject to the penalties provided in this part" for "shall suffer such other liabilities as a private fiduciary would suffer" and deleted last two sentences that read: "The county attorney of the county where the trust is violated may bring appropriate judicial proceedings on behalf of the people. Any moneys collected in such actions shall be paid to the general fund of the aggrieved agency"; in (3) substituted "public duty" for "fiduciary duty" and substituted "must be avoided" for "is not, as such, a violation of fiduciary duty"; inserted (4) regarding enforcement; and made minor changes in style. Acceptance of Valuable Gift in Probationer's Will Considered Negligent — Termination of Probation Officer Justified — Denial of Unemployment Benefits Proper: Probation officer Morrow accepted an envelope from a probationer that was marked to be opened in the event of the probationer's death. When the probationer died, Morrow opened the envelope and found the probationer's will, which designated Morrow as the personal representative of the probationer's estate and devised real and personal property to Morrow. Morrow accepted the position of personal representative and began probating the will. Morrow mentioned the situation to his supervisor in passing, but did not discuss ethics or inheritances, minimizing the significance of the event. The Department of Corrections became concerned about ethical violations after the situation was brought to the Department's attention by a citizen complainant, and Morrow was subsequently terminated for failing to follow performance and conduct guidelines regarding supervision of the probationer and Morrow's status as devisee of the estate. Morrow applied for unemployment benefits, but the benefits were denied because of the discharge for misconduct. Morrow appealed, but the referee upheld the denial of benefits, so Morrow appealed to the Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board). The Board found that Morrow was negligent in not opening the envelope immediately but that the act did not amount to willful or wanton disregard for the Department's interests, so the benefits were reinstated. The Department appealed to the District Court, which reviewed the record and reversed the Board's decision and reinstated the denial of benefits. Morrow appealed to the Supreme Court. The court held that Morrow's failure to open the envelope referencing the event of the probationer's death was a negligent act that substantially disregarded the Department's interest in properly supervising the probationer and that at the very least, Morrow should have closely scrutinized the gift and sought guidance from the supervisor, in accordance with the agency's policy manual, rather than downplaying the significance of Morrow's inclusion in the will. Morrow's termination for accepting a gift of significant value was justified, and denial of unemployment benefits was affirmed. Dept. of Corrections v. St., 2006 MT 298, 334 M 425, 148 P3d 619 (2006).

County Superintendent Serving as Substitute — No Additional Compensation: A County Superintendent, who is serving as a substitute superintendent is not allowed to charge hourly fees in addition to the regular salary paid by the county in which the County Superintendent is elected since serving as a substitute is part of the statutory job responsibilities. 54 A.G. Op. 1 (2011).

Sheriff Authorized to Accept Compensation From Federal Agency for Performance of Services Outside Official Duties: A Sheriff may receive compensation from a federal agency under the terms of a cooperative law enforcement agreement without violating any Montana statutory or constitutional provision, so long as the services rendered by the Sheriff fall outside the scope of the Sheriff's official duties. 49 A.G. Op. 12 (2001).

Acceptance of Severance Pay by Public Service Commissioner Not Breach of Ethics: Severance pay negotiated as part of a negotiated union contract agreement and supported by consideration, such as surrender of accrued seniority and entitlement to reemployment, does not constitute a gift within the meaning of this section, nor does the termination of employment and acceptance of severance pay constitute a substantial financial transaction for private business purposes within the meaning of 2-2-121. Therefore, a Public Service Commissioner did not violate the code of ethics for public officials and employees by temporarily reactivating and then terminating his employment with a railroad company in order to become eligible to receive severance pay negotiated between the railroad and the collective bargaining unit to which the Commissioner belonged. Notice to the other Commissioners was adequate to meet the terms of 2-2-121(2)(f). The action did not constitute the kind of private relationship contemplated by the code of ethics that would threaten the integrity of the position because the situation presented no opportunity to use the influence of the official position to further personal gain. 45 A.G. Op. 10 (1993).

County Property — Acquisition by Employee: The code of ethics prohibits a county employee from using confidential information acquired in the course of his official duties to further his economic interest, but it does not prohibit him from bidding on county property being sold at public auction or limit the employee's ability to purchase tax deeds. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

Hiring of County Attorney as Civil County Attorney Not Violative of Statute Absent Showing of Advantage: DePuy resigned her position as Park County Attorney to take a position as new Civil County Attorney. A group of concerned citizens asserted that DePuy violated 2-2-105(3) by helping the Board of County Commissioners to create the new position and by then resigning to accept the new position. The District Court concluded that there was no statutory violation because DePuy remained employed by the same public employer. The Supreme Court agreed. Section 2-2-105(3) was intended to prevent public employees from taking advantage of a government position to benefit themselves when leaving public employment. DePuy did not leave public employment, and her duty to advise the Board and to represent the county remained the same. Absent evidence that when DePuy was hired as Civil County Attorney she somehow gained an advantage, unavailable to others, over matters handled by the county or the County Attorney, the subsection did not apply. Park County Concerned Citizens v. DePuy, 2008 MT 246, 344 M 504, 190 P3d 293 (2008).

Showing of Irrevocably Closed Mind as Proof of Prejudice by Administrative Decisionmaker: Madison River R.V. Ltd. (RV) sought to build a recreational vehicle park in Ennis. Prior to a hearing before the Ennis Town Council, RV requested in writing that one of the council members recuse himself, based on his alleged bias against the project. The request was denied without objection by the other council members, and RV's application for the park was also denied. On appeal, RV contended that the council member's participation in the council's deliberations was error, citing the principle that one who makes decisions in a judicial or quasi-judicial capacity must be free from bias. However, no authority was cited that the principle applies to elected members of a city council. Pursuant to Fed. Trade Comm'n v. Cement Institute, 333 US 683, 92 L Ed 1010, 68 S Ct 793 (1948), in order to prevail on a claim of prejudice or bias against an administrative decisionmaker, the petitioner must show that the decisionmaker had an irrevocably closed mind on the subject under investigation or adjudication. Here, RV failed to establish that the council member's mind was irrevocably closed. The District Court's determination that the town council was not required to disqualify the member from voting and that the council's decision should not be vacated because of its failure to disqualify the member in question was affirmed. Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000).

Attorney General's Opinions

Secretarial Services for Private Practice of County Attorney: A secretary employed by the county to assist a County Attorney may work on the County Attorney's private business during time when the secretary's services are not needed on county business. The County Attorney must account for the time that the secretary spends on private business and reimburse the county for any county-compensated time spent on the County Attorney's private business. A claim by a County Attorney for secretarial services reasonably required for the conduct of the County Attorney's official duties is a legitimate claim against the county. The reasonableness of the claim is a question of fact vested in the sound discretion of the county governing body. 46 A.G. Op. 10 (1995). See also 46 A.G. Op. 20 (1996), in which the Attorney General held that a County Attorney may not compel the County Commissioners to authorize the hiring as a county employee of a legal secretary for the County Attorney absent a showing that any other arrangement would prevent the County Attorney from performing the minimum statutory duties.

Case Notes

Elected Official Improperly Used State Facilities for Political Purposes: A Public Service Commission commissioner used his state e-mail address on a campaign fundraising letter and website, solicited a campaign editorial from his state e-mail, sent campaign-related media e-mails from his state account, and used his state e-mail to arrange accommodations for a campaign appearance. The District Court concluded that the commissioner improperly used state facilities for political purposes. Although this section prohibits a public officer or employee from using "public time" for political purposes, an elected officer does not have specified hours of employment and is considered to be on "public time" at all times. To prevent absurd results from the application of the statute, the Supreme Court declined to apply the "public time" requirement to elected officials; instead, the Supreme Court noted that a violation under this section for an elected official turned on whether that official used public equipment, supplies, or funds for political purposes. Although administrative rule allows essential personal business to be conducted if kept to a minimum, the court noted that it did not authorize any political uses nor were the violations of a de minimis nature. Likewise, whether the commissioner sent the e-mails from work or another location did not matter because the e-mails were sent through the state e-mail system. Therefore, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court, holding that the commissioner improperly used state resources for political purposes. Molnar v. Fox, 2013 MT 132, 370 Mont. 238, 301 P.3d 824.

Falsification of Employee Time Records — Termination Warranted: Christie was terminated from state employment for falsifying time records. A hearings examiner recommended reinstatement, but the agency director concluded that the examiner erred, so Christie filed an action for review of the director's decision. The District Court affirmed the director's opinion and denied review, so Christie appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Substantial evidence in the record showed that Christie persistently and intentionally falsified time records and claimed to have worked hours that he did not work. The state's Discipline Handling Guide permits discharge of an employee upon a first occurrence for serious infractions such as falsification of records and theft of state property, so the agency was not required to consult Christie's service record prior to discharge. The hearings examiner did not specifically make any finding regarding the record falsification issue, so neither the director nor the District Court erred in substituting their judgment for that of the hearings examiner, and based on the evidence, Christie's discharge was warranted. The District Court's reference to a warning letter that was not part of the administrative record, if error, was harmless. Christie v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2009 MT 364, 353 M 227, 220 P3d 405 (2009).

County Attorney's Membership in Organization Not Involved in County Proceedings — No Statutory Violation: Park County Civil County Attorney DePuy was also a board member of a nonprofit organization that sought to promote sustainable development and to protect Montana's landscape. A group of concerned citizens claimed that DePuy's membership in the organization violated this section. The District Court found no violation and summarily dismissed the claim. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. DePuy presented uncontroverted evidence that the organization had never been involved in a proceeding in Park County or attempted to influence any county proceeding. This section would have prevented DePuy from participating in or attempting to influence a proceeding in which the organization and the county were involved, but absent evidence of DePuy's involvement in such an activity, the statute did not apply. Park County Concerned Citizens v. DePuy, 2008 MT 246, 344 M 504, 190 P3d 293 (2008).

Conspiracy Claim Against Lawyer Representing Supreme Court — The "Justinhoard" Thesis: Plaintiff sued a state government executive branch attorney because the attorney had represented four state Supreme Court Justices in another action in which plaintiff sued the Justices. Plaintiff claimed the attorney was guilty of conspiracy, improper official action, and abuse of the principle of "justinhoard" (a principle of justice apparently developed by and unique to plaintiff). The court found the complaint and appeal from its dismissal fruitless, weightless, needless, and senseless, stating that the cause is another of a series of proceedings by plaintiff in the state and federal courts in which he has imputed incompetence, bias, and conspiracy to judges and parties involved in his court actions, and has subjected the judicial process to denigration. The appeal was dismissed. Lussy v. Young, 215 M 50, 695 P2d 455, 42 St. Rep. 173 (1985).

Attorney General's Opinions

Right of Public Officer or Employee to Support or Oppose Political Candidate or Ballot Issue: Although this section sets forth rules of conduct for public officers and employees, it is not personal political speech that is prohibited, but rather the use of public time or resources in the presentation or furtherance of political speech. Thus, a public officer or employee may engage in political speech, including the support or opposition of a candidate or ballot issue, as long as the political speech does not involve the use of public time, facilities, equipment, supplies, personnel, or funds. 51 A.G. Op. 1 (2005).

Sheriff Authorized to Accept Compensation From Federal Agency for Performance of Services Outside Official Duties: A Sheriff may receive compensation from a federal agency under the terms of a cooperative law enforcement agreement without violating any Montana statutory or constitutional provision, so long as the services rendered by the Sheriff fall outside the scope of the Sheriff's official duties. 49 A.G. Op. 12 (2001).

Provision of Office Space and Equipment by County for Part-Time County Attorney: A county governing body may satisfy its obligation to provide office space for a part-time County Attorney by providing space in a county building or, if no suitable space is available, by renting office space. Use of the space for the County Attorney's private practice is allowed only through a written agreement between the county and the County Attorney leasing the use of the space for private business purposes. Alternatively, the governing body may allow a claim by the County Attorney for the rental of office space needed to conduct the county's business if suitable office space is not available in county buildings. A county governing body may satisfy its obligation to provide necessary equipment for a part-time County Attorney by providing the use of the equipment owned by the county or, if no suitable equipment is available, by renting equipment. Use of the equipment for the County Attorney's private practice is allowed only through a written agreement between the county and the County Attorney leasing the use of the equipment for private business purposes. 46 A.G. Op. 10 (1995), followed in 46 A.G. Op. 20 (1996).

Secretarial Services for Private Practice of County Attorney: A secretary employed by the county to assist a County Attorney may work on the County Attorney's private business during time when the secretary's services are not needed on county business. The County Attorney must account for the time that the secretary spends on private business and reimburse the county for any county-compensated time spent on the County Attorney's private business. A claim by a County Attorney for secretarial services reasonably required for the conduct of the County Attorney's official duties is a legitimate claim against the county. The reasonableness of the claim is a question of fact vested in the sound discretion of the county governing body. 46 A.G. Op. 10 (1995). See also 46 A.G. Op. 20 (1996), in which the Attorney General held that a County Attorney may not compel the County Commissioners to authorize the hiring as a county employee of a legal secretary for the County Attorney absent a showing that any other arrangement would prevent the County Attorney from performing the minimum statutory duties.

Acceptance of Severance Pay by Public Service Commissioner Not Breach of Ethics: Severance pay negotiated as part of a negotiated union contract agreement and supported by consideration, such as surrender of accrued seniority and entitlement to reemployment, does not constitute a gift within the meaning of 2-2-104, nor does the termination of employment and acceptance of severance pay constitute a substantial financial transaction for private business purposes within the meaning of this section. Therefore, a Public Service Commissioner did not violate the code of ethics for public officials and employees by temporarily reactivating and then terminating his employment with a railroad company in order to become eligible to receive severance pay negotiated between the railroad and the collective bargaining unit to which the Commissioner belonged. Notice to the other Commissioners was adequate to meet the terms of subsection (2)(f) of this section. The action did not constitute the kind of private relationship contemplated by the code of ethics that would threaten the integrity of the position because the situation presented no opportunity to use the influence of the official position to further personal gain. 45 A.G. Op. 10 (1993).

Dual Trusteeship in Volunteer Fire District and Fire Service Area — Not Conflict of Interest: Trusteeship in a volunteer fire department is not incompatible with simultaneous trusteeship in a fire service area. Volunteer fire departments and fire service areas are separate governmental entities. Neither owes its creation or continued existence to the other, and each lacks any form of supervisory authority with respect to the personnel of the other. There is no indication that dual trusteeship imposes an insurmountable obstacle to the proper discharge of the duties attendant in trusteeship; therefore, concurrent trusteeship of both a volunteer fire department and a fire service area does not constitute a conflict of interest. 43 A.G. Op. 47 (1989).

County Commissioners — Prohibited Interests: A County Commissioner who is a voting member of a board that channels county contract funds to other organizations but does not itself derive any economic benefit from the contract does not have a prohibited interest in the contract under 7-5-2106 and does not breach his fiduciary duty under 2-2-125 (now repealed) by acting officially to allocate funds to that board for subsequent disbursement. 38 A.G. Op. 55 (1979).

Coroner Who Is a Mortician:

A County Coroner who is also a mortician or an employee of a funeral home is not automatically in violation of 2-2-125 (now repealed). However, the mortuary with which he is affiliated may not receive compensation for any services related to the County Coroner's official duties. This does not apply if the mortuary is the only mortuary in the county. 37 A.G. Op. 179 (1978).

A County Coroner who is also a mortician violates the provisions of 2-2-125 (now repealed) if he directs that a body be taken to a funeral parlor in which he has a substantial financial interest, unless he has no discretion to select the funeral parlor. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978), overruling 35 A.G. Op. 92 (1974).

Deputy Sheriff: A Deputy Sheriff may accept employment as a security guard without violating 2-2-125 (now repealed) because the latter position does not involve a financial transaction with a person he inspects or supervises. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

Personal Transaction With Person Inspected: A member of a county board breaches a fiduciary duty if he enters into a substantial financial transaction for personal business with a person he inspects or supervises in the course of his official duties. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

Who Voluntary Disclosure Excuses: The voluntary disclosure provisions of this section serve to excuse an act that would otherwise be a violation of the code of ethics only if the individual involved is a member of the local governing body, a state department head, or a member of a state quasi-judicial or rulemaking board. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

2-2-131. Disclosure.

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 65 near beginning of second sentence substituted "commissioner of political practices" for "secretary of state". Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 562 near beginning of first sentence, before "employee", inserted "public", substituted "shall" for "may", substituted "public" for "his fiduciary", and inserted "including the award of a permit, contract, or license" and in second sentence substituted "private" for "his financial"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 562, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Article XIII, section 4, of the Montana Constitution is unambiguous in its intent of prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest for members of the Legislature and for all state and local government officers and employees."

Severability: Section 25, Ch. 562, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Attorney General's Opinions

Disclosure — Abstinence From Voting — When Contract Voidable: Where a local government official has a conflict of interest, such as a substantial interest in a business bidding on a local government contract, the official must comply with the disclosure and abstinence from voting provisions of 2-2-125 (now repealed) and 2-2-131, even though the interest may be permissible under the exceptions contained in 2-2-201. If the interest is not permissible under the exceptions listed in 2-2-201, the contract is voidable and abstinence from voting will not exonerate the official. 40 A.G. Op. 28 (1983).

Disclosure Voluntary: Disclosure of a potential conflict of interest by a local government official is purely voluntary and may be done prior to taking any official action, as defined in 2-2-102. 40 A.G. Op. 28 (1983).

County Commissioners — Fiduciary Duty: A County Commissioner who is a voting member of the board of an organization that actually receives county contract funds does not have a prohibited conflict of interest under 7-5-2106 unless the Commissioner receives a personal pecuniary or proprietary benefit from the contract. He does, however, breach his fiduciary duty under 2-2-125 (now repealed) by acting officially to award county contracts to the organization unless he complies with the voluntary disclosure requirements of 2-2-125 (now repealed). 38 A.G. Op. 55 (1979).

Who Voluntary Disclosure Excuses: The voluntary disclosure provisions of this section serve to excuse an act that otherwise would be a violation of the code of ethics only if the individual involved is a member of the local governing body, a state department head, or a member of a state quasi-judicial or rulemaking board as permitted by 2-2-121 and 2-2-125 (now repealed). Except in those two instances, this section does not relieve a public officer or employee of his obligations of breach of fiduciary duty other than to show good faith on the part of the person disclosing. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

2007 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 4 in (1) in second sentence at beginning inserted "Subject to 5-5-234" and at end after "consist of two members of" substituted "the majority party and two members of the minority party" for "each political party"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 25, 2007.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 22, Ch. 4, Sp. L. May 2007, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to appointments made for members of the 60th legislature."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 562, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Article XIII, section 4, of the Montana Constitution is unambiguous in its intent of prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest for members of the Legislature and for all state and local government officers and employees."

2013 Amendment: Chapter 234 in (1)(a) near end inserted fourth sentence concerning a complaint filed against the commissioner. Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 386 in (2)(a) inserted exception clause; inserted (2)(b) providing penalties for violating 2-2-121(4)(b); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2011.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 122 in (1)(a) inserted third sentence relating to jurisdiction over complaints against a county attorney and at end substituted last sentence allowing commission to request additional information to make an initial determination for "The commissioner shall request any information necessary to make a determination from the complainant or the person who is the subject of the complaint and may issue subpoenas"; inserted (1)(b) relating to dismissals and summary decisions; in (1)(c) at beginning substituted exception clause and phrase relating to commissioner determination of potential violation for "Unless the complaint is referred to the county attorney under subsection (1)(c)"; deleted former (1)(c) that read: "(c) If it appears to the commissioner that a complaint alleges criminal conduct, the commissioner shall stay the proceedings under this section and refer the matter to the appropriate county attorney"; in (2) inserted second sentence relating to disciplinary action; in (3) substituted present language relating to a judicial review for "The decision of the commissioner may be appealed to the ethics commission as provided in 2-2-137"; in (4) in first sentence after "hearing" inserted "held under subsection (1) and records that are open for public inspection pursuant to Montana law" and near end inserted "are confidential documents and" and inserted second and third sentences relating to maintaining and waiving confidentiality; inserted (5) relating to scope of commissioner statements; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (2), in first sentence after "employing", inserted "state". Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 562, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Article XIII, section 4, of the Montana Constitution is unambiguous in its intent of prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest for members of the Legislature and for all state and local government officers and employees."

Administrative Rules

Title 44, chapter 10, subchapter 6, ARM Code of ethics and guidelines.

Case Notes

Any Person Has Standing to File Ethics Complaint: Because the Commissioner of Political Practices is an administrative agency, standing to bring a complaint is governed by statute, and administrative agency standing is distinguishable from judicial standing requirements that require a complaining party be harmed in a way distinguishable from the general public. This section governs who may bring an ethics complaint, and by its simple terms, it allows any person standing to file an ethics complaint. Molnar v. Fox, 2013 MT 132, 370 Mont. 238, 301 P.3d 824.

Case Notes

Lawsuit Constituting Personal Attack Against Public Employee — Sanctions Proper: The District Court did not err in assessing sanctions against plaintiffs who filed a suit against the Park County Attorney despite a lack of support for their legal positions. The lawsuit was ill-conceived and amounted to a personal attack against a public employee, and the County Attorney was entitled to attorney fees incurred in defending the suit. The County Attorney was also entitled to attorney fees incurred on appeal. Park County Concerned Citizens v. DePuy, 2008 MT 246, 344 M 504, 190 P3d 293 (2008).

Proscribed Acts Related to Contracts and Claims

2-2-201. Public officers, employees, and former employees not to have interest in contracts.

Compiler's Comments

2001 Amendment: Chapter 181 in (1) at end of first sentence inserted "if they are involved with the contract"; in definition of contract in (2)(b)(i) after "awarded" deleted "to the lowest responsible bidder or proposer" and after "competitive" substituted "procurement procedures conducted after the date of employment termination" for "bidding procedures"; inserted (2)(c) defining directly involved; deleted former (2) that read "(2) The governing body of a city, town, or county may waive the application of the prohibition contained in subsection (1) for a present or former city, town, or county officer or employee who in an official capacity does not influence the decisionmaking process or supervise a function regarding the contract in question. A governing body may grant a waiver under this subsection only after publicly disclosing the nature of the conflict at an advertised public hearing held for that purpose. In determining whether to grant a waiver, the governing body shall consider the following factors, where applicable:

(a) whether the waiver would provide to a program or project a significant benefit or an essential skill or expertise that would otherwise not be available;

(b) whether an opportunity was provided for open competitive bidding or negotiation;

(c) whether the person affected is a member of a clearly identified group of persons that is the intended beneficiary of the program or project involved in the contract; and

(d) whether the hardship imposed on the affected person or the governmental entity by prohibiting the conflict will outweigh the public interest served by avoiding the conflict"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Applicability: Section 28, Ch. 181, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to contracts for which the contracting government entity begins the contracting process after October 1, 2001."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 322 inserted (2) establishing a process whereby a local government governing body can waive the conflict of interest provision for certain officers and employees; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: In (2)(a), after "bidder", inserted "or proposer"; and inserted (3) excluding a person involuntarily terminated from being considered a former employee. Amendment effective February 27, 1991.

1981 Amendment: Inserted exception for geographical considerations in definition of contract.

Case Notes

Goods Bought and Consumed in City: Contracts for purchase of goods by city from corporation of which members of City Council were employees or officials are voidable rather than void and thus cannot be avoided without restoring the consideration or otherwise doing equity. Grady v. Livingston, 115 M 47, 141 P2d 346 (1943).

Suit to Recover Purchase Price of Goods Bought and Consumed: City which kept and consumed goods purchased by it in face of fact that they were purchased under voidable contract was obligated to return the merchandise or pay reasonable value thereof, and it could not, after consuming the goods and being unable to restore them, sue and recover money paid for them. Grady v. Livingston, 115 M 47, 141 P2d 346 (1943).

Attorney General's Opinions

Contracts — Definition: As used in this section, "contract" includes only those contracts to which public entities are parties and does not include contractual undertakings entered into between nonpublic entities or persons such as construction subcontracts. This is so even if a state or local official is a major shareholder of a corporation subcontracting with a prime contractor on a government project. 40 A.G. Op. 32 (1984).

Disclosure — Abstinence From Voting — When Contract Voidable: Where a local government official has a conflict of interest, such as a substantial interest in a business bidding on a local government contract, the official must comply with the disclosure and abstinence from voting provisions of 2-2-125 (now repealed) and 2-2-131, even though the interest may be permissible under the exceptions contained in 2-2-201. If the interest is not permissible under the exceptions listed in 2-2-201, the contract is voidable and abstinence from voting will not exonerate the official. 40 A.G. Op. 28 (1983).

Definitions — Incorporation: Since the Legislature is presumed not to perform useless acts, the definitions of "be interested in" and "contract" contained in 2-2-201 are incorporated into and are applicable to 7-5-2106 and 7-5-4109, which relate to the same subject matter, conflicts of interest for local government officials. 40 A.G. Op. 28 (1983).

Commissioner Eligibility: A tenant in a housing authority is ineligible to serve as a commissioner of the housing authority. 37 A.G. Op. 110 (1978).

County Property — Acquisition by Employees: The code of ethics (Title 2, ch. 2, part 1) prohibits a county employee from using confidential information acquired in the course of his official duties to further his economic interest, but it does not prohibit him from bidding on county property being sold at public auction or limit the employees' ability to purchase tax deeds. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

Discretionary Acts of Coroner/Mortician: A County Coroner who is also a mortician violates the provisions of 2-2-125 (now repealed) if he directs that a body be taken to a funeral parlor in which he has a substantial financial interest, unless he has no discretion to select the funeral parlor. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978), overruling 35 A.G. Op. 92 (1974).

School Trustees — Conflict of Interest: It is unlawful for a corporate business in which a school board trustee is a minor stockholder to furnish supplies for the operation and maintenance of the school. 37 A.G. Op. 78 (1977).

Board of Housing — Conflicts of Interest: Although no violation of this section was found, members of Board of Housing (who were also bank officers) would come within this section's prohibitions if the Board were to contract with the institutions the members were associated with. 37 A.G. Op. 2 (1977).

Scope of Prohibition: All state officers, employees, and members of government may enter into contracts with the state if the contract does not conflict with the prohibitions of this section or prohibitions of similar sections relating to contracts with a particular agency, board, or department. 34 A.G. Op. 46 (1972).

General Prohibition — Not Applicable When Specific Prohibition Applies: This section is a general statute applying to contracting in all levels of government except when a special statute has been enacted, such as that regulating state procurement in 18-4-141. 34 A.G. Op. 36 (1972).

2-2-202. Public officers not to have interest in sales or purchases.

Attorney General's Opinions

County Property — Acquisition by Employee: The code of ethics (Title 2, ch. 2, part 1) prohibits a county employee from using confidential information acquired in the course of his official duties to further his economic interest, but it does not prohibit him from bidding on county property being sold at public auction or limit the employees' ability to purchase tax deeds. 37 A.G. Op. 104 (1978).

2-2-203. Voidable contracts.

Case Notes

Construction: This section is so plain that it interprets and construes itself, and it is not allowable to go elsewhere in search of conjecture in order to restrict or extend its meaning. Grady v. Livingston, 115 M 47, 141 P2d 346 (1943).

Contracts Voidable: Contracts made in violation of this section are not absolutely void but only voidable; they cannot be set aside until decreed void by court. Grady v. Livingston, 115 M 47, 141 P2d 346 (1943).

Purpose: Purpose of this section is to leave city free to accept or reject contracts made by city officers with corporations in which they have an interest; intent of sections 2-2-201 through 2-2-203 is to purge public service of persons who betray their public trust, not to penalize the selling corporation or to confiscate property of business concerns whose employees happen to be serving the municipality. Grady v. Livingston, 115 M 47, 141 P2d 346 (1943).

Attorney General's Opinions

Disclosure — Abstinence From Voting — When Contract Voidable: Where a local government official has a conflict of interest, such as a substantial interest in a business bidding on a local government contract, the official must comply with the disclosure and abstinence from voting provisions of 2-2-125 (now repealed) and 2-2-131, even though the interest may be permissible under the exceptions contained in 2-2-201. 2-2-204. Dealings in warrants and other claims prohibited.

Case Notes

Officers: Police captain was an "officer" within this section and section 94-3907, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed; replaced by 45-7-401), and fact that accused bought warrant for brother officer was no defense. State ex rel. O'Brien v. Butte, 54 M 533, 172 P 134 (1918).

Defective Information Charging Violation: Information, which charged defendant with being accessory to county official in purchasing evidence of indebtedness against a county, contrary to this section and section 94-3907, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed; replaced by 45-7-401), was defective for failure to state that defendant knew that alleged principal was a county officer. St. v. Danzer, 35 M 269, 88 P 952 (1907).

Attorney General's Opinions

Purchase of Sidewalk, Curb, or Gutter Warrants by City Officials Prohibited: An elected or appointed city official may not purchase a sidewalk, curb, or gutter warrant without violating the prohibition against city officers' purchasing city warrants. These warrants are not covered by the exceptions of 2-2-204, nor are they held by a city officer for services rendered or evidence of the funded indebtedness of the city. Therefore, purchase of these warrants by city officials is prohibited. 38 A.G. Op. 79 (1980).

1991 Amendments: Chapter 55 inserted (2)(c) exempting a school district from the provisions of this section and 2-2-303, under certain circumstances, in the employment of a substitute teacher; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 238 at beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; inserted (2)(b) exempting school district trustees under certain conditions; and inserted (3) requiring notice of trustees' intended action. Amendment effective March 29, 1991.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (2)(b) relating to renewal of employment contract made before the relative assumed office; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 117, L. 1987, provided: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to occurrences on or after October 1, 1985, and permits the rehiring of a person whose employment contract was not renewed because of nepotism."

Case Notes

Illegal Employment of Teacher: Where father, mother, and uncle of the only pupils attending school were the sole persons eligible to serve as trustees, the employment of mother who, though elected as trustee, preferred to act as teacher and did not qualify as trustee was illegal under this section. State ex rel. Hoagland v. School District, 116 M 294, 151 P2d 168 (1944).

Confirmation of Appointment of Son: This section does not preclude City Alderman from voting in confirmation of appointment of his son by Mayor to a subordinate city office, the statute making no provision for such a contingency. State ex rel. Kurth v. Grinde, 96 M 608, 32 P2d 15 (1934).

Attorney General's Opinions

State Nepotism Law Applicable to School Districts on Reservations — Prosecution of Tribal Members — Contracts Voidable: Montana's nepotism statutes apply to members of public school boards for districts lying wholly or partially within an Indian reservation. Criminal prosecution of Indian members for nepotism law violations with respect to decisions made and implemented wholly on-reservation may be initiated only in federal court by the United States pursuant to 18 U.S.C. 13, except for violations occurring on the Flathead Indian Reservation. Furthermore, contracts entered into in contravention of the nepotism statutes are voidable. 43 A.G. Op. 23 (1989).

Nepotism Statute Applicable to Reserve Officers: A reserve officer holds a position of public trust within the meaning of this section; therefore, the appointment of a reserve Deputy Sheriff is subject to the nepotism law prohibiting appointment of a relative within the fourth degree of consanguinity or second degree of affinity. 42 A.G. Op. 91 (1988).

Application of Nepotism Law to Rehiring of Tenured Teacher: The nepotism statutes (2-2-301 through 2-2-304) prohibit the rehiring of a tenured teacher if the teacher is within one of the prohibited relationships to a member of the school district board of trustees. The 1985 amendments of 49-2-303(3) and 49-3-201(5) overruled 39 A.G. Op. 67 (1982), insofar as it holds that the nepotism law does not apply to relationships by affinity. 41 A.G. Op. 57 (1986).

County Commission Meeting as "Meeting" Under Open Meetings Law: A regularly scheduled meeting between a Board of County Commissioners and its staff is a "meeting" within the terms of the open meetings law, Title 2, ch. 3, part 2. 41 A.G. Op. 38 (1985).

Impliedly Repealed Nepotism Statute Not Revived by 1983 Amendments: The Attorney General issued an opinion (39 A.G. Op. 67 (1982)) that 2-2-302 had been impliedly repealed by the Human Rights Act. The 1983 amendments to the Human Rights Act and the Governmental Code of Fair Practices (which amendments permit assertion of the "reasonable demands" or "bona fide occupational qualification" defense to marital status discrimination) did not revive the impliedly repealed portion of 2-2-302 restricting employment on the basis of affinity. (See, however, 1985 amendment notes to 49-2-303 and 49-3-201.) 40 A.G. Op. 40 (1984).

Contracts — Definition: As used in this section, "contract" includes only those contracts to which public entities are parties and does not include contractual undertakings entered into between nonpublic entities or persons such as construction subcontracts. This is so even if a state or local official is a major shareholder of a corporation subcontracting with a prime contractor on a government project. 40 A.G. Op. 32 (1984).

Nepotism Statute Subservient to Human Rights Law: The nepotism law clearly violates the intent of the human rights law because it permits discrimination in employment based solely on marital status. Applying the rule of construction that when two laws are in conflict, the later one supersedes the earlier, the human rights law must prevail. Thus, the Human Rights Act prohibits the Board of Trustees of a school district from enforcing the nepotism statute by refusing employment to a teacher solely on the basis of her relationship by affinity to a board member. 39 A.G. Op. 67 (1982), overruled by 1985 amendment of 49-2-303 and 49-3-201, as declared by 41 A.G. Op. 57 (1986).

Appointment of Son-in-Law by Mayor: The appointment of the son-in-law of an appointing Mayor to the position of Chief of Police would violate the nepotism prohibition of this section, even though he may be the most qualified applicant for the position. 37 A.G. Op. 49 (1977).

Ruse to Avoid Effect of Act Unlawful: It is unlawful for a school board to accept the resignation of a member, approve the promotion of the member's sister-in-law as an employee of the board, and then immediately reappoint the resigned member to fill the vacant position. 37 A.G. Op. 6 (1977).

Adoption — Effect on Consanguinity: Legal adoption does not terminate the relationship of consanguinity under this section, and an adopted person may not hire the wife of his natural brother in an administrative capacity. 36 A.G. Op. 83 (1976).

Reappointment of Related Tenured Teacher — Trustee Elected After Teacher's Appointment: If there is a contract of employment for a tenured teacher to be reviewed by the Board of Trustees and one of the Board members is a relative of the teacher but was elected after the teacher's appointment, there is no violation of nepotism laws. 34 A.G. Op. 3 (1971).

Liquor Vendor and Daughter Employed in Same Store — No Violation: A state liquor vendor and his daughter may both be employed in the same liquor store because the vendor had no power to hire and fire employees. Thus, there is no violation of nepotism laws. 27 A.G. Op. 21 (1957).

2-2-303. Agreements to appoint relative to office unlawful.

Attorney General's Opinions

Reappointment of Related Tenured Teacher — Trustee Elected After Teacher's Appointment: If there is a contract of employment for a tenured teacher to be reviewed by the Board of Trustees and one of the Board members is a relative of the teacher but was elected after the teacher's appointment, there is no violation of nepotism laws. 34 A.G. Op. 3 (1971).

Liquor Vendor and Daughter Employed in Same Store — No Violation: A state liquor vendor and his daughter may both be employed in the same liquor store because the vendor had no power to hire and fire employees. Thus, there is no violation of nepotism laws. 27 A.G. Op. 21 (1957).

2-2-304. Penalty for violation of nepotism law.

Districting and Apportionment Commission Part of Legislative Branch: The Districting and Apportionment Commission is exempt from the public participation requirements of Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., and statutes regarding participation in government because the Commission is attached to the Legislative Branch and is not an agency and thus not a part of the Executive Branch. Willems v. St., 2014 MT 82, 374 Mont. 343, 325 P.3d 1204.

Public or Governmental Bodies — Committee to Recommend Commissioner of Political Practices Appointees to Governor: The committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices is not a board, bureau, commission, or agency within the meaning of those terms as used in the open meeting law. However, the committee is a "public or governmental body" under the plain meaning of those terms as used in that law because it has a clear public and governmental purpose and was created for a specific governmental task and is thus subject to the open meeting law. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Meeting of City Employees and Private Contractors Not Subject to Open Meeting Law: The plaintiff television station argued that it had the right to have a reporter cover a meeting between the city engineer, the public works director, and representatives of a private construction company. The Supreme Court stated that the statutes require agencies to have open meetings and that the definition of "agencies" does not include individual employees. The Supreme Court, after examining the legislative history of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., concluded that the statutes, which limit the right to know to agencies, are consistent with the intent of the constitution and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to have a reporter present at the meeting of individual employees and a private party. SJL of Mont. Associates Ltd. Partnership v. Billings, 263 M 142, 867 P2d 1084, 50 St. Rep. 1726 (1993).

Dismissal of Tenured Teacher — Procedure Within MAPA: The County Superintendent of Schools and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction come under the definition of "agency" within the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), and the decision not to award a contract to a tenured teacher is a "contested case" under MAPA. Yanzick v. School District, 196 M 375, 641 P2d 431, 39 St. Rep. 191 (1982).

Attorney General's Opinions

Municipal Entities Subject to Right of Public Participation — Limit on Public Comment: Any municipal entity, including an advisory board, commission, and committee of a City Council, is subject to the right of the public to participate in any action that is of significant interest to the public. However, those municipal entities need not permit public comment on matters that are not of significant interest to the public. 51 A.G. Op. 12 (2005).

Proceedings of Workers' Compensation Board of Directors Subject to Open Meeting Law: Because the Board of Directors of the Montana self-insurers guaranty fund fits the definition of "agency" in state law and is considered a public agency because of its legal authority to compel membership, assess its members, and exercise other regulatory powers in the conduct of the people's business, a broad construction of laws guaranteeing the public's right to know requires the Board to comply with the state open meeting law. 46 A.G. Op. 1 (1995).

Proceedings of Workers' Compensation Board of Directors Subject to Montana Administrative Procedure Act: The Board of Directors of the Montana self-insurers guaranty fund fits the definition of "agency" in state law. The fund is considered a public organization because it has a public purpose and because it has been granted statutory authority to adopt public rules and to enter public contracts. Therefore, when the Board adopts rules or resolves contested cases, it must comply with the provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. 46 A.G. Op. 1 (1995).

Case Notes

Department Decision to Move Office — Right to Know — Mootness Due to Lack of Stay: The plaintiffs challenged the Department of Justice's decision to move the Title and Registration Bureau office from Deer Lodge to Helena, alleging violations of the public's rights to know and participate. The District Court entered judgment in favor of the Department, and the plaintiffs timely appealed but failed to stay the District Court's judgment. The Department finished relocating its staff and operations to Helena before the submission of the appeal. Because the office space was no longer under the Department's control, the staff had been relocated, and the reorganization was complete, the change in circumstances precluded a meaningful remedy, rendering the plaintiffs' claims moot. Deer Lodge v. Fox, 2017 MT 129, 387 Mont. 478, 395 P.3d 506.

Public Participation and Notice Adequate — Participation Allowed: The plaintiffs sued the Montana Board of Oil and Gas Conservation for violating their constitutional right to participate and challenged the Board's approval of well stimulation activities. The plaintiffs argued that although they had received public notice of a hearing on the application for a permit to drill in the area, the Board then improperly expanded the permit's scope to allow for well stimulation activities at the hearing and the plaintiffs had received no notice of this expansion. The District Court held that the Board had not violated the public notice and hearing provisions. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, ruling that the plaintiffs had notice of the potential for well stimulation activities as a part of the permit and that they were allowed to present their concerns to the Board on the proposed well stimulation activities and to participate in the Board's consideration of the permit. Carbon County Resource Council v. Mont. Bd. of Oil & Gas Conserv., 2016 MT 240, 385 Mont. 51, 380 P.3d 798.

Districting and Apportionment Commission Part of Legislative Branch: The Districting and Apportionment Commission is exempt from the public participation requirements of Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., and statutes regarding participation in government because the Commission is attached to the Legislative Branch and is not an agency and thus not a part of the Executive Branch. Willems v. St., 2014 MT 82, 374 Mont. 343, 325 P.3d 1204.

Standing to Pursue Right to Know and Participate Claims When Citizen Subject to Governmental Agency's Jurisdiction: A local citizen who followed county budget decisions brought an action challenging a decision that was made by the Custer County Commissioners during an unnoticed meeting 4 years earlier to allow elected county officials to receive cash payments in lieu of county contributions to a group health insurance program. The District Court concluded that the citizen lacked standing to pursue the claims. The Supreme Court reversed and held that the citizen, as a resident of Custer County subject to the county's jurisdiction, had a sufficiently concrete injury to establish standing. Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831, overruling Fleenor v. Darby School District, 2006 MT 31, 331 Mont. 124, 128 P.3d 1048, to the extent that Fleenor requires a plaintiff in a right to know or right to participate case to allege an injury beyond failure to receive notice or to allege a personal stake in a particular governmental decision.

Conservation District Afforded Public Fundamentally Fair Participation in Process: Though exempt from the dictates of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act as a political subdivision of the state, the conservation district followed its own rules, provided notice, and allowed an extended opportunity for the submission of oral and written information in deciding Mitchell Slough's status under The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, also known as the "310 Law", Title 75, chapter 7, part 1. Bitterroot River Protective Assoc., Inc. v. Bitterroot Conserv. Dist., 2008 MT 377, 346 M 507, 198 P3d 219 (2008).

Standard for Publication of Public Notice of County Commission Meetings — Adoption of Formal Guidelines for Public Participation Not Required: Missoula County had policies and procedures for the posting of public meetings to encourage public participation in county business, but the procedures were not formally adopted or published for public distribution under this section. At a meeting in April 2003, the agenda listed a discussion of adding domestic partner benefits as an amendment to the county employee benefits plan. In May 2003, plaintiffs filed a complaint alleging that the county had failed to give proper notice of the April meeting in violation of the public right to participate in government and sought to void the action of the Board of County Commissioners making the benefits available. The District Court granted summary judgment to the county. Under this section, notice and public participation are required on actions of significant public interest, and given recent national attention, the issue of adding domestic partner benefits was held to be of significant public interest. However, the statute does not set out a specific method of notification. The standard is simply that a Board of County Commissioners must provide notice that is adequate to ensure public opportunity to participate in the decisionmaking process. Here, the Board published notice of the meeting in the local newspaper, posted notice of the meeting 24 hours in advance, and e-mailed the meeting agenda to the newspaper the day before the meeting. This notice was sufficient to alert plaintiffs, who attended the meeting and voiced their concerns, as well as the general public. Additionally, the fact that the county did not formally adopt or publish the procedures for public distribution under this section was irrelevant because the formal adoption requirement applies only to state agencies. Summary judgment was affirmed. Jones v. Missoula County, 2006 MT 2, 330 M 205, 127 P3d 406 (2006). See also Sonstelie v. Bd. of Trustees, 202 M 414, 658 P2d 413 (1983).

Discretion of District Court Whether to Void School Board Decision: Motta filed a pro se lawsuit against a school district board, contending that the district did not have an appropriate procedure in place for public participation in the decisionmaking process and that because the school board did not adequately publicize a series of negotiation sessions and a special meeting to approve a negotiated agreement between the board and the teachers' union, results of the meeting should be void. The District Court found that the board violated state open meeting laws, granted partial summary judgment for Motta, and ordered that the district submit copies of its public participation procedures and maintain minutes consistent with applicable statutes, but the court did not void the agreement. On appeal, Motta argues that the District Court erred and moved the Supreme Court to void the agreement. The Supreme Court declined. Under 2-3-213, the decision whether to void any decisions reached at a meeting held in violation of state open meeting laws is clearly within the discretion of the District Court, and because that discretion was not abused, the partial summary judgment was affirmed. Motta v. Philipsburg School Bd. Trustees, District No. 1, 2004 MT 256, 323 M 72, 98 P3d 673 (2004).

Reversal of Conviction for Medicaid Fraud Based on Violation of Improperly Adopted Administrative Policy: Vainio, an optometrist, was charged with three counts of Medicaid fraud under 45-6-313. The jury found Vainio guilty, and the District Court concluded as a matter of law that a violation of the administrative policies at issue formed a criminal act. On appeal, Vainio argued that by criminalizing violations of administrative policies that were not formally promulgated as rules, 45-6-313 contravened the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), Title 2, ch. 4, and that policies that were not promulgated according to MAPA lacked the force of law. The state contended that because 45-6-313 specifically refers to violations of "policies", it was not necessary for those policies to be embodied in a rule promulgated pursuant to MAPA. The Supreme Court agreed with Vainio. The use of the term "policies" in 45-6-313 is limited to those policies that have been formally adopted as rules pursuant to MAPA. The fact that 45-6-313 does not expressly reference MAPA does not mean that Medicaid providers can be criminally prosecuted for violating the state's informal policies. Further, 45-6-313 does not have to expressly reference MAPA for MAPA to apply; rather, MAPA must be followed because 45-6-313 does not expressly repudiate it. When the Legislature authorizes an agency to adopt rules, the procedures mandated by MAPA apply regardless of whether the authorizing statute refers to MAPA. The practices for which Vainio was convicted were not prohibited by rules adopted in compliance with MAPA and in effect at the time of the alleged offenses and thus were not illegal, so the convictions were reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001), following NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676 (1986), and Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177 (1993), and distinguishing Huether v. District Court, 2000 MT 158, 300 M 212, 4 P3d 1193 (2000).

Advisory Body Meeting Without Notice — Mootness of Issues When Ultimate Action Becomes Final: The committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices met, without public notice, to discuss who would be recommended. The Governor appointed a recommended person. A suit was filed to void the appointment on the grounds that the submission of the list was void because there was no notice of the meeting. The committee was granted summary judgment in the District Court, and plaintiffs appealed. Before the appeal was heard, the Senate confirmed the appointment. That the confirmation vested the title to the office in the appointee did not make the appeal and issue moot because alleged violations of the state constitutional right to know and open meeting statutes could occur again, both in the context of this committee and similar advisory entities. To allow an alleged violation to escape judicial scrutiny simply because legal proceedings are not always swift would take away the people's constitutional right to know. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Appointment by Governor Not Voided by Failure of Recommending Committee to Give Notice of Meeting at Which Recommended Persons Chosen: The committee that recommends persons to the Governor, who appoints the Commissioner of Political Practices, violated the open meeting law when it met, without public notice, to discuss who would be recommended. The Governor appointed a recommended person, and the Senate confirmed the appointment. Since the Governor is free to disregard the recommended persons, the Governor did not violate the law in appointing one of the recommended persons, and the appointment was not voided. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Failure to Give Notice of Meeting of Committee That Recommends Persons Governor May Appoint as Commissioner of Political Practices: When three members of the four-member committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices met to discuss candidates and the transmission of their names to the Governor and gave no public notice of the meeting, the committee violated the open meeting law. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Meeting Open Only in Theory When No Public Notice Given: The open meeting law requires public notice of a meeting subject to that law. Without public notice, a meeting is open to the public in theory only, not in practice. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Notice of Public Meeting Held Insufficient: Where two of three County Commissioners held a telephone meeting to discuss approval of a preliminary subdivision plat and were required to give notice of the meeting, the Board failed to comply in that a county newspaper article did not supply sufficient facts concerning the time and place of the meeting to permit further public comment, nor was a 2-days' posted public notice ever given. Bd. of Trustees v. County Comm'rs, 186 M 148, 606 P2d 1069 (1980).

Telephone Conversation as Constituting a "Meeting" — Notice Required to Be Given: Where two of three County Commissioners discussed by telephone the approval of a preliminary plat of a subdivision, a "meeting" as defined in 2-3-202 took place, and the Commissioners were subject to the requirement that notice of the meeting be given in accordance with statute. Bd. of Trustees v. County Comm'rs, 186 M 148, 606 P2d 1069 (1980).

Jurisdiction to Consider Right to Notice and Participation: The District Court lacked jurisdiction to consider plaintiffs' rights under this section since their complaint was filed more than 30 days after the date of decision. Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

Attorney General's Opinions

City Council Agenda — Addition of and Immediate Action on Certain Items Limited: Only an item that is not of significant public interest or that is otherwise exempt from public participation requirements may be added to a City Council agenda and acted upon at the same City Council meeting. 51 A.G. Op. 12 (2005).

Public Notice Required for City Council Meetings — Requirement for Agenda Item for Public Comment on Nonagenda Matters Directed Only to Matters of Significant Public Interest but Applicable to Formal and Informal Council Sessions: Public notice is required for any meeting of a City Council. The mandate imposed upon a City Council to include an agenda item for public comment on nonagenda matters applies only to the extent that the public comments are directed to matters of significant interest to the public, but the City Council is not required to take public comments on matters that are not of significant interest to the public. The mandate applies both to formal City Council meetings and to informal City Council work sessions when no action may be taken. 51 A.G. Op. 12 (2005).

Right of Public to Comment on Nonagenda City Council Items Extended to Matters Involving Individual Privacy — Right of Presiding Officer to Close City Council Meeting to Protect Individual Privacy: The right of the public to comment at a City Council meeting on nonagenda items extends to matters that may involve an interest in individual privacy. However, the presiding office of the City Council retains the power to close a City Council meeting to the public if the presiding officer determines that the interest of individual privacy clearly outweighs the public's right to know. 51 A.G. Op. 12 (2005).

Applicability of Open Meeting and Public Participation Laws to County Commission Meetings — Notice Required in Matters of Significant Public Interest: The gathering of a quorum of County Commissioners to discuss, either among themselves or with members of the public, issues over which the County Commission has authority is a meeting subject to open meeting laws. Meetings involving the consideration of matters of significant public interest, meaning decisions involving more than a ministerial act requiring no exercise of judgment, are subject to public participation mandates, including notice requirements and the opportunity for public participation in the decisionmaking process. Thus, a County Commission that established the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, as its regular meeting time for public notice purposes, did not comply with Montana's constitutional and statutory public participation provisions. 47 A.G. Op. 13 (1998). See also 42 A.G. Op. 51 (1988).

Case Notes

DEQ Not Required by MEPA to Consider Environmental Impacts Not Related to Water Quality — Effect Preventable by Agency Only Through Lawful Exercise of Independent Authority: The Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) did not require the Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) to consider non-water quality related environmental impacts of the construction and operation of a retail store facility as secondary impacts of the issuance of a Montana Water Quality Act permit to discharge facility wastewater into the ground from an onsite wastewater treatment system. The Supreme Court held that MEPA, like the National Environmental Policy Act, requires a reasonably close causal relationship between the triggering state action and the subject environmental effect. The court rejected the unyielding "but for" causation standard asserted by the plaintiffs to the effect that a state action is a cause of an environmental impact regardless of whether the agency, in the lawful exercise of its independent authority, can avoid or mitigate the effect. The Supreme Court further held that, for purposes of MEPA, an agency action is a legal cause of an environmental effect only if the agency can prevent the effect through the lawful exercise of its independent authority. Requiring a state agency to consider environmental impacts it has no authority to lawfully prevent would not serve MEPA's purposes of ensuring that agencies and the interested public have sufficient information regarding relevant environmental impacts to inform the lawful exercise of agency authority. Consequently, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court's summary judgment that DEQ violated MEPA in contravention of an administrative rule by failing to further consider the environmental impacts of the construction and operation of the facility other than water quality impacts and impacts of the related construction of the required wastewater treatment system. Bitterrooters for Planning, Inc. v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2017 MT 222, 388 Mont. 453, 401 P.3d 712.

Failure to Substantially Comply With Notice Requirements — Permanent Zoning Regulations Properly Voided: Plaintiff asserted that a Board of County Commissioners substantially complied with statutory notice requirements by publishing only one notice of intent to adopt permanent zoning regulations. The District Court disagreed and voided the regulations, which were subsequently adopted as interim zoning regulations. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Section 76-2-205 requires published notice not once but twice during 2 consecutive weeks. Newspaper articles and opinion pieces published during the period in question pertained to the proposed regulations but did not meet the statutory requirements for publication of notice by the Board. Fasbender v. Lewis & Clark Bd. of County Commr's, 2009 MT 323, 352 M 505, 218 P3d 69 (2009).

Standard for Publication of Public Notice of County Commission Meetings — Adoption of Formal Guidelines for Public Participation Not Required: Missoula County had policies and procedures for the posting of public meetings to encourage public participation in county business, but the procedures were not formally adopted or published for public distribution under 2-3-103. At a meeting in April 2003, the agenda listed a discussion of adding domestic partner benefits as an amendment to the county employee benefits plan. In May 2003, plaintiffs filed a complaint alleging that the county had failed to give proper notice of the April meeting in violation of the public right to participate in government and sought to void the action of the Board of County Commissioners making the benefits available. The District Court granted summary judgment to the county. Under 2-3-103, notice and public participation are required on actions of significant public interest, and given recent national attention, the issue of adding domestic partner benefits was held to be of significant public interest. However, the statute does not set out a specific method of notification. The standard is simply that a Board of County Commissioners must provide notice that is adequate to ensure public opportunity to participate in the decisionmaking process. Here, the Board published notice of the meeting in the local newspaper, posted notice of the meeting 24 hours in advance, and e-mailed the meeting agenda to the newspaper the day before the meeting. This notice was sufficient to alert plaintiffs, who attended the meeting and voiced their concerns, as well as the general public. Additionally, the fact that the county did not formally adopt or publish the procedures for public distribution under 2-3-103 was irrelevant because the formal adoption requirement applies only to state agencies. Summary judgment was affirmed. Jones v. Missoula County, 2006 MT 2, 330 M 205, 127 P3d 406 (2006). See also Sonstelie v. Bd. of Trustees, 202 M 414, 658 P2d 413 (1983).

Reversal of Conviction for Medicaid Fraud Based on Violation of Improperly Adopted Administrative Policy: Vainio, an optometrist, was charged with three counts of Medicaid fraud under 45-6-313. The jury found Vainio guilty, and the District Court concluded as a matter of law that a violation of the administrative policies at issue formed a criminal act. On appeal, Vainio argued that by criminalizing violations of administrative policies that were not formally promulgated as rules, 45-6-313 contravened the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), Title 2, ch. 4, and that policies that were not promulgated according to MAPA lacked the force of law. The state contended that because 45-6-313 specifically refers to violations of "policies", it was not necessary for those policies to be embodied in a rule promulgated pursuant to MAPA. The Supreme Court agreed with Vainio. The use of the term "policies" in 45-6-313 is limited to those policies that have been formally adopted as rules pursuant to MAPA. The fact that 45-6-313 does not expressly reference MAPA does not mean that Medicaid providers can be criminally prosecuted for violating the state's informal policies. Further, 45-6-313 does not have to expressly reference MAPA for MAPA to apply; rather, MAPA must be followed because 45-6-313 does not expressly repudiate it. When the Legislature authorizes an agency to adopt rules, the procedures mandated by MAPA apply regardless of whether the authorizing statute refers to MAPA. The practices for which Vainio was convicted were not prohibited by rules adopted in compliance with MAPA and in effect at the time of the alleged offenses and thus were not illegal, so the convictions were reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001), following NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676 (1986), and Rosebud County v. Publication Not Mandated: At its regular meeting on March 10, 1981, the Board of Trustees announced that had until April 1 to issue tenure contracts but that had not yet made final decisions. On March 12, the chairman contacted the clerk to tell her there would be a special meeting at 9 a.m. on March 14. The clerk contacted the local radio stations, who announced the meeting. The Board met and went into executive session. When plaintiff's contract was not renewed, she claimed the Board had violated the notice provisions of the open meeting law. The court held that the Montana open meeting law does not specifically mandate notice by publication. Publication is a method of proving notice. The obligation of the Montana open meeting law is to ensure that the public has ample opportunity to participate in decisions before final action is taken. The evidence in this case indicated that the opportunity was given. Sonstelie v. Bd. of Trustees, 202 M 414, 658 P2d 413, 40 St. Rep. 179 (1983).

Notice of Public Meeting Held Insufficient: Where two of three County Commissioners held a telephone meeting to discuss approval of a preliminary subdivision plat and were required to give notice of the meeting, the Board failed to comply in that a county newspaper article did not supply sufficient facts concerning the time and place of the meeting to permit further public comment, nor was a 2-days' posted public notice ever given. Department Decision to Move Office — Right to Know — Mootness Due to Lack of Stay: The plaintiffs challenged the Department of Justice's decision to move the Title and Registration Bureau office from Deer Lodge to Helena, alleging violations of the public's rights to know and participate. The District Court entered judgment in favor of the Department, and the plaintiffs timely appealed but failed to stay the District Court's judgment. The Department finished relocating its staff and operations to Helena before the submission of the appeal. Because the office space was no longer under the Department's control, the staff had been relocated, and the reorganization was complete, the change in circumstances precluded a meaningful remedy, rendering the plaintiffs' claims moot. Deer Lodge v. Fox, 2017 MT 129, 387 Mont. 478, 395 P.3d 506.

Challenge of Revised Growth Policy — Reasonable Opportunity for Public to Participate — Summary Judgment in Favor of County Commission Proper: The plaintiff, a citizens' group, challenged revisions made to the county's growth policy and sued the defendant, the Board of County Commissioners. The plaintiff alleged that the defendant had not allowed meaningful public participation in the revision process. The District Court disagreed and granted the defendant's motion for summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that the county's planning board had held several workshops, hearings, and public meetings to discuss revisions to the policy and to receive citizen input. The court concluded that, under the facts of the case, the defendant had not violated the plaintiff's constitutional rights because it had provided a "reasonable opportunity" for public participation. Citizens for a Better Flathead v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Flathead County, 2016 MT 256, 385 Mont. 156, 381 P.3d 555.

Standing to Pursue Right to Know and Participate Claims When Citizen Subject to Governmental Agency's Jurisdiction: A local citizen who followed county budget decisions brought an action challenging a decision that was made by the Custer County Commissioners during an unnoticed meeting 4 years earlier to allow elected county officials to receive cash payments in lieu of county contributions to a group health insurance program. The District Court concluded that the citizen lacked standing to pursue the claims. The Supreme Court reversed and held that the citizen, as a resident of Custer County subject to the county's jurisdiction, had a sufficiently concrete injury to establish standing. Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831, overruling Fleenor v. Darby School District, 2006 MT 31, 331 Mont. 124, 128 P.3d 1048, to the extent that Fleenor requires a plaintiff in a right to know or right to participate case to allege an injury beyond failure to receive notice or to allege a personal stake in a particular governmental decision.

Conservation District Afforded Public Fundamentally Fair Participation in Process: Though exempt from the dictates of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act as a political subdivision of the state, the conservation district followed its own rules, provided notice, and allowed an extended opportunity for the submission of oral and written information in deciding Mitchell Slough's status under The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, also known as the "310 Law", Title 75, chapter 7, part 1. Bitterroot River Protective Assoc., Inc. v. Bitterroot Conserv. Dist., 2008 MT 377, 346 M 507, 198 P3d 219 (2008).

Lack of Standing of Person Who Fails to Allege Personal Interest or Injury: Fleenor brought an action for violation of her right to know and right to participate in a school district's decision to hire a new superintendent on grounds that she was not properly notified of votes. The suit was brought by Fleenor as a citizen of Montana and resident of the county and the school district. The District Court dismissed the suit for lack of standing, and Fleenor appealed, asserting that standing existed by virtue of her status as an interested party and that a liberal interpretation of the constitution regarding a citizen's right to know and participate included anyone with an interest in enforcing the broad constitutional policies and protections. The Supreme Court disagreed. To establish standing, a complaining party must clearly allege a past, present, or threatened injury to a property right or a civil right and allege that the injury is personal to the claimant and distinguishable from injury to the public generally. Additionally, the challenged action must result in a concrete adverseness personal to the party staking a claim in the outcome. However, simply being an informed and interested citizen is insufficient to confer standing. Fleenor made no assertion of injury and did not establish a personal, concrete adverseness that would result from the school district's action and thus failed to meet the threshold for establishing standing. The District Court was affirmed. Fleenor v. Darby School District, 2006 MT 31, 331 M 124, 128 P3d 1048 (2006), following Flesh v. Bd. of Trustees, 241 M 158, 786 P2d 4 (1990), Carter v. Dept. of Transportation, 274 M 39, 905 P2d 1102 (1995), and Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002), followed in Lohmeier v. Gallatin County, 2006 MT 88, 332 M 39, 135 P3d 775 (2006), and followed, with regard to criteria to establish standing, in Bd. of Trustees, Cut Bank Pub. Schools v. Cut Bank Pioneer Press, 2007 MT 115, 337 M 229, 160 P3d 482 (2007). Fleenor was overruled in Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831, to the extent that Fleenor requires a plaintiff in a right to know or right to participate case to allege an injury beyond failure to receive notice or to allege a personal stake in a particular governmental decision for purposes of establishing standing to pursue a claim.

Dissemination of Incomplete Document Used to Make Decision — Right to Participate Entails Complying With Right to Know: A school district assembled a group of people to research and advise the district on the closure of schools, and a member of the group summarized the closure research information on a computer-generated spreadsheet and delivered various versions of the spreadsheet to various people and groups. The version given the school district contained a system rating the schools and explaining the rating system, but the group of parents that plaintiff belonged to was given a version not containing the rating system when a member of the group requested a copy. The school district told the group that a spreadsheet comparing the schools did not exist. The spreadsheet was a document of a public body subject to public inspection prior to the time that the school district's board met and used the spreadsheet to help determine which schools to close. The school district violated plaintiff's right to examine public documents. At a minimum, the "reasonable opportunity" standard articulated in Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., and this section for the right to participate demands compliance with the right to know contained in Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const. When the school district violated plaintiff's right to know, it reduced what should have been a genuine interchange into a mere formality. Bryan could and did voice her opinion to the school district, but did so without the ratings information contained on the version of the spreadsheet used by the school district. Therefore, the school district also violated her Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., right of participation. The Supreme Court stated that this violation tainted the entire process from start to finish and ruled that the school district's closure decision was void. The court stated that on remand, the school district should allow plaintiff an opportunity to rebut the closure decision and should then reexamine the decision and affirm or modify it. Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002).

Applicability of Open Meeting and Public Participation Laws to County Commission Meetings — Notice Required in Matters of Significant Public Interest: The gathering of a quorum of County Commissioners to discuss, either among themselves or with members of the public, issues over which the County Commission has authority is a meeting subject to open meeting laws. Meetings involving the consideration of matters of significant public interest, meaning decisions involving more than a ministerial act requiring no exercise of judgment, are subject to public participation mandates, including notice requirements and the opportunity for public participation in the decisionmaking process. Thus, a County Commission that established the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, as its regular meeting time for public notice purposes, did not comply with Montana's constitutional and statutory public participation provisions. 47 A.G. 2015 Amendment: Chapter 266 in (1) in second sentence near end substituted "person" for "petitioner"; inserted (2) concerning costs and attorney fees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 23, 2015.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 266, L. 2015, provided: "[This act] applies to proceedings initiated on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 23, 2015.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 211 near middle of first sentence after "petition" deleted "made within 30 days of the date of the decision" and inserted second sentence requiring filing of a petition within 30 days of the date the petitioner learns or reasonably should have learned of the agency's decision. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 211, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, sections 2-3-114 and 2-3-213, MCA, now require that civil actions brought under either of those sections in District Court to enforce the laws allowing citizen participation in government be brought within 30 days of an agency decision made in violation of those laws; and

WHEREAS, the effect of the 30-day limitation is to prohibit suits brought after that 30-day limit, as was confirmed by the Montana Supreme Court in the case of Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127 (1979), in which the Supreme Court held that a District Court had no jurisdiction to even consider a case brought after the 30-day period had passed; and

WHEREAS, if an agency, board, or other public entity holds a meeting but does not give notice of a meeting, does not publish an agenda for the meeting, and does not publish minutes of a meeting, there is no way for the public to know whether a meeting occurred, whether a decision was made by the agency, board, or other public entity that is of public interest, or whether the 30-day "clock" has in fact started, except by word of mouth; and

WHEREAS, if a potential plaintiff learns of the meeting by word of mouth at a time too late in the 30-day period to discuss the violation of the participation in government statutes with a potential defendant, it could force a hasty decision to bring suit against the agency, board, or other public entity just because the 30-day period has almost passed.

THEREFORE, it is the determination of the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee that the starting of the 30-day "clock" at the time that a potential plaintiff or petitioner learns or should have learned of a decision made at a meeting held in violation of the law will still apply a limitation to the time that a suit may be brought, but is more fair to a plaintiff or petitioner who might otherwise be precluded from legal action, with the agency, board, or other public entity thereby being rewarded for its secrecy."

Case Notes

Failure to File Right to Know and Participate Claim Within Statute of Limitations—Application of Common-Law Equitable Tolling: The plaintiff's right to know and right to participate claims against a decision of the Custer County Commissioners that was made in an unnoticed meeting were dismissed by the District Court as being time-barred, even though the existence of the meeting was not revealed until 4 years later. Although 2-3-114 and 2-3-213 were later amended with a discovery tolling provision, the amended versions were not in effect when the meeting was held. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court, holding that common-law equitable tolling principles applied since the plaintiff, despite his diligent scrutiny of the Commissioners' actions, would not have learned about the decision until 4 years later when it was inadvertently revealed in another meeting. Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831.

Violation of Open Meeting Laws — Attorney Fees Awarded — Prevailing Party Despite No Final Judgment: The plaintiffs sued the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission for not providing adequate notice of a meeting at which the Commission voted to expedite the closing of the wolf hunting season. The District Court granted a temporary restraining order and ultimately awarded attorney fees. During litigation, the Legislature enacted a law prohibiting the Commission from implementing certain hunting closures, rendering the litigation moot. On appeal, the Commission argued that attorney fees were not appropriate because a final judgment was never issued. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the plaintiffs were a prevailing party because the preliminary injunction produced the same result as a final judgment and there was no remaining underlying controversy to litigate. Citizens for Balanced Use v. Fish, Wildlife & Parks Comm'n, 2014 MT 214, 376 Mont. 202, 331 P.3d 844.

Denial of Request to Void Neighborhood Plan Proper — Neighborhood Planning Committee Not Agency: In a suit filed by several property owners against a planning committee for alleged violations of Montana's open meeting laws, the District Court declined to void the neighborhood plan that was subsequently adopted by the planning board and the County Commissioners. The Supreme Court affirmed, concluding that while the property owners were deprived of certain information generated early in the process, the meetings were ultimately opened to the public, the property owners had the right to participate in the process for approximately 2 years before the County Commissioners approved the plan, and the planning committee was not an agency whose decision could be voided under 2-3-114 or 2-3-213. Allen v. Lakeside Neighborhood Planning Comm., 2013 MT 237, 371 Mont. 310, 308 P.3d 956, distinguishing Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 Mont. 257, 60 P.3d 381.

Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies — Dismissal for Failure to State Proper Claim for Relief Not Error: Plaintiff objected in District Court to a Missoula school district's sale of an unused public elementary school building to a Missoula Catholic school foundation. The court ruled that because the sale of the school was closed on May 6, 2005, but plaintiff's claim was not filed until April 11, 2006, the claim was barred by the 30-day statute of limitations in 2-3-114, so the court dismissed the claim. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed dismissal of the claim, but not on grounds that the statute of limitations was not met. Rather, plaintiff failed to exhaust its administrative remedies by appealing the school district's action to the county superintendent, as required in 20-3-210, so dismissal for failure to state a claim for which relief could be granted was not erroneous. Good Schools Missoula, Inc. v. Missoula County Pub. School Dist. No. 1, 2008 MT 231, 344 M 374, 188 P3d 1013 (2008).

Declaratory Judgment, Mandamus, and Judicial Review Inappropriate Remedies for Discretionary Decision of Commissioner of Political Practices: Doty, a political candidate, filed a complaint with the Commissioner of Political Practices, alleging that an opponent violated Montana's political civil libel statute and the false swearing statute when the opponent filed a complaint with the Commissioner, alleging that Doty was unqualified for office. The Commissioner found insufficient evidence that the opponent violated the law and decided not to prosecute the opponent, so Doty sought a declaratory judgment, mandamus, and judicial review in District Court challenging the Commissioner's decision. The Commissioner moved to dismiss on grounds that: (1) Doty lacked standing to request a declaratory judgment because Doty's rights, status, or other legal relations were not affected by the Commissioner's decision not to pursue legal action; (2) the decision was not subject to mandamus because it was discretionary; and (3) the decision was not subject to judicial review because it was not a contested case and because Doty's rights were not prejudiced. The District Court agreed and dismissed the complaint, and Doty appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The court first noted that the Commissioner's authority to enforce campaign laws is discretionary and that the laws are for the benefit of the public at large. Pursuant to Jeppeson v. St., 205 M 282, 667 P2d 428 (1983), a writ of mandamus will not issue to compel performance of a discretionary function. Also, Doty himself was not prosecuted or threatened with prosecution for violating campaign laws, so his legal rights were unaffected by the Commissioner's decision. Thus, neither a declaratory judgment action nor judicial review was appropriate. Doty v. Comm'r of Political Practices, 2007 MT 341, 340 M 276, 173 P3d 700 (2007).

Lack of Notice of Public Meeting as Voiding Decision — Abuse of Discretion: Where County Commissioners failed to follow the statutory requirements for notice for a meeting of the Board of County Commissioners, the District Court had discretionary authority to void the results of the meeting, and where the Commissioners failed to fulfill their burden of proving the meeting legal, it was a clear abuse of discretion for the court not to void the results of the meeting. Bd. of Trustees v. County Comm'rs, 186 M 148, 606 P2d 1069 (1980).

Use of Mandamus to Void Unlawfully Held Public Meeting: Where respondent County Commissioners failed to give public notice of a meeting so that the result was voidable by the court under 2-3-114 and 2-3-213, a Writ of Mandamus would be appropriate in this case to void the illegal meeting. In future cases, the remedy should take the form of a simple petition to void an action or a petition for declaratory judgment. Bd. of Trustees v. County Comm'rs, 186 M 148, 606 P2d 1069 (1980), followed in Goyen v. Troy, 276 M 213, 915 P2d 824, 53 St. Rep. 353 (1996).

Jurisdiction to Consider Right to Notice and Participation: The District Court lacked jurisdiction to consider plaintiffs' rights under 2-3-103 since their complaint was filed more than 30 days after the date of decision. (See 2007 amendment.) Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

Standing to Pursue Right to Know and Participate Claims When Citizen Subject to Governmental Agency's Jurisdiction: A local citizen who followed county budget decisions brought an action challenging a decision that was made by the Custer County Commissioners during an unnoticed meeting 4 years earlier to allow elected county officials to receive cash payments in lieu of county contributions to a group health insurance program. The District Court concluded that the citizen lacked standing to pursue the claims. The Supreme Court reversed and held that the citizen, as a resident of Custer County subject to the county's jurisdiction, had a sufficiently concrete injury to establish standing. Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831, overruling Fleenor v. Darby School District, 2006 MT 31, 331 Mont. 124, 128 P.3d 1048, to the extent that Fleenor requires a plaintiff in a right to know or right to participate case to allege an injury beyond failure to receive notice or to allege a personal stake in a particular governmental decision.

Open Public Meeting Laws Liberally Construed — University System Policy Committee Meetings Open to Public: Plaintiff media organizations sued the Commissioner of Higher Education, alleging that policy meetings between the Commissioner and other University System senior employees were subject to state open meeting laws. The District Court concluded that the meetings should be open to the public, and on appeal, the Supreme Court concurred. The Legislature created open meeting laws with the intent that deliberations of state agencies be conducted openly, and to that end, the open meeting laws are liberally construed. In the context of 2-3-203, public or governmental bodies means a group of individuals organized for a governmental or public purpose. Although the university policy committee was not formally created by a government entity to accomplish a specific function, the committee brought together public officials for an undeniably public purpose. The committee was not merely a staff meeting or factfinding body, nor was it an ad hoc group that came together to consider a specific matter or to gather facts on a particular issue. Rather, the group met to deliberate on matters of substance that were the public's business and thus was considered a public body within the meaning of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., whose meetings were required to be open to the public. The Commissioner argued that: (1) even if the committee was considered a public body, it did not hold meetings as contemplated in the open meeting laws; (2) because the committee's membership was not fixed, no number of members were required to attend to constitute a quorum; and (3) neither direct action nor votes were taken at committee meetings. The Supreme Court disagreed. A quorum of any body of an indefinite number consists of the members who attend a meeting. All that is required under 2-3-202 is that a quorum of the membership convene to conduct public business, not that the meeting produces some particular result or action or that a vote be taken. The constitution protects the public's right to observe the deliberations of public bodies, and the policy committee meetings were required to be open to the public. Assoc. Press v. Crofts, 2004 MT 120, 321 M 193, 89 P3d 971 (2004).

Meeting of City Employees and Private Contractors Not Subject to Open Meeting Law: The plaintiff television station argued that it had the right to have a reporter cover a meeting between the city engineer, the public works director, and representatives of a private construction company. The Supreme Court stated that the statutes require agencies to have open meetings and that the definition of "agencies" does not include individual employees. The Supreme Court, after examining the legislative history of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., concluded that the statutes, which limit the right to know to agencies, are consistent with the intent of the constitution and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to have a reporter present at the meeting of individual employees and a private party. SJL of Mont. Associates Ltd. Partnership v. Billings, 263 M 142, 867 P2d 1084, 50 St. Rep. 1726 (1993).

Attorney General's Opinions

Deliberations of Human Rights Commission: The deliberations of the Human Rights Commission following a contested case hearing are subject to the Montana open meeting law. They must be open to the public unless the presiding officer determines that the discussion relates to a matter of individual privacy and that the demands of individual privacy clearly exceed the merits of public disclosure. 38 A.G. Op. 33 (1979).

Mechanical Recordings of Public Meetings: A member of the public may make a mechanical recording of the proceedings and deliberations of an open school board meeting. 38 A.G. Op. 8 (1979).

1987 Amendment: Near middle of section, after "public agency", inserted "or association described in 2-3-203".

Severability Clause: Section 6, Ch. 567, L. 1977, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

Commissioners' One-on-One Discussions Before Meeting Not Subject to Right to Know: Because a majority of Districting and Apportionment Commission members never convened or deliberated as a public body, Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., and the right to know provisions in Title 2, ch. 3, part 2, were not implicated. Willems v. St., 2014 MT 82, 374 Mont. 343, 325 P.3d 1204.

Districting and Apportionment Commission Part of Legislative Branch: The Districting and Apportionment Commission is exempt from the public participation requirements of Art. II, sec.

8, Mont. Const., and statutes regarding participation in government because the Commission is attached to the Legislative Branch and is not an agency and thus not a part of the Executive Branch. Willems v. St., 2014 MT 82, 374 Mont. 343, 325 P.3d 1204.

Member's Mere Presence or Participation as Public Citizen Not Sufficient to Constitute Quorum: A school budget subcommittee with three school board members met, and the meeting was noticed. A fourth school board member attended and sat in the audience but participated in the discussion. A newspaper filed suit, arguing that the meeting was improperly noticed as a subcommittee meeting when a full committee quorum was present and that the committee had taken actions authorized only for a full school board meeting. The Supreme Court held that the District Court had improperly granted summary judgment to the newspaper, noting that certain facts were in dispute. The Supreme Court further held that Montana statutes do not prohibit a member of a public body from observing or asking questions during a subcommittee meeting and that doing so does not constitute the convening of a quorum for purposes of the larger committee. Boulder Monitor v. Jefferson High School District No. 1, 2014 MT 5, 373 Mont. 212, 316 P.3d 848.

Open Public Meeting Laws Liberally Construed — University System Policy Committee Meetings Open to Public: Plaintiff media organizations sued the Commissioner of Higher Education, alleging that policy meetings between the Commissioner and other University System senior employees were subject to state open meeting laws. The District Court concluded that the meetings should be open to the public, and on appeal, the Supreme Court concurred. The Legislature created open meeting laws with the intent that deliberations of state agencies be conducted openly, and to that end, the open meeting laws are liberally construed. In the context of 2-3-203, public or governmental bodies means a group of individuals organized for a governmental or public purpose. Although the university policy committee was not formally created by a government entity to accomplish a specific function, the committee brought together public officials for an undeniably public purpose. The committee was not merely a staff meeting or factfinding body, nor was it an ad hoc group that came together to consider a specific matter or to gather facts on a particular issue. Rather, the group met to deliberate on matters of substance that were the public's business and thus was considered a public body within the meaning of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., whose meetings were required to be open to the public. The Commissioner argued that: (1) even if the committee was considered a public body, it did not hold meetings as contemplated in the open meeting laws; (2) because the committee's membership was not fixed, no number of members were required to attend to constitute a quorum; and (3) neither direct action nor votes were taken at committee meetings. The Supreme Court disagreed. A quorum of any body of an indefinite number consists of the members who attend a meeting. All that is required under this section is that a quorum of the membership convene to conduct public business, not that the meeting produces some particular result or action or that a vote be taken. The constitution protects the public's right to observe the deliberations of public bodies, and the policy committee meetings were required to be open to the public. Assoc. Press v. Crofts, 2004 MT 120, 321 M 193, 89 P3d 971 (2004).

When Particular Meetings Must Be Open to Public — Factors to Be Considered: Under Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., and Montana's open meeting laws, which are liberally interpreted in favor of openness, factors to be considered when determining whether a particular committee's meetings must be open to the public include but are not limited to: (1) whether committee members are public employees acting in their official capacities; (2) whether the meetings are paid for with public funds; (3) the frequency of meetings; (4) whether the committee deliberates rather than simply gathers facts and reports; (5) whether the deliberations concern matters of policy rather than merely administrative or ministerial functions; (6) whether committee members have executive authority and experience; and (7) the results of the meetings. This list of factors is not exhaustive, and each factor may not be present in every instance of a meeting that must be open to the public. Assoc. Press v. Crofts, 2004 MT 120, 321 M 193, 89 P3d 971 (2004).

"Meeting" Held When Three of Four Members Met to Select Recommended Persons for Position Appointed by Governor: A meeting was held within the meaning of the open meeting law when three members of the four-member committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices met to discuss candidates and the transmission of their names to the Governor. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Official Misconduct Statute — Definition of Meeting Not Incorporated: In 1975 the official misconduct criminal statute (45-7-401) was expanded to include a violation of the open meeting law (2-3-203). In 1977 this section was enacted. In 1979 1-2-108 was amended, creating the presumption that a reference to a section encompasses subsequent changes. However, because 1-2-109 states that no law is retroactive unless expressly declared to be, 1-2-108 does not act to incorporate the 1977 definition of "meeting" into the 1975 criminal statute. St. v. Conrad, 197 M 406, 643 P2d 239, 39 St. Rep. 680 (1982). (Annotator's Note: Section 1-2-108 was amended in 1983 to make the "living reference" presumption retroactive as well as prospective.)

Open Meeting Law — Criminal Penalty Void for Vagueness: In 1975 the official misconduct criminal statute (45-7-401) was expanded to include a violation of the open meeting law (2-3-203). In 1977 this section was enacted. Because there was no express legislative intent to amend the criminal statute to encompass the expanded definition of "meeting" and because people of common intelligence could differ over this matter, it is not clear what constitutes prohibited conduct. Subsection (1)(e) of the criminal statute is void for vagueness. St. v. Conrad, 197 M 406, 643 P2d 239, 39 St. Rep. 680 (1982).

Telephone Conversation as Constituting a "Meeting" — Notice Required to Be Given: Where two of three County Commissioners discussed by telephone the approval of a preliminary plat of a subdivision, a "meeting" as defined in 2-3-202 took place, and the Commissioners were subject to the requirement that notice of the meeting be given in accordance with statute. Bd. of Trustees v. County Comm'rs, 186 M 148, 606 P2d 1069 (1980).

Attorney General's Opinions

Applicability of Open Meeting and Public Participation Laws to County Commission Meetings — Notice Required in Matters of Significant Public Interest: The gathering of a quorum of County Commissioners to discuss, either among themselves or with members of the public, issues over which the County Commission has authority is a meeting subject to open meeting laws. Meetings involving the consideration of matters of significant public interest, meaning decisions involving more than a ministerial act requiring no exercise of judgment, are subject to public participation mandates, including notice requirements and the opportunity for public participation in the decisionmaking process. Thus, a County Commission that established the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, as its regular meeting time for public notice purposes, did not comply with Montana's constitutional and statutory public participation provisions. 47 A.G. Op. 13 (1998). See also 42 A.G. Op. 51 (1988).

2-3-203. Meetings of public agencies and certain associations of public agencies to be open to public — exceptions.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 218 in (1) near end inserted "including the supreme court"; inserted (5) allowing the supreme court to close a meeting involving judicial deliberations in an adversarial proceeding; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 2005.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 123 at beginning of (4)(a) inserted exception clause, near middle, before "litigation", deleted "collective bargaining or", and near end, before "litigating", deleted "bargaining or"; inserted (4)(b) requiring open litigation strategy meetings when the parties involved are public bodies or associations; and made minor changes in style.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (2) relating to associations; near beginning of (5), after "public body", inserted "or an association described in subsection (2)"; and made minor change in phraseology.

Case Notes

Employees Who Initiated Complaints Against Supervisor Had Actual Expectation of Privacy: The employees who initiated complaints against a human resources director and cooperated in the independent investigation and who did not have notice of possible disclosure of their complaints had an actual expectation of privacy that society is willing to recognize as reasonable. Further, the privacy interests of the employees outweigh the merits of public disclosure. The District Court also correctly concluded that Montana's open meeting and public participation laws were not violated. Moe v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 2016 MT 103, 383 Mont. 297, 371 P.3d 415.

Unlawful Closure of Executive Session Remedied by Subsequent Public Meetings: A citizens' group challenged the city's closure of an executive session in which the city commission discussed finalists for a city manager position. The District Court ruled in favor of the city. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that although the commission should have determined whether the demands of individual privacy exceeded the merits of public disclosure before closing the executive session, the commission allowed subsequent opportunities for public comment on the decision prior to making a final decision. Standing to Pursue Right to Know and Participate Claims When Citizen Subject to Governmental Agency's Jurisdiction: A local citizen who followed county budget decisions brought an action challenging a decision that was made by the Custer County Commissioners during an unnoticed meeting 4 years earlier to allow elected county officials to receive cash payments in lieu of county contributions to a group health insurance program. The District Court concluded that the citizen lacked standing to pursue the claims. The Supreme Court reversed and held that the citizen, as a resident of Custer County subject to the county's jurisdiction, had a sufficiently concrete injury to establish standing. Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831, overruling Fleenor v. Darby School District, 2006 MT 31, 331 Mont. 124, 128 P.3d 1048, to the extent that Fleenor requires a plaintiff in a right to know or right to participate case to allege an injury beyond failure to receive notice or to allege a personal stake in a particular governmental decision.

August Meeting's Compliance With Open Meeting Laws and Rights to Know and Participate — Earlier Violations Remedied: A proper meeting held after an improper meeting abrogated the earlier noncompliance and satisfied the requested remedy of reconsideration of the earlier decision. The Supreme Court disagreed. A quorum of any body of an indefinite number consists of the members who attend a meeting. All that is required under 2-3-202 is that a quorum of the membership convene to conduct public business, not that the meeting produces some particular result or action or that a vote be taken. The constitution protects the public's right to observe the deliberations of public bodies, and the policy committee meetings were required to be open to the public. Assoc. Press v. When Particular Meetings Must Be Open to Public — Factors to Be Considered: Under Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. School District Advisory Group as Public or Governmental Body: A school district assembled a group of people to research and advise the district on the closure of schools. The Legislature has given a school district the power to close schools. Therefore, the advisory group assumed the identity of the district with respect to the closure question and performed a legislatively designated governmental function that served a clear public and governmental purpose, and the advisory group was a public or governmental body subject to Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const. Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002).

Standing of Parent When Information on Proposed School Closure Requested by Another: School district parents, including Bryan, worked in concert to rebut a school closure recommendation, delegating duties among themselves. Schroeder, but not Bryan, requested information from the school authorities, which was not received. Bryan sued as a result of the school closure. That Bryan did not personally request the information did not prevent her from having standing to claim a violation of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const. Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002), distinguished in Fleenor v. Darby School District, 2006 MT 31, 331 M 124, 128 P3d 1048 (2006). Fleenor was overruled in Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831, to the extent Fleenor requires a plaintiff in a right to know or right to participate case to allege an injury beyond failure to receive notice or to allege a personal stake in a particular governmental decision for purposes of establishing standing to pursue a claim.

Closed Meeting in Violation of Law, but No Action Taken — No Reversible Error Found: Goyen, the Chief of Police of Troy, was not notified of a meeting of the Troy City Council on May 10 at which an incident involving Goyen and a city gravel pile ("gravel-gate") was discussed. That meeting was closed at the request of the Mayor of Troy and at the request of a witness in order for the witness to testify regarding indiscretions with Goyen in a city police car. Later, Goyen was allowed to present a defense at an August 16 open hearing before the City Council. Subsequent to his discharge, Goyen filed a petition to void the City Council's decision to terminate his employment, and the District Court held that there was no violation of the open meeting law. The Supreme Court held that Goyen was improperly not given notice of the May 10 meeting, but because the action taken by the City Council was based upon the results of the August 16 hearing and not the May 10 hearing, the District Court did not commit reversible error in holding that there was no violation of the open meeting law in regard to the May 10 meeting. Goyen v. Troy, 276 M 213, 915 P2d 824, 53 St. Rep. 353 (1996).

Privacy Interest of Witness Held Sufficient for Closure of City Council Meeting — "Generally Known" Incident: Goyen, the Chief of Police of Troy, was not notified of a meeting of the Troy City Council on May 10 at which an incident involving Goyen and a city gravel pile ("gravel-gate") was discussed. That meeting was closed at the request of the Mayor of Troy and at the request of a witness, Denton, who testified regarding indiscretions with Goyen in a patrol car. Later, after Goyen was discharged, he brought an action arguing that Denton's privacy interest was not at issue and that, in any event, the facts of her indiscretions with him were well known in the community, so much so that the demands of Denton's privacy could not outweigh the merits of public disclosure. The Supreme Court held that the plain meaning of this section clearly allows a witness to assert the witness's privacy interest. Citing Missoulian v. Bd. of Regents of Higher Educ., 207 M 513, 675 P2d 962 (1984), the Supreme Court held that even harmless or generally known information is subject to constitutional protection and that Denton's relationship with Goyen, while known by others, was private in nature and Denton therefore had a reasonable expectation of privacy that society would recognize. Goyen v. Troy, 276 M 213, 915 P2d 824, 53 St. Rep. 353 (1996).

Advisory Body Meeting Without Notice — Mootness of Issues When Ultimate Action Becomes Final: The committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices met, without public notice, to discuss who would be recommended. The Governor appointed a recommended person. A suit was filed to void the appointment on the grounds that the submission of the list was void because there was no notice of the meeting. The committee was granted summary judgment in the District Court, and plaintiffs appealed. Before the appeal was heard, the Senate confirmed the appointment. That the confirmation vested the title to the office in the appointee did not make the appeal and issue moot because alleged violations of the state constitutional right to know and open meeting statutes could occur again, both in the context of this committee and similar advisory entities. To allow an alleged violation to escape judicial scrutiny simply because legal proceedings are not always swift would take away the people's constitutional right to know. Common Cause of Mont.

v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Appointment by Governor Not Voided by Failure of Recommending Committee to Give Notice of Meeting at Which Recommended Persons Chosen: The committee that recommends persons to the Governor, who appoints the Commissioner of Political Practices, violated the open meeting law when it met, without public notice, to discuss who would be recommended. The Governor appointed a recommended person, and the Senate confirmed the appointment. Since the Governor is free to disregard the recommended persons, the Governor did not violate the law in appointing one of the recommended persons, and the appointment was not voided. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Decision of Issues on Other Than Constitutional Grounds When Possible: If the open meeting statutes require a meeting of an advisory committee to be open to the public, the court did not have to determine whether the state constitutional right to know provision requires the meeting to be open. It is elementary that courts should avoid constitutional questions if an issue can be otherwise resolved. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Failure to Give Notice of Meeting of Committee That Recommends Persons Governor May Appoint as Commissioner of Political Practices: When three members of the four-member committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices met to discuss candidates and the transmission of their names to the Governor and gave no public notice of the meeting, the committee violated the open meeting law. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Meeting Open Only in Theory When No Public Notice Given: The open meeting law requires public notice of a meeting subject to that law. Without public notice, a meeting is open to the public in theory only, not in practice. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Public or Governmental Bodies — Committee to Recommend Commissioner of Political Practices Appointees to Governor: The committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices is not a board, bureau, commission, or agency within the meaning of those terms as used in the open meeting law. However, the committee is a "public or governmental body" under the plain meaning of those terms as used in that law because it has a clear public and governmental purpose and was created for a specific governmental task and is thus subject to the open meeting law. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Meeting of City Employees and Private Contractors Not Subject to Open Meeting Law: The plaintiff television station argued that it had the right to have a reporter cover a meeting between the city engineer, the public works director, and representatives of a private construction company. The Supreme Court stated that the statutes require agencies to have open meetings and that the definition of "agencies" does not include individual employees. The Supreme Court, after examining the legislative history of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., concluded that the statutes, which limit the right to know to agencies, are consistent with the intent of the constitution and therefore the plaintiff was not entitled to have a reporter present at the meeting of individual employees and a private party. SJL of Mont. Associates Ltd. Partnership v. Billings, 263 M 142, 867 P2d 1084, 50 St. Rep. 1726 (1993).

Collective Bargaining Strategy Exception Unconstitutional: The collective bargaining strategy exception to the open meeting law, as set out in subsection (4) of this section, is an unconstitutional violation of the right to know provision of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., and an impermissible legislative attempt to extend grounds upon which meetings may be closed. (See 1993 amendment.) Great Falls Tribune Co., Inc. v. Great Falls Public Schools, 255 M 125, 841 P2d 502, 49 St. Rep. 944 (1992).

Litigation Exception Unconstitutional Between Public Entities — Board's Closure of Meeting Violation of Public's Right to Know: The Board of Public Education closed its meeting to the public to discuss litigation strategy concerning a possible challenge of an executive order requiring it to submit rules to the Governor for prior review and approval. The Associated Press and its member news organizations filed a complaint, arguing that the statutory litigation exception unconstitutionally conflicted with the public's right to know. Affirming the District Court order, the Supreme Court ruled that the litigation exception allowing public agencies to close meetings when discussing litigation strategy violated the public's constitutional right to attend and observe the deliberations of a public body. The dispute between the Board and the Governor was essentially a turf battle that should be given public scrutiny. The holding was limited to litigation between public entities. (See 1993 amendment.) Assoc. Press v. Bd. of Pub. Educ., 246 M 386, 804 P2d 376, 48 St. Rep. 1 (1991).

University Presidents' Job Performance Evaluations — Right to Know Versus Right of Privacy: The Missoulian challenged the closure by the Board of Regents of a job performance evaluation of the university system's presidents. The challenge was based on the constitutional right to know. The right to know is not absolute but must be balanced against competing constitutional interests in the context of each case. In this case the demands of individual privacy of the university presidents and other university personnel in confidential job performance evaluations sessions of the Board of Regents clearly exceed the merits of public disclosure. Missoulian v. Bd. of Regents, 207 M 513, 675 P2d 962, 41 St. Rep. 110 (1984), followed in Flesh v. Bd. of Trustees, 241 M 158, 786 P2d 4, 47 St. Rep. 161 (1990), Goyen v. Troy, 276 M 213, 915 P2d 824, 53 St. Rep. 353 (1996), and Billings Gazette v. Billings, 2013 MT 334, 372 Mont. 409, 313 P.3d 129.

Violation of Right to Know — Exhaustion of Remedies Not Applicable Under Separation of Powers: Plaintiff was negotiating his salary with the school board. The board closed their meeting to discuss plaintiff's salary request. Plaintiff contacted counsel and began proceedings against the board for violating the open meeting law. The board met at another closed meeting and withdrew its offer of employment. The board contended plaintiff was required to exhaust his administrative remedies before filing suit in District Court. The Supreme Court held that the exhaustion doctrine does not apply to constitutional issues. Plaintiff claimed violation of his constitutional right to observe deliberations of a public body under the constitution's right to know provisions. Constitutional questions are properly decided by a judicial body, not an administrative official, under the separation of powers doctrine. Jarussi v. Bd. of Trustees, 204 M 131, 664 P2d 316, 40 St. Rep. 720 (1983).

Collective Bargaining Exception Construed: Plaintiff was negotiating his salary with the school board. The board closed their meeting to discuss plaintiff's salary request. Plaintiff contacted counsel and began proceedings against the board for violating the open meeting law. The board met at another closed meeting and withdrew its offer of employment. The board contended it closed the meetings to discuss collective bargaining strategy under 2-3-203(3). In construing the term "collective bargaining", the court relied on the identical technical and legal definitions of the phrase. Collective bargaining is an activity involving the settling of disputes by negotiation between the employer and the representative of the employees. The board improperly closed the meetings since plaintiff was not acting on behalf of anyone else and the board's decision would not affect anyone else. Plaintiff had the right to be present at deliberations regarding his future. (See 1993 amendment.) Jarussi v. Bd. of Trustees, 204 M 131, 664 P2d 316, 40 St. Rep. 720 (1983).

Official Misconduct Statute — Definition of Meeting Not Incorporated: In 1975 the official misconduct criminal statute (45-7-401) was expanded to include a violation of this section. In 1977 a broad definition of "meeting" was enacted (2-3-202). In 1979 1-2-108 was amended, creating the presumption that a reference to a section encompasses subsequent changes. However, because 1-2-109 states that no law is retroactive unless expressly declared to be, 1-2-108 does not act to incorporate the 1977 definition of "meeting" into the 1975 criminal statute. St. v. Conrad, 197 M 406, 643 P2d 239, 39 St. Rep. 680 (1982). (Annotator's note: Section 1-2-108 was amended in 1983 to make the "living reference" presumption retroactive as well as prospective.)

Criminal Penalty Void for Vagueness: In 1975 the official misconduct criminal statute (45-7-401) was expanded to include a violation of this section. In 1977 a broad definition of "meeting" was enacted (2-3-202). Because there was no express legislative intent to amend the criminal statute to encompass the expanded definition of "meeting" and because people of common intelligence could differ over this matter, it is not clear what constitutes prohibited conduct. Subsection (1)(e) of the criminal statute is void for vagueness. St. v. Conrad, 197 M 406, 643 P2d 239, 39 St. Rep. 680 (1982).

Termination of Employment: A decision to terminate a schoolteacher made in violation of this section does not involve rights guaranteed by federal law or the United States Constitution, and the remedy is found in state courts. Branch v. School District, 432 F. Supp. 608 (D.C. Mont. 1977).

Attorney General's Opinions

City Council Agenda — Addition of and Immediate Action on Certain Items Limited: Only an item that is not of significant public interest or that is otherwise exempt from public participation requirements may be added to a City Council agenda and acted upon at the same City Council meeting. 51 A.G. Op. 12 (2005).

Right of Public to Comment on Nonagenda City Council Items Extended to Matters Involving Individual Privacy — Right of Presiding Officer to Close City Council Meeting to Protect Individual Privacy: The right of the public to comment at a City Council meeting on nonagenda items extends to matters that may involve an interest in individual privacy. However, the presiding office of the City Council retains the power to close a City Council meeting to the public if the presiding officer determines that the interest of individual privacy clearly outweighs the public's right to know. 51 A.G. Op. 12 (2005).

Applicability of Open Meeting and Public Participation Laws to County Commission Meetings — Notice Required in Matters of Significant Public Interest: The gathering of a quorum of County Commissioners to discuss, either among themselves or with members of the public, issues over which the County Commission has authority is a meeting subject to open meeting laws. Meetings involving the consideration of matters of significant public interest, meaning decisions involving more than a ministerial act requiring no exercise of judgment, are subject to public participation mandates, including notice requirements and the opportunity for public participation in the decisionmaking process. Thus, a County Commission that established the hours of 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, as its regular meeting time for public notice purposes, did not comply with Montana's constitutional and statutory public participation provisions. 47 A.G. Op. 13 (1998). See also 42 A.G. Op. 51 (1988).

Applicability of Open Meeting Law to Montana Life and Health Insurance Guaranty Association Board of Directors: Noting that the constitutional right to know and open meeting laws are to be liberally construed, the Attorney General found the Montana Life and Health Insurance Guaranty Association to be a public body statutorily organized to protect insured members of the public from the extraordinary event of insurance company insolvency and found that, as such, the meetings of the Association's board of directors are subject to the open meeting law. The Association may close a meeting only when and to the extent that the demands of individual privacy clearly exceed the merits of public disclosure. 46 A.G. Op. 24 (1996).

Proceedings of Workers' Compensation Board of Directors Subject to Open Meeting Law: Because the Board of Directors of the Montana self-insurers guaranty fund fits the definition of "agency" in state law and is considered a public agency because of its legal authority to compel membership, assess its members, and exercise other regulatory powers in the conduct of the people's business, a broad construction of laws guaranteeing the public's right to know requires the Board to comply with the state open meeting law. 46 A.G. Op. 1 (1995).

Applicability of Open Meeting Law to Local Chamber of Commerce Receiving Bed Tax Funds: A local chamber of commerce, when acting as a nonprofit convention and visitor bureau, is an organization supported at least in part by public funds in the form of bed tax money. By accepting public funds and deciding how those funds are to be spent, the convention and visitor bureau takes on the responsibility of accounting to the public for those funds. Therefore, meetings of a local chamber of commerce or other organization recognized and acting as a nonprofit convention and visitor bureau must be open to the public in accordance with the open meeting law unless the demands of individual privacy of the chamber clearly exceed the merits of public disclosure. 44 A.G. Op. 40 (1992).

Tax Appeal Board Deliberations Regarding Application for Reduction in Valuation — Open to Public: The deliberations of a county tax appeal board regarding an application for a reduction in property valuation must be open to the public unless the presiding officer determines the discussion relates to a matter of individual privacy and the demands of individual privacy clearly exceed the merits of public disclosure. 42 A.G. Op. 61 (1988).

Open Meeting Law Inapplicable to Departmental-Tribal Cooperative Agreement Negotiations: Negotiations between a Department Director and tribal representatives relating to establishment of a cooperative agreement authorized under 18-11-103 are not subject to Montana's open meeting law. Such discussions do not constitute a "meeting" under this section because the Director, when acting alone on behalf of the Department, does not fall within the scope of the term "quorum of the constituent membership" as used in this section. 42 A.G. Op. 51 (1988).

Meetings of Private Corporation Under State Contract to Be Open: A private, nonprofit corporation that contracted with the state to restore and preserve state-owned property was considered a public body within the meaning of the open meeting law because the corporation was performing a public function and was receiving funds generated by public property. As such, meetings of the corporation were subject to the public's right to know and the standards established in this section. 42 A.G. Op. 42 (1987).

Deliberations of Human Rights Commission: The deliberations of the Human Rights Commission following a contested case hearing are subject to the Montana open meeting law. They must be open to the public unless the presiding officer determines that the discussion relates to a matter of individual privacy and that the demands of individual privacy clearly exceed the merits of public disclosure. 38 A.G. Op. 33 (1979).

Public Disclosure — Right to Know Versus Individual Privacy: A public body may close a meeting under 2-3-203 when the matter discussed relates to individual privacy and the demand for individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure. 37 A.G. Op. 170 (1978).

Public Disclosure of Records: The Board of Real Estate (now Board of Realty Regulation), when requested, must disclose the status of any real estate licensee, whether any disciplinary action has been taken against that individual, and if so, the reason. Public access to information relating to complaints or to allegations and to other files on individual licensees is left to the discretion of the Board, within the guidelines of this opinion. All minutes, except those minutes of a meeting closed by the presiding officer pursuant to 2-3-203, must be open to public inspection. 37 A.G. Op. 107 (1978).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 211 at end of second sentence after "days of the" inserted "date on which the plaintiff or petitioner learns, or reasonably should have learned, of the agency's"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 211, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, sections 2-3-114 and 2-3-213, MCA, now require that civil actions brought under either of those sections in District Court to enforce the laws allowing citizen participation in government be brought within 30 days of an agency decision made in violation of those laws; and

WHEREAS, the effect of the 30-day limitation is to prohibit suits brought after that 30-day limit, as was confirmed by the Montana Supreme Court in the case of Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127 (1979), in which the Supreme Court held that a District Court had no jurisdiction to even consider a case brought after the 30-day period had passed; and

WHEREAS, if an agency, board, or other public entity holds a meeting but does not give notice of a meeting, does not publish an agenda for the meeting, and does not publish minutes of a meeting, there is no way for the public to know whether a meeting occurred, whether a decision was made by the agency, board, or other public entity that is of public interest, or whether the 30-day "clock" has in fact started, except by word of mouth; and

WHEREAS, if a potential plaintiff learns of the meeting by word of mouth at a time too late in the 30-day period to discuss the violation of the participation in government statutes with a potential defendant, it could force a hasty decision to bring suit against the agency, board, or other public entity just because the 30-day period has almost passed.

THEREFORE, it is the determination of the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee that the starting of the 30-day "clock" at the time that a potential plaintiff or petitioner learns or should have learned of a decision made at a meeting held in violation of the law will still apply a limitation to the time that a suit may be brought, but is more fair to a plaintiff or petitioner who might otherwise be precluded from legal action, with the agency, board, or other public entity thereby being rewarded for its secrecy."

Case Notes

Failure to File Right to Know and Participate Claim Within Statute of Limitations — Application of Common-Law Equitable Tolling: The plaintiff's right to know and right to participate claims against a decision of the Custer County Commissioners that was made in an unnoticed meeting were dismissed by the District Court as being time-barred, even though the existence of the meeting was not revealed until 4 years later. Although 2-3-114 and 2-3-213 were later amended with a discovery tolling provision, the amended versions were not in effect when the meeting was held. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court, holding that common-law equitable tolling principles applied since the plaintiff, despite his diligent scrutiny of the Commissioners' actions, would not have learned about the decision until 4 years later when it was inadvertently revealed in another meeting. Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831.

Violation of Open Meeting Laws — Attorney Fees Awarded — Prevailing Party Despite No Final Judgment: The plaintiffs sued the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission for not providing adequate notice of a meeting at which the Commission voted to expedite the closing of the wolf hunting season. The District Court granted a temporary restraining order and ultimately awarded attorney fees. During litigation, the Legislature enacted a law prohibiting the Commission from implementing certain hunting closures, rendering the litigation moot. On appeal, the Commission argued that attorney fees were not appropriate because a final judgment was never issued. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the plaintiffs were a prevailing party because the preliminary injunction produced the same result as a final judgment and there was no remaining underlying controversy to litigate. Citizens for Balanced Use v. Fish, Wildlife & Parks Comm'n, 2014 MT 214, 376 Mont. 202, 331 P.3d 844.

August Meeting's Compliance With Open Meeting Laws and Rights to Know and Participate — Earlier Violations Remedied: A proper meeting held after an improper meeting abrogated the earlier noncompliance and satisfied the requested remedy of reconsideration of the earlier decision. Zunski v. Frenchtown Rural Fire Dept. Bd. of Trustees, 2013 MT 258, 371 Mont. 552, 309 P.3d 21.

Denial of Request to Void Neighborhood Plan Proper — Neighborhood Planning Committee Not Agency: In a suit filed by several property owners against a planning committee for alleged violations of Montana's open meeting laws, the District Court declined to void the neighborhood plan that was subsequently adopted by the planning board and the County Commissioners. The Supreme Court affirmed, concluding that while the property owners were deprived of certain information generated early in the process, the meetings were ultimately opened to the public, the property owners had the right to participate in the process for approximately 2 years before the County Commissioners approved the plan, and the planning committee was not an agency whose decision could be voided under 2-3-114 or 2-3-213. Allen v. Lakeside Neighborhood Planning Comm., 2013 MT 237, 371 Mont. 310, 308 P.3d 956, distinguishing Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 Mont. 257, 60 P.3d 381.

Discretion of District Court Whether to Void School Board Decision: Motta filed a pro se lawsuit against a school district board, contending that the district did not have an appropriate procedure in place for public participation in the decisionmaking process and that because the school board did not adequately publicize a series of negotiation sessions and a special meeting to approve a negotiated agreement between the board and the teachers' union, results of the meeting should be void. The District Court found that the board violated state open meeting laws, granted partial summary judgment for Motta, and ordered that the district submit copies of its public participation procedures and maintain minutes consistent with applicable statutes, but the court did not void the agreement. On appeal, Motta argues that the District Court erred and moved the Supreme Court to void the agreement. The Supreme Court declined. Under this section, the decision whether to void any decisions reached at a meeting held in violation of state open meeting laws is clearly within the discretion of the District Court, and because that discretion was not abused, the partial summary judgment was affirmed. Motta v. Philipsburg School Bd. Trustees, District No. 1, 2004 MT 256, 323 M 72, 98 P3d 673 (2004).

Advisory Body Meeting Without Notice — Mootness of Issues When Ultimate Action Becomes Final: The committee that recommends a list of persons from whom the Governor may select the Commissioner of Political Practices met, without public notice, to discuss who would be recommended. The Governor appointed a recommended person. A suit was filed to void the appointment on the grounds that the submission of the list was void because there was no notice of the meeting. The committee was granted summary judgment in the District Court, and plaintiffs appealed. Before the appeal was heard, the Senate confirmed the appointment. That the confirmation vested the title to the office in the appointee did not make the appeal and issue moot because alleged violations of the state constitutional right to know and open meeting statutes could occur again, both in the context of this committee and similar advisory entities. To allow an alleged violation to escape judicial scrutiny simply because legal proceedings are not always swift would take away the people's constitutional right to know. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Appointment by Governor Not Voided by Failure of Recommending Committee to Give Notice of Meeting at Which Recommended Persons Chosen: The committee that recommends persons to the Governor, who appoints the Commissioner of Political Practices, violated the open meeting law when it met, without public notice, to discuss who would be recommended. The Governor appointed a recommended person, and the Senate confirmed the appointment. Since the Governor is free to disregard the recommended persons, the Governor did not violate the law in appointing one of the recommended persons, and the appointment was not voided. Common Cause of Mont. v. Statutory Comm. to Nominate Candidates for Comm'r of Political Practices, 263 M 324, 868 P2d 604, 51 St. Rep. 77 (1994).

Claim by Third-Party Plaintiffs Not Barred by Open Meeting Law Statute of Limitations: A citizens' group organized to recall Mayor Whitlock sought public disclosure of a report that was ruled to be confidential by a closed meeting of the City Council. In a counterclaim, the City Council sought a declaratory judgment directing disclosure of the report because it believed the public's right to know clearly exceeded Whitlock's privacy right. Whitlock asserted that because the citizens' group failed to file suit within 30 days of the City Council decision, the suit was statutorily barred under this section (see 2007 amendment). However, the declaratory judgment requested by the City Council, as third-party plaintiffs, was not barred by statutory time limitations and because the court's ruling addressed the constitutional questions raised by the city rather than the statutory violation alleged by the citizens' group, the statute of limitations under this section did not control. Citizens to Recall Mayor James Whitlock v. Whitlock, 255 M 517, 844 P2d 74, 49 St. Rep. 1113 (1992).

Damages Not Available: Monetary damages are not available for holding an illegally closed meeting. Irving v. School District No. 1-1A, 248 M 460, 813 P2d 417, 48 St. Rep. 512 (1991). However, see Dorwart v. Caraway, 2002 MT 240, 312 M 1, 58 P3d 128 (2002).

Voiding of Meetings Not Sought — Lack of Standing or Justiciable Controversy: When plaintiff brought an action alleging improper closure of school board meetings, the District Court incorrectly relied on this section in granting summary judgment in favor of the school district for meetings that occurred more than 30 days prior to filing of the complaint (see 2007 amendment). Because plaintiff did not seek to void the meetings, this section did not apply; however, summary judgment was affirmed on the grounds of lack of standing and lack of a justiciable controversy. Flesh v. Bd. of Trustees, 241 M 158, 786 P2d 4, 47 St. Rep. 161 (1990), followed in Fleenor v. Darby School District, 2006 MT 31, 331 M 124, 128 P3d 1048 (2006). Fleenor was overruled in Schoof v. Nesbit, 2014 MT 6, 373 Mont. 226, 316 P.3d 831, to the extent that Fleenor requires a plaintiff in a right to know or right to participate case to allege an injury beyond failure to receive notice or to allege a personal stake in a particular governmental decision for purposes of establishing standing to pursue a claim.

Violation of Right to Know — Exhaustion of Remedies Not Applicable Under Separation of Powers: Plaintiff was negotiating his salary with the school board. The board closed their meeting to discuss plaintiff's salary request. Plaintiff contacted counsel and began proceedings against the board for violating the open meeting law. The board met at another closed meeting and withdrew its offer of employment. The board contended plaintiff was required to exhaust his administrative remedies before filing suit in District Court. The Supreme Court held that the exhaustion doctrine does not apply to constitutional issues. Plaintiff claimed violation of his constitutional right to observe deliberations of a public body under the constitution's right to know provisions. Constitutional questions are properly decided by a judicial body, not an administrative official, under the separation of powers doctrine. Jarussi v. Bd. of Trustees, 204 M 131, 664 P2d 316, 40 St. Rep. 720 (1983).

Lack of Notice of Public Meeting as Voiding Decision — Abuse of Discretion: Where County Commissioners failed to follow the statutory requirements for notice for a meeting of the Board of County Commissioners, the District Court had discretionary authority to void the results of the meeting, and where the Commissioners failed to fulfill their burden of proving the meeting legal, it was a clear abuse of discretion for the court not to void the results of the meeting. Bd. of Trustees v. County Comm'rs, 186 M 148, 606 P2d 1069 (1980).

Use of Mandamus to Void Unlawfully Held Public Meeting: Where respondent County Commissioners failed to give public notice of a meeting so that the result was voidable by the court under 2-3-114 and 2-3-213, a Writ of Mandamus would be appropriate in this case to void the illegal meeting. In future cases, the remedy should take the form of a simple petition to void an action or a petition for declaratory judgment. Bd. of Trustees v. County Comm'rs, 186 M 148, 606 P2d 1069 (1980), followed in Goyen v. Troy, 276 M 213, 915 P2d 824, 53 St. Rep. 353 (1996).

Case Notes

Fees Not Recoverable Against Private Party: Right-to-know fees are recoverable under 2-3-221 only when the prevailing party is successful in enforcing the party's rights under Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., against a public body or governmental agency. A party is not entitled to recover right-to-know fees against a nonpublic or nongovernmental entity. Shockley v. Cascade County, 2016 MT 34, 382 Mont. 209, 367 P.3d 336.

Related Constitutional Provisions — Inextricable Link: The plaintiffs sued the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission for not providing adequate notice of a meeting at which the Commission voted to expedite the closing of the wolf hunting season. The District Court granted a temporary restraining order and ultimately awarded attorney fees under Art. II, secs. 8 and 9, Mont. Const. On appeal, the Commission argued that 2-3-221 allows for recovery only under Art. II, sec. 9, claims. The Supreme Court disagreed, holding that the two sections share a fundamental link and are inextricably associated with each other. Citizens for Balanced Use v. Fish, Wildlife & Parks Comm'n, 2014 MT 214, 376 Mont. 202, 331 P.3d 844.

Violation of Open Meeting Laws — Attorney Fees Awarded — Prevailing Party Despite No Final Judgment: The plaintiffs sued the Fish, Wildlife, and Parks Commission for not providing adequate notice of a meeting at which the Commission voted to expedite the closing of the wolf hunting season. During litigation, the Legislature enacted a law prohibiting the Commission from implementing certain hunting closures, rendering the litigation moot. No Award of Attorney Fees on Partial Summary Judgment in Pro Se Case Proper — Remand for Determination of Costs: The District Court awarded Motta partial summary judgment in an action to determine whether a school board violated state open meeting laws. Even though he was the prevailing party, Motta was not entitled to attorney fees because Motta acted pro se throughout the proceeding. However, the District Court failed to address whether Motta was entitled to costs. Although it is within the District Court's discretion whether costs are awarded, an outright denial of costs without a sufficient rationale is an abuse of that discretion. The Supreme Court remanded so that the District Court could consider costs and set forth a rationale if costs were denied. Motta v. Philipsburg School Bd. Trustees, District No. 1, 2004 MT 256, 323 M 72, 98 P3d 673 (2004). See also Gaustad v. Columbus, 265 M 379, 877 P2d 470 (1994).

Performance of Public Service in Enforcement of Constitutional Provisions Through Litigation — Costs and Attorney Fees Payable: Plaintiffs successfully contested the constitutional validity of a Department of Revenue administrative rule regarding the confidentiality of corporate tax information. In doing so, plaintiffs performed a public service by enforcing a portion of the Montana Constitution that would otherwise have been violated. Because of the public benefits gained through plaintiffs' efforts, the Supreme Court spread the cost of the litigation among its beneficiaries and awarded plaintiffs their costs and reasonable attorney fees, including those incurred on appeal. Assoc. Press, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, 2000 MT 160, 300 M 233, 4 P3d 5, 57 St. Rep. 657 (2000), distinguished in In re Petition of Billings High School District No. 2 v. Billings Gazette, 2006 MT 329, 335 M 94, 149 P3d 565 (2006).

Water Rights Decree "Updated" Without Notice or Hearing — No Violation of Right to Know Found — Possible Due Process Violation — Attorney Fees Denied: Jones discovered that her water right set forth in a 1902 court decree had been "updated" by the judges of the Fourth Judicial District and the terms of the 1902 decree had been changed in the process, all without notice and hearing for Jones. The Supreme Court, distinguishing Assoc. Press v. St., 250 M 299, 820 P2d 421 (1991), and noting that the methods used by the Fourth Judicial District Court may be a violation of due process rights, held that since there was no court order, statute, or other action preventing access to documents or observance of deliberations, there was no violation of the right to know and therefore no attorney fees were awardable pursuant to this section. State ex rel. Jones v. District Court, 283 M 1, 938 P2d 1312, 54 St. Rep. 460 (1997).

Award of Attorney Fees Discretionary: It is within the discretion of the District Court to award attorney fees to a prevailing plaintiff, but the award is not mandatory. In this case, the court conscientiously balanced the competing rights and interests of the parties and carefully analyzed controlling case law before denying the award of attorney fees and thus did not exceed the bounds of reason or abuse its discretion in its decision. Gaustad v. Columbus, 272 M 486, 901 P2d 565, 52 St. Rep. 826 (1995), followed in Pengra v. St., 2000 MT 291, 302 M 276, 14 P3d 499, 57 St. Rep. 1231 (2000). Gaustad and Pengra were followed in In re Petition of Billings High School District No. 2 v. Billings Gazette, 2006 MT 329, 335 M 94, 149 P3d 565 (2006). See also Disability Rights Mont. v. Award of Attorney Fees Discretionary — "May" Construed as Discretionary: Gaustad prevailed in a suit for the release of investigatory records brought under Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., but the District Court denied awarding attorney fees. Citing Assoc. Press v. Bd. of Pub. Educ., 246 M 386, 804 P2d 376 (1991), and Bozeman Daily Chronicle v. Bozeman Police Dept., 260 M 218, 859 P2d 435 (1993), the Supreme Court held that the award of fees was discretionary with the District Court under this section. In response to Gaustad's argument that "may" should be construed as "shall", the Supreme Court reviewed the legislative history of this section and noted that the legislative history favored the construction of "may" as permissive. Because the District Court gave no rationale for its denial of the motion for fees, the Supreme Court remanded the case for inclusion of that rationale. In re Gaustad v. Columbus, 265 M 379, 877 P2d 470, 51 St. Rep. 544 (1994).

Newspaper Successfully Seeking Release of Criminal Justice Information Entitled to Attorney Fees: The Bozeman Daily Chronicle successfully sued the city of Bozeman's police department to obtain the name of an officer who had resigned after being investigated for sexual misconduct. The Supreme Court held that the newspaper had prevailed by relying on its rights under Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., and that therefore the lower court had the discretion to award attorney fees to the newspaper. Bozeman Daily Chronicle v. Bozeman Police Dept., 260 M 218, 859 P2d 435, 50 St. Rep. 1014 (1993). See also Pengra v. St., 2000 MT 291, 302 M 276, 14 P3d 499, 57 St. Rep.

Severability: Section 72, Ch. 348, L. 2015, was a severability clause.

2011 Amendment: Chapter 41 in (3) inserted second sentence concerning the availability of an electronic notice of proposed rulemaking. Amendment effective March 23, 2011.

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 77 in (3) near middle of first sentence after "person" inserted "and subject to 2-6-102"; inserted (4) regarding retention of electronic mail; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 313 in (1) after "2-3-111 applies, shall" deleted "if the agency is capable of receiving electronic mail for the internet world wide web"; deleted former (2)(d) that referred to the state electronic bulletin board; in (3) near beginning after "An agency" deleted "that uses electronic mail and creates or receives electronic documents"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Effective Date: Section 2, Ch. 484, L. 1999, provided that this section is effective July 1, 2000.

CHAPTER 4
ADMINISTRATIVE PROCEDURE ACT

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Source — Explanation of Subcommittee Comments: The Montana Administrative Procedure Act is loosely structured on the 1961 Revised Model State Administrative Procedure Act (referred to as "1961 Revised Model Act" in these comments and the Subcommittee comments) adopted by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws in 1961. Pursuant to Senate Joint Resolution No. 12 (1969), the Administrative Procedures Subcommittee of the Montana Legislative Council, in conjunction with Professor John P. McCrory, University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula) School of Law, prepared a two-part report on a proposed administrative procedure act based upon the 1961 Revised Model Act. The second part of the report is entitled "Part II, Proposed Montana Administrative Procedure Act With Explanatory Comments". The proposed act was passed but vetoed during the 1971 regular legislative session. The bill was amended and passed again, becoming law during the 1971 first special session. Because the proposed act was substantially different from the 1961 Revised Model Act, the annotator has published comments from the Subcommittee report on the proposed act rather than the comments by the Commissioners on Uniform State Laws explaining the 1961 Revised Model Act. (The proposed act is designated by "[1971 proposed]" when referenced within Subcommittee comments.) By 1971, the comments by the Uniform Law Commissioners did not reflect the many alterations incorporated in the proposed act and were obsolete with regard to the federal administrative procedure act and relevant case law.

The Subcommittee comments have been consolidated in a chapter compiler's comment rather than printing relevant portions of the Subcommittee comments with individual sections because the Subcommittee comments also are rapidly becoming outdated as Title 2, chapter 4, MCA, is amended. The Subcommittee comments may have some bearing on a historical interpretation of a section, but often they no longer accurately reflect the substance of a section and can be very misleading upon casual reading. The bracketed material within the comments is the annotator's.

Uniform Law Commissioner comments relating to the 1961 Revised Model Act appear in the annotations of this chapter only if the Subcommittee comments quote or specifically make reference to them or if a portion of the 1961 Revised Model Act was not used in the proposed act but was incorporated into the final act as passed and approved.

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws has promulgated a complete revision of the 1961 Revised Model Act. The new Model Act is cited in annotations to this chapter as the "Model Administrative Procedure Act (1981)". Sections enacted from this Model Act contain Commissioners' comments prepared by the National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws.

Subcommittee Comments:

[This material is an introduction by the Uniform Law Commissioners that relates to the 1961 Revised Model Act. See explanatory comments above.]

"The act deals primarily with major principles, not with minor matters of detail. Every student of administrative law recognizes that many of the procedural details involved in administrative action must necessarily vary more or less from state to state and even from agency to agency within the same state. Each state and each agency must work out these details for itself according to the necessities of the situation. However, there are certain basic principles of common sense, justice, and fairness that can and should prevail universally. The proposed act incorporates these principles, with only enough elaboration of detail to support the essential major features.

The major principles embraced in the Act as adopted by the Conference are:

(1) Requirement that each agency shall adopt essential procedural rules, and, except in emergencies, that all rule-making, both procedural and substantive, shall be accompanied by notice to interested persons, and opportunity to submit views or information;

(2) Assurance of proper publicity for all administrative rules;

(3) Provision for advance determination of the validity of administrative rules, and for "declaratory rulings," affording advance determination of the applicability of administrative rules to particular cases;

(4) Assurance of fundamental fairness in administrative adjudicative hearings, particularly in regard to such matters as notice, rules of evidence, the taking of official notice, the exclusion of factual material not properly presented and made a part of the record, and proper separation of functions;

(5) Assurance of personal familiarity with the evidence on the part of the responsible deciding officers and agency heads in quasi-judicial cases;

(6) Provision for proper proceedings for and scope of judicial review of administrative orders, thus assuring correction of administrative errors.

There is no good reason why these general principles should not govern throughout the entire administrative structure. They are not details; they are essential safeguards of fairness in the administrative process. Yet too many state statutes are altogether deficient in regard to them.

Recent years have, however, been bringing forth in many quarters profound apprehension over the undisciplined growth of administrative powers, and this is the reason why the Congress and several state legislatures have been sufficiently concerned to take affirmative action.

The [1961] Model State Administrative Procedure Act is offered by the National Conference of Commissioners in the hope that it will serve a good purpose in states that may be considering the adoption of such legislation or the revision of acts already on the statute books. The Model Act will, of course, require careful adjustment to the special statutory conditions peculiar to the state under consideration but the general principles set forth are of universal applicability and the suggested language will also be found helpful."

[The following material, relating to the bracketed section(s), is from the report entitled "Part II, Proposed Montana Administrative Procedure Act With Explanatory Comments". See explanatory comments above.]

[Section 2-4-102:]

"["Agency":] The definition of "agency" is important because it determines which governmental bodies, officials and functions are subject to the [1971 proposed] MAPA. In order for an agency to fall within the coverage of the act, it (he) must:

(1) be a board, bureau, commission, department, authority, or officer of state government; and

(2) have authority to make rules or determine contested cases.

The first requirement eliminates from coverage agencies of local government. The second requirement specifies the administrative functions which the [1971 proposed] MAPA covers. "Rules" and "contested cases" are defined in [2-4-102(10)] and [2-4-102(4)] respectively.

The wording of the definition is slightly different from that in the [1961] Revised Model Act, although the intended meaning is the same. The [1961] Revised Model Act defines "agency" as "each state [board, commission, department or officer]..." The wording in the [1971 proposed] MAPA was chosen because it is believed that it more strongly reflects an intent to exclude from coverage agencies of local government.

Under the [1961] Revised Model Act's definition of "agency" only the legislature and courts are exempt from coverage. The Commissioners have stated that it is desirable that the definition of "agency" be "all inclusive." The author is in accord with this philosophy of coverage. An agency or administrative function should only be exempt where the purpose of the agency or function is inconsistent with coverage. Applying this principle, several additional exemptions have been included in [2-4-102(2)].

The governor, as head of the state's executive branch of government, has been excluded from coverage. However, the governor has been designated as a member of certain state agencies. An agency otherwise covered by the act is not exempt because the governor has been so designated.

The state's military establishment has been exempt from coverage because of its unique function and the impracticability of requiring that it comply with the procedures required in the [1971 proposed] MAPA. Excluded with the military establishment are closely related agencies dealing with civil defense and recovery from hostile attack.

The legislature has given the State Board of Pardons [now Board of Pardons and Parole] broad discretionary powers. The nature of these powers warrants an exemption from coverage. However, the highly discretionary nature of the Board's powers does not diminish the need for public information regarding its substantive and procedural rules. Accordingly, the Board's exemption is qualified by the requirement that it must comply with the provisions of the [1971 proposed] MAPA relating to rules describing agency organization and procedures, public inspection of rules, and filing and effective date of rules. The Board's rules must also be published in the Montana Administrative Code and Register [now the Administrative Rules of Montana and the Montana Administrative Register].

The supervision and administration of state institutions are exempt because, to a large degree, such matters are regulated by statute and directly involve basic constitutional rights. It is believed that determinations regarding such matters can be handled better by courts than by administrative bodies. In addition, it would not be practical for institution personnel to follow [1971 proposed] MAPA procedures for many determinations and judgments which they must make, particularly with regard to individual inmates, prisoners or patients.

The administration and supervision of educational institutions has been exempt from coverage for two reasons. First, state laws relating to education are presently under study and may be modified. Second, it is believed that the desirability and feasibility of placing educational institutions, in part or in whole, within the coverage of the [1971 proposed] MAPA should be the subject of an independent study. It is believed that the elimination or modification of the exemption should be considered at a later date when the state has had experience with an administrative procedure act and studies with regard to education statutes have been completed and implemented.

Functions relating to public works have been exempt because it is felt that it would not be practical if such functions were subject to procedures set forth in the [1971 proposed] MAPA and so as not to jeopardize construction schedules, financing plans or eligibility for financial aid programs.

["Contested Case".] The definition of "contested case" is the same as that in the [1961] Revised Model Act, except that the order of words has been altered. The alteration is intended to clarify, not change, the definition.

The definition is broadly phrased so as to include all proceedings in which the basic concepts of due process should be applied to protect private rights and the public interest. Contested case hearings are "trial-type" hearings and due process safeguards are provided for in the [1971 proposed] MAPA.

In contrast to Senate Bill No. 179 [1959], price-fixing and rate-making proceedings are included within the definition of "contested cases" rather than "rule." This is done because such proceedings typically involve factual determinations which should be based upon a record where the parties are able to cross-examine, introduce rebuttal evidence and have available other protections which are available in contested case proceedings, but not required in rule-making proceedings.

The definition refers to determinations which are "required by law" to be made after an opportunity for hearing. This has broader meaning than merely a statutory requirement for an opportunity for hearing. It includes situations where a hearing is required as a matter of constitutional right. Thus, a hearing may be required even though an applicable statute does not provide for one. The words "required by law" have the same broad meaning when used in other sections of the [1971 proposed] MAPA.

The definition is not intended to include informal preliminary inquiries or investigations made to determine if formal "contested case" proceedings should be instituted.

["License":] This definition is the same as that in the [1961] Revised Model Act. The provision regarding licenses "solely for revenue purposes" is intended to exclude from coverage licensing which is purely routine or ministerial in nature. [No comment under 1961 Revised Model Act.]

["Licensing":] This definition is the same as that in the [1961] Revised Model Act, except that the word "limitation" is added. [No comment under 1961 Revised Model Act.]

["Party":] The principle definition of "party" is the same as in the [1961] Revised Model Act. The additional phrase "but nothing herein shall be construed to prevent an agency from admitting any person or agency as a party for limited purposes" has been added to permit agencies to allow interested persons or agencies, who are not sufficiently involved to be parties, to appear where a diversity of viewpoint is desirable in reaching a determination. It is comparable to procedures used by courts in permitting persons to appear as friends of the court.

["Person":] This definition is as the one in the [1961] Revised Model Act. [No comment under 1961 Revised Model Act.]

["Rule":] Except for the addition of the words "regulation, standard or" the basic definition of "rule" is the same as that found in the [1961] Revised Model Act. "Regulation" and "standard" are words which are used with some frequency in the various Montana statutes and it is felt that the incorporation of the terms in the definition of "rule" is desirable for that reason.

The definition includes substantive rules, procedural rules and rules which describe the organization of an agency. A rule may be of "general applicability" even though it is of immediate concern only to a single person or a small group, provided the form of the rule is general and others who fall within the regulated category in the future will come within its coverage.

The first three exceptions from the definition [(a) internal management; second clause of (b) on declaratory rulings; and interagency memoranda, since deleted] are only the exceptions contained in the [1961] Revised Model Act. They are included so that agencies will not be unduly restricted regarding internal matters and to encourage agencies to utilize the practice of issuing declaratory rulings. Four additional exemptions have been added.

Rules relating to the use of public works, facilities, streets and highways are exempt so that it will not be necessary to follow rule-making procedures to establish or change highway speed limits, hours when public facilities are open to the general public and similar regulations.

Seasonal rules relating to hunting, fishing, trapping and the recreational use of state owned or controlled lands and waters are exempt because such rules often must be adopted on short notice or under circumstances when it would be impractical to use rule-making procedures. In addition, they are normally in effect for a shorter period than the 120 days permitted for emergency rules which may be adopted without notice or hearing under [2-4-303].

It would not be practical to make rules relating to personnel standards, job classifications and salary ranges for agency personnel subject to rule-making procedures. To insure that they are not, a specific exemption has been included.

Finally, uniform rules adopted pursuant to interstate compact have been excepted from the definition of "rule." If the rule-making requirements contained in the [1971 proposed] MAPA were applied to such rules it would be inconsistent with the intent of interstate compacts to develop uniform rules in participating states. However, there is still a need for public information regarding these rules. The exception is qualified by the requirement that the interstate compact rules shall be filed with the secretary of state in the same manner as other rules and shall be published in the Montana Administrative Code and Register [now the Administrative Rules of Montana and the Montana Administrative Register].

Under Senate Bill No. 179 [1959], price-fixing and rate-making were included in the definition of rule. These proceedings are included within the definition of "contested case" in [2-4-102(4)].

[Sections 2-4-103, 2-4-201, 2-4-202:]

[Section 201 of the proposed Act, now 2-4-103, 2-4-201, and 2-4-202] is one of the most significant in the [1971 proposed] MAPA. It, together with the filing and publication requirements in [sections 2-4-306 and 2-4-307, 2-4-311 through 2-4-313], will correct two of the most serious deficiencies which exist in administrative practice in the state, lack of public information concerning the actual procedures and policies of state agencies, and lack of knowledge by agency personnel of procedures and policies which should be followed or have been followed in the past.

Section 201(a) [2-4-103 and 2-4-201] requires that each agency adopt rules which describe its organization, its method of operation, the method by which the public may communicate with the agency and state procedures for practice before the agency. It further requires that rules, as well as statements of policy or interpretations used by the agency, must be open to public inspection and that the agency furnish copies of rules upon request. In order to prevent burdensome expense to agencies, they are authorized to charge the cost of rules so furnished.

The statutes for very few state agencies require the adoption of procedural rules. Some authorize, but do not require, their adoption. In most cases there is no express reference to procedural rules. However, many statutes give agencies general rule-making authority, such as authority to adopt rules to [e]ffectuate the purposes of the act, which is broad enough to authorize the adoption of procedural rules. Even where there is specific direction to adopt procedural rules there is generally an inadequate indication of what should be included. As a result of the foregoing, most agencies either have no procedural rules or rules which are incomplete and inadequate. Some agencies are operating under the incorrect assumption that they do not have authority to adopt procedural rules. [Section 2-4-201] will eliminate such confusion and insure that each agency adopts adequate procedural rules for the guidance of the public and agency personnel and will have the effect of stabilizing agency procedures.

[Section 2-4-103(3)] provides for a sanction where a person's rights have been "substantially prejudiced" by an agency's failure to comply with the public inspection requirement of [2-4-103 and 2-4-201]. Section 2(b) of the [1961] Revised Model Act contains a tougher sanction provision. It states that, in the absence of actual knowledge to the party involved, a rule shall not be valid or effective unless the public information requirements are met. This may be warranted under the provisions of the [1961] Revised Model Act, because a rule thereunder may be made effective 20 days after filing with the secretary of state and before there is any general publication of the rule (see [1961] Revised Model Act, sections 4(2) and 5(b)). Accordingly, there may be a period of time where the only place where a new rule can be seen is at the secretary of state's office or the place where the agency makes its rules available for public inspection. Under the [1971 proposed] MAPA, rules do not become effective until 10 days after publication [since deleted] in the Montana Administrative Register, which is distributed throughout the state (see [2-4-306 and 2-4-312]). Under the circumstances, it is felt that the less stringent sanction provision is warranted in the [1971 proposed] MAPA.

Many agencies, such as the smaller licensing boards, do not have personnel who are trained in administrative procedures and do not have the financial means to employ full-time legal counsel. Such agencies will need guidance in preparing procedural rules. [Section 2-4-202] is intended to meet this need. It is also intended to encourage uniformity in procedural rules adopted by the various agencies. [Section 2-4-202] is similar to section 201(a)(2) of Senate Bill No. 179 [1959]. There is no comparable provision in the [1961] Revised Model Act.

Section 2(4) of the [1961] Revised Model Act provides for public inspection of agency orders and decisions. A comparable provision is contained in [2-4-623], which relates to decisions and orders in contested cases.

[Section 2-4-104:]

[Section 2-4-104] gives the agency subpoena power in rule-making and contested case proceedings. In contested case proceedings, parties are entitled to subpoenas upon request.

[Section 2-4-104] provides a means for enforcement of subpoenas and to require witnesses to testify where their refusal is unjustified.

Many state agencies have subpoena power in contested cases. The power for some agencies extends to rule making as well. All state agencies should have this power if they are to adequately perform contested case and rule-making functions. There is no comparable provision in the [1961] Revised Model Act.

[Section 2-4-105:]

The statutes for some state agencies specifically provide for the right to counsel. It is felt that such a provision for all agencies is appropriate.

[Sections 2-4-302, 2-4-303, 2-4-304, 2-4-305, 2-4-314:]

The rule-making process is an important administrative function, yet few state agencies have rule-making procedures. The study of state administrative procedures revealed that the members of some agencies were not in office when current rules were adopted and/or are unfamiliar with the rule-making procedures that have been followed in the past or that should be followed in the future. Relatively few agencies permit participation by interested persons.

Section 202 [2-4-302 through 2-4-305, 2-4-314] describes the proceedings which must be followed by agencies in adopting rules and provides for public notice of rule-making so that interested persons can submit data, views and argument. The section applies to both procedural and substantive rules. Agency rules may have a substantial impact, and it is in accord with basic principles of fairness that interested persons should be given an opportunity to participate in the adoption process. Public participation also provides a means for an agency to obtain information about the areas to be regulated and possible deficiencies in its intended action. It has also been suggested that the opportunity for such participation is good public relations which will lead to greater confidence in and more willing compliance with rules.

[Section 2-4-302] provides for notice of intended rule-making action. Much of the language is the same as that in section 3(a)(1) of the [1961] Revised Model Act. There are alterations in the structure and wording because the [1961] Revised Model Act's language is appropriate for newspaper or like publication. [Section 2-4-302] provides for publication in the Montana Administrative Register. Register will be widely circulated throughout the state and may be subscribed to by interested persons (see [2-4-312]). It is felt that this is the most expedient, reliable and economical method of providing general notice of rule-making proceedings. [Section 2-4-302] also provides for notice by mail to persons who make an appropriate request.

If an agency is otherwise required by statute to give notice by newspaper or other publication, such requirement must be complied with in addition to the requirement in the [1971 proposed] MAPA. In order to avoid conflict between the [1971 proposed] MAPA and other statutes regarding the notice period, a minimum 20 day period is established.

Section 202(a)(2) [2-4-302, 2-4-305(part)] describes the extent to which interested persons have a right to participate in rule-making proceedings and the agency's obligation to consider their submissions. Agencies need not conduct a hearing prior to the adoption of procedural rules. In the case of substantive rules, a hearing is required upon request of 10 per cent or 25 of the persons directly affected by the rule-making or an association representing at least 10 per cent or 25 persons directly affected or a governmental subdivision or agency. In the absence of such a request, no hearing is required prior to the adoption of substantive rules.

Section 202(a)(2) [2-4-302, 2-4-305(part)] follows section 3(a)(2) of the [1961] Revised Model Act with four exceptions. First, the [1961] Revised Model Act requires a substantive rule-making hearing when requested by 25 persons. The alternative ten per cent requirement has been added because some state agencies regulate comparatively small groups. This addition gives the hearing requirement greater flexibility and insures that there is not a disparity in treatment between small and large regulated groups. Second, the persons requesting the hearing must be "directly affected." This has been added to insure that agencies need not go through the trouble and expense of a hearing unless the parties requesting it have a substantial interest in the proceeding. Third, language is added which states that rule-making hearings are not subject to contested case procedures. Fourth, language has been added to insure that where hearings are otherwise required by statute, that requirement will not be changed. Some statutes require a hearing in rule-making proceedings.

[Section 2-4-303] provides for the adoption of emergency rules without notice or with abbreviated notice. It follows the wording of section 3(b) of the [1961] Revised Model Act, except a final sentence is added to make it clear that an agency's emergency findings will be subject to court review. There is no provision for renewal of emergency rules, because it is felt that the 120 day effective period is ample for completion of conventional rule-making procedures.

Section 202(c) [not enacted], which provides for a sanction for non-compliance with rule making procedures, is patterned after section 3(c) of the [1961] Revised Model Act. However, in section 3(c) the 2 year limitation period relates only to commencing actions to contest rules. Language has been added to extend the limitation period to situations where non-compliance is raised as a defense.

[Section 2-4-304] has been inserted to make it clear that the useful techniques described therein may be employed in the rule-making process, in addition to the formal requirements. These techniques are presently employed by some state agencies. There is no such provision in the [1961] Revised Model Act. Section 201(d) of Senate Bill No. 179 [1959] contains a similar provision.

The purpose of [2-4-305(part)] is to insure that agency rules will not merely restate statutory language. It should also be helpful in eliminating the apparent misconception of some agency personnel that statutes and agency rules are the same thing. There is no comparable provision in the [1961] Revised Model Act. Section [2-4-305(part)] is similar to section 201(e) of Senate Bill No. 179 [1959].

There is no provision like [2-4-314] in the [1961] Revised Model Act or in Senate Bill No. 179 [1959]. The study of administrative procedures revealed that many agencies have gone for long periods without review or needed modification of their rules. It is hoped that the requirement of annual review will correct this problem.

[Sections 2-4-306, 2-4-307, 2-4-311, 2-4-312, 2-4-313:]

At the present time there is no provision for central filing of the rules for all state agencies. Not all agencies have their business offices in the state capitol. Many are scattered throughout the state. In some instances the locations change with a change in agency personnel. As a result, it is sometimes difficult to determine if a particular agency has adopted rules and, if it has, to obtain copies.

[Sections 2-4-306, 2-4-307, 2-4-311 through 2-4-313] are intended to alleviate the problems which are created by this situation by providing for central filing and statewide distribution of all agency rules.

[Section 2-4-306] states filing requirements for all rules. It contains specific filing requirements for rules in effect on the effective date of the [1971 proposed] MAPA and for rules adopted thereafter. Except in the case of emergency rules and rules where a later date is specified in the rule or required by statute, new rules are effective 10 days after publication [since deleted] in the Montana Administrative Register (see [2-4-311]). Under section 4(b) of the [1961] Revised Model Act, with the same two exceptions noted above, rules are effective 20 days after filing with the secretary of state. Under this scheme, a rule could be effective before it is published on a statewide basis in the Register (referred to as a bulletin in section 5(b) of the [1961] Revised Model Act), since the Register is published monthly [presently published bi-monthly]. Basic principles of fairness dictate that individuals should not be required to comply with a rule until a reasonable attempt has been made to give notice of its existence. It is felt that making rules effective 10 days after publication in the Register [since deleted], which provides statewide publication, is more consistent with these principles than the comparable provision in the [1961] Revised Model Act.

Under [2-4-306] an emergency rule may be effective upon filing with the secretary of state (before publication in the Register). However, in this case the agency is required to take appropriate measures to make the rule known to all affected persons.

Section 4(a) of the [1961] Revised Model Act requires the filing of rules in existence on the effective date of the act, but does not give a deadline. Section 203(a) [repealed, sec. 10, Ch. 285, L. 1977] specifies 60 day deadline. It is felt that a deadline is important because of the public interest in having central filing at an early date, to give specific instructions to agencies with regard to the filing requirement and so that the secretary of state will not be unduly delayed in compiling, indexing and publishing the Montana Administrative Code pursuant to section 204(a) [repealed, sec. 11, Ch. 285, L. 1977].

[Section 2-4-306] gives the secretary of state authority to prescribe a standard format, style and arrangement for rules. The study of state administrative procedures revealed that there is a substantial lack of uniformity in the form in which agencies adopt and publish rules. It will be a great assistance to the secretary of state, especially in the compiling and indexing of the Code and Register, if rules are filed in a uniform style and format. Any inconvenience to particular agencies will be relatively slight in comparison to the inconvenience to the secretary of state caused by a lack of uniformity. The [1961] Revised Model Act has no such provision. A comparable provision is found in section 203 of Senate Bill No. 179 [1959].

[Sections 2-4-307, 2-4-311 through 2-4-313:]

At the present time there is no means of providing statewide notice of the existence or content of administrative rules. As noted in the previous comment, it is often difficult to determine if an agency has adopted rules and to obtain copies. The rules of some agencies can be seen only by examining the minutes of their meetings. Although many agencies periodically publish their rules, copies are normally available only at their offices, which may or may not be in the state capitol. The published rules for some agencies are out of print and unavailable or are not current because they do not contain amendments.

Section 204 [2-4-307, 2-4-311 through 2-4-313] is designed to correct this situation. It provides for statewide distribution of complete, current copies of rules adopted by all agencies. It also provides for statewide distribution of rule-making notices.

[Section 2-4-311] directs the secretary of state to publish a compilation of the rules for all state agencies called the Montana Administrative Code [now the Administrative Rules of Montana]. The Code is to be published in loose-leaf form and will be distributed throughout the state (see [2-4-313]). Each county will have at least one current set of the Code available for public inspection. The Code will be supplemented monthly by the Montana Administrative Register with rules adopted after publication of the Code.

The loose-leaf form of publication is specified because it is believed that it will be the most convenient and expedient means of keeping the Code current. As rules are amended, replacement pages will be published as part of the Register and can be slipped into the Code in the place of superseded pages. New rules can also be slipped in at appropriate places. The Code will always be current without the need for resorting to awkward pocket parts which would otherwise have to be published periodically. The loose-leaf format for the Code and Register combines the features of monthly notice of rule changes and continual revision.

To ensure that current copies of the Code are available throughout the state, [2-4-313] specifies that the secretary of state, the clerks of the courts of record, the county clerks and the librarians for the state law library and the university of Montana [now university of Montana-Missoula] law library maintain complete, current sets of the Code. In addition, [2-4-313] directs the secretary of state to make subscriptions to the Code and Register available to any person at a charge to cover publication and mailing costs.

[Section 2-4-311] requires that the Code be arranged in such fashion that there may be separate printings of the rules for individual agencies. This coordination between the secretary of state and individual agencies should result in cost savings to agencies. [Section 2-4-103] requires that agencies provide copies of rules upon request.

In addition to a Rules Section of the Register, there is a Notice Section. This section is the official vehicle for publication of rule-making notices, although other methods of publication must also be used where required by statute (see [2-4-306]). The secretary of state, clerks of the courts of record, county clerks and law librarians are required to keep a file of such notices for the preceding two years. The two-year period is selected to correspond with the two-year limitation period set forth in Section 203(c) [not enacted] for challenging rules on the basis of irregularities in adoption procedures.

Where the publication of a rule in the Code or Register would be unduly burdensome, it may be omitted under [2-4-307], provided that it is available at the adopting agency and the Code or Register gives notice of its general contents.

Finally, [2-4-313] gives the secretary of state flexibility in establishing charges to be made for the Code and Register.

[Section 2-4-315:]

Since public participation in the rule-making process is desirable, it is appropriate that there should be a provision for interested persons to petition an agency requesting the adoption, amendment or repeal of rules. This section is the same as section 6 of the [1961] Revised Model Act with one exception. The [1961] Revised Model Act requires that the agency act on a petition within 30 days. [This section] specifies 60 days. Experience with a comparable provision in the Model Act, which set no limit, showed that agencies reacted slowly or not at all to petitions. Accordingly, a time limit is desirable. However, 60 days is more realistic for Montana in view of the fact that key personnel in many agencies are scattered around the state, making action within a 30-day period impractical.

[Section 2-4-501:]

It is not uncommon for an individual to be uncertain as to whether particular activity which he contemplates would violate a statute or an agency rule or order. A dilemma results; forego the activity and avoid the potential problem, or engage in the activity and risk the consequences of violating a statute, rule or order. [This section] is intended to eliminate the injustices created by such dilemmas by providing a procedure for agencies to make declaratory rulings.

[This section] embodies the declaratory ruling provisions of the [1961] Revised Model Act with one addition. The final sentence has been modified (and language added) to insure that agencies do not have unlimited discretion in refusing to make declaratory rulings. The drafters of the [1961] Revised Model Act considered a requirement that declaratory rulings be made upon request of an interested party. It was concluded that this would place an impractical burden upon agencies. It is felt that this conclusion is justified. However, it is believed that the modification of the final sentence in [this section] will insure that declaratory rulings will be issued where the circumstances warrant.

[Section 2-4-505:]

The state supreme court has not always been willing to take judicial notice of administrative rules. In view of the filing and publication requirements in the [1971 proposed] MAPA, this requirement, which will eliminate the necessity for submitting proof as to the existence and authenticity of rules, is warranted.

[Section 2-4-506:]

This section, like [2-4-501], provides a means for determining controversies where individuals must know where they stand before taking definitive action. Although the authority conferred by the section is probably available under the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act, it is included to insure that the procedure is available.

This section is identical to Section 7 of the [1961] Revised Model Act, with one exception, the word "found" has been substituted for "alleged" in the second line. This change was made to require that the court's authority to act is based upon a finding rather than a mere allegation.

[Sections 2-4-601, 2-4-603(1), 2-4-612(1), 2-4-614, 2-4-623(2):]

A "contested case" is one in which a determination of legal rights, duties or privileges must by law be made after an opportunity for a "trial-type" hearing. The Montana supreme court has recognized the right to notice and hearing in such cases as a matter of constitutional right, even though none is provided for by statute. In such proceedings basic due process requirements must be met.

Many state agencies have the "contested case" function. However, the statutes vary greatly with regard to notice and hearing. Some statutes are silent. Others mention the right, but do not give specific directions as to the requirements. Still others conform, either substantially or in part, with the provisions of [2-4-601, 2-4-603(1), 2-4-612(1), 2-4-614, 2-4-623(2)]. In some instances, statutes make reference to notice and hearing for some of the agency's contested case functions, but not for others.

Similarly, statutes vary with regard to the record in contested cases. In many instances no mention is made of a record. In others, mention is made of a "record" or "minutes" of proceedings without giving specific directions as to the content. It is important that the content of the record be clearly specified and understood, because it is the basis for the agency's findings of fact and constitutes the record which is used for judicial review (see [2-4-704]).

Section 301 [2-4-601, 2-4-603(1), 2-4-612(1), 2-4-614, 2-4-623(2)] contains fundamental requirements which are applicable to and appropriate for all contested case proceedings. It provides guidelines and requirements for all agencies to insure that basic requirements of due process are met.

[Section 2-4-601] requires "reasonable notice" of hearing. The functions of state agencies and the requirements of areas which they regulate vary. What may be reasonable notice of hearing for one agency may be insufficient or unnecessarily long for another. Accordingly, a uniform notice period is not established.

[Section 2-4-601] describes the required content of a notice of hearing. It assures that parties will be fully apprised of the time and place of the hearing, the purpose for the hearing and charges or matters to be considered. [Section 2-4-612(1)] affords parties the right to fully participate in the hearing.

The importance of the record has already been mentioned. In order to avoid unnecessary expense, a transcript of oral proceedings need not be prepared unless requested by a party. The requesting party must pay the expense of the transcript, unless a statute provides to the contrary.

Section 301 [2-4-601, 2-4-603(1), 2-4-612(1), 2-4-614, 2-4-623(2)] is the same as section 9 of the [1961] Revised Model Act with two exceptions. Language is added to [2-4-614] to clarify the requirements regarding the record of oral proceedings and transcript. The words "as evidence" have been added to [2-4-614 (1)(g)] so its provisions will not be interpreted to apply to legal memoranda which may be prepared for a decision maker.

[Section 2-4-611:]

As indicated in [the comment for 2-4-612(2), (3), (5) through (7)], many agencies have little direction with regard to the conduct of hearings. Only a few statutes provide for the appointment of hearing examiners, which may be a useful procedure for busy agencies, as well as for smaller agencies who wish to delegate the hearing function in contested cases to persons they feel to be more qualified to handle such matters.

[Section 2-4-611] expressly gives agencies authority to appoint hearing examiners. [Section 2-4-611] describes the authority which agency members and hearing examiners have in connection with the conduct of hearings. Although the provisions of these two sections may be implied by the nature of the contested case function or from other provisions of the [1971 proposed] MAPA, it is believed desirable that they be expressly stated to give proper guidance to agencies. The requirement that testimony be given under oath or affirmation is included [now at 2-4-612(4)] because of the importance of the record made before the agency in the decisional process and for judicial review.

[Section 2-4-611] relates to voluntary and involuntary disqualification of hearing examiners and agency members. It is felt that this is a matter which should be covered by statute.

[Section 2-4-612:]

[Section 2-4-612(2), (3), (5) through (7):]

Statutory provisions relating to the admission or exclusion of evidence fall into four basic categories: those which require that agencies follow the rules of evidence which courts follow; those which state that agencies are not bound by the rules of evidence; those which are ambiguous; and those which are silent on the subject. The statutes for many agencies fall into the final category. Similarly, many statutes make no reference to the right to cross-examine. These are areas where agencies need specific direction if they are to properly perform the contested case function.

[Section 2-4-612] provides that agencies are not bound by statutory or common law rules of evidence [changed during enactment; see 2-4-612(2)]. This is a substantial departure from section 10(1) of the [1961] Revised Model Act which states that, "rules of evidence as applied in (non-jury) civil cases shall be followed." This requirement is relaxed "when necessary to ascertain facts not reasonably susceptible of proof under those rules." In the latter situation a "prudent man" test is applied. This provision of the [1961] Revised Model Act has been criticized as being confusing even for lawyers to apply.

To a large degree, state administrative agencies are operated by persons who do not have legal training. For this reason, requiring that agency personnel comply with technical rules of evidence is not deemed to be practical or appropriate. Accordingly, this recommendation in the [1961] Revised Model Act, which may be subject to varying interpretations even by lawyers and is subject to an exception which is somewhat nebulous, has not been followed.

It is the author's conclusion that the rules of evidence should not be binding in contested case proceedings unless otherwise provided by statute. However, this does not mean that agencies do not have limitations or guidelines. [Section 2-4-612] provides a standard for admission or exclusion of evidence and expressly limits the extent to which findings may be based upon hearsay evidence [now common law and statutory rules of evidence; see Title 25, chapter 26]. An additional requirement which insures that agencies' findings will be based upon reliable evidence is found in [2-4-704] relating to judicial review. A court may reverse an agency's findings which are "clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative and substantial evidence on the whole record." Thus, the findings of an agency must be based upon reliable evidence, irrespective of the evidence which is admitted during the hearing.

[Section 2-4-612] is patterned after the Model Act and section 303 of Senate Bill No. 179 [1959]. The remaining provisions of [2-4-612] follow the [1961] Revised Model Act in providing for receipt of documentary evidence, cross-examination and official notice. Language is added to [2-4-612] regarding cross-examination to insure that an agency does not receive in evidence documents which are not subject to cross-examination.

As indicated in the previous comment [regarding 2-4-612(2), (3), (5) through (7)], many agencies have little direction with regard to the conduct of hearings. Only a few statutes provide for the appointment of hearing examiners, which may be a useful procedure for busy agencies, as well as for smaller agencies who wish to delegate the hearing function in contested cases to persons they feel to be more qualified to handle such matters.

[Section 2-4-611] expressly gives agencies authority to appoint hearing examiners. [Section 2-4-611] describes the authority which agency members and hearing examiners have in connection with the conduct of hearings. Although the provisions of these two sections may be implied by the nature of the contested case function or from other provisions of the [1971 proposed] MAPA, it is believed desirable that they be expressly stated to give proper guidance to agencies. The requirement that testimony be given under oath or affirmation is included [at 2-4-612(4)] because of the importance of the record made before the agency in the decisional process and for judicial review.

[Section 2-4-611] relates to voluntary and involuntary disqualification of hearing examiners and agency members. It is felt that this is a matter which should be covered by statute.

[Section 2-4-613:]

It has been stated that "it is a fundamental principal of all adjudication, judicial and administrative alike, that the mind of the decider should not be swayed by materials which are not communicated to both parties and which they are not given an opportunity to controvert." [Section 2-4-613] is patterned after section 13 of the [1961] Revised Model Act. The Commissioners' comment gives the following explanation:

"This section is intended to preclude litigious facts reaching the deciding minds without getting into the record. Also precluded is ex parte discussion of the law with the party or his representative. No objection is interposed to discussion of the law with other persons, e.g., the attorney general, or an outside expert."

The words "after issuance of notice of hearing" have been added in [2-4-613] so that it will not be interpreted to apply to preliminary inquiries or investigation made to determine if formal contested case proceedings should be instituted. See the comment following [2-4-102(4)] defining "contested case."

No comparable restriction was found for any state agency.

[Sections 2-4-621, 2-4-622:]

Section 304 [2-4-621, 2-4-622] is identical to section 11 of the [1961] Revised Model Act. The following comment, supplied by the Commissioners, explains the purpose of the section:

The purpose of this section is to make certain that those persons who are responsible for the decision shall have mastered the record, either by hearing the evidence, or reading the record or at the very least receiving briefs and hearing oral argument. It is intended to preclude "signing on the dotted line."

No comparable requirement was found for any state agency.

[Section 2-4-631:]

This section is substantially the same as section 14 of the [1961] Revised Model Act. The words "suspensions, annulment, withdrawal, limitation or amendment" have been added to [2-4-631(1)] and the word "amendment" has been added to [2-4-631(3)]. In addition, the words "required by law" have been substituted for "required" in [2-4-631(1)]. The intent of this section is to specifically include licensing among "contested cases."

With some exceptions, administrative licensing statutes provide for a hearing when a previously issued license is revoked or suspended. The language describing the possible actions that may be taken to revoke, suspend or otherwise effect a license is not as comprehensive as stated in [2-4-631], but usually the right to a hearing is recognized. However, a number of statutes do not provide for a hearing where the initial application for a license is denied. Many of the licensing statutes permit or require agencies to deny licenses on the basis of discretionary considerations. Typical is a provision that an agency may or must deny a license if the applicant is not of "good moral character." Basic principles of fairness and due process require that when an agency bases the denial of a license upon such discretionary considerations, the applicant should have the right to a contested case hearing. The United States Supreme Court and state supreme courts have recognized the right to a hearing in such situations as a matter of constitutional right.

The words "required by law" as used in [2-4-631(1)] have the same broad meaning referred to in the comment under [2-4-102(4)], which defines "contested case." The intent of [2-4-631] is to insure that contested case procedures will be followed in all licensing situations where a hearing is required by statute or as a matter of constitutional right, including the denial of a license on the basis of discretionary considerations.

[Section 2-4-631(3)] provides for summary license suspension where the public health, safety, or welfare is involved.

[Sections 2-4-702 through 704:]

Section 308 [2-4-702 through 2-4-704] provides for the mode and scope of judicial review in contested cases. Under the provisions of subsection 308(a) [2-4-702 (not enacted in proposed form—see Uniform Commissioner's comment in annotations of 2-4-702)] it is the sole mode of review available and pre-existing statutory or common law methods of review are eliminated.

Review is based upon the record made before the agency. The reviewing court may permit a party to submit additional evidence regarding the merits of the case. Such evidence is to be heard and considered by the agency before submission to the court. However, the court may hear evidence relating to alleged procedural irregularities before the agency.

The reviewing court may not substitute its judgment for that of the agency as to the weight of evidence on questions of fact. However, the court may reverse or modify the agency's determination if such findings are "clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record." Specific grounds for challenging the decision of an agency are set forth in [2-4-704].

Section 308 [2-4-702 through 2-4-704] follows section 15 of the [1961] Revised Model Act, with two exceptions. Under section 15(a) of the [1961] Revised Model Act, pre-existing methods of review are not eliminated. The Commissioner's comment indicates that this provision is inserted as a matter of expediency to eliminate opposition to passage of the act, not because it is considered to be the most desirable provision.

The [1961] Revised Model Act does not give any guidance as to the allegations which should be contained in a petition for review. It is believed that minimum requirements should be stated by statute. This has been done in [2-4-702].

Judicial review of agency decisions [is] one of the most confused and troublesome areas in the state administrative procedures. There is a lack of uniformity among agencies as to mode and scope of review. A number of statutes make no mention whatsoever of judicial review. Some mention only the right to appeal or review, but say little or nothing about how it should be accomplished or the extent to which a court may review the agency's findings. The statutes which are more specific with regard to method or scope of review lack uniformity and, in many cases are ambiguous and incomplete. The methods of review specifically provided for include trial de novo, certiorari and injunction.

It is the author's conclusion that there is no justification for the lack of uniformity in judicial review proceedings. This matter is discussed in some detail in the report of the study of state administrative procedures. It would not be practical to restate the discussion here. However, a few words about de novo review are deemed warranted. A number of statutes provide for de novo review specifically, some seem to provide for it by implication, and others specifically prohibit it. De novo review, even where specifically provided for, has no common meaning. Each statute seems to reflect a different concept of the term.

De novo review is abolished under [2-4-702 (not enacted in proposed form—see Uniform Commissioner's comment in annotations of 2-4-702)] along with other pre-existing forms of review because it causes wasteful and costly duplication of effort by courts and agencies. If a party can present a new or substantially different case to a court than was presented to the agency, there is no real purpose in having an agency hearing at all. Such procedures will only encourage parties to withhold evidence at the agency hearing so as not to fully advise the opposition of their case. Orderly administrative procedures should foreclose such practices. The procedural safeguards set forth in the contested case sections of the [1971 proposed] MAPA should eliminate any need which may previously have existed for de novo review.

[Section 2-4-711:]

[Section 2-4-711] contains the same basic provision for appeal of district court decisions to the state supreme court as is contained in the [1961] Revised Model Act. However, specific provision for continuing or discontinuing stays is added. This section is similar to section 307 of Senate Bill No. 179 [1959]."

Severability: Section 25, Ch. 2, Ex. L. 1971, was a severability clause.

Repealer: Section 24, Ch. 2, Ex. L. 1971, read: "Repeal of inconsistent provisions. All laws or parts of laws in conflict herewith are hereby repealed to the extent of such conflict."

Effective Date: Section 26, Ch. 2, Ex. L. 1971, read: "Time of taking effect. This act shall take effect on December 31, 1972, except that pending proceedings shall not be affected."

Title 1, chapter 3, subchapter 2, ARM Model organizational and procedural rules required by Montana Administrative Procedure Act.

Chapter Case Notes

No Common-Law Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Requirement Imposed for Purposes of ERISA Claim: Eldredge brought suit against ASARCO for failure to pay him a retirement benefit pursuant to the company's "70/80" retirement benefit plan. ASARCO claimed that Eldredge had failed to exhaust his administrative remedies. The Supreme Court found that while the Employee Retirement Income Security Act contained no requirement for exhaustion of remedies, the federal courts imposed a "prudential" exhaustion requirement but allowed exceptions to that requirement. The Supreme Court declined to impose the requirement because ASARCO had filed nothing with the District Court to explain the extent or application of the exhaustion requirement other than to make one claim that the requirement existed. Eldredge v. ASARCO, Inc., 2011 MT 80, 360 Mont. 112, 252 P.3d 182.

Federal Self-Employment Tax Not Considered Income Tax and Not Deductible in Calculating Montana Net Income — No Administrative Rule Required to Explain Denial of Tax Deduction When Deduction Not Explicitly Provided: The federal income tax and the federal self-employment tax are distinct entities, despite their colocation in the federal tax code and their conjoined collection procedures. The self-employment tax, although based on income, is in the nature of an employment tax and is a Social Security tax rather than an income tax as that term is commonly understood. Montana has the authority to interpret its own tax code without being bound by the vagaries of the federal tax code. Therefore, federal income tax, as used in 15-30-121(1)(b) (renumbered 15-30-2131(1)(b)), does not include federal self-employment taxes for purposes of calculating net income on Montana tax returns. Further, the Department of Revenue is not required to promulgate a rule explaining the denial of a tax deduction that is not explicitly provided for in the tax code. Baitis v. Dept. of Revenue, 2004 MT 17, 319 M 292, 83 P3d 1278 (2004).

Principles of Construction of Rules Generally Same as for Statutes: The court generally applies the same principles in construing administrative rules as are applicable in interpreting statutes. Thus, the court first looks to the plain language of the rule. Bean v. Bd. of Labor Appeals, 270 M 253, 891 P2d 516, 52 St. Rep. 169 (1995).

No Departmental Rulemaking Authority Regarding Water Claims — Jurisdiction in Water Courts — Rulemaking Reserved to Supreme Court: Legislation in 1979 placed the procedure for adjudication of water claims in the Water Courts and reserved the power of rulemaking with respect to pending judicial proceedings to the Supreme Court. Lacking express legislative authority, neither the Board nor Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has any rulemaking authority with respect to procedures in the adjudication of water rights before the Water Courts, and the Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not supply such authority. Functions of the Department respecting water claims are limited to rendering assistance to the Water Judges as set out in 85-2-243. In re Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 226 M 221, 740 P2d 1096, 44 St. Rep. 604 (1987).

Confidentiality Rule of Medical Legal Panel — Panel Not Subject to MAPA: Plaintiffs who filed a claim with the Montana Medical Legal Panel alleging malpractice against two doctors requested a stenographic record of the hearing. The doctors opposed the request, and the Panel chairman ruled that under Rule 15(c), Panel Rules of Procedure, no transcript would be made. Plaintiffs then applied to the District Court for a Writ of Mandamus, and the court ruled that denial of the transcript violated due process under the 14th amendment of the U.S. Constitution and Art. II, sec. 17., Mont. Const. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that the language of 27-6-502 indicated legislative intent that the Montana Administrative Procedure Act provisions concerning transcripts do not apply. The court held that the Panel is a purely advisory body and therefore confidential. Given its confidential nature, it cannot be said that Rule 15(c) arbitrarily denies parties a transcript or that denial of a transcript destroys the right to fully cross-examine witnesses at trial. The court found no constitutional infirmities in the workings of Rule 15(c); therefore, the District Court was reversed. State ex rel. Hufford v. Mont. Medical Legal Panel, 223 M 73, 724 P2d 186, 43 St. Rep. 1541 (1986).

Inapplicable to Unemployment Benefits Process: The Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not apply to agency and court handling of claims for unemployment insurance benefits. Billings v. Bd. of Labor Appeals, 204 M 38, 663 P2d 1167, 40 St. Rep. 648 (1983).

Administrative Rule Void When Contrary to Longstanding Administrative Interpretation: The Department of Revenue's longstanding administrative interpretation of the meaning of "on the same street" as used in 16-3-306 has the force and effect of law due to the repeated reenactment of that section by the Legislature without change in the operative language that no license be issued to a business "on the same street" and within 600 feet of a church or school. Thus the interpretation could not be changed, and an administrative rule making a change is invalid. Hovey v. Dept. of Revenue, 203 M 27, 659 P2d 280, 40 St. Rep. 272 (1983).

Preliminary Environmental Review — Hearing Requirements: Neither the Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA) nor the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) requires a hearing in a preliminary environmental review. Titeca v. St., 194 M 209, 634 P2d 1156, 38 St. Rep. 1533 (1981).

Authority to Adopt Rules Not Conferred: The Montana Administrative Procedure Act alone does not confer authority to adopt rules; it merely outlines the correct procedure an agency must use once the agency has been granted statutory power to adopt rules. Bradco Supply Co. v. Larsen, 183 M 97, 598 P2d 596 (1979).

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 320 inserted (3) excluding the state compensation insurance fund from MAPA after July 1, 2016, and providing for applicability of administrative rules. Amendment effective January 1, 2016.

Applicability: Section 25, Ch. 320, L. 2015, provided that this section applies to rates that are effective on or after July 1, 2016, for new and renewal policies.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 152 inserted (2) describing the purposes of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 3, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 152, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, on November 6, 2007, the Montana Supreme Court issued its opinion in the case of Montana Society of Anesthesiologists v. Montana Board of Nursing, 2007 MT 290, 339 Mont. 472, 171 P.3d 704 (2007) (MSA opinion), holding that a nurse anesthetist may practice without direct supervision by an anesthesiologist M.D.; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Society of Anesthesiologists (MSA) challenged the legality of an administrative rule adopted by the Montana Board of Nursing, alleging, among other things, that the rule was adopted without a sufficient statement of reasonable necessity, as required by section 2-4-305(6)(b), MCA, of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA); and

WHEREAS, in the MSA opinion, the Montana Supreme Court held that because MAPA, in section 2-4-305(7), MCA, requires that rules must be adopted in "substantial compliance" with MAPA and because the Montana Supreme Court had previously held that substantial compliance has occurred if the purpose of MAPA has been fulfilled, the defective notice of proposed rulemaking substantially complied with MAPA because the purpose of MAPA is to give public notice of the adoption of a rule and that adequate notice had been given by the Board of Nursing; and

WHEREAS, under the rationale employed by the Montana Supreme Court in the MSA opinion, every rule adopted by an agency could be found to be in substantial compliance with MAPA since every notice of proposed rulemaking gives some notice of a proposed rule adoption, amendment, or repeal; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature intends that a determination of whether MAPA's substantial compliance requirement in section 2-4-305(7), MCA, has been satisfied requires an analysis of more than whether an agency provided adequate public notice of its proposed rule, but rather requires an analysis of whether the agency complied with 2-4-302, 2-4-303, 2-4-305, or 2-4-306, MCA; and

WHEREAS, enactment of this legislation is not intended by the Legislature as a comment upon the outcome of the MSA opinion, but rather is intended to change the analysis used by the courts when determining whether MAPA's substantial compliance requirement, found in section 2-4-305(7), MCA, has been satisfied in future cases."

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 64 in definition of agency in (a)(i) substituted current text concerning exemption for "the state board of pardons and parole, except that the board is subject to the requirements of 2-4-103, 2-4-201, 2-4-202, and 2-4-306 and its rules must be published in the ARM and the register". Amendment effective October 1, 2015.

Termination Provision Repealed — Code Commissioner Explanation: Section 1, Ch. 179, L. 2015, repealed sec. 6, Ch. 318, L. 2013, which terminated the 2013 amendments to this section July 1, 2015. Effective October 1, 2015.

Because Ch. 179 did not have an effective date, it takes effect on October 1, 2015, which is after the July 1, 2015, termination date, so the 2013 amendments could potentially be construed to have terminated. Because the sole purpose of Ch. 179, L. 2015, was to make the 2013 amendments to this section permanent, the code commissioner has not terminated the 2013 amendments.

2013 Amendment: Chapter 318 inserted definition of small business; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2013, and terminates July 1, 2015.

Saving Clause: Section 3, Ch. 318, L. 2013, was a saving clause.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 2 in definition of rule in (b)(i) substituted "statewide accounting, budgeting, and human resource system" for "statewide budgeting and accounting system"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 181 in definition of rule in (b)(i) near beginning after "agency" inserted "or state government" and at end inserted "including rules implementing the state personnel classification plan, the state wage and salary plan, or the statewide budgeting and accounting system" and deleted former (e) that read: "(e) rules implementing the state personnel classification plan, the state wage and salary plan, or the statewide budgeting and accounting system"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 19 substituted definition of administrative rule review committee for definition of administrative code committee that was provided for in Title 5, chapter 14. Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 349 in definition of agency, under entities excepted from the provisions of Title 2, chapter 4, inserted (a)(v) providing "the public service commission when conducting arbitration proceedings pursuant to 47 U.S.C. 252 and 69-3-837". Amendment effective April 22, 1997.

Chapter 489 inserted definitions of interested person and significant interest to the public; and made minor changes in style.

Severability: Section 39, Ch. 349, L. 1997, was a severability clause.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 546 in (2)(a)(i), after "state board of pardons", inserted "and parole"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Saving Clause: Section 571, Ch. 546, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendment: In (10)(d), in two places, after "annually", inserted "or biennially"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 4, 1991.

1985 Amendment — Retroactive Application: Inserted language listing entities that definition of agency does not include.

Section 2, Ch. 671, L. 1985, provided: "Section 1 shall apply as of December 31, 1972, except that proceedings pending on that date are not affected."

Administrative Code Committee Bill: Senate Bill No. 13, Ch. 671, L. 1985, clarifying the definition of "agency", was introduced by request of the Administrative Code Committee. See Administrative Code Committee Report, December 1984, Montana Legislative Council.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 671, L. 1985, provided: "WHEREAS, the Montana Supreme Court has held in recent opinions that the Montana Administrative Procedure Act applies to school districts; and

WHEREAS, it is clear from the language of section 2-4-102(2), MCA, as originally enacted, and from the 1971 official comments of the Administrative Procedures Subcommittee recommending the enactment of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act that the Act was never intended to apply to units of local government, school districts, or any other political subdivisions; and

WHEREAS, substantial confusion could result if the provisions of the Act are continued to be applied to any government entity other than state agencies; and

WHEREAS, it is the intent of the Legislature that the Act be applied only to those agencies of state government provided for in the Act and the belief of the Legislature that the Act was never intended to apply to units of local government, school districts, or any other political subdivisions of the state.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of this bill to clarify that the Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not apply to units of local government, school districts, or any other political subdivisions of this state."

Retroactive Application: Section 2, Ch. 671, L. 1985, provided: "Retroactive Application. Section 1 shall apply as of December 31, 1972, except that proceedings pending on that date are not affected."

Rubric Weighing Privacy Constituted Rule — Subject to MAPA Requirements: A rubric specifying criteria for concluding whether the individual rights of privacy of certain telecommunications carriers employees outweighed the public's right to know for the purposes of determining whether the employees' compensation would be publicly disclosed constituted a rule within the meaning of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA). Because the Public Service Commission did not follow MAPA's rulemaking process, the rubric was held invalid for its failure to comply with MAPA's rulemaking requirements. S. Mont. Tel. Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2017 MT 123, 387 Mont. 415, 395 P.3d 473.

Hearing on School Territory Transfer — Error for Superintendent to Allow Unsworn Testimony: A school board petitioned the County Superintendent of Schools to transfer property from a neighboring school district to its school district. The other school district opposed the transfer of property. A Deputy County Superintendent conducted a hearing on the matter, and numerous individuals testified. Although none of those who testified was under oath, the opposing school district did not object to the testimony. After the Superintendent approved the transfer, the opposing school district appealed to the District Court, which upheld the transfer. The opposing school district then appealed to the Supreme Court, which reversed, holding that even though the opposing school district had not objected at the hearing, the Deputy Superintendent had erred in allowing testimony of unsworn witnesses. In re Petition to Transfer Territory from Poplar Elementary School District No. 9 to Froid Elementary School District No. 65, 2015 MT 278, 381 Mont. 145, 364 P.3d 1222.

Conservation District Afforded Public Fundamentally Fair Participation in Process: Though exempt from the dictates of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act as a political subdivision of the state, the conservation district followed its own rules, provided notice, and allowed an extended opportunity for the submission of oral and written information in deciding Mitchell Slough's status under The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, also known as the "310 Law", Title 75, chapter 7, part 1. Bitterroot River Protective Assoc., Inc. v. Bitterroot Conserv. Dist., 2008 MT 377, 346 M 507, 198 P3d 219 (2008).

District Court Erred in Affirming Conservation District's Determination Regarding Mitchell Slough: The District Court's narrow, technical definition of "natural" as meaning "in the absence of any man-made manipulation" and resulting conclusions led to errors of law. The totality of the circumstances of the factual record should have been considered in determining whether the Mitchell Slough is a "natural, perennial-flowing stream or river" for the purpose of Title 75, chapter 7, part 1. Bitterroot River Protective Assoc., Inc. v. Bitterroot Conserv. Dist., 2008 MT 377, 346 M 507, 198 P3d 219 (2008).

Complaint of School Use of Indian Mascots — Montana Commission for Human Rights Proper Forum for Claim of Unlawful Discrimination: Dupuis brought a discrimination claim against a reservation school district for using mascots allegedly degrading to Indian students. Without ruling on whether the use of the mascots was degrading, the Supreme Court held that Dupuis's remedy for a human dignity and racial discrimination case was to bring a claim before the Montana Commission for Human Rights before bringing an action in District Court. Failure to exhaust administrative remedies precluded the Supreme Court's consideration of the discrimination claims. Dupuis v. Ronan School District No. 30, 2006 MT 3, 330 M 232, 128 P3d 1010 (2006).

Definition of "Rule" Includes Policy Not Adopted as Rule — Unadopted Policy Not Effective as Law — Criminal Prosecution Based on Policy Not Adopted as Rule Barred: Vainio, an optometrist serving Medicaid clients, was prosecuted criminally for his violation of several Medicaid policies that had not been adopted as administrative rules by the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) under the procedure provided in the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA). Although convicted by the District Court, in part because 45-6-313 provided that a person commits the offense of Medicaid fraud if the person obtains a Medicaid payment for submitting a claim in violation of applicable "policies", the Supreme Court held that the language of that section had to be reconciled with the provisions of MAPA requiring that policies be adopted as rules in order to make those policies enforceable. The court cited the definition of a "rule" and held that an administrative policy cannot have legal effect independent of a rule and, because the conviction was based upon the violation of a policy as set forth in a DPHHS letter to Vainio, the Supreme Court reversed Vainio's conviction. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001), following NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676 (1986), and Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177 (1993), and distinguishing Huether v. District Court, 2000 MT 158, 300 M 212, 4 P3d 1193 (2000).

Nonrenewal of Teacher Contract — No Constitutionally Protected Interest or Right to Administrative Hearing: Roos's teaching contract was not renewed, and the school district's motion to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction was upheld by the state superintendent and the District Court. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The basis for Roos's complaint was that the school district violated its own policy that nonrenewed teachers be notified of the decision by May 1, even though 20-4-206 requires notification by June 1, and that because the school policy granted greater protection than state law, an administrative hearing on the issue was appropriate.

Nevertheless, the appeal failed. Roos did not allege any violation of state statute that grants an administrative hearing or constitutionally protected interest. Thus, the District Court properly held that the County Superintendent of Schools did not have jurisdiction to hear Roos's claims as a contested complaint. Roos v. Kircher Pub. School Bd. of Trustees, School District No. 3, 2004 MT 48, 320 M 128, 86 P3d 39 (2004), followed, with respect to a County Superintendent's lack of jurisdiction over a matter absent a constitutional or statutory right to a hearing, in Dupuis v. Ronan School District No. 30, 2006 MT 3, 330 M 232, 128 P3d 1010 (2006). See also Irving v. School District No. 1-1A, 248 M 460, 813 P2d 417 (1991).

Federal Self-Employment Tax Not Considered Income Tax and Not Deductible in Calculating Montana Net Income — No Administrative Rule Required to Explain Denial of Tax Deduction When Deduction Not Explicitly Provided: The federal income tax and the federal self-employment tax are distinct entities, despite their colocation in the federal tax code and their conjoined collection procedures. The self-employment tax, although based on income, is in the nature of an employment tax and is a Social Security tax rather than an income tax as that term is commonly understood. Montana has the authority to interpret its own tax code without being bound by the vagaries of the federal tax code. Therefore, federal income tax, as used in 15-30-121(1)(b) (renumbered 15-30-2131(1)(b)), does not include federal self-employment taxes for purposes of calculating net income on Montana tax returns. Further, the Department of Revenue is not required to promulgate a rule explaining the denial of a tax deduction that is not explicitly provided for in the tax code. Baitis v. Dept. of Revenue, 2004 MT 17, 319 M 292, 83 P3d 1278 (2004).

Challenge of Environmental Assessment — No Jurisdiction for Administrative Review: A grain company sought a permit to build a high-speed grain loading terminal near Pompeys Pillar national monument. The permit was granted and plaintiff, a nonprofit association supporting the monument's preservation, began administrative proceedings in an effort to overturn the permit issuance on grounds that the Department of Environmental Quality erred in its preparation of the environmental assessment related to the permit. An administrative law judge concluded that the Department acted arbitrarily and capriciously by issuing a permit without preparing an environmental impact statement. The Department filed exceptions to the administrative law judge's conclusions with the Board of Environmental Review. The Board ultimately affirmed the Department's decision to issue the permit, and plaintiff appealed to District Court. The Department contended that because the challenge to the administrative decisions did not contain any air quality issues, but only addressed environmental assessment issues governed by the Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA), and that because MEPA does not provide for administrative review of challenges to MEPA compliance, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. The District Court agreed and dismissed plaintiff's petition for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Had plaintiff challenged air quality issues, it would have been entitled to administrative proceedings. However, plaintiff's challenge pertained only to issues related to the environmental assessment, which is governed by MEPA. MEPA requires that a compliance challenge be brought in District Court, rather than through administrative proceedings. Thus, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. Plaintiff's petition was properly dismissed. Pompeys Pillar Historical Ass'n v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2002 MT 352, 313 M 401, 61 P3d 148 (2002).

Veterans Administration (Now Department of Veterans Affairs) Per Diem Payments to Be Reported as Third-Party Liability Payments for Medicaid Reimbursement — Reasonable Administrative Rule Defining Third Party: A longstanding administrative rule of the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS), ARM 46.12.304 (renumbered ARM 37.85.407), required monthly Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) per diem payments to be reported as third-party liability payments that would result in a reduction of Medicaid reimbursements. Plaintiff challenged the interpretation of the administrative rule with the Board of Public Assistance, which confirmed DPHHS's interpretation, and the District Court affirmed the finding of the Board. On appeal to the Supreme Court, plaintiff asserted that it was not required to report its receipt of monthly Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs) per diem payments as anything other than a subsidy to offset against its general operating expenses. The Supreme Court found that the plain meaning of the rule provided specific notice that a public agency will be considered a third party if it is liable to pay all or part of the cost of medical treatment and medical-related services for a person's personal injury, disease, or illness. The rule sufficiently identified entities considered third parties, which included the Veterans Administration (now Department of Veterans Affairs). DPHHS's interpretation of the rule lay within the range of reasonable interpretation permitted by the wording of the rule and was not plainly inconsistent with the spirit or plain language of the rule. Therefore, DPHHS's interpretation was correct, and the District Court did not err in holding that the decision of the Board of Public Assistance affirming DPHHS's interpretation was legally correct. Glendive Medical Center, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2002 MT 131, 310 M 156, 49 P3d 560 (2002).

Standing of Local Air Pollution Control Board to Challenge Validity of State Administrative Rules: A local pollution control board is a person within the statutory definition in this section, and in the same way as a citizen of a local area is more particularly affected by actions of the state Board of Environmental Review than is a citizen of another area, the interest of a local board is distinguishable from and greater than the interest of the public generally. Because of threatened injury to a local board in the form of potential economic harm from additional expenses necessary to implement state administrative rules, a local board has standing to challenge the validity of administrative rules concerning air pollution applicable within its area of jurisdiction. Missoula City-County Air Pollution Control Bd. v. Bd. of Envtl. Review, 282 M 255, 937 P2d 463, 54 St. Rep. 338 (1997), followed in Mont. Envtl. Information Center v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 1999 MT 248, 296 M 207, 988 P2d 1236, 56 St. Rep. 964 (1999).

County Standing to Sue State Over Improperly Adopted Administrative Rule: The Department of Revenue directed county tax assessors to change their method of appraising the value of heavy equipment. The change in method would have resulted in substantial loss of revenue to counties. After receiving objections from the counties, the Department scheduled a public hearing, and after the hearing adopted an administrative rule requiring use of the new valuation method despite the potential loss of revenue to the counties. Rosebud County brought suit, alleging that the rule was invalid because the Department had failed to follow the statutory procedure for adopting administrative rules. The Department argued that the county could not sue another branch of state government and also could not bring suit because it had not suffered any damage. The Supreme Court ruled that the county could sue another state entity because it was seeking declaratory relief not damages and that the county had standing because it was facing potential loss of revenue. The court also affirmed the lower court's ruling that the administrative rule was invalid because the Department had not followed the proper procedure in adopting the rule. Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177, 50 St. Rep. 281 (1993).

No Departmental Rulemaking Authority Regarding Water Claims — Jurisdiction in Water Courts — Rulemaking Reserved to Supreme Court: Legislation in 1979 placed the procedure for adjudication of water claims in the Water Courts and reserved the power of rulemaking with respect to pending judicial proceedings to the Supreme Court. Lacking express legislative authority, neither the Board nor Department of Natural Resources and Conservation has any rulemaking authority with respect to procedures in the adjudication of water rights before the Water Courts, and the Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not supply such authority. Functions of the Department respecting water claims are limited to rendering assistance to the Water Judges as set out in 85-2-243. In re Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 226 M 221, 740 P2d 1096, 44 St. Rep. 604 (1987).

Administrative Decision to Include Overflight Mileage in Tax Apportionment Formula — Must Be Rule — Noncompliance With MAPA: The unilateral administrative decision of a Department of Revenue auditor to include an airline's nonstop flyover mileage in the numerator of the statutory apportionment formula qualified as a rule under 2-4-102 and was subject to the notice and hearing requirements of 2-4-302 in order to be valid under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676, 43 St. Rep. 959 (1986).

Contested Case — Requirement for Judicial Review — Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Plaintiff, a nursing home operator, was notified by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) that it was disallowing certain nursing care costs claimed by plaintiff. The Department notified plaintiff that a hearing could be requested under the Department's administrative rules. Plaintiff requested time extensions in which to submit objections, and the Department agreed. The Department finally set a time limitation that plaintiff did not meet. The Department then filed its reimbursement rate for plaintiff. Plaintiff filed a complaint in District Court for judicial review of the Department's determination. The District Court dismissed the case. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that only a party who has exhausted all administrative remedies is entitled to judicial review if aggrieved in a contested case. A contested case is a determination of legal rights after an opportunity for hearing. Because there was no hearing in this case, dismissal was proper. B.G.M. Enterprises v. St., 673 P2d 1205, 40 St. Rep. 1827 (1983) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports).

P.S.C. Motor Carrier Certificate Issuance Not Contested Case: Where District Court nullified Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) Class D motor carrier certificate and appellant contended the court had no jurisdiction since the judicial review leading to the nullification had not been initiated within 30 days of the administrative action, as required by 2-4-702(2)(a), Supreme Court held that 2-4-702 applies only to contested cases, that P.S.C. certificate issuing process is not a contested case, and that hence 30-day limitation did not apply in this case. In re Application of Galt, 196 M 534, 644 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 106 (1982).

Dismissal of Tenured Teacher — Procedure Within MAPA: The County Superintendent of Schools and the State Superintendent of Public Instruction come under the definition of "agency" within the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) (decided prior to 1985 amendment of "agency" definition), and the decision not to award a contract to a tenured teacher is a "contested case" under MAPA. Yanzick v. School District, 196 M 375, 641 P2d 431, 39 St. Rep. 191 (1982).

Right of Judicial Review of Administrative Action: Under this chapter, the right of judicial review attaches only to a contested case proceeding. The court found no statutory or constitutional right of a terminated state employee to a hearing, although she had been given one; hence, the grievance proceeding was not a contested case under this chapter, and no right of judicial review attached. Nye v. Dept. of Livestock, 196 M 222, 639 P2d 498, 39 St. Rep. 49 (1982).

Effect of Department Manual — Jury Instruction on Negligence as Matter of Law: Plaintiff contended that it was error to refuse to instruct the jury that the State and Burlington Northern were negligent as a matter of law in failing to place signals on the railroad crossing where the accident occurred in conformity with the Department of Highways' Manual on Traffic Control Devices. (The Department of Highways became the Department of Transportation in 1991.) The manual, however, does not have equal dignity with statutory law. Before the defendants can be charged with negligence in violating the manual, it must first be determined: (1) that the crossing was extrahazardous; and (2) that failure to install additional warning signals was the proximate cause of plaintiff's injuries. These were questions of fact for the jury since conflicting evidence was offered at trial, so no error was committed by failing to give the requested instructions. Penn v. Burlington N., Inc., 185 M 223, 605 P2d 600 (1980).

No Hearing Required Before Issuance of Permit: The Hard Rock Mining Act (HRMA) does not provide for public participation in the decisionmaking process that precedes the issuance of a permit. Further, at the time pertinent events transpired, HRMA did not provide opportunity for hearing prior to issuance of a permit. Thus, the constitutional right to participation and the contested hearing provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act are not invoked. Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

Job Classification — No Participation by Employing Agency: The statutes and rules governing job classification procedures do not contemplate participation by the employing agency other than the opportunity for input into the Personnel Division's decision. If and when the dispute reaches step four of the formal appeals procedure, the employee represents his interests, and the Personnel Division, through its Classification Bureau, represents the interests of the state. The employing agency not being a "party" under this section, the Board of Personnel Appeals had no clear legal duty and no authority to hear its objections. State ex rel. St. Tax Appeal Bd. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 181 M 366, 593 P2d 747 (1979).

Hearing on Corporate License Tax Deficiency Assessment — Not a "Contested Case": The hearing contemplated by 15-31-503 regarding a corporate license tax deficiency is not a "contested case" as defined by this section and hence is not governed by the Montana Administrative Procedure Act because 15-31-503 does not provide for a true adversary hearing, but only for a presentation of additional evidence by taxpayer and a reconsideration by the Department of Revenue of the administrative procedures used to calculate the tax deficiency. W.R. Grace & Co. v. Dept. of Revenue, 173 M 339, 567 P2d 913 (1977).

Metropolitan Police Commission — Not a State Agency: Though city Police Commissions are creations of state law, they are obviously entities of municipal government. The metropolitan Police Commission is not an agency "of state government" as used in the definition of agency in this section; hence, the Montana Administrative Procedure Act is not applicable to the administrative functions of the Police Commission. Miskovich v. Helena, 170 M 138, 551 P2d 995 (1976).

Attorney General's Opinions

Centralized Intake System Authorized — Fulfillment of Reporting Requirements Absent Properly Adopted Administrative Rule: By amendment in 2001, the Legislature required the Department of Public Health and Human Services to assess reports of child abuse or neglect in order to determine whether investigation or some lesser response is appropriate and granted the Department the authority to determine the appropriate response time, but did not specify how the Department was to implement the legislation. The Department developed the centralized intake system as the method to meet the statutory directive. However, the Department established the system without formal adoption as an administrative rule. Because the centralized intake system implements a law and affects private rights or procedures available to the public, the Attorney General held that the system is a rule, subject to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. Thus, until adopted as an administrative rule, the centralized intake system may not be used to restrict which Department personnel may receive a report. Further, counties are no longer involved in providing child protective services, so they are no longer local affiliates of the Department, as the term is used in 41-3-201. Therefore, mandatory reporters may fulfill their reporting obligations by reporting child abuse and neglect to a local child protective services worker or supervisor or to the Department through the Centralized Intake Bureau. 50 A.G. Op. 4 (2004).

Proceedings of Workers' Compensation Board of Directors Subject to Montana Administrative Procedure Act: The Board of Directors of the Montana self-insurers guaranty fund fits the definition of "agency" in state law. The fund is considered a public organization because it a public purpose and because it has been granted statutory authority to adopt public rules and to enter public contracts. Therefore, when the Board adopts rules or resolves contested cases, it must comply with the provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. 46 A.G. Op. 1 (1995).

Construction Standards — Interpretive Rules: Title 50, ch. 53, authorizes the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to adopt interpretive rules, which do not have the force of law, concerning construction standards relating to safety for public swimming pools generally. A court may give interpretive rules the force of law if it is so pursuaded, but it is free to substitute its judgment for that of the agency. See 2 K. Davis, Administrative Law Treatise, § 7.10 (2d ed. 1979). 39 A.G. Op. 18 (1981).

Department Rules Upheld — Leave Time — Agency Interpretation Entitled to Substantial Weight: The Department of Administration's comprehensive set of rules, adopted under Title 2, ch. 18, part 6, explicitly recognizes that vacation and sick leave credits are accrued on an hourly basis. In construing statutes, the interpretation of the administrative body is entitled to substantial weight. Here, agency's interpretation was applied to public employees at the local level. 39 A.G. Op. 15 (1981).

Department — State Plan: A state plan prepared by the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) pursuant to federal law is a "rule" as defined in this section and is therefore subject to the requirements of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. 35 A.G. Op. 8 (1973).

Department of Administration — Management Memoranda: The Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not apply to management memoranda issued by the Department pursuant to some of its financial and management duties. 35 A.G. Op. 2 (1973).

Medical Reports Considered: The workers' compensation court properly considered unsworn written medical reports without violating Montana Rules of Evidence regarding hearsay, since the court is not bound by common law and statutory rules of evidence. Claimant's right to cross-examination was not violated because she had the opportunity at the hearing to present rebutting medical evidence and, as provided by this section, she could have called the doctors as witnesses at the hearing. The statutes for some state agencies specifically provide for the right to counsel. It is felt that such a provision for all agencies is appropriate.

Case Notes

Abuse of Discretion in Failure to Reference Statutory Judicial Review Provisions in Administrative Order Addressing Child Support Enforcement — Due Process Violation Constituting Reversible Error: The mother filed a petition with the Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) for assistance in obtaining child support from the father. CSED initiated an administrative action to determine the amount of support owing, and an administrative law judge conducted a contested case hearing on the issue and entered an order establishing the father's current and past-due child support obligation. The order included a paragraph notifying the parents of their statutory right to petition for judicial review of the administrative decision under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7 (MAPA), but did not reference 40-5-253, which contains more specific procedural requirements for appealing from an administrative decision in a child support enforcement case than the provisions in MAPA. The father filed a petition for judicial review and mailed copies to the mother and CSED but failed to properly serve the parties as required in 40-5-253. The District Court concluded that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction because the father failed to comply with 40-5-253. The court dismissed the petition. The father moved the court to amend or reconsider the petition, contending that the application of 40-5-253 violated his due process rights because he did not receive sufficient notice of the procedures by which to obtain judicial review of the administrative decision. The motion was denied, but the court nevertheless subsequently entered another order correcting the clerical error by adding a reference to 40-5-253 to the notice provision of the earlier order and then granted CSED's motion to dismiss. The father appealed. The Supreme Court noted that proper service of a petition for judicial review was a threshold requirement for the District Court to obtain jurisdiction in this case and that under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7, a petition for judicial review may be properly served by mailing copies to the agency and other parties, but there is no requirement that a summons be issued and served in conjunction with the petition. By filing the petition for judicial review and mailing copies to the mother and CSED, the father fulfilled the service requirements of MAPA and Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469 (1996). However, specific statutory requirements prevail over general provisions such as those in MAPA, and the Supreme Court agreed that the portion of the notice informing the father that MAPA would govern the proceedings was misleading, absent any reference to the different, specific procedural requirements for CSED actions under 40-5-253. The Supreme Court adopted federal interpretations of the due process notice requirements in this regard, which provide that the opportunity to be heard is not meaningful if the notice provided does not accurately inform the person to whom it is given of how to take advantage of that opportunity. The notice provisions in the administrative order did not provide father with adequate notice to meet due process requirements, so application of 40-5-253 would violate the father's due process rights. Under these unique circumstances, it was required that the father's petition for judicial review must be governed by the service requirements of MAPA and Hilands. Those requirements were met, so the District Court did acquire subject matter jurisdiction and abused its discretion in dismissing the father's petition for judicial review based on his failure to comply with 40-5-253. The case was reversed for further proceedings under MAPA. Pickens v. Shelton-Thompson, 2000 MT 131, 300 M 16, 3 P3d 603, 57 St. Rep. 543 (2000), followed in In re Support Obligation of McGurran v. Petition for Judicial Review of Contested Case — Service on Parties Under Former Rule 5(b) Held Sufficient: Ashmore brought a claim before the Human Rights Commission, alleging that she had been discriminated against by Hilands Golf Club because of her gender, in violation of 49-2-304. The Commission found in favor of Ashmore and awarded her relief. Hilands filed a petition for judicial review pursuant to 2-4-702 and served copies of the petition by mail upon counsel for the Commission and Hilands. No summons was served with the petition, and no service was made upon the Attorney General. Ashmore filed a motion to dismiss under former Rule 12(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), alleging that no jurisdiction had been obtained over the Commission by service of a summons upon the Attorney General, contrary to the holding in Fife v. Martin, 261 M 471, 863 P2d 403 (1993). The District Court granted the motion. The Supreme Court reversed, overruling Fife and holding that because judicial review pursuant to 2-4-702 is in the nature of an appeal, in which jurisdiction over the parties has already been established, service of a summons with the petition is unnecessary and holding that the petition may be served upon the parties by mail under former Rule 5(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). The Supreme Court noted that it was sufficient to mail a copy of the petition upon the parties and the agency, whether or not the agency had been a party to the administrative proceeding. Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469, 53 St. Rep. 664 (1996), followed in Forsythe v. Great Falls Holdings, LLC, 2008 MT 384, 347 M 67, 196 P3d 1233 (2008).

Time for Filing of Petition for Judicial Review — Time of "Service" of Final Agency Decision Defined: Following proceedings in an administrative action before the Public Service Commission, the Commission mailed a copy of its decision to MCI on May 19, 1992, but MCI did not receive the decision until May 21, 1992. On June 19, 1992, MCI filed its petition for judicial review under 2-4-702. The District Court dismissed the petition as being untimely filed. The Supreme Court held that 2-4-702 did not define the time of "service" at which the 30-day period for filing a petition for review began to run. This section requires that former Rule 6(e), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), be applied to define when service by mail is complete for administrative decisions. Former Rule 6(e) required that when service is made by mail, an additional 3 days must be added to the time for taking action. Thus, the time for judicial review began to run on May 23, and MCI's petition was filed within the 30-day time period provided by 2-4-702. MCI Telecommunications Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 260 M 175, 858 P2d 364, 50 St. Rep. 989 (1993), followed in Molnar v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2008 MT 49, 341 M 420, 177 P3d 1048 (2008), and distinguished in In re Support of McGurran, 1999 MT 192, 295 M 357, 983 P2d 968, 56 St. Rep. 741 (1999).

Service of Petition on Agency for Judicial Review — Rules Not Applicable: Since 2-4-702 requires "prompt" service on an agency of a petition for judicial review of the agency's decision in District Court, the 3-year time limit of former Rule 41(e) (replaced by former Rule 4E), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), does not apply. Rierson v. St., 188 M 522, 614 P2d 1020 (1980).

Case Notes

Reversal of Conviction for Medicaid Fraud Based on Violation of Improperly Adopted Administrative Policy: Vainio, an optometrist, was charged with three counts of Medicaid fraud under 45-6-313. The jury found Vainio guilty, and the District Court concluded as a matter of law that a violation of the administrative policies at issue formed a criminal act. On appeal, Vainio argued that by criminalizing violations of administrative policies that were not formally promulgated as rules, 45-6-313 contravened the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), Title 2, ch. 4, and that policies that were not promulgated according to MAPA lacked the force of law. The state contended that because 45-6-313 specifically refers to violations of "policies", it was not necessary for those policies to be embodied in a rule promulgated pursuant to MAPA.

The Supreme Court agreed with Vainio. The use of the term "policies" in 45-6-313 is limited to those policies that have been formally adopted as rules pursuant to MAPA. The fact that 45-6-313 does not expressly reference MAPA does not mean that Medicaid providers can be criminally prosecuted for violating the state's informal policies. Further, 45-6-313 does not have to expressly reference MAPA for MAPA to apply; rather, MAPA must be followed because 45-6-313 does not expressly repudiate it. When the Legislature authorizes an agency to adopt rules, the procedures mandated by MAPA apply regardless of whether the authorizing statute refers to MAPA. The practices for which Vainio was convicted were not prohibited by rules adopted in compliance with MAPA and in effect at the time of the alleged offenses and thus were not illegal, so the convictions were reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001), following NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676 (1986), and Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177 (1993), and distinguishing Huether v. District Court, 2000 MT 158, 300 M 212, 4 P3d 1193 (2000).

Montana Administrative Procedure Act Inapplicable: The Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not apply to agency and court handling of claims for unemployment insurance benefits. Billings v. Bd. of Labor Appeals, 204 M 38, 663 P2d 1167, 40 St. Rep. 648 (1983).

Evidentiary Hearing Not Contemplated: Section 15-31-503 does not contemplate an evidentiary hearing but merely an opportunity for the taxpayer to request a review of the administrative procedures used to calculate the assessment and to present evidence in support of his tax calculations. Thus, the Department of Revenue is not entitled to further discovery after entering a deficiency assessment and before the protest hearing, and the Montana Administrative Procedure Act does not apply. W. R. Grace & Co. v. Dept. of Revenue, 173 M 339, 567 P2d 913 (1977).

Termination Provision Repealed — Code Commissioner Explanation: Section 1, Ch. 179, L. 2015, repealed sec. 6, Ch. 318, L. 2013, which terminated this section July 1, 2015. Effective October 1, 2015.

Because Ch. 179 did not have an effective date, it takes effect on October 1, 2015, which is after the July 1, 2015, termination date, so this section could potentially be construed to have terminated. Because the sole purpose of Ch. 179, L. 2015, was to make this section permanent, the code commissioner has not terminated this section.

Saving Clause: Section 3, Ch. 318, L. 2013, was a saving clause.

Effective Date: Section 5, Ch. 318, L. 2013, provided: "[This act] is effective July 1, 2013."

Termination: Section 6, Ch. 318, L. 2013, provided: "[This act] terminates July 1, 2015."

Case Notes

Pretrial Order Construed to Include Issue of Whether Additional Workers' Compensation Benefits Payable: Garcia claimed that in holding that she was not entitled to any benefits beyond the amount paid, the Workers' Compensation Court exceeded the issue of whether or not she was injured, depriving her of her right to notice and opportunity to be heard. However, Garcia's first contention in the pretrial order was that of whether she was entitled to temporary total disability payments. The court had wide discretion in determining that the issue of compensation was within the scope of the pretrial order. The Supreme Court found that Garcia was adequately advised by the pretrial order of the presence of the disability issue and could not claim surprise on appeal. Garcia v. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund, 253 M 196, 832 P2d 770, 49 St. Rep. 440 (1992).

Lack of District Court Jurisdiction in Claim for Damages — Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Gilpins initiated suit for damages resulting from temporary suspension of their day-care license by the Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), contending that, under 3-5-302, jurisdiction was in the District Court because the action involved a civil claim against the state for payment of money. However, the court properly dismissed the claim for lack of jurisdiction because Gilpins failed to exhaust all administrative remedies available within the agency, as required by 2-4-702, and because there was no showing made pursuant to 2-4-701 that a review of the agency decision by a hearings examiner would not provide an adequate remedy. Gilpin v. St., 249 M 37, 812 P2d 1265, 48 St. Rep. 567 (1991).

Reversal of Hearing Examiner's Findings — Power of Workers' Compensation Court to Order New Trial: The Workers' Compensation Court appointed a hearing examiner to hear evidence in an injury case, but it was for the court to make the final decision. The examiner's findings, conclusions, and proposed decision were submitted to the court for approval. It was within the court's power to order a new trial on the ground that the examiner apparently disregarded or was not aware of evidence crucial to the case. Gould v. Liberty Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 233 M 494, 766 P2d 213, 45 St. Rep. 1671 (1988), distinguishing Walter v. Evans Prod. Co., 207 M 26, 672 P2d 613 (1983).

Applicability of Rules of Civil Procedure to Workers' Compensation Court: Since the Workers' Compensation Court is expressly made subject to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act and the Act allows each agency subject to the Act to promulgate its own procedural rules, the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure are not directly applicable to the court. Hock v. Lienco Cedar Prod., 194 M 131, 634 P2d 1174, 38 St. Rep. 1598 (1981).

CONSISTENCY OF RULE WITH AUTHORIZING STATUTE

Compliance With Administrative Rules of Montana — Criminal Actions: Prior to administering the Intoxilyzer 5000 test to the defendant, the calibration checks read 0.060 and 0.062 for a simulator solution that was supposed to have had a known alcohol concentration of 0.10. The Administrative Rules of Montana require a calibration check to fall within a plus or minus one-tenth range of the known alcohol concentration of the reference solution to guarantee the instrument's accuracy prior to administering the test. The Supreme Court held that the evidence showed that the low calibration readings were not indicative of a faulty instrument but only of a gradually diminished alcohol content in the simulator solution. The court further held that the District Court did not err in holding that the test was administered in substantial compliance with the Administrative Rules of Montana. O'Brian v. St., 236 M 227, 770 P2d 507, 46 St. Rep. 316 (1989), followed in St. v. Carter, 285 M 449, 948 P2d 1173, 54 St. Rep. 1235 (1997).

Invalid Rule Under Grandfather Clause: Section 66-3208(4), R.C.M. 1947 (deleted by Ch. 350, sec. 317, L. 1974), a grandfather clause, allowed licensure of an established psychologist without a doctoral degree if he had 5 years of professional experience and a master's degree. A rule adopted by the Board of Psychologists required the professional experience to have been obtained after receiving the master's degree. The rule was held invalid because it imposed the additional requirement of a chronological order in which requirements were to be met not envisioned by the Legislature. McPhail v. Mont. Bd. of Psychologists, 196 M 514, 640 P2d 906, 39 St. Rep. 290 (1982). See also Safeway, Inc. v. Mont. Petroleum Release Comp. Bd., 281 M 189, 931 P2d 1327, 54 St. Rep. 129 (1997).

Rule in Effect Prior to Conforming Amendment to Statute: Although subsection (2) of 15-31-301 was created by a 1974 amendment, it applies to the period of dispute (1971-1975) because a similar administrative rule was in effect prior to the amendment and the rule was not inconsistent with the section as it existed prior to amendment. Ward Paper Box Co. v. Dept. of Revenue, 196 M 87, 638 P2d 1053, 38 St. Rep. 2147 (1981).

Administrative Rule More Stringent Than Statute Held Invalid: An administrative rule of the Board of Barbers requiring a year's apprenticeship served in a "commercial barbershop" prior to examination, as opposed to a year's apprenticeship served "under the immediate personal supervision of a licensed barber" as required by 37-30-301 and 37-30-305 (both now repealed), is invalid because it does not satisfy the test as required in 2-4-305 that a rule must be "reasonably necessary to effectuate the purpose of the statute". Bd. of Barbers v. Big Sky College of Barber-Styling, 192 M 159, 626 P2d 1269, 38 St. Rep. 621 (1981).

Violation of Regulation Not Negligence Per Se: In an action brought by an employee of a subcontractor against the defendant general contractor for damages for injuries in a fall from the subcontractor's scaffolding, the Supreme Court declined to hold that violations by the subcontractor of OSHA scaffolding regulations constituted negligence per se. As the general rule has been to consider the violation of regulations as merely evidence of negligence, the Supreme Court adopted the general rule. Stepanek v. Kober Constr., 191 M 430, 625 P2d 51, 38 St. Rep. 385 (1981). The general rule was applied in Hash v. St., 248 M 155, 807 P2d 1363, 48 St. Rep. 277 (1991).

Rule in Conflict With Statute: Department of Community Affairs (authority now vested in Department of Public Health and Human Services) promulgated rules declaring that a resubdivision of a platted and filed subdivision cannot be an "occasional sale" as defined in 76-3-102. Those rules are in direct conflict with that section and the provisions of the subdivision and platting law; a statute cannot be changed by an administrative regulation, hence the rules are void. State ex rel. Swart v. Casne, 172 M 302, 564 P2d 983 (1977).

Rule Consistent With Implemented Statute: Rules promulgated by Department of Labor and Industry defining and delimiting "bona fide executive" as set forth in 39-3-406 attempted to set out objective and subjective criteria that are generally characteristic of an executive's job and were not unreasonable because the rules were logical and well within the boundaries of the fair and natural meaning of the word "executive". Garsjo v. Dept. of Labor & Industry, 172 M 182, 562 P2d 473 (1977).

UNCONSTITUTIONAL DELEGATION OF LEGISLATIVE POWER

Implemented Statute — No Standards or Guidelines: The phrase "with the approval of the department" in 32-2-231 (now 32-2-271) governing savings and loan association consolidations and transfers presents a delegation of legislative power that provides no standards or guidelines and is therefore an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power to the Department of Business Regulation (now Department of Administration) contrary to Art. III, sec. 1, Mont. Const. Since the statute provides no standards or guidelines, the Department is powerless to establish guidelines or standards by rule. In re Gate City S&L Ass'n, 182 M 361, 597 P2d 84 (1979).

Broad Scope of Authorization Upheld — Environmental Protection: The promulgation of a rule governing open burning, implementing 75-2-203 of the Clean Air Act of Montana, was not an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power to the Board of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Board of Environmental Review), even though the statute is phrased in broad and general language because the field of environmental protection as yet lacks detailed and precise standards. State ex rel. Dept. of Health & Environmental Sciences v. Lincoln County, 178 M 410, 584 P2d 1293 (1978).

Solely Subjective Determination of Agency — Unconstitutional: Section 90-2-105 (since repealed), providing that a fund created by the sale of revenue bonds from which the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (now Board of Environmental Review) was to make loans to farmers and ranchers "for any worthwhile project" for conservation and other renewable resources, was an unconstitutional delegation of legislative power because the standards and guides laid down by this statute are insufficient. In effect the only limit on the Board's power to loan money was its subjective determination of whether a project is worthwhile. Douglas v. Judge, 174 M 32, 568 P2d 530 (1977).

Leading Pre-MAPA Cases — Unconstitutional Delegation of Legislative Power: For leading pre-MAPA cases dealing with unconstitutional delegation of legislative power, see Bacus v. Lake County, 138 M 69, 354 P2d 1056 (1960); St. v. Stark, 100 M 365, 52 P2d 890 (1935).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Failure of Board of Outfitters to Adopt Required Rules — Ruling on Case-by-Case Basis Ruled Improper Implementation of Statute: Section 37-47-201(5)(d) required the Board of Outfitters to adopt rules containing standards for review and approval of outfitter operation plans in order for the Board to determine whether a proposed outfitter operation would cause an undue conflict with existing hunting use that would constitute a threat to public health, safety, or welfare. The statutory requirement for the Board to adopt rules was sufficiently clear, definite, and certain that the failure of the Board to initially adopt the rules required by the statute and instead determine on a case-by-case basis whether the proposed use would cause "undue conflict" was not a proper implementation of the statute. 47 A.G. Op. 22 (1998).

Permits for X-Ray Technologists — Board Rules Adding Additional Noncontradictory Requirements to Statute Invalid: Rules of the Board of Radiologic Technologists requiring applicants for permits as radiologic technologists under 37-14-306 to take a 24-hour course approved by the Board, be employed, have at least 6 months' practical experience in the x-ray profession, pass a permit examination, and pay a $65 exam fee are void and unenforceable. The rules engraft additional, noncontradictory requirements on 37-14-306 that were not envisioned by the Legislature, even though the rules may appear to be consistent with the purposes of the statute. 40 A.G. Op. 50 (1984).

Department Rules Upheld — Leave Time — Agency Interpretation Entitled to Substantial Weight: The Department of Administration's comprehensive set of rules, adopted under Title 2, ch. 18, part 6, explicitly recognizes that vacation and sick leave credits are accrued on an hourly basis. In construing statutes, the interpretation of the administrative body is entitled to substantial weight. Here, agency's interpretation was applied to public employees at the local level. 39 A.G. Op. 15 (1981).

Change of Policy: A gratuitous service by a state agency, not required by statute, provided for 40 years does not create a legal duty to continue to provide the service, absent the applicability of estoppel principles to specific cases. There is no statutory or constitutional impediment to the adoption of a new policy, provided the policy adopted conforms to the statute to be implemented and is adopted in compliance with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. 38 A.G. Op. 69 (1980).

Constitutional Mandate: In the context of rulemaking, the Montana Administrative Procedure Act fulfills the mandate of Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., requiring reasonable opportunity for citizen participation in agency operation, by providing notice and hearing. 38 A.G. Op. 69 (1980).

Chapter 394 in (1)(a) in three places substituted "proposed action" for "intended action" and in second sentence near beginning after "The" inserted "proposal"; inserted (1)(b) relating to date and manner of primary sponsor notice; in (2)(a) in first sentence at beginning after "The" inserted "proposal", in second sentence near beginning after "publication" substituted "a copy of the published proposal notice must be sent" for "to the sponsor of the legislative bill that enacted the section that is cited as implemented in the notice if the notice is the initial proposal to implement the section", and in fifth sentence near middle before "notice" inserted "proposal"; in (2)(c) at beginning of first sentence and second sentence before "notice" inserted "proposal", in first sentence deleted reference to subsection (2)(a), after "published" deleted "and mailed", and substituted "proposed" for "intended", and at beginning of second sentence deleted "In addition to publishing and mailing the notice under subsection (2)(a)"; in (2)(d)(i) in first sentence at beginning substituted "When an agency begins" for "The agency shall also, at the time that its personnel begin", after "wording of" deleted "the initial rule", and at end substituted "notice for a rule that initially implements legislation, the agency shall notify the legislator who was the primary sponsor of the legislation" for "to implement one or more statutes, notify the sponsor of the legislative bill that enacted the section" and inserted second sentence concerning legislation affecting more than one program; inserted (2)(d)(ii) concerning time for sending published notice to primary sponsor; in (8) in first sentence before "sponsors" inserted "primary"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 3, 2007.

The amendments to this section made by sec. 1, Ch. 394, L. 2007, were rendered void by sec. 2, Ch. 394, L. 2007, a coordination section.

Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 394, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to notices of proposed rulemaking filed with the secretary of state on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 3, 2007.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 210 in second and third sentences in (1) substituted "reasonable necessity" for "rationale". Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

1999 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 19 throughout section substituted "appropriate administrative rule review committee" for "administrative code committee"; in (2)(b) in first sentence near middle substituted "agency actions to the agencies that the committee oversees that publish" for "agency actions to all agencies publishing"; in (7)(a) after "Administrative" substituted "Rule Review" for "Code"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

Chapter 41 in (1) inserted fourth sentence and (1)(a) and (1)(b) requiring a notice to contain an estimate of the cumulative amount for all persons and of the number of persons affected; in (2)(c) near middle of second sentence after "electronic" substituted "access system" for "bulletin board"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1997 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 152 in (2)(b) substituted "register" for "Montana Administrative Register"; in (4), near middle of first sentence before "28 days", inserted "at least" and before second "notice" inserted "the original" and inserted second sentence regarding amended or supplemental notice; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 340 in (2)(a), near beginning after "publication to", inserted "the sponsor of the legislative bill that enacted the section that is cited as implemented in the notice if the notice is the initial proposal to implement the section, to"; in (2)(c), near beginning, inserted "required by subsections (1) and (2)(a)"; inserted (2)(d) requiring an agency to notify the sponsor of a bill that enacts a section of law at the time the agency's personnel begin to work on the rule proposal intended to implement that section; inserted (8) regarding notice by an agency of a rule proposal to a sponsor of a bill enacting a section of law when the sponsor is no longer a member of the Legislature; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 489 inserted third sentence in (1) requiring rationale to be written in easily understood language; inserted second, third, and fourth sentences in (2)(a) requiring agency to create and maintain interested persons list and to inform persons of existence of list; inserted second sentence in (2)(c) requiring agency to post notice on state bulletin board or electronic system available to public; inserted fourth sentence in (4) requiring agency to schedule oral hearing if proposed rule involves significant public interest; inserted (7)(b) requiring person presiding at hearing to inform persons of interested persons list and provide opportunity for inclusion on list; and made minor changes in style.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose the most appropriate.

1983 Amendment: Inserted provisions in (2)(a) and (2)(b) for notice to organizations or persons filing with the Administrative Code Committee.

1981 Amendment: Inserted "within 3 days of publication" after "mailed" in (2); deleted a reference to advance notice in (2); inserted "the notice of proposed rulemaking must state that" after "substantive rules" near the middle of (4); inserted "by the administrative code committee" after "subdivision or agency" near the end of (4); inserted "In the discretion of the agency, contested" at the beginning of the second sentence of (5); inserted (6) relating to failure to publish notice in time; and inserted (7) relating to reading of Administrative Code Committee notice.

ARM 1.3.311 Rulemaking — opportunity to be heard.

Case Notes

Rubric Weighing Privacy Constituted Rule — Subject to MAPA Requirements: A rubric specifying criteria for concluding whether the individual rights of privacy of certain telecommunications carriers employees outweighed the public's right to know for the purposes of determining whether the employees' compensation would be publicly disclosed constituted a rule within the meaning of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA). Because the Public Service Commission did not follow MAPA's rulemaking process, the rubric was held invalid for its failure to comply with MAPA's rulemaking requirements. S. Mont. Tel. Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2017 MT 123, 387 Mont. 415, 395 P.3d 473.

No Error in Adoption of Water Quality Rules — Standard of Review: Plaintiff contended that the District Court erroneously applied the incorrect standard of review in holding that the defendant Board of Environmental Review properly adopted rules regarding the numeric standards applicable to the sodium adsorption ratio and electrical conductivity as components of water produced with coal bed methane and discharged into state waterways. The court applied the standard of review in the declaratory judgment provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), rather than the standard in MAPA for the adoption and publication of rules. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court decision specifically addressed the factors in 2-4-305(6)(a) and (6)(b), in that the rules were consistent with requirements of the state Clean Water Act and the Water Quality Act and were reasonably necessary to protect state waters in light of projected growth in the coal bed methane sector and the difficulty in issuing objective and consistent discharge permits. The Board reviewed and relied on copious scientific data to draft rules that met the state law mandate for scientific justification. The Board did not adopt rules with an arbitrary and capricious disregard for the purpose of the statutes, and the District Court did not apply the incorrect standard of review under the circumstances with which it was presented. Pennaco Energy, Inc. v. Mont. Bd. of Envtl. Review, 2008 MT 425, 347 M 415, 199 P3d 191 (2008).

Reversal of Conviction for Medicaid Fraud Based on Violation of Improperly Adopted Administrative Policy: Vainio, an optometrist, was charged with three counts of Medicaid fraud under 45-6-313. The jury found Vainio guilty, and the District Court concluded as a matter of law that a violation of the administrative policies at issue formed a criminal act. On appeal, Vainio argued that by criminalizing violations of administrative policies that were not formally promulgated as rules, 45-6-313 contravened the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), Title 2, ch. 4, and that policies that were not promulgated according to MAPA lacked the force of law. The state contended that because 45-6-313 specifically refers to violations of "policies", it was not necessary for those policies to be embodied in a rule promulgated pursuant to MAPA. The Supreme Court agreed with Vainio. The use of the term "policies" in 45-6-313 is limited to those policies that have been formally adopted as rules pursuant to MAPA. The fact that 45-6-313 does not expressly reference MAPA does not mean that Medicaid providers can be criminally prosecuted for violating the state's informal policies. Further, 45-6-313 does not have to expressly reference MAPA for MAPA to apply; rather, MAPA must be followed because 45-6-313 does not expressly repudiate it. When the Legislature authorizes an agency to adopt rules, the procedures mandated by MAPA apply regardless of whether the authorizing statute refers to MAPA. The practices for which Vainio was convicted were not prohibited by rules adopted in compliance with MAPA and in effect at the time of the alleged offenses and thus were not illegal, so the convictions were reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001), following NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676 (1986), and Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177 (1993), and distinguishing Huether v. District Court, 2000 MT 158, 300 M 212, 4 P3d 1193 (2000).

County Standing to Sue State Over Improperly Adopted Administrative Rule: The Department of Revenue directed county tax assessors to change their method of appraising the value of heavy equipment. The change in method would have resulted in substantial loss of revenue to counties. After receiving objections from the counties, the Department scheduled a public hearing, and after the hearing adopted an administrative rule requiring use of the new valuation method despite the potential loss of revenue to the counties. Rosebud County brought suit, alleging that the rule was invalid because the Department had failed to follow the statutory procedure for adopting administrative rules. The Department argued that the county could not sue another branch of state government and also could not bring suit because it had not suffered any damage. The Supreme Court ruled that the county could sue another state entity because it was seeking declaratory relief not damages and that the county had standing because it was facing potential loss of revenue. The court also affirmed the lower court's ruling that the administrative rule was invalid because the Department had not followed the proper procedure in adopting the rule. Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177, 50 St. Rep. 281 (1993).

Department Decision to Include Overflight Mileage in Tax Apportionment Formula — Noncompliance With MAPA: The unilateral administrative decision of a Department of Revenue auditor to include an airline's nonstop flyover mileage in the numerator of the statutory apportionment formula qualified as a rule under 2-4-102 and was subject to the notice and hearing requirements of 2-4-302 in order to be valid under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676, 43 St. Rep. 959 (1986).

Authority to Adopt Rules Not Conferred: The Montana Administrative Procedure Act alone does not confer authority to adopt rules; it merely outlines the correct procedure an agency must use once the agency has been granted statutory power to adopt rules. Bradco Supply Co. v. Larsen, 183 M 97, 598 P2d 596 (1979).

Legality of Banking Board Rule — Issue to Be Raised Before Agency: There was no merit to appellant's challenge to the validity of the State Banking Board's rulemaking process. Furthermore, such a question must have been raised first before the administrative agency unless there was good cause for failure to do so. W. Bank of Billings v. St. Banking Bd., 174 M 331, 570 P2d 1115 (1977), followed in In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Centralized Intake System Authorized — Fulfillment of Reporting Requirements Absent Properly Adopted Administrative Rule: By amendment in 2001, the Legislature required the Department of Public Health and Human Services to assess reports of child abuse or neglect in order to determine whether investigation or some lesser response is appropriate and granted the Department the authority to determine the appropriate response time, but did not specify how the Department was to implement the legislation. The Department developed the centralized intake system as the method to meet the statutory directive. However, the Department established the system without formal adoption as an administrative rule. Because the centralized intake system implements a law and affects private rights or procedures available to the public, the Attorney General held that the system is a rule, subject to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. Thus, until adopted as an administrative rule, the centralized intake system may not be used to restrict which Department personnel may receive a report. Further, counties are no longer involved in providing child protective services, so they are no longer local affiliates of the Department, as the term is used in 41-3-201. Therefore, mandatory reporters may fulfill their reporting obligations by reporting child abuse and neglect to a local child protective services worker or supervisor or to the Department through the Centralized Intake Bureau. 50 A.G. Case Notes

Circumstances Entitling Agency to Adopt Emergency Rule: Since the Legislature reduced the amount of money requested by the Department, requiring the Department to make adjustments to live within its budget, and it was determined that it would be necessary to cut programs to live within budget, it was proper for the Department to adopt an emergency rule under this section. (See 1997 amendment.) State ex rel. Dept. of Social & Rehabilitation Services v. Cole, 167 M 353, 538 P2d 1031 (1975).

Emergency Exception Inapplicable to Foreseeable Situations — Environmental Policy Act Applicable: The Department of Agriculture did not follow the directive of ARM 4.2.308 (now repealed) in dealing with an emergency infestation of grasshoppers when it failed to file a report with the Governor and the Environmental Quality Council. While an emergency situation is a legitimate exception to the requirements of the Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA), the Department should comply with MEPA before participating in a grasshopper spraying program if the need for such a program is reasonably foreseeable. 42 A.G. 2017 Amendment: Chapter 433 inserted (10) regarding department of labor and industry rules relating to adoption and automatic updating of commercial drug formularies. Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

2009 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 21 in (1)(a) at end inserted "including comments submitted by the primary sponsor of the legislation prior to the drafting of the substantive content and wording of a proposed rule that initially implements legislation"; inserted (1)(b)(ii) requiring a statement explaining why a sponsor's comments were not incorporated into a rule; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 17, 2009.

Chapter 152 in (7) inserted second sentence describing substantial compliance. Amendment effective April 3, 2009.

Chapter 270 inserted (8)(c) prohibiting the use of an amended notice of proposed rulemaking by a state agency to cure a deficiency in a statement of reasonable necessity unless interested persons, primary sponsor, and hearing attendees are given additional time for comments; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2009.

Chapter 303 in (1) in third sentence near middle following "rule is" substituted "published" for "printed". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 152, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, on November 6, 2007, the Montana Supreme Court issued its opinion in the case of Montana Society of Anesthesiologists v. Montana Board of Nursing, 2007 MT 290, 339 Mont. 472, 171 P.3d 704 (2007) (MSA opinion), holding that a nurse anesthetist may practice without direct supervision by an anesthesiologist M.D.; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Society of Anesthesiologists (MSA) challenged the legality of an administrative rule adopted by the Montana Board of Nursing, alleging, among other things, that the rule was adopted without a sufficient statement of reasonable necessity, as required by section 2-4-305(6)(b), MCA, of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA); and

WHEREAS, in the MSA opinion, the Montana Supreme Court held that because MAPA, in section 2-4-305(7), MCA, requires that rules must be adopted in "substantial compliance" with MAPA and because the Montana Supreme Court had previously held that substantial compliance has occurred if the purpose of MAPA has been fulfilled, the defective notice of proposed rulemaking substantially complied with MAPA because the purpose of MAPA is to give public notice of the adoption of a rule and that adequate notice had been given by the Board of Nursing; and

WHEREAS, under the rationale employed by the Montana Supreme Court in the MSA opinion, every rule adopted by an agency could be found to be in substantial compliance with MAPA since every notice of proposed rulemaking gives some notice of a proposed rule adoption, amendment, or repeal; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature intends that a determination of whether MAPA's substantial compliance requirement in section 2-4-305(7), MCA, has been satisfied requires an analysis of more than whether an agency provided adequate public notice of its proposed rule, but rather requires an analysis of whether the agency complied with 2-4-302, 2-4-303, 2-4-305, or 2-4-306, MCA; and

WHEREAS, enactment of this legislation is not intended by the Legislature as a comment upon the outcome of the MSA opinion, but rather is intended to change the analysis used by the courts when determining whether MAPA's substantial compliance requirement, found in section 2-4-305(7), MCA, has been satisfied in future cases."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 210 inserted last sentence in (6)(b) providing that a statement merely explaining rule provision is not a reasonable necessity statement. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 19 in (9) near beginning substituted "appropriate administrative rule review committee" for "administrative code committee". Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 152 in (1), in third sentence, substituted "register" for "Montana Administrative Register"; in (3) inserted last phrase and inserted (3)(a) and (3)(b) regarding conditions for proposal and adoption of substantive rule; in (6), after "statute", inserted "an adoption, amendment, or repeal of" and after "a rule" deleted "adopted"; and in (6)(b) inserted second and third sentences regarding reasonable necessity and in fourth sentence substituted "clearly and thoroughly demonstrated for each adoption, amendment, or repeal of a rule" for "demonstrated".

Chapter 335 inserted (9) providing that the Committee shall notify an agency if a majority of the members object to a notice of proposed rulemaking and that the objections will be addressed at the next Committee meeting, prohibiting adoption of the proposal notice for a 6-month period under certain conditions, and requiring the Committee to include a copy of the notice to the agency in the Committee records; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 489 near beginning in (7), after "unless", inserted "notice of it is given" and after "2-4-303" inserted "or 2-4-306"; in first sentence in (8), before "citations", deleted "statements of reasonable necessity" and inserted second sentence prohibiting agency from using adoption notice to correct deficiency in statement of reasonable necessity; and made minor changes in style.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 335, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] applies to rules objected to under [this act] after [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 3 in second sentence of (4), after "a policy", deleted "as used in the definition set forth in 2-4-102(10)"; at beginning of first complete sentence of (6)(b) inserted "Subject to the provisions of subsection (8)"; inserted (8) allowing use of an amended proposal notice or adoption notice to correct certain deficiencies; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: In (3) deleted second sentence that read: "A rule proposed and adopted to implement a statute referred to in 5-4-402(3) must include a citation to the session laws of Montana containing the specific grant of rulemaking authority pursuant to which it or any part thereof is adopted."

Effective Date — Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 420, L. 1989, provided: "(1) [This act] is effective on passage and approval [approved April 3, 1989].

(2) [Sections 1 and 2] [2-4-305 and 5-4-402, 5-4-402 now repealed] apply retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to October 1, 1983, and apply to statutes enacted and rules adopted on or after October 1, 1983."

Policies Enforceable as Rules — Resolution: House Joint Resolution No. 2, adopted by the 49th Legislature in 1985, provided that policies having the force and effect of law but not formally adopted as rules must be adopted as rules by agencies by October 1, 1987.

1983 Amendments: Chapter 78 inserted last sentence in (6)(b) setting forth the requirement for demonstration of reasonable necessity.

Chapter 466 inserted second sentence in (3) requiring citation to an extension of rulemaking authority under 5-4-402.

Administrative Code Committee Bills: Senate Bill 45 (Ch. 78, L. 1983), requiring necessity for administrative rules to be demonstrated in the rulemaking record and allowing the Administrative Code Committee to review that record, and House Bill 35 (Ch. 466, L. 1983), requiring a contemporaneous grant of rulemaking authority, were introduced by request of the Committee. See Administrative Code Committee Report, December 1982, Montana Legislative Council.

Review of Rules Adopted Prior to April 14, 1975: Chapter 64, L. 1983, provided: "Section 1. Review of existing rules required. Notwithstanding the provisions of 2-4-402, the administrative code committee shall review all administrative rules adopted prior to April 14, 1975, by agencies subject to the provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. The committee shall review the rules to determine whether agencies have substantially complied with subsections (5) and (6) of 2-4-305, as that section read on November 18, 1982.

Section 2. Power of the committee. (1) If the committee determines that a rule violates 2-4-305(5) or 2-4-305(6), as that section read on November 18, 1982, it may:

(a) take those steps authorized by 2-4-402(3)(a); or

(b) poll the legislature in accordance with 2-4-403, as that section may be amended by Senate Bill No. 33. If 2-4-403 is not amended by Senate Bill No. 33, no poll of the legislature may be taken by the committee on any rule reviewed pursuant to [section 1]. [Senate Bill 33 was not passed.]

(2) The committee may advise an agency concerning such matters as clarity, form, style, grammar, punctuation, and spelling with respect to any rule reviewed under [section 1].

Section 3. Committee to report to legislature. Prior to January 1, 1987, the committee shall prepare a report of its activities and any recommendations to be submitted to the legislature.

Section 4. Effective date — termination. This act is effective on passage and approval and terminates January 1, 1987."

House Bill 59 (Ch. 64, L. 1983) was introduced by request of the Administrative Code Committee. See Administrative Code Committee Report, December 1982, Montana Legislative Council.

1981 Amendment: Inserted the provision relating to substantial differences between the proposed and adopted rule, which must be described in an agency's statement of reasons, in (1); inserted "proposed and adopted" before "rule" in two places in (3); inserted (4) relating to implementing a policy; and in (7) inserted the last sentence concerning the 6-month limit as to notice.

Severability: Section 8, Ch. 381, L. 1981, was a severability section.

Case Notes

Milk Producer's Petition to Change Rule Not Contested Case — Reasonable Necessity: An administrative proceeding following a stipulated settlement that used a hearing examiner and a formal evidentiary hearing concerning a milk producer's proposed amendments to the Board of Livestock's 12-day "sell by" date rule was a rulemaking proceeding subject to an arbitrary and capricious standard, rather than a contested case subject to judicial review under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7, and the Board of Livestock did not violate that standard when it considered evidence to maintain or abandon the 12-day rule even though it did not issue a written statement supporting its decisions. Further, the 12-day rule did not contradict statutory authorization for the rule or engraft additional or contradictory requirements, and a rule to control milk standards was reasonably necessary to regulate milk product quality and safety. Core-Mark International, Inc. v. Bd. of Livestock, 2014 MT 197, 376 Mont. 25, 329 P.3d 1278.

Administrative Rule Inconsistent with Statute — Statute Prevails: When notice provisions contained in a Public Service Commission tariff were inconsistent with statutory provisions, statutory provisions trumped tariff provisions. Great Falls v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2011 MT 144, 361 Mont. 69, 254 P.3d 595.

Administrative Rules Valid Relating to Purchase of Certain Movable Improvements: The Supreme Court determined that the administrative rules implementing 77-6-302 and 77-6-303, relating to limiting compensation for movable improvements to just those that a lessee decides to purchase, were valid and did not contradict those sections as provided in 2-4-305. The Supreme Court made the determination by reading the statutes in their entirety, examining the legislative history of amendments to 77-6-302 and 77-6-303, considering prior case law, and recognizing that the rules were in effect during the time the sections were amended. Grenz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2011 MT 17, 359 Mont. 154, 248 P.3d 785.

Authority of Department of Revenue to Adopt Rules Regarding Tax Increment Financing: Administrative rules adopted by the Department of Revenue regarding tax increment financing districts are designed to obtain information necessary for the Department to confirm that a local government has created a qualified tax increment financing district, as well as the information necessary for the Department to certify base taxable value. Therefore, the Department has the authority to develop rules relating to increment financing laws. Fallon County v. St., 2009 MT 454, 354 M 347, 223 P3d 886 (2009).

No Error in Adoption of Water Quality Rules — Standard of Review: Plaintiff contended that the District Court erroneously applied the incorrect standard of review in holding that the defendant Board of Environmental Review properly adopted rules regarding the numeric standards applicable to the sodium adsorption ratio and electrical conductivity as components of water produced with coal bed methane and discharged into state waterways. The court applied the standard of review in the declaratory judgment provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), rather than the standard in MAPA for the adoption and publication of rules. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court decision specifically addressed the factors in 2-4-305(6)(a) and (6)(b), in that the rules were consistent with requirements of the state Clean Water Act and the Water Quality Act and were reasonably necessary to protect state waters in light of projected growth in the coal bed methane sector and the difficulty in issuing objective and consistent discharge permits. The Board reviewed and relied on copious scientific data to draft rules that met the state law mandate for scientific justification. The Board did not adopt rules with an arbitrary and capricious disregard for the purpose of the statutes, and the District Court did not apply the incorrect standard of review under the circumstances with which it was presented. Pennaco Energy, Inc. v. Mont. Bd. of Envtl. Review, 2008 MT 425, 347 M 415, 199 P3d 191 (2008).

Amendment to Board of Nursing Rule Not Redefining or Expanding Scope of Practice of Certified Registered Nurse Anesthetists — No MAPA Violation in Adoption of Rule: Plaintiffs asserted that the Board of Nursing improperly revised ARM 8.32.303 regarding the scope of practice of certified registered nurse anesthetists (CRNAs) and violated provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) regarding an inadequate statement of reasonable necessity and improper notice. The Supreme Court disagreed. The notice for the rule in question stated that amendments would address the independent practice of CRNAs, but the actual amendment merely clarified existing CRNA practice and dealt with prescriptive authority. Nevertheless, even though the Board of Nursing did not fully comply with the requirement for a statement of necessity reflecting the proposed amendment, the Board substantially complied by putting the public on notice of the proposed amendment and permitting observation of and participation in the amendment process. Plaintiffs had notice of the proposed amendment and actively participated in the process by attending the public hearing and voicing their opposition to the amendment. Thus, the District Court did not err in holding that the amendments to ARM 8.32.303 did not redefine or expand the scope of practice of CRNAs or violate MAPA. Mont. Soc'y of Anesthesiologists v. Bd. of Nursing, 2007 MT 290, 339 M 472, 171 P3d 704 (2007).

Reversal of Conviction for Medicaid Fraud Based on Violation of Improperly Adopted Administrative Policy: Vainio, an optometrist, was charged with three counts of Medicaid fraud under 45-6-313. The jury found Vainio guilty, and the District Court concluded as a matter of law that a violation of the administrative policies at issue formed a criminal act. On appeal, Vainio argued that by criminalizing violations of administrative policies that were not formally promulgated as rules, 45-6-313 contravened the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), Title 2, ch. 4, and that policies that were not promulgated according to MAPA lacked the force of law. The state contended that because 45-6-313 specifically refers to violations of "policies", it was not necessary for those policies to be embodied in a rule promulgated pursuant to MAPA. The Supreme Court agreed with Vainio. The use of the term "policies" in 45-6-313 is limited to those policies that have been formally adopted as rules pursuant to MAPA. The fact that 45-6-313 does not expressly reference MAPA does not mean that Medicaid providers can be criminally prosecuted for violating the state's informal policies. Further, 45-6-313 does not have to expressly reference MAPA for MAPA to apply; rather, MAPA must be followed because 45-6-313 does not expressly repudiate it. When the Legislature authorizes an agency to adopt rules, the procedures mandated by MAPA apply regardless of whether the authorizing statute refers to MAPA. The practices for which Vainio was convicted were not prohibited by rules adopted in compliance with MAPA and in effect at the time of the alleged offenses and thus were not illegal, so the convictions were reversed. St. v. Vainio, 2001 MT 220, 306 M 439, 35 P3d 948 (2001), following NW. Airlines, Inc. v. St. Tax Appeal Bd., 221 M 441, 720 P2d 676 (1986), and Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177 (1993), and distinguishing Huether v. District Court, 2000 MT 158, 300 M 212, 4 P3d 1193 (2000).

Administrative Rule Valid — Referral to Dentist Mandatory: Plaintiffs failed to make a clear showing that a Board of Dentistry's rule requiring referral to a dentist prior to a denturist starting services added provisions not envisioned by the Legislature. The District Court erred when it declared the rule invalid. An administrative agency's interpretation of a statute under its domain is presumed to be controlling. Christenot v. St., 272 M 396, 901 P2d 545, 52 St. Rep. 749 (1995).

Rules Including Some Treatments and Excluding Others Not Inherently Arbitrary: Synek argued that State Fund incorrectly determined that her chiropractic treatment was noncompensable maintenance rather than compensable therapeutic treatment. She also argued that in adopting rules that included payment for some treatments and excluded others, State Fund was acting in a capricious and arbitrary manner. The Supreme Court upheld the agency's decision that Synek's treatment constituted maintenance and that under the rules, maintenance was not compensable. The Supreme Court also held that the rules had been adopted pursuant to broad statutory language and were not facially or inherently arbitrary. Synek v. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund, 272 M 246, 900 P2d 884, 52 St. Rep. 651 (1995), distinguishing Weis v. Div. of Workers' Comp., 232 M 218, 755 P2d 1385 (1988).

Request for "In Person" Hearing Improperly Denied — Administrative Rule Contrary to Statute and Rule of Evidence Invalid: Charles disputed the amount of child support payments intended to be withheld by an income withholding proceeding and requested that he be given an "in person" hearing, rather than a telephone conference hearing, pursuant to 40-5-414. His request was denied by the administrative hearings officer pursuant to ARM 46.30.607(1) (now repealed). The Supreme Court held that the request for the "in person" hearing was improperly denied because 2-4-612(2) makes the Montana Rules of Evidence applicable to administrative hearings and Rule 611(e), M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10), provides that a witness can be heard only in the presence of other parties. Citing In re Marriage of Bonamarte, 263 M 170, 866 P2d 1132 (1994), the Supreme Court held that Rule 611 requires the physical presence of a witness in the courtroom. The Supreme Court also noted that 40-5-414 requires a live hearing if a party requests it and that the administrative rule adopted by the Child Support Enforcement Division, providing for a live hearing only upon approval of the hearings officer, was void because it was contrary to statute and Rule 611. Taylor v. Taylor, 272 M 30, 899 P2d 523, 52 St. Rep. 567 (1995).

No Proscription That Previously Canceled Lessee May Not Bid or May Not Lease State Lands — Written Findings Required When High Bid Rejected: Winchell's state land lease was canceled for gross mismanagement of the leased property. The lease was subsequently reclassified and advertised for bids, and Winchell submitted the high bid. Rather than make written findings as to why the bid was not in the best interests of the state, the Department relied on ARM 26.3.142(6) (renumbered ARM 36.25.115) to dismiss Winchell's bid out-of-hand. This administrative rule, which purports to give the Department the ability to refuse to even consider a bid, is in derogation of law because there is no statutory proscription disallowing the bid or ability to lease of a person whose lease has been previously canceled. Absent written findings that the high bid was too high for community standards, would cause damage to the land, or would impair long-term productivity, the automatic refusal to consider the bid, based on an overbroad and unlawful administrative regulation, was in excess of the Department's jurisdiction and an abuse of its discretion. Winchell v. Dept. of State Lands, 262 M 328, 865 P2d 249, 50 St. Rep. 1580 (1993).

Department of Revenue to Assess Heavy Equipment at 100% of Market Value: The Department of Revenue directed county tax assessors to change their method of appraising the value of equipment. The change in method would have resulted in substantial loss of revenue to counties and would have been based on appraisals of heavy equipment at less than 100% of market value. The Supreme Court held that the administrative rule adopted by the Department was in conflict with the statutory requirement that heavy equipment be assessed at 100% of market value and further held that even if there was a "reasonable necessity" (see 2001 amendment) for the rule, the Department had failed to demonstrate the need for the rule change in its notice of proposed rulemaking. Rosebud County v. Dept. of Revenue, 257 M 306, 849 P2d 177, 50 St. Rep. 281 (1993).

Mileage Method as Inequitable Representation of State Business Activity: Section 15-31-312 requires an equitable representation of a taxpayer's business activity in the state. However, in this case, the mileage method promulgated in ARM 42.26.264 was not an equitable method of calculating defendant's income-producing activity for the sales factor portion of the formula. Defendant's petition for an alternative method of apportionment under 15-31-312 was appropriate. Dept. of Revenue v. United Parcel Serv., Inc., 252 M 476, 830 P2d 1259, 49 St. Rep. 20 (1992).

Department of Revenue — Rule Conflicting With Statutory Law Invalid: More than 3 years prior to his death, decedent created a joint tenancy with an individual not his spouse or issue, using property solely his. The Department's regulations relating to statutory law require a tax levy on the full value of the joint tenancy property when the survivor made no contribution. The Supreme Court held that the Department's interpretation of statutory law was incorrect and that only one-half of the property value was subject to taxation. The Department regulations conflicting with statutory law are of no effect. Dept. of Revenue v. Estate of Dwyer, 236 M 405, 771 P2d 93, 46 St. Rep. 463 (1989).

Rating of Impairments Restricted to Licensed Physicians: Under 39-71-122 (repealed 1987) and 39-71-701 through 39-71-703, the legislative intent was that the making of impairment ratings be restricted to licensed medical physicians. Therefore, the Workers' Compensation Division properly exercised its rulemaking authority by promulgating ARM 24.29.806 (now repealed) which imposes the restriction. Weis v. Div. of Workers' Comp., 232 M 118, 755 P2d 1385, 45 St. Rep. 1004 (1988).

Validity of Driver Rehabilitation Point System: The driver rehabilitation point system implemented by ARM 23.3.202 is a valid administrative rule expressly authorized by 61-2-302 and impliedly authorized by 61-5-206. The point system increases the fairness of the suspension process, harmonizes with its enabling legislation, and is necessary to effectuate statutory purposes. Bick v. Dept. of Justice, 224 M 455, 730 P2d 418, 43 St. Rep. 2331 (1986).

Invalid Rule Under Grandfather Clause: Section 66-3208(4), R.C.M. 1947 (deleted by Ch. 350, sec. 317, L. 1974), a grandfather clause, allowed licensure of an established psychologist without a doctoral degree if he had 5 years of professional experience and a master's degree. A rule adopted by the Board of Psychologists required the professional experience to have been obtained after receiving the master's degree. The rule was held invalid because it imposed the additional requirement of a chronological order in which requirements were to be met not envisioned by the Legislature. McPhail v. Mont. Bd. of Psychologists, 196 M 514, 640 P2d 906, 39 St. Rep. 290 (1982).

Rule in Effect Prior to Conforming Amendment to Statute: Although subsection (2) of 15-31-301 was created by a 1974 amendment, it applies to the period of dispute (1971-1975) because a similar administrative rule was in effect prior to the amendment and the rule was not inconsistent with the section as it existed prior to amendment. Ward Paper Box Co. v. Dept. of Revenue, 196 M 87, 638 P2d 1053, 38 St. Rep. 2147 (1981).

Administrative Rule More Stringent Than Statute Held Invalid: An administrative rule of the Board of Barbers requiring a year's apprenticeship served in a "commercial barbershop" prior to examination, as opposed to a year's apprenticeship served "under the immediate personal supervision of a licensed barber" as required by 37-30-301 and 37-30-305 (both now repealed), is invalid because it does not satisfy the test as required in 2-4-305 that a rule must be "reasonably necessary to effectuate the purpose of the statute". Bd. of Barbers v. Big Sky College of Barber-Styling, 192 M 159, 626 P2d 1269, 38 St. Rep. 621 (1981), followed in Taylor v. Taylor, 272 M 30, 899 P2d 523, 52 St. Rep. 567 (1995).

Consumer Protection Act Violation Alleged as Cause of Accident — Agency Rule Not in Conflict With Federal Law — Summary Judgment: The District Court properly denied summary judgment on plaintiff's Count No. II, which claimed misrepresentation as to the odometer reading on a used car, sold to her by defendant corporation as the proximate cause of her accident and subsequent injuries. A state agency rule adopted pursuant to 30-14-104 was not inconsistent with the rules and decisions of the FTC and decisions of the federal courts, although the rule deals with sales and the main purpose of the federal law is to prevent unlawful restraint of trade. Whether the alleged violation was a cause of plaintiff's damages was a jury issue. Kopischke v. First Cont. Corp., 187 M 471, 610 P2d 668 (1980).

Indigents' Right to County Medical Assistance — Rule on 5-Day Application Period Invalid — Good Cause in Delay of Application for Aid: A college student was seriously injured in an accident. Neither she or her family had ever received any welfare benefits nor had they had any knowledge of the county medical assistance program for indigents. When she became aware of the benefits, she applied for aid but was denied because she had not applied within 5 days after receiving medical services. The court held the statute providing for indigents to be mandatory and to require strict compliance. The 5-day provision was held invalid. Unless administrative rules effectively effectuate the purpose of the statute, they are invalid. A rule in conflict with the statute from which it derives is without effect. A statute cannot be changed by administrative rules. On its face, the 5-day rule is patently unreasonable. The delay of the student in applying for funds was held for good cause considering the seriousness of the injuries, and the fact the student was hospitalized far from home and then was confined to home for nearly 3 months. The Welfare Department was held to have abused its discretion in determining that the student did not have good cause for her delayed application. Michels v. Dept. of Social & Rehabilitation Services, 187 M 173, 609 P2d 271 (1980).

Administrative Rule Exceeding Statutory Authority — Barbers: Administrative regulations are inconsistent with legislative guidelines if they engraft additional requirements on the statute that were not envisioned by the Legislature. Where the statutes set forth experience and character requirements for a barber school operator but did not mention an instructor's examination, an administrative rule requiring such an examination was void. Bell v. St., 182 M 21, 594 P2d 331 (1979).

Legality of Banking Board Rule — Issue to Be Raised Before Agency: There was no merit to appellant's challenge to the validity of the State Banking Board's rulemaking process. Furthermore, such a question must have been raised first before the administrative agency unless there was good cause for failure to do so. W. Bank of Billings v. St. Banking Bd., 174 M 331, 570 P2d 1115 (1977).

Failure to Consider Submissions Concerning Proposed Rule: Where Department of Revenue adopted appraisal plan without full consideration of alternatives and taxpayer objections and failed to prepare a concise statement of the principal reasons for adoption of the plan and for overruling objections to it, this section was not complied with and the plan was invalid. Patterson v. Dept. of Revenue, 171 M 168, 557 P2d 798 (1976).

Attorney General's Opinions

Rule Requiring Every School District to Provide Educational Services to Gifted and Talented Children Invalid: The adoption of 20-2-121 did not provide a statutory grant of authority to the Board of Public Education to require the creation of gifted and talented children programs. Rather, 20-7-902 makes the creation of gifted and talented children programs optional for individual school districts. Therefore, ARM 10.55.804, promulgated pursuant to the Board's statutory authority to adopt accreditation standards and making the creation of such programs mandatory, conflicts with 20-7-902 and is thus invalid. 44 A.G. Op. 4 (1991).

Occupational Therapists Not Permitted to Use Therapeutic Modalities — Rule Allowing for Reimbursement Void: The use of therapeutic modalities by occupational therapists has not been authorized by the Legislature and is impermissible. Therefore, ARM 46.12.547 (now repealed), authorizing occupational therapists to be reimbursed through Medicaid for modalities performed in the course of treatment, is invalid as an improper exercise of rulemaking authority. 44 A.G. Op. 3 (1991).

Rule Invalid — Direct Conflict With Definition — Board of Speech Pathologists and Audiologists: An administrative rule adopted by the Board of Speech Pathologists and Audiologists that was in direct conflict with the definition of "audiologist" in 37-15-102 and that purported to authorize "certified hearing aid audiologists" is invalid. 42 A.G. Op. 1 (1987).

Board of Nursing — No Authority to Require College Degree for Licensure: The Legislature did not intend to require nursing license applicants to hold a specific college degree, as is evidenced by the fact that the Legislature did not set forth this requirement in statute as it did for other license qualifications statutes, and by the fact it permits nursing educational programs to be located in educational institutions which could not confer the minimum proposed degrees. Therefore, the Board of Nursing does not have authority to adopt a rule requiring a specific college degree as a qualification for licensure. 41 A.G. Op. 23 (1985).

Permits for X-Ray Technologists — Board Rules Adding Additional Noncontradictory Requirements to Statute Invalid: Rules of the Board of Radiologic Technologists requiring applicants for permits as radiologic technologists under 37-14-306 to take a 24-hour course approved by the Board, be employed, have at least 6 months' practical experience in the x-ray profession, pass a permit examination, and pay a $65 exam fee are void and unenforceable. The rules engraft additional, noncontradictory requirements on 37-14-306 that were not envisioned by the Legislature, even though the rules may appear to be consistent with the purposes of the statute. 40 A.G. Op. 50 (1984).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 433 inserted (6) regarding department of labor and industry rules relating to adoption and automatic updating of commercial drug formularies. Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

2009 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 303 in (2) in first sentence near middle following "regarding the" inserted "printed or electronic" and at end following "chapter" inserted "and the secretary of state's rules". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Chapter 489 in (4) and (5) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (6)"; inserted (6) allowing retroactive rules to implement the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 14, 2009, and terminates June 30, 2011.

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 87 in (3) at end inserted "if the rule is adopted by the agency"; and in (4)(c) in three places and in (4)(c)(i) substituted "proposed rule" for "rule". Amendment effective March 30, 2007.

Chapter 337 inserted (5) prohibiting an agency from enforcing, implementing, or treating an administrative rule as adopted until effective date of rule and allowing agency to enforce established policy or practice in existence prior to rule proposal or adoption if within agency's authority. Amendment effective April 27, 2007.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 87, L. 2007, provided: "[This act] applies to a rule proposed for adoption after [the effective date of this act] or a rule proposed for adoption before but adopted after [the effective date of this act]." Effective March 30, 2007.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 337, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, section 2-4-306(4), MCA, now provides that a rule is not effective until after publication in the Montana Administrative Register or until a different effective date as stated by the agency in the rule; and

WHEREAS, during the 2005-2006 interim, the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee dealt with a state agency that treated a not-yet-effective administrative rule as if that rule was effective as law.

WHEREAS, the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee believes that an agency may not under existing law implement a rule before the rule is effective and that the amendment of section 2-4-306, MCA, contained in this legislation does not alter the existing law.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee to provide a short and clear statement in law that an agency may not implement a rule before the rule is effective as law."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 370 in (2) at beginning of first sentence inserted "Pursuant to 2-15-401" and after "prescribe" inserted "rules to effectively administer this chapter, including rules regarding the"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 210 at end of first sentence in (1) inserted "or a reference to the rule as contained in the proposal notice" and inserted second sentence providing that rule is adopted on date notice or revised notice filed with secretary of state. Amendment effective April 6, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 19 in (3) substituted "appropriate administrative rule review committee" for "administrative code committee" and near middle after "2-4-403" deleted "or the revenue oversight committee has conducted a poll in accordance with 5-18-109"; and in (4)(c) substituted "administrative rule review committee" for "administrative code committee". Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

1997 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 335 inserted (4)(c) providing that a rule is effective after publication in the register unless, after notice to the agency, the Administrative Code Committee meets and objects to a proposed rule before it is adopted and prohibiting an objected to rule from taking effect until after the adjournment of the legislative session following the notice proposal unless the Committee withdraws its objection or the objected rule is adopted with changes approved by the Committee; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 489 in third sentence in (4)(b)(ii), after "shall", inserted "in addition to the required publication in the register" and after "appropriate" inserted "and extraordinary"; and made minor changes in style.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose the more appropriate.

Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 335, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] applies to rules objected to under [this act] after [the effective date of this act]." Effective October 1, 1997.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (4)(b)(i) relating to temporary rules.

Case Notes

Federal Regulations Incorporated Into Rule — Retroactive Application: Generally, an appellate court must apply the law in effect at the time it renders its decision. If, subsequent to a judgment below and before the decision of the appellate court, a law, whether constitutional, statutory, administrative, or judicial, intervenes and positively changes the rule that governs the case, the new law must be obeyed. Retroactive application of new law is impermissible only if it takes away or impairs vested rights acquired under existing law or creates new obligations or imposes new duties in respect to transactions already past. Here, a board considering whether to issue a certificate of need considered the effect of competition, believing it was required to do so under a statute allegedly incorporating federal law. The parties offered evidence on the competition issue, and the losing party argued on appeal that the federal law was not in fact incorporated. After the appeal and before the decision, the board adopted the federal requirement by rule. The Supreme Court held that it must consider the rule, which required the effect of competition to be considered. The administrative rule properly incorporated the federal regulations where it stated that criteria listed in 42 CFR 123.412 will be considered in making a decision. West-Mont Community Care, Inc. v. Bd. of Health & Environmental Sciences, 217 M 178, 703 P2d 850, 42 St. Rep. 1116 (1985), followed in Brockie v. Omo Constr., Inc., 268 M 519, 887 P2d 167, 51 St. Rep. 1322 (1994).

(2) The secretary of state, each county in the state, and the librarians for the state law library and the university of Montana-Missoula law library shall maintain a complete, current set of the ARM, including supplements or revisions to the ARM. The designated persons shall also maintain the register issues published during the preceding 2 years. The secretary of state shall maintain a permanent set of the registers. An entity required by this section to maintain a copy or set of the ARM and supplements or revisions to it and a copy of the register complies with this section if it provides access to an electronic version of the current ARM and the current year's issues of the register or the current year's issue and register archives for the prescribed period of time"; in (1) after "secretary of state" substituted "may make printed copies, subscriptions, supplements, or revisions to the ARM or the register" for "shall make printed or electronic copies of and subscriptions to the ARM and supplements or revisions to the ARM and the register"; in (3) after "the fees authorized by 2-4-311" deleted "and 2-4-312"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2017.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 303 in (2) inserted last sentence regarding electronic versions of the ARM and register; near beginning of (3) following "make" inserted "printed or electronic"; inserted (5) allowing the secretary of state to charge certain fees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 88 in (1) at end of introductory phrase inserted requirement that ARM and supplements be distributed in electronic format unless hard copy is requested. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 396 at end of first sentence of (3) substituted "for a fee set in accordance with subsection (5)" for "at prices fixed in accordance with subsection (4)"; deleted first three sentences of former (4) that read: "The secretary of state shall determine the cost of supplying copies of the ARM and supplements or revisions to the ARM and the register to persons not listed in subsection (1). The cost must be the approximate cost of publication of the copies, including indexing, printing or duplicating, and mailing. However, a uniform price per page or group of pages may be established without regard to differences in the cost of printing different parts of the ARM and supplements or revisions to the ARM and the register"; deleted former (5) that read: "(5) The secretary of state shall deposit all fees in a proprietary fund"; substituted (5) concerning setting and depositing fees in accordance with 2-15-405 for former text that read: "The secretary of state shall fix the fee to cover the costs of supplying copies of the ARM and supplements or revisions to the ARM and the register to the persons listed in subsection (1). The cost must be the approximate cost of publication of the copies, including indexing, printing or duplicating, and mailing. However, a uniform price per page or group of pages may be established without regard to differences in the cost of printing different parts of the ARM and supplements or revisions to the ARM and the register"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 19 in (4) near beginning after "state" deleted "in consultation with the administrative code committee"; in (6) in second sentence after "fix" deleted "in consultation with the administrative code committee"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (1)(i) substituted reference to Legislative Services Division for reference to Legislative Council. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Name Change — Directions to Code Commissioner: Pursuant to sec. 36, Ch. 308, L. 1995, in this section the Code Commissioner changed "university of Montana" to "university of Montana-Missoula".

1993 Amendment: Chapter 411 in (4), at end, inserted last sentence that read: "Fees are not refundable"; in (5) substituted "a proprietary fund" for "an account within the state special revenue fund created for paying the expenses of publication of ARM and the register"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1992 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 6 in (5) inserted language requiring the deposit of $20,000 for fiscal year 1993 in the general fund on or before June 30, 1993. Amendment effective January 21, 1992.

Effective Date — Termination: Section 3, Ch. 6, Sp. L. January 1992, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval [approved January 21, 1992] and terminates July 1, 1993."

1987 Amendment: In (1), near end of introductory clause after "revisions thereto", deleted "with costs paid as provided in 2-4-312(2)"; in (4), at end of first sentence, inserted "to persons not listed in subsection (1)" and substituted second sentence, relating to the approximate cost of publication, for former text that read: "The cost shall be the approximate cost of publication, including indexing, printing or duplicating, and mailing, less fees charged agencies pursuant to subsection (6) and money appropriated for 2-4-312(2) and 2-4-313(1)"; and in (6) substituted second sentence, concerning fixing the filing fee for all material to be published in ARM or the register, for former text that read: "He shall fix, in consultation with the administrative code committee, the fee to cover a portion of the costs of publication and mailing" and inserted third and fourth sentences concerning cost and price per page.

1985 Amendment: Deleted former (1)(b) that read: "clerk of each court of record of this state, one copy"; and in (2) near beginning, after "secretary of state", deleted "clerk of each court of record in the state".

1983 Amendments: Chapter 163 in (1)(e) substituted "county commissioners or governing body of each county" for "each county clerk", changed "one copy" to "at least one but not more than two copies", and inserted "as the county commissioners or governing body of the county may determine"; in (1)(j) changed "three copies" to "two copies"; and near beginning of (2), before "each county", deleted "clerk of".

Chapter 277 substituted reference to state special revenue fund for reference to revolving fund.

Administrative Rules

ARM 1.3.308 Rulemaking — petition to adopt, amend, or repeal rule.

Case Notes

Milk Producer's Petition to Change Rule Not Contested Case — Reasonable Necessity: An administrative proceeding following a stipulated settlement that used a hearing examiner and a formal evidentiary hearing concerning a milk producer's proposed amendments to the Board of Livestock's 12-day "sell by" date rule was a rulemaking proceeding subject to an arbitrary and capricious standard, rather than a contested case subject to judicial review under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7, and the Board of Livestock did not violate that standard when it considered evidence to maintain or abandon the 12-day rule even though it did not issue a written statement supporting its decisions. Further, the 12-day rule did not contradict statutory authorization for the rule or engraft additional or contradictory requirements, and a rule to control milk standards was reasonably necessary to regulate milk product quality and safety. Core-Mark International, Inc. v. Bd. of Livestock, 2014 MT 197, 376 Mont. 25, 329 P.3d 1278.

Statute Requiring "Necessary" Rules Requires Rulemaking Hearing — Mandamus Proper Remedy: Pursuant to 5-7-111 and this section, Common Cause submitted a petition to the Commissioner of Political Practices requesting the adoption of a definition of "lobbying". When the Commissioner denied the petition, Common Cause brought a petition for mandamus. The District Court dismissed pursuant to former Rule 12(b)(6), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). The Supreme Court reversed, citing Commonwealth of Pa. v. Nat'l Ass'n of Flood Insurers, 520 F2d 11 (3d Cir. 1975), and holding that the language in 5-7-111 requiring rules "necessary" to implement the statute mandated the Commissioner to hold a hearing to determine whether rules were necessary. The Supreme Court held that the discretionary authority contained in this section to adopt or not adopt a particular rule does not give the Commissioner the authority to avoid altogether the rulemaking required by 5-7-111. For this reason, the Supreme Court also held that mandamus was a proper remedy because the Commissioner had a clear legal duty to conduct rulemaking procedures to determine what rules were necessary. Common Cause of Mont. v. Argenbright, 276 M 382, 917 P2d 425, 53 St. Rep. 386 (1996). (See 1997 amendment clearly stating that a hearing need not be held.)

Petition for Rule Amendment Rendered Moot by Legislation: The Legislature, by placing automobiles and recreational vehicles in separate and distinct classes, emasculated plaintiff's contention that different methods of valuation and different appraisal guides were being improperly used by the Department of Revenue to appraise automobiles and recreational vehicles. The enactment of 15-6-110 and 15-6-111 rendered plaintiff's petition for rule amendment moot. Wetzel v. Dept. of Revenue, 180 M 123, 589 P2d 162 (1979).

Legislative Review of Rules

2-4-402. Powers of committees — duty to review rules.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 19 in (1) substituted "The administrative rules review committees shall review" for "Except for rules proposed by the department of revenue, the administrative code committee shall review"; deleted former (2) that provided: "(2) The revenue oversight committee shall review all rules proposed by the department of revenue"; in (2) substituted "appropriate administrative rule review committee" for "administrative code committee"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 17, 1999.

1989 Amendment: At beginning of (1) inserted exception clause; at beginning of (2) substituted "The revenue oversight committee shall review all rules" for "Rules" and after "revenue" deleted "may be reviewed only in regard to the procedural requirements of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act"; and in (3) inserted "administrative code".

1983 Amendment: Inserted (3)(a) relating to access to certain agency records.

Administrative Code Committee Bills: Senate Bill 45 (Ch. 78, L. 1983), requiring necessity for administrative rules to be demonstrated in the rulemaking record and allowing the Administrative Code Committee to review that record, and House Bill 35 (Ch. 466, L. 1983), requiring a contemporaneous grant of rulemaking authority, were introduced by request of the Committee. See Administrative Code Committee Report, December 1982, Montana Legislative Council.

Review of Rules Adopted Prior to April 14, 1975: Chapter 64, L. 1983, provided: "Section 1. Review of existing rules required. Notwithstanding the provisions of 2-4-402, the administrative code committee shall review all administrative rules adopted prior to April 14, 1975, by agencies subject to the provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. The committee shall review the rules to determine whether agencies have substantially complied with subsections (5) and (6) of 2-4-305, as that section read on November 18, 1982.

Section 2. Power of the committee. (1) If the committee determines that a rule violates 2-4-305(5) or 2-4-305(6), as that section read on November 18, 1982, it may:

(a) take those steps authorized by 2-4-402(3)(a); or

(b) poll the legislature in accordance with 2-4-403, as that section may be amended by Senate Bill No. 33. If 2-4-403 is not amended by Senate Bill No. 33, no poll of the legislature may be taken by the committee on any rule reviewed pursuant to [section 1]. [Senate Bill 33 was not passed.]

(2) The committee may advise an agency concerning such matters as clarity, form, style, grammar, punctuation, and spelling with respect to any rule reviewed under [section 1].

Section 3. Committee to report to legislature. Prior to January 1, 1987, the committee shall prepare a report of its activities and any recommendations to be submitted to the legislature.

Section 4. Effective date — termination. This act is effective on passage and approval and terminates January 1, 1987."

House Bill 59 (Ch. 64, L. 1983) was introduced by request of the Administrative Code Committee. See Administrative Code Committee Report, December 1982, Montana Legislative Council.

1981 Amendment: Deleted a reference to a hearing in accordance with 2-4-302 through 2-4-305 from end of (3)(a); deleted "prepare recommendations for the adoption, amendment, or rejection of a rule" after "proposing the rule" in (3)(a).

(a) the cost to the state of administering and enforcing the rule;

(b) the aggregate cost of compliance to all persons affected; and

(c) any economic benefit of compliance to all persons affected.

(2) The statement must be filed with the secretary of state for publication in the register and mailed to persons who have requested advance notice of the agency's rulemaking proceedings. The statement must be published and mailed at least 20 days prior to the adoption, amendment, or repeal of the rule. If a hearing is held, it must be published 20 days prior to the hearing.

(3) If it is impossible to formulate such an estimate, the reasons for impossibility of formulation must be published instead of the estimate."; and inserted (6), relating to environmental impact statements, that was enacted as a separate section by sec. 2, Ch. 665, L. 1983.

2-4-406. Committee objection to violation of authority for rule — effect.

Uniform Commissioner's Comment

[See chapter compiler's comments.]

Uniform law commissioner's comment reproduced only in part reflecting Montana's adoption of only a portion of section 3-204, Model Administrative Procedure Act (1981): "...If a legislature wishes to vest its administrative rules review committee with more than purely recommendatory authority, it should enact bracketed subsection (d) [subsections (d)(1), (d)(3), (d)(4), and (d)(5) are basis of 2-4-406]. Subsection (d) is a substantially modified Iowa Act, Section 17A.4(4)(a)-(b). This provision provides an effective legislative check, by means less than statute, on unlawful agency rules. It authorizes a legislative committee to file a formal objection to a rule on the ground that it is procedurally or substantively unlawful. That objection would detail the precise reasons why the committee believes the rule to be unlawful. Notice that such an objection has been filed would be printed adjacent to the rule wherever it is published, and the objection itself would be made available for public inspection. The formal committee objection would then shift to the particular agency the burden of establishing that the rule is procedurally and substantively lawful in any subsequent proceeding for judicial review or for enforcement of the rule. If the agency fails to meet its unusual burden of persuasion in that case, the court would invalidate the entire rule, or the relevant portion thereof.

The filing of a formal objection to a rule by the appropriate legislative committee will place the adopting agency in a dilemma. The agency can rely upon the rule as it is, thereby accepting this special burden of demonstrating that the rule is wholly lawful in a future court case, or the agency can change the rule in order to reinstate the usual presumption of validity that attaches to an agency rule. The extent to which an agency will be amenable to modifying the rule to eliminate any objection of the committee will obviously depend upon the extent to which the agency thinks it needs the challenged rule in its original form, and the agency's confidence that it can overcome its special burden of persuading the court that the rule in that form is lawful in all respects. If the rule's validity is doubtful because it is not clearly procedurally and substantively lawful, the agency will usually modify the rule: for the reversed burden of persuasion will result in the invalidation of many rules of doubtful legality when they are challenged in court. Of course, the legislative committee's objection authority would not interfere with the operation or effectiveness of clearly valid agency rules. The committee is only authorized to alter one aspect of the procedure by which the legality of the rule will be finally determined by the courts.

As a consequence, a legislative committee with authority to object to agency rules in the manner described in subsection (d) [2-4-406] will be a credible check on illegal agency rule making. The committee-objection mechanism proposed here may be justified, therefore, on the ground that its mere existence is likely to make agencies act more responsibly in exercising their rule-making powers; for they will know that the shift in the burden of persuasion after a committee objection will, in close cases, make judicial invalidation of the rule much more likely than at present. Actual exercise of its objection authority by a legislative committee will also have the added benefit of inducing agencies which have issued rules of doubtful or clear illegality to withdraw them, thereby sparing the public the cost of complying with those rules or contesting them in the courts. Finally, it seems desirable to provide a means by which members of the public who are aggrieved by allegedly illegal agency rules can, in those cases where their claims are especially credible, be aided in their efforts to secure a judicial invalidation of those rules. A good way to separate the credible claims deserving such help from those that do not is by securing an evaluation of the legality of the rules in question by an independent responsible body external to the agency. And a good way to aid such aggrieved persons whenever that independent evaluation agrees with their contention is to shift the burden of persuasion in any subsequent judicial proceeding involving the validity of those rules from the assailant, who had to convince the court they were unlawful, to the agency, which is then required to convince the court that they are lawful.

It is also logical to shift to the agency the burden of demonstrating the validity of a rule in subsequent litigation when a more politically accountable and independent body objects thereto. Unlike the agency, the legislative committee members are directly accountable to the public and represent the body that created the agency and invested it with whatever authority the agency may lawfully exercise. The usual presumption of validity accorded an agency rule, therefore, may reasonably be deemed inappropriate when a legislative committee believes the rule to be unlawful. Furthermore, legislatures have always been assumed to have the authority, which they have often exercised, to allocate the burden of persuasion in court litigation, so long as they act "reasonably" when they do so. And a shift in the burden of persuasion as to the validity of a particular rule in these circumstances certainly seems "reasonable." Note also that there is a clear standard against which the committee is to operate when it objects: "beyond the procedural or substantive authority delegated to the adopting agency ["not to have been proposed or adopted in substantial compliance with ..." in 2-4-406(1)]." And the committee must include the specific reasons for its action in the objection so that courts and others who wish to examine the specific grounds supporting an objection may easily do so.

In addition, it should be noted that the reversed burden-of-persuasion mechanism is a fair compromise between the extremes of authorizing one or two houses of the legislature or a legislative committee to veto, temporarily or permanently, rules issued by an agency, and authorizing a legislative committee merely to recommend to the legislature that it overrule such regulations by statute. The undesirability of such a one or two house or a committee veto was discussed above.

Of course, as paragraph (6) of subsection (d) [not enacted in 2-4-406 but similar to 2-4-412(4)] states, the failure of the appropriate legislative committee to file a formal objection to a rule should not be construed by a reviewing court as an implied legislative authorization of the rule. Time constraints will often prevent the appropriate committee from carefully reviewing all agency rules; and an affected party may decide to seek judicial relief directly rather than a legislative committee objection. Therefore, it would be unfair to imply negatively legislative authorization for any rule merely because no objection to it had been filed by the committee.

Currently, Iowa, Montana, and Vermont provide for a scheme whereby the burden of persuasion as to the validity of a rule is reversed after an objection has been filed to the rule by a legislative committee. See Iowa Act, Section 4(4), Montana Act, Section 2-4-506(3) [now 2-4-406(4), first sentence], and Vermont Act, Section 842. The constitutionality of that scheme has been impliedly upheld in Iowa. In doing so, the Iowa Supreme Court voided certain agency rules solely because the agency, after those rules were formally objected to as unlawful by the appropriate legislative committee, could not meet its burden of persuading the court that they were lawful in all respects. The court intimated that if the objection had not been filed it might have held the rules valid. See Schmitt v. Iowa Dept. of Social Services, 263 N.W.2d 739 (Iowa 1978). In another Iowa case, the court upheld an agency rule after an objection to it had been filed by the appropriate legislative committee, because the agency successfully met its burden and persuaded the court that the rule was lawful. Iowa Auto Dealers Ass'n v. Iowa Dept. Revenue, 301 N.W.2d 760 (1981).

See Bonfield, "The Iowa Administrative Procedure Act: Background, Construction, Applicability, Public Access to Agency Law, the Rulemaking Process," 60 Iowa L.Rev. 731 at 905-924 (1975), for a discussion of the desirability and operation of this reversed burden-of-persuasion mechanism after an authorized legislative committee formally objects to a rule.

Though not provided for in the text of subsection (d) [2-4-406], a state enacting it might also consider adding to that subsection a provision embodying the following notion: whenever a rule is invalidated because an agency fails to meet its legislative committee imposed special burden of persuasion under subsection (d)(5) [2-4-406(4), first sentence], judgment shall also be rendered against the agency for court costs, including a reasonable attorney's fee. Addition of a provision providing for reimbursement of this sort would encourage aggrieved persons to litigate the validity of rules that are tainted by a formal, legislative committee objection, and would thus remove one obstacle—financial expense—that discourages persons from seeking judicial review of unlawful agency rules. The Iowa Act has such a provision in its Section 4(4). If it is desired to add a provision of this type to Section 3-204(d)(5) [2-4-406(4)] it might be added at the very end and provide:

and render judgment against the agency for court costs. Court costs include a reasonable attorney's fee and are payable by the [state comptroller] from the support appropriations of the agency that adopted the rule...."

The preamble to House Bill 67 read: "WHEREAS, section 2-4-412, MCA, provides for the direct repeal of administrative rules by joint resolution of the Legislature and requires changes to be made in rules or new rules to be adopted in accordance with joint resolutions of the Legislature; and

WHEREAS, on March 18, 1982, District Judge Gordon Bennett ruled in the case of The Montana Taxpayers' Association v. The Department of Revenue, Lewis and Clark County Civil No. 47126, that the Legislature's authority to mandate a change in administrative rules by joint resolution is unconstitutional, as a violation of the doctrine of separation of powers; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature considers it desirable to advise agencies by joint resolution that rules be adopted, amended, or repealed and expects its directions to agencies to have the force of law when adopted in the form of a bill.

THEREFORE, it is the intent of the Legislature to provide for the direct repeal of administrative rules by bill; to provide for legislative requests or advice for the adoption, amendment, or repeal of administrative rules by joint resolution; to provide for legislative direction for the adoption, amendment, or repeal of administrative rules by bill; and to require agency compliance with that direction when adopted in bill form."

1981 Amendment: Inserted (4) relating to effect of Legislature's failure to object to a rule.
Severability: Section 8, Ch. 381, L. 1981, was a severability section.

Legislative Acquiescence: That the Legislature intended to grant the Board of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Board of Environmental Review) authority to enact a rule controlling open burning under 75-2-203 can be ascertained by examining several sections relating to establishment of air standards and Board rulemaking authority and because, for the three legislative sessions the rule has been in existence, the Legislature has not taken any action pursuant to this section to amend the rule except to provide that applicable area fire control agencies be notified of the issuance of open-burning permits. Case Notes

Workers' Compensation Court Authorized to Issue Only Limited Declaratory Judgments: Several workers filed claims in the Workers' Compensation Court seeking benefits. In a separate action, the workers filed a petition for a declaratory judgment in the Workers' Compensation Court seeking a declaration that the claimant disclosure waiver procedures in 39-71-604(3) and 50-16-527(5) violated the workers' right to privacy and deprived them of property without due process. The Workers' Compensation Court granted summary judgment for the workers and declared the statutory provisions unconstitutional. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The Workers' Compensation Court erred in concluding that it had jurisdiction to enter a declaratory judgment in the context of this case. As a court of limited jurisdiction, the Workers' Compensation Court is statutorily authorized to issue declaratory rulings only in the context of a dispute concerning benefits under the Workers' Compensation Act and only as to the applicability of any statutory provision, rule, or order of an agency to that dispute. Benefits were not at issue in this case, so the Workers' Compensation Court did not have jurisdiction to issue a declaratory judgment concerning the constitutionality of 39-71-604(3) and 50-16-527(5), nor is the Workers' Compensation Court a court of record because it does not appear in the list in 3-1-102. (Note that the Legislature added the Workers' Compensation Court to the list of courts of record effective October 1, 2007.) Thompson v. St., 2007 MT 185, 338 M 511, 167 P3d 867 (2007).

Jurisdiction and Nature of Workers' Compensation Court: A driver was injured while operating a tractor-trailer owned by one company and leased to another company that was in turn a division of a third company. The driver was awarded workers' compensation benefits. When the Workers' Compensation Uninsured Employers' Fund sought to collect the amount of the benefits from the company that owned the rig and from the third company, both companies denied any responsibility for the employment of the injured man. The Workers' Compensation Court and the Fund could not agree on the court's jurisdiction, and the instant appeal followed. The Supreme Court determined that the dispute involved benefits payable to the claimant, the Workers' Compensation Court has exclusive jurisdiction, the legislative history relied upon by the Fund and the history of the court indicated that the jurisdiction of the Workers' Compensation Court went beyond adjudication of workers' claims only when a dispute is related to benefits payable to a claimant, and that the Workers' Compensation Court has declaratory power under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. St. v. Hunt, 191 M 514, 625 P2d 539, 38 St. Rep. 421 (1981).

Subcommittee Comments

[See chapter compiler's comments.]

The state supreme court has not always been willing to take judicial notice of administrative rules. In view of the filing and publication requirements in the [proposed] MAPA, this requirement, which will eliminate the necessity for submitting proof as to the existence and authenticity of rules, is warranted.

Case Notes

Family Member Exclusion Inapplicable to Claim for Unpaid Back Wages — One Hundred Ten Percent Penalty Applied — Attorney Fees and Costs Properly Awarded: Greta worked for her husband's broadcasting company as a traffic system manager, initially working without hourly wages or a salary. About 10 months after her employment began, her husband offered Greta a monthly salary and agreed that Greta should be paid retroactively to the first day on which she started working, preparing a memorandum of understanding to that effect. The M.O.U. also provided that Greta be repaid for the 10-month period according to a mutually agreeable schedule. Greta continued to work several months at salary, but the marriage began to dissolve, and she left her position without receiving any back wages. The company eventually made some payments, but Greta ultimately sued for unpaid wages plus penalties under the wage protection statutes. The District Court granted Greta summary judgment on the issue of whether unpaid wages were owed and, after trial, ordered the company to pay Greta the amount still owing. However, the court declined to award the maximum 110% penalty, establishing a 55% penalty instead and awarding Greta her attorney fees and costs. Both parties appealed. The company claimed that the penalty and fees should not have been awarded because, as a family member, Greta's employment relationship was excluded under 39-3-406. However, that exception applies to the minimum wage and overtime provisions of the employment relationship, not to the failure to timely pay wages, which is governed by 39-3-205. Once Greta became a salaried employee, she was entitled to the rights and remedies afforded to all employees under state law. Therefore, the District Court properly determined that back wages were owing. However, under ARM 24.16.7551, an employer who pays some or all of a contested wage may be relieved in whole or in part of paying a penalty, unless the employer has previously violated similar wage and hour statutes within 3 years prior to the date of the filing of the wage claim. The District Court erred in not taking judicial notice of the administrative rule. Because the company had been the subject of at least three prior wage claims by other employees, the special circumstances of the rule applied, so the 110% penalty, as a matter of law, applied to the back wages owed to Greta at the time of her separation from employment. Thus, the Supreme Court vacated the 55% award and directed a 110% award from that date. Further, the District Court's award of attorney fees and costs was based on substantial evidence and was proper under 39-3-214, including Greta's attorney fees incurred on appeal. Reier Broadcasting Co. v. Reier, 2000 MT 120, 299 M 463, 1 P3d 940, 57 St. Rep. 504 (2000).

Case Notes

No Error in Adoption of Water Quality Rules — Standard of Review: Plaintiff contended that the District Court erroneously applied the incorrect standard of review in holding that the defendant Board of Environmental Review properly adopted rules regarding the numeric standards applicable to the sodium adsorption ratio and electrical conductivity as components of water produced with coal bed methane and discharged into state waterways. The court applied the standard of review in the declaratory judgment provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA), rather than the standard in MAPA for the adoption and publication of rules. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The District Court decision specifically addressed the factors in 2-4-305(6)(a) and (6)(b), in that the rules were consistent with requirements of the state Clean Water Act and the Water Quality Act and were reasonably necessary to protect state waters in light of projected growth in the coal bed methane sector and the difficulty in issuing objective and consistent discharge permits. The Board reviewed and relied on copious scientific data to draft rules that met the state law mandate for scientific justification. The Board did not adopt rules with an arbitrary and capricious disregard for the purpose of the statutes, and the District Court did not apply the incorrect standard of review under the circumstances with which it was presented. Pennaco Energy, Inc. v. Mont. Bd. of Envtl. Review, 2008 MT 425, 347 M 415, 199 P3d 191 (2008).

Agency Prerogative to Repeal Administrative Rules as Long as Statute Not Violated — Repeal of Administrative Definition of Municipal Use in Water Use Act: Although the term "municipal use" is used repeatedly in the Water Use Act, the term was not statutorily defined. In 2005, the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation adopted ARM 36.12.101, that defined municipal use as water appropriated by and provided for those in and around a municipality or unincorporated town. Under the rule, only a municipality or unincorporated town arguably qualified as an acceptable appropriator, when previously it was only necessary that water be appropriated for those in a municipality or unincorporated area. About 1 year after the rule was adopted, the Department sought to repeal the rule because the definition was not in keeping with the historical interpretation of the term by the Department and the Montana Water Court. Following repeal, plaintiffs requested that the District Court declare that repeal of the rule was invalid. The District Court held that by repealing the rule: (1) the definition of municipal use was rendered nebulous and unfairly accommodating of private developers' applications for water use permits; (2) the purpose of the basin closure law to protect and preserve existing water rights would be undermined, potentially threatening senior water rights in an already overappropriated basin; and (3) legislative intent was contravened and plaintiffs' water rights were placed in jeopardy. Plaintiffs' request was granted and repeal of the rule was declared invalid. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The court first determined that the issue was justiciable because it continued to present a controversy concerning the nature of water rights applications and because plaintiffs had a statutory right to challenge the repeal of the rule under 2-4-506, although plaintiffs had the burden to show that the repeal interfered with or impaired their legal rights or privileges or that repeal was implemented with an arbitrary or capricious disregard for the purpose of the implementing legislation as evidenced by the documented legislative intent. Plaintiffs did not meet their burden. The rule was not in effect long enough for plaintiffs to demonstrate that their rights or privileges were impaired or threatened by the repeal, and private entities had previously been granted municipal use permits. Additionally, plaintiffs failed to show that the repeal was arbitrary or capricious. It was the agency's prerogative to enact rules to aid in the permitting process and to repeal rules that were not of assistance as long as the agency does not violate 2-4-506. Lohmeier v. St., 2008 MT 307, 346 M 23, 192 P3d 1137 (2008).

No Allegations of Fact or Law on Which to Base Cause of Action — Claim Properly Dismissed: Taxpayers brought a civil action in 1996 against the Department of Revenue and others, seeking declaratory judgment relief and refund of property taxes paid in 1989 through 1992, based upon their rights as determined in Dept. of Revenue v. Sheehy, 262 M 104, 862 P2d 1181 (1993). In that case, the Supreme Court found the stratified sales assessment ratio valuation adjustment in 15-7-111 to be unconstitutional. As part of their causes of action, taxpayers asserted a claim pursuant to this section, but as the District Court noted, at no time did the taxpayers contend that any of the administrative rules mentioned in their complaint were invalid or inapplicable. For this reason, the Supreme Court held that the District Court did not err in dismissing the taxpayers' complaint insofar as the complaint was premised upon this section. Samson v. St., 285 M 310, 948 P2d 232, 54 St. Rep. 1165 (1997).

Amended Petition Seeking Declaratory Judgment Not Subject to Thirty-Day Rule on Proceedings for Judicial Review: A declaratory action pursuant to this section is not subject to the 30-day limit imposed on proceedings for judicial review in contested cases under 2-4-702. An amended petition seeking to void amendments to administrative rules, to the extent that the petition seeks declaratory judgment on the validity of those amendments, is also not subject to the 30-day limit. Part Case Notes

Death of Inmate While in Custody — Human Rights Commission — Administrative Appeal and Review: An 18-year-old died from delirium tremens after being arrested by Blaine County authorities and while in the custody of the Hill County Detention Center. His estate brought a case before the Human Rights Bureau, alleging that the two counties had discriminated on the basis of race and disability. The hearing officer concluded that the counties had not discriminated against the estate. On appeal, the Human Rights Commission found clear error in the hearing officer's findings and reversed. On appeal of the Commission's findings, the District Court reversed, vacated the Commission's decision, and reinstated the hearing officer's order. The estate moved to alter or amend. The District Court, acting through a second judge following the retirement of the first judge, concluded that the first judge had fashioned an improper remedy. Both parties appealed to the Supreme Court, which held that the Commission had abused its discretion by modifying the findings of the hearing examiner without first determining that the findings were not supported by substantial evidence, the Commission abused its discretion by applying the wrong standard of review, the first judge correctly concluded that the Commission had improperly modified the hearing officer's findings, the replacement judge had incorrectly concluded that the original judge had erred as a matter of law, and the Montana Human Rights Act was not a proper legal remedy for the estate. Blaine County & Hill County v. Estate of Longsoldier, Jr., 2017 MT 80, 387 Mont. 202, 394 P.3d 159.

No Quasi-Judicial Immunity in Granting Medical License to Doctor Who Had Committed Unprofessional Conduct: Irrespective of whether the functions of the Board of Medical Examiners in investigating a license application of a doctor who had previously been subject to disciplinary action in other states for unprofessional conduct were discretionary actions, the Board was not operating in the context of a controversy or adversarial proceeding. Thus, the District Court committed error when it granted the state's motion for summary judgment based upon quasi-judicial immunity. Nelson v. St., 2008 MT 336, 346 M 206, 195 P3d 293, (2008).

Access to Public Service Records — Media Required to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Prior to Court Action — Review of Confidentiality Rules Ordered: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. The Commission denied the request on confidentiality grounds, but rather than challenging the confidentiality claims through the Commission's administrative procedures, the organizations filed an action in District Court. The court proceeded to make factual and legal determinations to determine whether the requested documents constituted constitutionally protected trade secrets or proprietary information without the benefit of the Commission developing a record or making threshold determinations on the complex issues. The Supreme Court held that it was improper to bypass the administrative agency and take the issue to District Court without exhausting the Commission's administrative procedures, so the District Court was reversed with orders to remand the case to the Commission for further consideration. However, the Supreme Court also required the Commission to review its administrative rules related to confidentiality challenges because the rules primarily addressed requests for information from competitor utilities and did not necessarily apply to media challenges. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Board of Psychologists — Immunity From Suit: Rahrer sought to hold the Board of Psychologists liable for damages arising out of a contested case hearing involving the Board's investigation of a complaint against Rahrer, a licensed psychologist. Applying Butz v. Economou, 438 US 478, 57 L Ed 2d 895, 98 S Ct 2894 (1978), and Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988), the Supreme Court held that the Board of Psychologists was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity. Initiating, investigating, and presenting a case pursuant to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act involve precisely the types of decisions for which the state and its agencies are granted quasi-judicial immunity. Rahrer v. Bd. of Psychologists, 2000 MT 9, 298 M 28, 993 P2d 680, 57 St. Rep. 53 (2000).

Attorney Entitled to Absolute Quasi-Judicial Immunity for Actions in Contested Case Proceedings: The doctrine of immunity evolved to protect not only judges but also certain participants in the judicial process whose functions are closely associated with those of judicial officers. The immunity that those participants receive is quasi-judicial immunity, which is not a mere defense to liability but an absolute immunity from suit. Like judicial immunity, quasi-judicial immunity benefits the public by ensuring that quasi-judicial officers exercise their functions unfettered by fear of legal consequences, as long as the functions are within the scope of the officers' jurisdiction and authorized by law. A state attorney who discharged his duty under professional rules of conduct when notifying a contested case hearings examiner that a certified public accountant who was representing a client was practicing law without a license was protected by quasi-judicial immunity and was not subject to suit. Steele v. McGregor, 1998 MT 85, 288 M 238, 956 P2d 1364, 55 St. Rep. 349 (1998).

Hearings Examiner Entitled to Judicial Immunity: The state Department of Labor and Industry's hearings examiners perform adjudicatory functions comparable to those performed by judges under similar safeguards. As a result, those hearings examiners are entitled to absolute judicial immunity when acting in their adjudicatory capacities. This immunity results from the independence that judges need to make decisions in matters involving such things as monetary and liberty interests, without fear of reprisal from dissatisfied litigants. Absolute immunity is immunity from suit, rather than a mere defense to liability. Judicial immunity is dependent on the challenged conduct being an official act within the judge's broad statutory jurisdiction but does not depend on acting correctly. A person acting in a judicial capacity will not be deprived of immunity simply because that person acted maliciously, mistakenly, or in excess of authority. Steele v. McGregor, 1998 MT 85, 288 M 238, 956 P2d 1364, 55 St. Rep. 349 (1998).

Cancellation of State Agricultural Lease for Nonpayment — Hearing Not Required — District Court Jurisdiction to Review Cancellation: There is no provision in 77-6-506 requiring the Department to conduct a hearing when canceling a state land lease for nonpayment, nor is a hearing required pursuant to the due process clause of Art. II, sec. 17, Mont. Const. The District Court thus has no jurisdiction to review a lease cancellation for nonpayment under contested case procedures because lease cancellation for nonpayment does not constitute a contested case. However, the District Court does retain inherent jurisdiction to review administrative decisions and erred in deciding that it did not have jurisdiction. The standard of review is whether the agency acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. Johansen v. St., 1998 MT 51, 288 M 39, 955 P2d 653, 55 St. Rep. 211 (1998), following N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862 (1989). See also Winchell v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 1999 MT 11, 293 M 89, 972 P2d 1132, 56 St. Rep. 48 (1999). On remand, the District Court determined that the rent had been paid on time, and the Department appealed. The Supreme Court held that the Department had uncontroverted evidence before it, in the form of an affidavit from the postmaster, that Johansen had timely mailed the rental payment on January 2. So although the envelope did not receive a postmark until January 3, the Department's decision to not renew the lease for nonpayment was arbitrary and capricious and not supported by substantial evidence. The District Court's holding was affirmed. Johansen v. St., 1999 MT 187, 295 M 339, 983 P2d 962, 56 St. Rep. 731 (1999).

Part Not Applicable to Unemployment Insurance Claims: The unemployment compensation insurance law contains a complete procedure for hearing and determining undisputed claims for unemployment insurance. The Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board), as a quasi-judicial board, may consider not only the record made before the appeals referee but new evidence produced at the Board hearing. The provisions of MAPA are unworkable when an attempt is made to apply them to determine claims for unemployment insurance benefits. It is an incorrect interpretation of statutory law to hold that the Board has no power to overturn the findings of fact of the appeals referee. In reviewing the Board's decision, the District Court is limited by the provisions of 39-51-2410. Decker Coal Co. v. Employment Security Div., 205 M 1, 667 P2d 923, 40 St. Rep. 1056 (1983).

Case Notes

Challenge of Environmental Assessment — No Jurisdiction for Administrative Review: A grain company sought a permit to build a high-speed grain loading terminal near Pompeys Pillar national monument. The permit was granted and plaintiff, a nonprofit association supporting the monument's preservation, began administrative proceedings in an effort to overturn the permit issuance on grounds that the Department of Environmental Quality erred in its preparation of the environmental assessment related to the permit. An administrative law judge concluded that the Department acted arbitrarily and capriciously by issuing a permit without preparing an environmental impact statement. The Department filed exceptions to the administrative law judge's conclusions with the Board of Environmental Review. The Board ultimately affirmed the Department's decision to issue the permit, and plaintiff appealed to District Court. The Department contended that because the challenge to the administrative decisions did not contain any air quality issues, but only addressed environmental assessment issues governed by the Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA), and that because MEPA does not provide for administrative review of challenges to MEPA compliance, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. The District Court agreed and dismissed plaintiff's petition for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Had plaintiff challenged air quality issues, it would have been entitled to administrative proceedings. However, plaintiff's challenge pertained only to issues related to the environmental assessment, which is governed by MEPA. MEPA requires that a compliance challenge be brought in District Court, rather than through administrative proceedings. Thus, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. Plaintiff's petition was properly dismissed. Pompeys Pillar Historical Ass'n v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2002 MT 352, 313 M 401, 61 P3d 148 (2002).

Notice of Administrative Hearing Regarding Unemployment Insurance Proceedings Not Violative of Due Process Rights — Administrative Hearings Not Governed by Rules of Civil Procedure: In an unemployment insurance case, the notice of appeal sent to the attorney for Wheelsmith Fabrication, Inc. (Wheelsmith), stated that the purpose of an administrative hearing was to determine whether Hall was discharged for misconduct connected with her work or directly affecting her employment. Wheelsmith contended that the notice failed to adequately inform Wheelsmith of the factual claims involved, constituting a denial of due process of law. Applying the traditional due process balancing test in Mathews v. Eldridge, 424 US 319, 47 L Ed 2d 18, 96 S Ct 893 (1976), the Supreme Court held that Wheelsmith failed to show a risk of erroneous deprivation of a private interest affected by official government action. Further, unemployment insurance proceedings are governed by administrative rule, rather than the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure, and pursuant to this section, a notice of hearing must contain a short and plain statement of the matters asserted. The notice sent to Wheelsmith's attorney met the statutory criteria of a short and plain statement, and the District Court did not err in holding that Wheelsmith's due process rights were not violated by the notice of hearing. Wheelsmith Fabrication, Inc. v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2000 MT 27, 298 M 187, 993 P2d 713, 57 St. Rep. 131 (2000). See also ARM 24.11.201 and 24.11.317.

Unfair Labor Practices — Due Process — Collateral Estoppel: In an action charging unfair labor practices, an employee was collaterally estopped from relitigating the issue of whether his due process rights were violated by the 3-year delay between the filing of his charges and the administrative hearing on the charges. The issue was previously decided, a final judgment was rendered, and the party against whom the claim was advanced remained the same or was privy of the earlier party. Klundt v. St., 222 M 172, 720 P2d 1181, 43 St. Rep. 1148 (1986).

Contested Case — Requirement for Judicial Review — Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Plaintiff, a nursing home operator, was notified by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) that it was disallowing certain nursing care costs claimed by plaintiff. The Department notified plaintiff that a hearing could be requested under the Department's administrative rules. Plaintiff requested time extensions in which to submit objections, and the Department agreed. The Department finally set a time limitation that plaintiff did not meet. The Department then filed its reimbursement rate for plaintiff. Plaintiff filed a complaint in District Court for judicial review of the Department's determination. The District Court dismissed the case. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that only a party who has exhausted all administrative remedies is entitled to judicial review if aggrieved in a contested case. A contested case is a determination of legal rights after an opportunity for hearing. Because there was no hearing in this case, dismissal was proper. B.G.M. Enterprises v. St., 673 P2d 1205, 40 St. Rep. 1827 (1983) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports).

Complaint in Compliance With Notice Requirements of MAPA: The Billings Education Association's complaint complied with the notice requirements of Montana Administrative Procedure Act when it alleged that the mailing of individual contracts violated section 59-1605(1)(a) and (e), R.C.M. 1947 (now 39-31-401(1) and (5)), which prohibits coercion of employees in the exercise of certain rights protected by the collective bargaining law. The word "coercion" is not a talisman without which the complaint fails. The allegations were sufficient to inform the Board of Trustees that the issue of coercion would be litigated. Bd. of Trustees v. State ex rel. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 185 M 104, 604 P2d 778 (1979).

No Hearing Required Before Issuance of Permit: The Hard Rock Mining Act (HRMA) does not provide for public participation in the decisionmaking process that precedes the issuance of a permit. Further, at the time pertinent events transpired, HRMA did not provide opportunity for hearing prior to issuance of a permit. Thus, the constitutional right to participation and the contested hearing provisions of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act are not invoked. Kadillak v. The Anaconda Co., 184 M 127, 602 P2d 147 (1979).

MAPA Not Sole Remedy: The Public Employees' Retirement Board was estopped to claim that the petitioner's sole remedy was under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) and that this remedy was not timely exercised because the board at no time indicated it was bound by and acting pursuant to MAPA with its notice and hearing requirements. State ex rel. Stowe v. Bd. of Administration, PERS, 172 M 337, 564 P2d 167 (1977).

Failure to Object — Defective Notice: When Consumer Counsel appeared as a representative of the consuming public, participated in all proceedings before the Public Service Commission regarding a proposed natural gas rate hike, and raised no issue on the sufficiency of the notice of the proceedings, he cannot now raise this issue on appeal. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C. & Mont. Power Co., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

Power of Hearing Examiner to Limit Case to Proof of Matters Disclosed Through Discovery: Byard brought an action against Montana Rail Link, alleging sex discrimination in employment practices. Her attorney, during discovery, asked for the substance of the testimony to be offered by one of Montana Rail Link's witnesses, but the information was never produced. During the hearing, Montana Rail Link attempted to introduce the witnesses' testimony and was not allowed to do so by the hearing examiner. Based upon ARM 24.9.317, adopted by the Commission for Human Rights, the Supreme Court upheld the right of the hearing examiner to limit the prosecution or defense of a contested case to proof of matters disclosed through discovery when one party does not engage in full and complete discovery. 2005 Amendment: Chapter 347 in (1)(a) inserted second sentence requiring disposition of contested case to be in writing; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 305 in (1)(b) in three places after "be" substituted "deposited" for "recorded", in first sentence near beginning before "settlement" inserted "monetary" and after "proceeds" deleted "including cash or other assets, whether received by the state or a third party", in second sentence near beginning after "designated for" deleted "recording of", and deleted former third sentence that read: "The provisions of this section do not apply to the portions of a settlement negotiated on behalf of or paid to a party other than the state"; inserted (1)(c) requiring certain state agency nonmonetary settlements to be recorded in a nonstate, nonfederal state special revenue account; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 21, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 451 in (1) inserted second through fourth sentences regarding recording of settlement proceeds; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 22, 1999.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 451, L. 1999, provided: "[This act] applies to any arbitration, compromise, or settlement of actions entered into on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 22, 1999.

Case Notes

Denturists' Due Process Rights Not Violated by Placement Under Board of Dentistry: Denturist plaintiffs contended that the policies, membership, and restrictions imposed on denturity by the Board of Dentistry was a violation of due process, entitling plaintiffs to a federal claim under 42 U.S.C. 1983. The District Court rejected the claim, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Board was comprised mostly of dentists, under Friedman v. Rogers, 440 US 1 (1979), due process does not require that a regulatory board equally represent all professions subject to that board's regulations, nor is there a constitutional right for a profession to be regulated by a board that is sympathetic to the commercial practice of that profession. Additionally, under Zinermon v. Burch, 494 US 113 (1990), to determine whether a procedural due process violation has occurred, the adequacy of the state's process must be examined for constitutionality. Here, plaintiffs did not show that administrative procedures afforded to them were inadequate, and in fact, they did not avail themselves of the process available to them. Plaintiffs' failure to exhaust the administrative process precluded relief by judicial review. Thus, the due process claim failed, and absent a constitutional claim, the 42 U.S.C. 1983 claim failed as well. Wiser v. St., 2006 MT 20, 331 M 28, 129 P3d 133 (2006).

Attorney Entitled to Absolute Quasi-Judicial Immunity for Actions in Contested Case Proceedings: The doctrine of immunity evolved to protect not only judges but also certain participants in the judicial process whose functions are closely associated with those of judicial officers. The immunity that those participants receive is quasi-judicial immunity, which is not a mere defense to liability but an absolute immunity from suit. Like judicial immunity, quasi-judicial immunity benefits the public by ensuring that quasi-judicial officers exercise their functions unfettered by fear of legal consequences, as long as the functions are within the scope of the officers' jurisdiction and authorized by law. A state attorney who discharged his duty under professional rules of conduct when notifying a contested case hearings examiner that a certified public accountant who was representing a client was practicing law without a license was protected by quasi-judicial immunity and was not subject to suit. Steele v. McGregor, 1998 MT 85, 288 M 238, 956 P2d 1364, 55 St. Rep. 349 (1998).

Hearings Examiner Entitled to Judicial Immunity: The state Department of Labor and Industry's hearings examiners perform adjudicatory functions comparable to those performed by judges under similar safeguards. As a result, those hearings examiners are entitled to absolute judicial immunity when acting in their adjudicatory capacities. This immunity results from the independence that judges need to make decisions in matters involving such things as monetary and liberty interests, without fear of reprisal from dissatisfied litigants. Absolute immunity is immunity from suit, rather than a mere defense to liability. Judicial immunity is dependent on the challenged conduct being an official act within the judge's broad statutory jurisdiction but does not depend on acting correctly. A person acting in a judicial capacity will not be deprived of immunity simply because that person acted maliciously, mistakenly, or in excess of authority. Steele v. McGregor, 1998 MT 85, 288 M 238, 956 P2d 1364, 55 St. Rep. 349 (1998).

Criminal Conviction as Conclusive Evidence of Unprofessional Conduct — Hearings Examiner Conflict of Interest Not Prejudicial: Erickson claimed that a hearings examiner's conflict of interest constituted prejudicial error warranting reversal of Erickson's medical license revocation. However, the mere existence of an error does not mandate reversal. The error must cause substantial prejudice. In light of the conclusive and objective evidence of Erickson's unprofessional conduct stemming from a federal Medicare fraud conviction, the bias or conflict of interest on the part of the hearings examiner did not adversely affect the outcome of the case or prejudice Erickson's substantial rights. Erickson v. St., 282 M 367, 938 P2d 625, 54 St. Rep. 395 (1997).

No Denial of Due Process When Agency Order Subject to Judicial Review: Schneeman argued that the agency board reviewing her unemployment insurance claim was not impartial and therefore her right to due process had been violated. The Supreme Court held that her claims of agency bias were irrelevant when a District Court independently determined that there was substantial evidence to support the denial of benefits. Schneeman v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 257 M 254, 848 P2d 504, 50 St. Rep. 256 (1993).

Claimed Bias of Appeals Referee Not Timely Raised: Schneeman raised the issue of bias on the part of the appeals referee for the first time in District Court. The Supreme Court affirmed the lower court's ruling that a claim of bias had to have been raised prior to the hearing before the appeals referee. Schneeman v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 257 M 254, 848 P2d 504, 50 St. Rep. 256 (1993). See also Wheelsmith Fabrication, Inc. v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2000 MT 27, 298 M 187, 993 P2d 713, 57 St. Rep. 131 (2000).

Designation of Hearing Officer's Order as Final: The Commissioner of Labor and Industry is charged with the responsibility of investigating wage claims and holding hearings under Montana wage payment law, and under 2-15-112, the Commissioner may delegate these functions to a subordinate employee. Therefore, statute and Department rule clearly allow the decision of an appointed hearing examiner to be a final order. Hoven, Vervick, & Amrine, P.C. v. Comm'r of Labor, 237 M 525, 774 P2d 995, 46 St. Rep. 1024 (1989).

Revocation of Real Estate Broker's License — No Denial of Rights at Administrative Hearing — Hearing Examiner and Board Attorney as Deputy Attorneys General: A hearing examiner recommended that Sorini's real estate broker's license be revoked for violations of 37-51-321. On appeal, Sorini argued that she was denied her rights at the administrative hearing because both the hearing examiner and the attorney for the Board of Realty Regulation were deputies in the Attorney General's office; however, she failed to submit any proof to support this allegation. The Supreme Court noted that 2-4-611 establishes the manner in which a party may file an affidavit for disqualification of a hearing examiner, holding that in the absence of an affidavit it was not proper to raise the issue on appeal. The court agreed that having a greater separation of prosecutorial and decisionmaking functions would eliminate an appearance of impropriety, but found nothing to warrant a reversal of the District Court. In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Case Notes

Ridership and Spillover Values — Conflicting Evidence — Reliance on Agency Expertise Proper: The Public Service Commission adopted the free ridership and spillover values that were set forth in a consultant's draft report, even though the consultant later repudiated those numbers in her testimony. The petitioner, an energy supply company, argued that the Commission had erred in adopting the values in its final order because there was no evidence in the record to support the values. The District Court affirmed the Commission's order, and the petitioner appealed. The Supreme Court also affirmed, noting that the record contained conflicting evidence and that the Commission had appropriately used its expertise as an administrative agency in evaluating and adopting the values. Northwestern Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2016 MT 239, 385 Mont. 33, 380 P.3d 787.

Alleged Failure to Meet Statutory Deadline for Final Order — Request for Dismissal Properly Denied by District Court: The plaintiff had received benefits from the Teachers' Retirement System (TRS) for 5 years when TRS notified him that he did not qualify for the benefits and was liable to reimburse it. The plaintiff requested an administrative review and later a contested case hearing. Before the hearing, both parties moved for summary judgment, which the hearing examiner granted in favor of TRS. The TRS Board, however, ultimately concluded material facts existed that precluded summary judgment and remanded the matter to the hearing examiner. The plaintiff then filed a case in District Court, alleging that TRS had not issued a final order within 90 days and requested the court to dismiss its claim with prejudice. The District Court concluded that TRS had met the deadline by issuing its order remanding the matter to the hearing examiner and noted that more needed to be done at the administrative level. The plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed the District Court's decision and observed that the plaintiff's reading of the statute would increase the danger of decisions being made on incomplete factual records. Zabrocki v. Teachers' Retirement Sys., 2016 MT 146, 383 Mont. 537, 372 P.3d 1278.

Burden of Proof on Party Asserting Claim in Contested Case Hearing to Present Evidence That Department Decision Violated Law: Plaintiffs requested a hearing before the Board of Environmental Review, contending that an air quality permit issued by the Department of Environmental Quality for a coal-fired power plant and the application for the permit suffered from various procedural and substantive deficiencies. The Board held a contested case hearing and, after establishing that plaintiffs had the burden of proof, approved the Department's decision to grant the permit. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed that, as the party asserting the claim in the contested case, plaintiffs had the burden of presenting evidence necessary to establish the fact that the Department's decision violated the law. Mont. Envtl. Information Center v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2005 MT 96, 326 M 502, 112 P3d 964 (2005).

Improper Standard of Review Applied by Board of Environmental Review in Contested Case Hearing — Remand: Plaintiffs requested a hearing before the Board of Environmental Review, contending that an air quality permit issued by the Department of Environmental Quality for a coal-fired power plant and the application for the permit suffered from various procedural and substantive deficiencies. The Board held a contested case hearing, addressed plaintiffs' contentions whether the Department's decision was erroneous, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion, and approved the Department's decision to grant the permit. Plaintiffs petitioned for judicial review of the Board's order, and the District Court affirmed the Board's findings, conclusions, and order. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that hearings related to the issuance of an air quality permit must be conducted under the contested case provisions of this part, rather than part 7, which sets out the standard of judicial review. The role of the Board was to receive evidence from the parties, enter findings of fact based on a preponderance of the evidence, and then enter conclusions of law based on the findings. The determination of whether an agency decision is erroneous, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion is the role of the District Court. Thus, the Board applied a standard of review not legally available to it as the finder of fact in a contested case hearing. The District Court erred in determining that the Board applied the correct standard, so the case was remanded with instructions that the Board enter new findings of fact and conclusions of law in conformity with this part. Mont. Envtl. Information Center v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2005 MT 96, 326 M 502, 112 P3d 964 (2005).

Foreign Medical Reports Not Considered Self-Authenticating Public Documents: In an employment discrimination case, Pannoni sought to introduce written medical reports in letter form that contained observational information and opinions regarding Pannoni's medical condition and ability to return to work. The letters were accompanied by written certification that the reports had been prepared as part of a Canadian mental health center's regularly conducted business. Pannoni contended that the records were self-authenticating documents under the authentication procedure for foreign public documents in Rule 902, M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10). The Supreme Court disagreed. Under Palmer v. Farmers Ins. Exch., 233 M 515, 761 P2d 401 (1988), hospital records and medical reports are ordinarily not documents that are self-authenticating and are not considered business records, and even though the reports were from Canada, they were not public documents of a foreign country as contemplated in Rule 902, M.R.Ev. Further, the medical expert who authored the reports was not called as a witness, did not give sworn testimony, and was not subject to cross-examination. Thus, the unsworn medical reports were not subject to any hearsay exception and constituted inadmissible hearsay. Pannoni v. Browning School District No. 9 Bd. of Trustees, 2004 MT 130, 321 M 311, 90 P3d 438 (2004), followed in St. v. Baze, 2011 MT 52, 359 Mont. 411, 251 P.3d 122.

Lacking Foundation, Medical Reports Considered Inadmissible Hearsay: In an employment discrimination case, Pannoni sought to introduce written medical reports in letter form that contained observational information and opinions regarding Pannoni's medical condition and ability to return to work. The letters were accompanied by written certification that the reports had been prepared as part of a mental health center's regularly conducted business and were made at or near the time of Pannoni's diagnosis, but no one testified as to the contents of the reports or their status as regular business records. The employer objected to the evidence as hearsay, but Pannoni contended that they were admissible under the business records exception. The District Court concluded that because Pannoni had attempted to lay the foundation for the evidence through written certification prepared by a records custodian who did not testify, the foundational evidence itself was hearsay that could not establish the foundation for admission of otherwise inadmissible hearsay documents. Absent a proper foundation for admission of the evidence, the Supreme Court affirmed. Pannoni v. Browning School District No. 9 Bd. of Trustees, 2004 MT 130, 321 M 311, 90 P3d 438 (2004), followed in St. v. Baze, 2011 MT 52, 359 Mont. 411, 251 P.3d 122.

Challenge of Environmental Assessment — No Jurisdiction for Administrative Review: A grain company sought a permit to build a high-speed grain loading terminal near Pompeys Pillar national monument. The permit was granted and plaintiff, a nonprofit association supporting the monument's preservation, began administrative proceedings in an effort to overturn the permit issuance on grounds that the Department of Environmental Quality erred in its preparation of the environmental assessment related to the permit. An administrative law judge concluded that the Department acted arbitrarily and capriciously by issuing a permit without preparing an environmental impact statement. The Department filed exceptions to the administrative law judge's conclusions with the Board of Environmental Review. The Board ultimately affirmed the Department's decision to issue the permit, and plaintiff appealed to District Court. The Department contended that because the challenge to the administrative decisions did not contain any air quality issues, but only addressed environmental assessment issues governed by the Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA), and that because MEPA does not provide for administrative review of challenges to MEPA compliance, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. The District Court agreed and dismissed plaintiff's petition for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Had plaintiff challenged air quality issues, it would have been entitled to administrative proceedings. However, plaintiff's challenge pertained only to issues related to the environmental assessment, which is governed by MEPA. MEPA requires that a compliance challenge be brought in District Court, rather than through administrative proceedings. Thus, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. Plaintiff's petition was properly dismissed. Pompeys Pillar Historical Ass'n v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2002 MT 352, 313 M 401, 61 P3d 148 (2002).

Request for "in Person" Hearing Improperly Denied — Administrative Rule Contrary to Statute and Rule of Evidence Invalid: Charles disputed the amount of child support payments intended to be withheld by an income withholding proceeding and requested that he be given an "in person" hearing, rather than a telephone conference hearing, pursuant to 40-5-414. His request was denied by the administrative hearings officer pursuant to ARM 46.30.607(1) (now repealed). The Supreme Court held that the request for the "in person" hearing was improperly denied because 2-4-612(2) makes the Montana Rules of Evidence applicable to administrative hearings and Rule 611(e), M.R.Ev. (Title 26, ch. 10), provides that a witness can be heard only in the presence of other parties. Citing In re Marriage of Bonamarte, 263 M 170, 866 P2d 1132 (1994), the Supreme Court held that Rule 611 requires the physical presence of a witness in the courtroom. The Supreme Court also noted that 40-5-414 requires a live hearing if a party requests it and that the administrative rule adopted by the Child Support Enforcement Division, providing for a live hearing only upon approval of the hearings officer, was void because it was contrary to statute and Rule 611. Taylor v. Taylor, 272 M 30, 899 P2d 523, 52 St. Rep. 567 (1995).

Admissibility of Expert Testimony in Administrative Proceeding Regarding Sexual Conduct by Teacher: Allegations were made to a school board regarding sexual conduct by a teacher toward students and former students, triggering criminal charges that were later dismissed. The District Court found that conclusions by a hearings examiner denying renewal of the teacher's certificate were based on inadmissible testimony by a drug and alcohol counselor who testified as an expert on sexual abuse. The Supreme Court, examining the issue of expert testimony in administrative proceedings, noted that agencies are bound by common law and statutory rules of evidence and that while the rules of evidence are generally more relaxed in an administrative proceeding than they are in a court of law, they are not to be relaxed to the point of disregarding due process of law and fundamental individual rights. In a criminal case, the question of whether a child is a victim of sexual abuse is a question that may be clarified by expert testimony. However, expert testimony evaluating the credibility of witnesses is generally not admissible, except when the witness is a child victim who testifies at trial and credibility is brought into question. In this case, neither victim was a child, nothing in the record established that any of the witnesses were incompetent or were under any form of mental or physical disability, and the expert's general statements that the victims' conduct was consistent with that of sexually abused children prejudiced the accused because the trier of fact deferred to the expertise of the expert and inferred that the expert believed the witness to be credible. Failure to establish a foundation for the use of any of the expert testimony constituted reversible error. In re Renewal of Teaching Certificate of Thompson, 270 M 419, 893 P2d 301, 52 St. Rep. 200 (1995).

Power of Hearing Examiner to Limit Case to Proof of Matters Disclosed Through Discovery: Byard brought an action against Montana Rail Link, alleging sex discrimination in employment practices. Her attorney, during discovery, asked for the substance of the testimony to be offered by one of Montana Rail Link's witnesses, but the information was never produced. During the hearing, Montana Rail Link attempted to introduce the witnesses' testimony and was not allowed to do so by the hearing examiner. Based upon ARM 24.9.317, adopted by the Commission for Human Rights, the Supreme Court upheld the right of the hearing examiner to limit the prosecution or defense of a contested case to proof of matters disclosed through discovery when one party does not engage in full and complete discovery. Mont. Rail Link v. Byard, 260 M 331, 860 P2d 121, 50 St. Rep. 1084 (1993).

Summary Judgment Proper: Due process does not require development of facts through an evidentiary hearing when there are no material factual issues in dispute. When Peila's own deposition testimony negated any material factual issues and when he moved for summary judgment, the Board of Horseracing properly granted summary judgment. In re Peila, 249 M 272, 815 P2d 139, 48 St. Rep. 655 (1991). See also Anaconda Public Schools v. Whealon, 2012 MT 13, 363 Mont. 344, 268 P.3d 1258, ruling that a county superintendent may grant summary judgment without holding a hearing when there are no disputed material facts.

Testimony at Administrative Hearing by Person Who Decides Appeal: Police officers at a disciplinary hearing before the Police Commission argued that because the city manager could veto or modify the Commission's decision, it was an inherent conflict of interest for him to testify against them at the hearing. On appeal, the District Court found no prejudice in the city manager's testimony, and the officers showed none on appeal to the Supreme Court. No rule prevented the testimony. The Supreme Court found no reversible error. Gentry v. Helena, 237 M 353, 773 P2d 309, 46 St. Rep. 862 (1989).

Consideration of Written and Videotaped Testimony at De Novo Hearing: A dismissed teacher claimed he was wrongfully deprived of his right to a de novo hearing because the County Superintendent considered transcripts and videotaped testimony taken during the school board hearing. However, the testimony was admissible under 20-4-612(2) because it expedited disposition of the issue without substantial prejudice to the teacher. Johnson v. Bd. of Trustees, 236 M 532, 771 P2d 137, 46 St. Rep. 598 (1989).

Issuance of License — Off-the-Record Site Visit Improper: After an administrative hearing, the Director of the Department of Revenue awarded a beer and wine license to one of two parties after unannounced site visits to the premises of each party. On appeal, the District Court overruled the Director's decision and reinstated the order of the hearing examiner, which proposed award of the license to the other party. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's order vacating the Director's order because it was founded on an unlawful procedure that violated the appellant's due process interests. Whether the conduct prejudiced both contenders' rights equally is irrelevant. Lack of prior notice, coupled with lack of any documentation, is fatal to an ordinarily permissible inspection. This type of conduct under a Montana Administrative Procedure Act proceeding violates certain other safeguards built in by statute: the right to respond and present evidence and argument on all relevant issues and the right to conduct a cross-examination sufficient for full and true disclosure of facts. However, the trial judge erred in ordering the adoption of the hearing examiner's proposal. This was not an alternative authorized by statute. The case was remanded to the Department for final determination. Frascell, Inc. v. St., 235 M 152, 766 P2d 850, 45 St. Rep. 2267 (1988).

Exhibit Admitted, Then Rejected, in Medical Malpractice Hearing — No Prejudice: A physician in a medical malpractice hearing was not prejudiced by admission of an exhibit over his objection and without proper prehearing exchange, followed by reversal and rejection of the exhibit by the hearing examiner. The issue was similar to a bench trial in which the trier of fact routinely reviews proposed exhibits before admitting or rejecting them. Kauffman v. Dept. of Commerce, 229 M 204, 746 P2d 103, 44 St. Rep. 1905 (1987).

Unfair Labor Practices — Due Process — Collateral Estoppel: In an action charging unfair labor practices, an employee was collaterally estopped from relitigating the issue of whether his due process rights were violated by the 3-year delay between the filing of his charges and the administrative hearing on the charges. The issue was previously decided, a final judgment was rendered, and the party against whom the claim was advanced remained the same or was privy of the earlier party. Klundt v. St., 222 M 172, 720 P2d 1181, 43 St. Rep. 1148 (1986).

Administrative Order Not Supported by Evidence Remanded for Redetermination: Upon complaint by an applicant for employment with a county welfare department, the Human Rights Commission erred in reducing the complainant's backpay award when no evidence was presented at the contested hearing supporting the reduction. Because the Commission failed to make findings of fact specifying the evidence upon which the order was based or failed to inform the parties that it would take judicial notice of the evidence upon which the order was based, the case must be remanded to the Commission for a redetermination of the offset of interim wages. Martinez v. Yellowstone County Welfare Dept., 192 M 42, 626 P2d 242, 38 St. Rep. 474 (1981).

Extent of Cross-Examination: An administrative agency may limit cross-examination to examination of the witnesses of opposing or adverse parties and is not required to permit cross-examination of the witness of one party by a second party not having adverse interests to the first party. N. Plains Resource Council v. Bd. of Natural Resources & Conservation, 181 M 500, 594 P2d 297 (1979).

Job Classification — No Participation by Employing Agency: The statutes and rules governing job classification procedures do not contemplate participation by the employing agency other than the opportunity for input into the Personnel Division's decision. If and when the dispute reaches step four of the formal appeals procedure, the employee represents his interests and the Personnel Division, through its Classification Bureau, represents the interests of the state. Therefore, the Board of Personnel Appeals had no clear legal duty and no authority to hear the objections of the employing agency. State ex rel. St. Tax Appeal Bd. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 181 M 366, 593 P2d 747 (1979).

Workers' Compensation Court — Evidence That May Be Considered — Judicial Notice: The rules of evidence are more relaxed in an administrative proceeding than in a court of law, but due process will not be disregarded. The right to cross-examination is a constitutionally protected fundamental right and not an evidentiary rule. Section 2-4-612(5) makes this right absolute. The workers' compensation judge may only consider evidence that is offered at the hearing or of which he may take judicial notice. A judicially noticed fact must be one not subject to reasonable dispute. Disputed medical conclusions by doctors contained in medical reports cannot be judicially noticed. Hert v. Lumberman Mut. Cas. Co., 178 M 355, 584 P2d 656 (1978), distinguishing Stevens v. Glacier Gen. Assurance Co., 176 M 61, 575 P2d 1326 (1978), and clarified and rehearing denied in Hert v. Lumberman Mut. Cas. Co., 179 M 160, 587 P2d 11 (1978). Hert was held to no longer be authority for admissibility of medical records, in light of the 1990 adoption of ARM 24.5.317, in Miller v. Frasure, 264 M 354, 871 P2d 1302, 51 St. Rep. 233 (1994).

MAPA Not Sole Remedy: The Public Employees' Retirement Board was estopped to claim that the petitioner's sole remedy was under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) and that this remedy was not timely exercised because the Board at no time indicated it was bound by and acting pursuant to MAPA with its notice and hearing requirements. State ex rel. Stowe v. Bd. of Administration, PERS, 172 M 337, 564 P2d 167 (1977).

Standing: Where member of Public Service Commission dissented on decision to increase cost to customers of electric company as fuel costs increased and sued to vacate and set aside Commission's rate order, he had no standing to bring suit because he was not "party in interest", which means party outside decisionmaking process. McTaggart v. P.S.C., 168 M 155, 541 P2d 778 (1975).

Case Notes

Failure of State to Present Complete Administrative Record for District Court Review — Remand: Following recommendation for revocation of an all-beverages license in an administrative hearing, the licensee appealed the revocation to the District Court. The parties each filed various documents and exhibits with their briefs, but the state neglected to submit the administrative record, and the court apparently made its decision based on the documents and exhibits rather than on a complete administrative record. On appeal, the Supreme Court considered this a serious lapse on the part of the state and the District Court and vacated the appeal without prejudice. Under 2-4-704 and this section, a litigant seeking judicial review of an administrative decision is entitled to have the court's decision based on a review of the complete administrative record. The Supreme Court remanded the case for further proceedings that included a consideration of the administrative record as required by law. Owens v. Dept. of Revenue, 2006 MT 36, 331 M 166, 130 P3d 1256 (2006).

Record on Appeal — Lack of Transcript: Arguments on the sufficiency of the evidence in action on charges of unfair labor practices could not be considered without a transcript of the testimony at the original administrative hearing. The cause was remanded to the trial court for election by the employee either to order and pay for the transcript so the trial court could receive it and enter further judgment or to accept affirmation of the trial court's decision. Klundt v. St., 222 M 172, 720 P2d 1181, 43 St. Rep. 1148 (1986).

Written Transcript: Where, in contested case, Board of Personnel Appeals submitted to the reviewing court only a tape recording of the proceedings before it, the District Court could properly order it to furnish a written transcript in compliance with this section. Case Notes

Death of Inmate While in Custody — Human Rights Commission — Administrative Appeal and Review: An 18-year-old died from delirium tremens after being arrested by Blaine County authorities and while in the custody of the Hill County Detention Center. His estate brought a case before the Human Rights Bureau, alleging that the two counties had discriminated on the basis of race and disability. The hearing officer concluded that the counties had not discriminated against the estate. On appeal, the Human Rights Commission found clear error in the hearing officer's findings and reversed. On appeal of the Commission's findings, the District Court reversed, vacated the Commission's decision, and reinstated the hearing officer's order. The estate moved to alter or amend. The District Court, acting through a second judge following the retirement of the first judge, concluded that the first judge had fashioned an improper remedy. Both parties appealed to the Supreme Court, which held that the Commission had abused its discretion by modifying the findings of the hearing examiner without first determining that the findings were not supported by substantial evidence, the Commission abused its discretion by applying the wrong standard of review, the first judge correctly concluded that the Commission had improperly modified the hearing officer's findings, the replacement judge had incorrectly concluded that the original judge had erred as a matter of law, and the Montana Human Rights Act was not a proper legal remedy for the estate. Blaine County & Hill County v. Estate of Longsoldier, Jr., 2017 MT 80, 387 Mont. 202, 394 P.3d 159.

Unwarranted Exercise of Discretion — Reversal by BOPA of Hearing Officer's Finding Improper: An employee for a state agency filed a grievance, and a hearings examiner recommended that her grievance be denied. The employee then appealed to the Board of Personnel Appeals (BOPA), which found that the examiner had been "grossly unfair" to the employee and voted unanimously to grant her grievance, reinstate her, and award her back pay. The state agency for which she worked appealed to the District Court, which concluded that the BOPA had improperly reversed the hearing examiner's findings of facts and that its actions constituted an unwarranted exercise of discretion. The employee appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed. Dept. of Transportation v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2016 MT 282, 385 Mont. 274, 384 P.3d 49.

Falsification of Employee Time Records — Termination Warranted: Christie was terminated from state employment for falsifying time records. A hearings examiner recommended reinstatement, but the agency director concluded that the examiner erred, so Christie filed an action for review of the director's decision. The District Court affirmed the director's opinion and denied review, so Christie appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. Substantial evidence in the record showed that Christie persistently and intentionally falsified time records and claimed to have worked hours that he did not work. The state's Discipline Handling Guide permits discharge of an employee upon a first occurrence for serious infractions such as falsification of records and theft of state property, so the agency was not required to consult Christie's service record prior to discharge. The hearings examiner did not specifically make any finding regarding the record falsification issue, so neither the director nor the District Court erred in substituting their judgment for that of the hearings examiner, and based on the evidence, Christie's discharge was warranted. The District Court's reference to a warning letter that was not part of the administrative record, if error, was harmless. Christie v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2009 MT 364, 353 M 227, 220 P3d 405 (2009).

Board Increase in Penalty for Unprofessional Psychiatrist Conduct Affirmed: Following charges against a psychiatrist for unprofessional conduct, the Board of Medical Examiners considered the entire record and decided to exceed sanctions proposed by the hearings examiner by revoking the psychiatrist's license. The District Court affirmed the Board's action, and on appeal, the Supreme Court also affirmed. Having reviewed the complete record, the Board's increase in the proposed penalty was statutorily authorized and was not arbitrary or capricious. Thus, the Board did not commit an error of law by imposing the increase in penalty. Munn v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 2005 MT 303, 329 M 401, 124 P3d 1123 (2005), distinguishing St. v. Shodair Hosp., 273 M 155, 902 P2d 21 (1995).

Agency Rejection and Order for Modification of Conclusions of Law Regarding Employee's Entitlement to Overtime Pay Proper — Correct Standard of Review Applied: Winkler filed an overtime wage claim, and a state compliance specialist awarded Winkler the entire amount plus a 15% statutory penalty. A state hearings officer found that Winkler was not entitled to overtime. The Board of Personnel Appeals reversed the hearings officer, and the District Court affirmed the Board. The employer appealed on grounds that the Board and the District Court erroneously substituted their judgment for the findings of fact of the hearings officer, but the Supreme Court found no abuse of discretion and affirmed. Under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act, to avoid paying overtime, an employer has the burden of proving that the employee fits plainly and unmistakably within the Act's exemption requirements. The Board concluded that the hearings officer failed to show that Winkler was exempt, and the District Court agreed. Thus, the Board and the court did not modify the findings of the hearings officer in violation of 2-4-704, but did comply with this section in rejecting and ordering a modification of the hearings officer's conclusions of law. Further, the Board and the District Court applied the correct standard of review set out in Moran v. Shotgun Willies, Inc., 270 M 47, 889 P2d 1185 (1995), in holding that the hearings officer's findings were based on competent substantial evidence that Winkler did not agree to work for a set number of hours each week. Key W., Inc. v. Winkler, 2004 MT 186, 322 M 184, 95 P3d 666 (2004).

Liquidated Damages for Failure to Pay Overtime Warranted Absent Showing That Employer Acted in Good Faith and With Reasonable Grounds in Paying Wages — Fees and Costs of Appeal Allowed to Employee: The federal Fair Labor Standards Act provides that employees who are not paid overtime may recover liquidated damages in the amount of unpaid wages in addition to the unpaid wages. In this case, Winkler was awarded liquidated damages, and the employer appealed on grounds that it paid Winkler's wages in good faith and had reasonable grounds to believe that it did not violate the Act, so liquidated damages were not warranted under 29 U.S.C. 260. The Supreme Court applied the test in Walton v. United Consumers Club, Inc., 786 F2d 303 (7th Cir. 1986), to determine what constitutes good faith and reasonable grounds. The Walton standard is whether, when objectively viewed through the lens of the tort law reasonable person standard, the employer acted in good faith and had reasonable grounds for believing that the employer's act or omission did not violate the Act. The hearings officer found that, based on the entire record, the employer failed to present sufficient evidence of good faith and reasonable grounds, and the Supreme Court declined to substitute its judgment for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on the factual question. Winkler was also entitled to court costs and attorney fees for appeal as the prevailing party under 39-3-214 and 29 U.S.C. 216(b). Key W., Inc. v. Winkler, 2004 MT 186, 322 M 184, 95 P3d 666 (2004).

Board of Personnel Appeals Not Bound by Findings and Conclusions of Hearings Examiner — District Court Bound by Board Conclusions if Correct: The interpretation of an administrative rule and an agency's policy is a question of law, and in its final order, an agency may reject or modify a hearings officer's conclusion of law and interpretation of administrative rules in the proposal for decision. As the final administrative authority in the state employee classification process, the Board of Personnel Appeals must review and interpret applicable rules promulgated by the Department of Administration. Thus, the Board is not bound by a hearings officer's conclusions and interpretations. However, the District Court is bound by the Board's conclusions of law and interpretation of administrative rules, if correct. In the present case, the Board reasonably interpreted applicable employee classification rules and correctly concluded that child support enforcement investigators were improperly classified in violation of 2-18-202, and the District Court erred in reversing the Board's final order. St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002). See also Weber v. Pub. Employees' Retirement Bd., 270 M 239, 890 P2d 1296 (1995), and In re Grievance of Brady, 1999 MT 153, 295 M 75, 983 P2d 292 (1999).

Interpretation of Agency Policy Held to Be Question of Law — Standard for Agency Interpretation — Department of Justice Disciplinary Action Upheld: Brady, a supervisor with the Criminal Investigation Bureau (CIB) of the Montana Department of Justice (DOJ), was to transfer 134 pounds of contraband marijuana from himself to Missoula County Deputy Sheriffs. As part of that transfer, Brady arranged with the Deputy Sheriffs for him to use the marijuana as part of an undercover operation in which Brady briefly revealed the marijuana to an associate of a drug dealer. The Deputy Sheriffs then took the marijuana to the Cascade County evidence locker. Brady was later demoted because he failed to receive the approval of a supervisor, contrary to the "otherwise illegal acts" written policy of the DOJ that required approval by the Montana Attorney General before an employee could participate in "any activity that is proscribed by federal, state, or local law as a felony or that is otherwise a serious crime . . .". Brady challenged the disciplinary demotion through a DOJ grievance procedure in which a hearings officer held that the revelation of the marijuana to the drug dealer's associate ("the scam") did not require approval by the Attorney General and recommended that Brady be reinstated to his former position. The DOJ appealed the hearings officer's decision to the Attorney General, who found that the hearings officer failed to give proper deference to the DOJ's consistent interpretation of its own "otherwise illegal acts" policy and ignored the plain meaning of the policy, which the Attorney General interpreted as stating that a CIB agent may not "engage in conduct which would constitute a crime under state or federal law if the conduct was engaged in by a private person" unless authorization was obtained. The Attorney General found that possession of the marijuana for the purposes of the scam had not been authorized and that certain findings of fact made by the hearings officer were clearly erroneous. The Attorney General affirmed the disciplinary demotion, and the District Court upheld the Attorney General. Brady argued before the Supreme Court that the Attorney General failed to comply with subsection (3) of this section in that the Attorney General, who had not heard the evidence in the case, failed to state with particularity after a review of all the evidence in the case why any findings of the hearings officer were being rejected and that that failure to state with particularity constituted an abuse of discretion under 2-4-704(2)(a)(vi). The Supreme Court held that: (1) the interpretation of an agency's policy is not a question of fact but a question of law and is entitled to considerable deference; (2) because the findings of the hearings officer concerned the interpretation of the DOJ's own "otherwise illegal acts" policy and because under subsection (3) of this section an agency may reject or modify the conclusions of law and interpretation of administrative rules, the Attorney General's failure to state with particularity why the findings of the hearings officer regarding the policy were being rejected was harmless error; (3) the Attorney General's interpretation of the "otherwise illegal acts" policy was not inconsistent with the spirit of the rule; (4) Brady's possession of the marijuana would have been illegal under 45-9-102; (5) Brady's use of the marijuana as part of the scam was prohibited by the DOJ's policy because Brady failed to receive approval of the scam from the Attorney General; and (6) the District Court did not err in finding that Brady violated DOJ policy. In re Grievance of Brady, 1999 MT 153, 295 M 75, 983 P2d 292, 56 St. Rep. 600 (1999).

Rejection of Hearings Examiner's Findings and Revocation of License — Abuse of Discretion: Ulrich sought reinstatement of his mortician's license, which was revoked by the Board of Funeral Service on grounds of unprofessional conduct following Ulrich's conviction of criminal charges based on his conduct as a real estate agent. The Board rejected the findings of a hearings examiner, who recommended reinstatement, on grounds that licensing Ulrich would affect the public's health, safety, and welfare. However, the hearings examiner's conclusions were supported by competent, substantial evidence of Ulrich's remorse, attempts to provide ongoing restitution payments, and rehabilitation. It was an abuse of discretion in violation of subsection (3) of this section for the Board to reject the hearings examiner's findings and revoke Ulrich's license to practice mortuary science. Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Serv., 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998).

Board's Rejection of Hearings Examiner's Findings Abuse of Discretion: The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) denied Shodair's claim for reimbursement for certain psychiatric care on the basis that the treatment was not medically necessary. Shodair requested a hearing, and the hearings examiner entered findings denying the claim. The Department then appealed to the Board of Social and Rehabilitation Services Appeals (now Board of Public Assistance), which summarily reversed the hearings examiner's findings based on the "undisputed facts" of the record. The District Court reversed. The Supreme Court held that the Board abused its discretion because it could not reject or modify the hearings examiner's findings unless it stated with particularity that the findings were not based on competent substantial evidence. St. v. Shodair Hosp., 273 M 155, 902 P2d 21, 52 St. Rep. 879 (1995). See also St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002).

Overturned Findings of Hearings Officer — Substantial Evidence Required — Proper Procedure Alone Insufficient: Fugate filed a complaint with the Human Rights Commission based upon sexual discrimination. The Commission's hearings examiner upheld Fugate's claim of sexual discrimination. However, the hearings examiner's findings and conclusions were extensively modified by the members of the Commission, who then reversed the hearings examiner's decision and dismissed the case. The District Court reversed the Commission and reinstated the decision of the hearings examiner. The Supreme Court held that it was not enough for the Commission to simply state with particularity in its order that the hearings examiner's findings were not based upon substantial evidence; that statement must in fact be true. The Supreme Court held that the Commission improperly weighed inconsistent testimony. The Supreme Court concluded that although the procedure followed by the Commission was correct, the Commission's legal conclusions that there was insufficient evidence to support the hearings examiner's findings were incorrect. Moran v. Shotgun Willies, Inc., 270 M 47, 889 P2d 1185, 52 St. Rep. 71 (1995).

Allowing Filing of Additional Findings After Factfinder's Facts Submitted Improper: This section sets forth the procedure by which an agency may alter the findings and conclusions of its factfinder. It does not provide that proposed findings may be filed at any point in an administrative hearing. In allowing its prosecuting attorney to file additional findings after the hearing examiner's findings had been filed, the Board of Nursing erred in going beyond its authority under this section, which allows parties adversely affected to file exceptions and present briefs and oral argument in response to the proposed decision. The Board erred by receiving and considering the prosecuting attorney's proposed findings after the hearing examiner's findings had been submitted. Brackman v. Bd. of Nursing, 258 M 200, 851 P2d 1055, 50 St. Rep. 497 (1993). Petition for rehearing denied, 258 M 200, 851 P2d 1055, 50 St. Rep. 501A (1993).

Court Adoption of Hearing Examiner's Recommendations for Discipline Not Error: The Board of Nursing rejected the recommendations of its hearing examiner regarding discipline of hospice nurses, substituting instead its own disciplinary measures as suggested by its prosecuting attorney. On appeal, the District Court reinstated the hearing examiner's recommendations rather than remand the action to the Board, which the Board claimed was a violation of its legal duty to determine discipline. However, the findings of the hearing examiner were supported by substantial evidence and his recommendation for discipline was consistent with other Board discipline rulings. The District Court decision not to remand was supported by the need for final resolution of the matter after extended litigation and was not error. Brackman v. Bd. of Nursing, 258 M 200, 851 P2d 1055, 50 St. Rep. 497 (1993). Petition for rehearing denied, 258 M 200, 851 P2d 1055, 50 St. Rep. 501A (1993). Brackman followed in Moran v. Shotgun Willies, Inc., 270 M 47, 889 P2d 1185, 52 St. Rep. 71 (1995).

Director's Rejection of Grievance Committee Recommendations Without Further Hearing or Review of Complete Record — Abuse of Discretion: The unanimous recommendations of a grievance committee were passed along to the Director of the Department of Institutions, who rejected two of the committee's factual findings without conducting an additional hearing or receiving any additional evidence. Arbitrary rejection of the findings by the Director, who neither heard nor personally observed the testimony, without a review of the complete record, as required in this section, was an abuse of discretion within the meaning of 2-4-704. Brander v. Dept. of Institutions, 247 M 302, 806 P2d 530, 48 St. Rep. 207 (1991), followed in Brackman v. Bd. of Nursing, 258 M 200, 851 P2d 1055, 50 St. Rep. 497 (1993), and Moran v. Shotgun Willies, Inc., 270 M 47, 889 P2d 1185, 52 St. Rep. 71 (1995). See also In re Grievance of Brady, 1999 MT 153, 295 M 75, 983 P2d 292, 56 St. Rep. 600 (1999).

Designation of Hearing Officer's Order as Final: The Commissioner of Labor and Industry is charged with the responsibility of investigating wage claims and holding hearings under Montana wage payment law, and under 2-15-112, the Commissioner may delegate these functions to a subordinate employee. Therefore, statute and Department rule clearly allow the decision of an appointed hearing examiner to be a final order. Hoven, Vervick, & Amrine, P.C. v. Comm'r of Labor, 237 M 525, 774 P2d 995, 46 St. Rep. 1024 (1989).

Reversal of Hearing Examiner's Findings — Power of Workers' Compensation Court to Order New Trial: The Workers' Compensation Court appointed a hearing examiner to hear evidence in an injury case, but it was for the court to make the final decision. The examiner's findings, conclusions, and proposed decision were submitted to the court for approval. It was within the court's power to order a new trial on the ground that the examiner apparently disregarded or was not aware of evidence crucial to the case. Gould v. Liberty Mut. Fire Ins. Co., 233 M 494, 766 P2d 213, 45 St. Rep. 1671 (1988), distinguishing Walter v. Evans Prod. Co., 207 M 26, 672 P2d 613 (1983).

Findings of Fact Changed by Board of Horseracing Upheld — Hearing Examiner's Facts Not Based on Competent, Substantial Evidence: The Board of Horseracing changed findings of fact of the Board's hearing examiner after stating they were not based on competent, substantial evidence. The Board also modified the examiner's legal conclusions because the examiner inserted a concept in the applicable administrative rule that had been omitted. The Board's actions were within the bounds of this section, and the procedure used was appropriate. Carruthers v. Bd. of Horseracing, 216 M 184, 700 P2d 179, 42 St. Rep. 729 (1985).

Human Rights Commission Award of Backpay Contrary to Legal Conclusion of Hearing Examiner: It was not error for the Montana Human Rights Commission to award backpay when the hearing examiner, as a matter of law, refused to do so. After reviewing the record, the Commission may, under 2-4-621, reject or modify an examiner's conclusions of law. The Commission also has the authority under 49-2-506 to use its discretion to rectify harm done a person discriminated against. Unless the conclusions of the Commission in awarding backpay are arbitrary or capricious, which was not the case here, neither the District Court nor the Supreme Court may alter them. European Health Spa v. Human Rights Comm'n, 212 M 319, 687 P2d 1029, 41 St. Rep. 1766 (1984).

Modification of Findings of Fact by Commission Held Proper: When the Human Rights Commission, in redetermining a backpay award, held a supplemental hearing and applied a different termination date from that applied by the hearing examiner and consequently modified two of the hearing examiner's findings of fact, without stating that the findings were not based on substantial evidence, the Supreme Court upheld the Commission's determination. Billings v. Mont. Human Rights Comm'n, 209 M 251, 681 P2d 33, 41 St. Rep. 688 (1984).

Scope of Agency Review: This section and 2-4-703 indicate a legislative intent that in reviewing a hearing examiner's decision the agency's determination should be based on a review of all material evidence. Billings v. Mont. Human Rights Comm'n, 209 M 251, 681 P2d 33, 41 St. Rep. 688 (1984).

Technical Failure to Comply With Statute Overlooked: In its final order, an agency modified two of the hearing examiner's findings of fact but did not state with particularity that the findings of fact were not based on substantial credible evidence. The Supreme Court ruled that although there had been a technical failure to comply with (3) of this section, there was no reason to use up more time by returning the case for supplemental statements in the final order because the evidence supporting the agency's findings was uncontradicted. Billings v. Mont. Human Rights Comm'n, 209 M 251, 681 P2d 33, 41 St. Rep. 688 (1984).

Section Not Applicable to Unemployment Insurance Claims: The unemployment compensation insurance law contains a complete procedure for hearing and determining undisputed claims for unemployment insurance. The Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board), as a quasi-judicial board, may consider not only the record made before the appeals referee but new evidence produced at the Board hearing. The provisions of MAPA are unworkable when an attempt is made to apply them to determine claims for unemployment insurance benefits. It is an incorrect interpretation of statutory law to hold that the Board has no power to overturn the findings of fact of the appeals referee. In reviewing the Board's decision, the District Court is limited by the provisions of 39-51-2410. Decker Coal Co. v. Employment Security Div., 205 M 1, 667 P2d 923, 40 St. Rep. 1056 (1983).

Case Notes

Alleged Failure to Meet Statutory Deadline for Final Order — Request for Dismissal Properly Denied by District Court: The plaintiff had received benefits from the Teachers' Retirement System (TRS) for 5 years when TRS notified him that he did not qualify for the benefits and was liable to reimburse it. The plaintiff requested an administrative review and later a contested case hearing. Before the hearing, both parties moved for summary judgment, which the hearing examiner granted in favor of TRS. The TRS Board, however, ultimately concluded material facts existed that precluded summary judgment and remanded the matter to the hearing examiner. The plaintiff then filed a case in District Court, alleging that TRS had not issued a final order within 90 days and requested the court to dismiss its claim with prejudice. The District Court concluded that TRS had met the deadline by issuing its order remanding the matter to the hearing examiner and noted that more needed to be done at the administrative level. The plaintiff appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed the District Court's decision and observed that the plaintiff's reading of the statute would increase the danger of decisions being made on incomplete factual records. Zabrocki v. Teachers' Retirement Sys., 2016 MT 146, 383 Mont. 537, 372 P.3d 1278.

Board's Adoption of Hearings Officer's Findings — Final Decision Timely — District Court Affirmed: The Department of Public Health and Human Services (Department) sought repayment of Medicaid payments because the petitioner did not report all available income. A hearings officer for the Department held a contested case hearing and issued a decision in favor of the Department 9 months later. The petitioner appealed to the Board of Public Assistance (the Board), which issued a ruling adopting the hearings officer's decision within 2 months of the hearings officer's decision. The petitioner filed for judicial review in District Court, claiming that the hearings officer's decision was the Department's "final decision" and thus was void because it had not been issued within 90 days pursuant to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act at 2-4-623. The District Court disagreed and affirmed the Board's decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's decision, concluding that for purposes of 2-4-623, the Department's "final decision" was the Board's timely adoption of the hearings officer's decision. Micone v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2011 MT 178, 361 Mont. 258, 258 P.3d 403.

Sufficient Probable Cause to Revoke Water Use Permit — Malicious Prosecution Claim Precluded — Summary Judgment Proper: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation determined that plaintiff failed to comply with the conditions of a water use permit. After a show cause hearing, the hearings examiner did not issue a decision within the required 90 days, so plaintiff moved for dismissal with prejudice. The Department did not oppose dismissal but argued that it should be without prejudice because plaintiff was still in violation of the permit conditions. The hearings officer agreed and dismissed the revocation action without prejudice. Plaintiff then sued the Department for malicious prosecution. The Department moved for summary judgment, and the District Court granted the motion on grounds that plaintiff did not raise any genuine issues of material fact as to one of the elements of the malicious prosecution claim and on grounds that the Department was immune from suit because its actions were quasi-judicial. Plaintiff appealed. The Supreme Court concluded that, as a matter of law, there was probable cause for the Department to revoke plaintiff's water use permit under 85-2-314 for not following the permit conditions and that because plaintiff could not prove a lack of probable cause for the Department's actions, the malicious prosecution claim failed and summary judgment was proper. Because the claim was properly summarily dismissed on administrative grounds, the Supreme Court never reached the issue of prosecutorial and quasi-judicial immunity. Blacktail Mtn. Ranch Co., LLC v. Dept. of Natural Resources & Conservation, 2009 MT 345, 353 M 149, 220 P3d 388 (2009), applying the elements of malicious prosecution set out in Plouffe v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2002 MT 64, 309 M 184, 45 P3d 10 (2002).

Improper Standard of Review Applied by Board of Environmental Review in Contested Case Hearing — Remand: Plaintiffs requested a hearing before the Board of Environmental Review, contending that an air quality permit issued by the Department of Environmental Quality for a coal-fired power plant and the application for the permit suffered from various procedural and substantive deficiencies. The Board held a contested case hearing, addressed plaintiffs' contentions whether the Department's decision was erroneous, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion, and approved the Department's decision to grant the permit. Plaintiffs petitioned for judicial review of the Board's order, and the District Court affirmed the Board's findings, conclusions, and order. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that hearings related to the issuance of an air quality permit must be conducted under the contested case provisions of this part, rather than part 7, which sets out the standard of judicial review. The role of the Board was to receive evidence from the parties, enter findings of fact based on a preponderance of the evidence, and then enter conclusions of law based on the findings. The determination of whether an agency decision is erroneous, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion is the role of the District Court. Thus, the Board applied a standard of review not legally available to it as the finder of fact in a contested case hearing. The District Court erred in determining that the Board applied the correct standard, so the case was remanded with instructions that the Board enter new findings of fact and conclusions of law in conformity with this part. Mont. Envtl. Information Center v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2005 MT 96, 326 M 502, 112 P3d 964 (2005).

Attorney Entitled to Absolute Quasi-Judicial Immunity for Actions in Contested Case Proceedings: The doctrine of immunity evolved to protect not only judges but also certain participants in the judicial process whose functions are closely associated with those of judicial officers. The immunity that those participants receive is quasi-judicial immunity, which is not a mere defense to liability but an absolute immunity from suit. Like judicial immunity, quasi-judicial immunity benefits the public by ensuring that quasi-judicial officers exercise their functions unfettered by fear of legal consequences, as long as the functions are within the scope of the officers' jurisdiction and authorized by law. A state attorney who discharged his duty under professional rules of conduct when notifying a contested case hearings examiner that a certified public accountant who was representing a client was practicing law without a license was protected by quasi-judicial immunity and was not subject to suit. Steele v. McGregor, 1998 MT 85, 288 M 239, 956 P2d 1364, 55 St. Rep. 349 (1998).

Cancellation of State Agricultural Lease for Nonpayment — Hearing Not Required — District Court Jurisdiction to Review Cancellation: There is no provision in 77-6-506 requiring the Department to conduct a hearing when canceling a state land lease for nonpayment, nor is a hearing required pursuant to the due process clause of Art. II, sec. 17, Mont. Const. The District Court thus has no jurisdiction to review a lease cancellation for nonpayment under contested case procedures because lease cancellation for nonpayment does not constitute a contested case. However, the District Court does retain inherent jurisdiction to review administrative decisions and erred in deciding that it did not have jurisdiction. The standard of review is whether the agency acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. Johansen v. St., 1998 MT 51, 288 M 39, 955

P2d 653, 55 St. Rep. 211 (1998), following N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862 (1989). See also Winchell v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 1999 MT 11, 293 M 89, 972 P2d 1132, 56 St. Rep. 48 (1999). On remand, the District Court determined that the rent had been paid on time, and the Department appealed. The Supreme Court held that the Department had uncontroverted evidence before it, in the form of an affidavit from the postmaster, that Johansen had timely mailed the rental payment on January 2. So although the envelope did not receive a postmark until January 3, the Department's decision to not renew the lease for nonpayment was arbitrary and capricious and not supported by substantial evidence. The District Court's holding was affirmed. Johansen v. St., 1999 MT 187, 295 M 339, 983 P2d 962, 56 St. Rep. 731 (1999).

Grazing District and Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (Now Abolished) Required to Comply With Administrative Procedure Act: In the conduct of proceedings pursuant to the Grass Conservation Act, both the grazing district and the Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (now abolished) are required to comply with the requirements of the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. Prairie County Co-op St. Grazing District v. Kalfell Ranch, Inc., 269 M 117, 887 P2d 241, 51 St. Rep. 1488 (1994).

Standard of Review for Decisions of County Superintendents: Baldridge appealed his dismissal by the school board to the acting County Superintendent, Barrick. Barrick reinstated Baldridge, and the school board appealed to the State Superintendent, Keenan. Keenan reviewed Barrick's reinstatement order and remanded it to Barrick, with instructions to assess the credibility of witnesses testifying as to other incidents of wrongdoing by Baldridge. Barrick again reinstated Baldridge in an order much the same as the first order. The school board again appealed. In the second review, Keenan stated that Barrick had acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner in reinstating Baldridge when the transcript indicated that there was sufficient evidence to reach a conclusion that the board had a standard of good cause for dismissal. Baldridge appealed to the District Court, which affirmed Keenan on the basis that the State Superintendent had found that good cause existed for Baldridge's dismissal. The Supreme Court held that Barrick had not set out sufficient findings of fact for her conclusions, as required by statute and rule. The Supreme Court stated that Keenan's standard of review was whether or not the findings were sufficient to support the County Superintendent's conclusions. If the findings were not sufficient, then the State Superintendent's only proper recourse was to again remand the case with instructions to set out more fully a statement of facts in support of the County Superintendent's conclusions. Keenan was in error in interpreting the facts to see if there was a standard of good cause to support the board's dismissal of Baldridge. The Supreme Court also held that the lower court was in error in supporting Keenan's finding of good cause for termination and that the lower court was also limited to determining if the findings of fact reached by the County Superintendent were sufficient to support her conclusions. Baldridge v. Rosebud County School District No. 19, 264 M 199, 870 P2d 711, 51 St. Rep. 166 (1994).

Designation of Hearing Officer's Order as Final: The Commissioner of Labor and Industry is charged with the responsibility of investigating wage claims and holding hearings under Montana wage payment law, and under 2-15-112, the Commissioner may delegate these functions to a subordinate employee. Therefore, statute and Department rule clearly allow the decision of an appointed hearing examiner to be a final order. Hoven, Vervick, & Amrine, P.C. v. Comm'r of Labor, 237 M 525, 774 P2d 995, 46 St. Rep. 1024 (1989).

Board of Personnel Appeals to Address Personnel Division Findings Regarding Reclassification: Certain highway patrol officers successfully appealed to the Personnel Division of the Department of Administration to have their grade raised pursuant to 2-18-203. In response, other officers filed a grievance pursuant to 2-18-1011, seeking reclassification of their positions and grades. Appeal was permissible under 2-18-203 as it existed at the time. The Division reclassified their positions using a "five factor" formula. The affected officers appealed their resulting grade reassignment to the Board of Personnel Appeals, which issued an order to the Division requiring reclassification of certain positions. The Board, without issuing findings of fact addressing the Division's recommendations, subsequently rejected the Division's classification recommendations and upheld the so-called "practice" of maintaining a grade difference between supervisors and persons they supervise. In the subsequent appeal from the classification process used by the Division, the Supreme Court held that the matter must be remanded to the Board for further findings expressly addressing the Division's recommendations. St. Personnel Div. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 235 M 208, 766 P2d 1300, 45 St. Rep. 2324 (1988).

Refusal to Consider Taxpayer's Appraisal — Abuse of Discretion: A taxpayer presented evidence of market value but the State Tax Appeal Board (STAB) refused to consider the evidence in a commercial property tax appeal. Citing Dept. of Revenue v. Paxson, 205 M 194, 666 P2d 768 (1983), the Supreme Court held that STAB was required to consider the theory and figures offered by a taxpayer, although not bound to adopt them, and that to refuse to accept a taxpayer's appraisal was an abuse of discretion. Devoe v. Dept. of Revenue, 233 M 190, 759 P2d 991, 45 St. Rep. 1414 (1988).

Findings of Fact Not Requested by Appellant — Standard of Review: An order transferring territory from one elementary district to another did not contain a finding that the four elements of a valid petition listed in 20-6-213 (now repealed) were met, nor did the order contain findings that the transfer was in the best interests of the residents of the affected territory. Although 2-4-623 requires that a final decision in a contested case must include findings of fact, the Supreme Court found substantial credible evidence supporting the transfer, including unanimous favorable testimony from residents of the affected territory. Additionally, the court noted that appellants failed to request findings of fact from the County Superintendent or the Board of County Commissioners and that such failure barred court reversal for lack of factfindings, pursuant to 2-4-704(2)(g). Bd. of Trustees, Clinton School District v. Bd. of Trustees, Bonner School District, 221 M 341, 719 P2d 1240, 43 St. Rep. 877 (1986).

MAPA Inapplicable to Pre-1977 County School Superintendent Decision — Substantial Evidence: Plaintiff was terminated from her tenured teaching position by the County Board of Trustees in 1977. The decision was reviewed and upheld by the County Superintendent of Schools, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the District Court. On appeal to the Supreme Court, plaintiff contended that the County Superintendent had not complied with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) since he failed to include statements of underlying facts supporting his findings and failed to rule on plaintiff's proposed findings. The Supreme Court noted that MAPA was made applicable to school districts by a 1977 amendment. The court, relying on sec. 26, Ch. 2, Ex. L. 1971, which provided that the adoption of MAPA would not affect pending proceedings, held that MAPA did not apply to this case, which was begun prior to the 1977 amendment. The court determined that the school district's decision was supported by substantial evidence and was not clearly erroneous, the standard for review under 2-4-704. Donnes v. State ex rel. Supt. of Pub. Instruction, 206 M 530, 672 P2d 617, 40 St. Rep. 1834 (1983).

Factfinding Responsibility of Administrative Body: The Department of Revenue assessed Paxson's land for tax purposes. Paxson contended the valuation was too high because part of the land was in a flood plain. The County Tax Appeal Board entered an order granting a 20% reduction in the assessment. This was upheld by the State Tax Appeal Board. The District Court concluded that the 20% reduction was arbitrary and capricious since no evidence was contained in the record to support this figure. The court then adopted Paxson's theory of reduction and figures. On appeal, the Supreme Court upheld the overturning of the 20% reduction as not supported by the evidence but vacated the District Court's order and remanded the case to the State Tax Appeal Board. The Supreme Court held that the responsibility of factfinding and arriving at the proper taxable valuation is the function of the administrative bodies. Dept. of Revenue v. Paxson, 205 M 194, 666 P2d 768, 40 St. Rep. 1210 (1983).

Certificate of Environmental Compatibility and Public Need — Findings and Conclusions in Compliance With Law: The Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (now Board of Environmental Review) issued a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need under the Montana Utility Siting Act of 1973 (now the Montana Major Facility Siting Act of 1975), after making findings of fact and conclusions of law under that Act. The Supreme Court upheld the legal sufficiency of those findings and conclusions. In accordance with Mont. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C. and Mont. Power Co., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975), separate, express rulings on each proposed finding of fact are not required by 2-4-623(4) as long as the agency's decision and order are clear. The court also held that there was sufficient compliance with 2-4-623(1) because the findings of fact were factually supported when viewed as a whole and that there was sufficient compliance with 2-4-623(4) because the conclusions of law, while not followed immediately by an authority or opinion, were sufficiently supported by reasoned opinion to render their basis reasonably ascertainable. Mont. Wilderness Ass'n v. Bd. of Natural Resources and Conserv., 200 M 11, 648 P2d 734, 39 St. Rep. 1238 (1982).

Nonrenewal of Tenured Teacher's Contract — Scope of Review: A tenured teacher's contract was not renewed. A hearing was held by the Board of Trustees, which affirmed its decision not to renew the contract. The teacher appealed to the County Superintendent where he was given a trial de novo with witnesses and record evidence. The teacher then appealed to the State Superintendent based upon the record, and the State Superintendent upheld the decision. The teacher appealed to District Court based upon the record. The District Court reversed the administrative decision, and an appeal to the Supreme Court was made upon the record. The Supreme Court reversed the District Court, saying that the procedure to be used in this instance was identical to that for any other District Court decision involving an administrative decision. The District Court was not a trier of fact. The Supreme Court should not substitute its judgment for that of the County Superintendent as to the weight of the evidence on questions of fact. The Supreme Court may reverse or modify if the substantial rights of the appellant have been prejudiced because the administrative findings and conclusions are clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record. Yanzick v. School District, 196 M 375, 641 P2d 431, 39 St. Rep. 191 (1982), followed in Booth v. Argenbright, 225 M 272, 731 P2d 1318, 44 St. Rep. 227 (1987).

Administrative Order Not Supported by Evidence Remanded for Redetermination: Upon complaint by an applicant for employment with a county welfare department, the Human Rights Commission erred in reducing the complainant's backpay award when no evidence was presented at the contested hearing supporting the reduction. Because the Commission failed to make findings of fact specifying the evidence upon which the order was based or failed to inform the parties that it would take judicial notice of the evidence upon which the order was based, the case must be remanded to the Commission for a redetermination of the offset of interim wages. Martinez v. Yellowstone County Welfare Dept., 192 M 42, 626 P2d 242, 38 St. Rep. 474 (1981).

Computation of Time Limit for Appeal in Workers' Compensation Case — Civil Procedure Rules Applied: A person who appeals from a final decision of the workers' compensation court should in all fundamental fairness be given the benefit of that provision of former Rule 5, M.R.App.Civ.P. (now M.R.App.P., now superseded), which states that "except that in cases where service of notice of entry of judgment is required by former Rule 77(d) of the M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded) the time shall be 30 days from the service of notice of entry of judgment". When service of notice of the final decision is made as mandated by 2-4-623 and that service is made by mail, the provisions of former Rule 21(c), M.R.App.Civ.P. (now M.R.App.P., now superseded), are automatically put into play adding 3 days to the prescribed 30-day time limit for filing the notice of appeal set by former Rule 4(a), M.R.App.Civ.P. (now M.R.App.P., now superseded). However, when the final day of the period falls on a Sunday, former Rule 21(a), M.R.App.Civ.P. (now M.R.App.P., now superseded), comes into play extending the time limit to the next day. Dumont v. Aetna Fire Underwriters, 183 M 190, 598 P2d 1099 (1979).

Relief After Thirty Days of Purported "Final Decision": There may be some circumstances when State ex rel. Stowe v. Board of Administration, 172 M 337, 564 P2d 167 (1977), might provide relief for a petitioner who filed for judicial relief after 30 days of a purported "final decision", but this is not that case. The Stowe decision was limited to a set of circumstances wherein the agency did not show even a "token compliance" with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA). In the instant case, the appellant was given the hearing as required by the MAPA and the final decision substantially complied with this section. Bradco Supply Co. v. Larsen, 183 M 97, 598 P2d 596 (1979).

Supporting Statements: Something more than conclusory findings of fact or conclusions of law was necessary to meet the requirements of the Montana Major Facility Siting Act with respect to location of transmission line facilities, especially of the magnitude sought in conjunction with Colstrip Units 3 and 4. N. Plains Resource Council v. Bd. of Natural Resources & Conservation, 181 M 500, 594 P2d 297 (1979).

Workers' Compensation Court — Judicial Notice: The rules of evidence are more relaxed in an administrative proceeding than in a court of law, but due process will not be disregarded. The right to cross-examination is a constitutionally protected fundamental right and not an evidentiary rule. Section 2-4-612(5) makes this right absolute. The workers' compensation judge may only consider evidence that is offered at the hearing or of which he may take judicial notice. A judicially noticed fact must be one not subject to reasonable dispute. Disputed medical conclusions by doctors contained in medical reports cannot be judicially noticed. Hert v. Lumberman Mut. Cas. Co., 178 M 355, 584 P2d 656 (1978), distinguishing Stevens v. Glacier Gen. Assurance Co., 176 M 61, 575 P2d 1326 (1978), and clarified and rehearing denied in Hert v. Lumberman Mut. Cas. Co., 179 M 160, 587 P2d 11 (1978). Hert was held to no longer be authority for admissibility of medical records, in light of the 1990 adoption of ARM 24.5.317, in Miller v. Frasure, 264 M 354, 871 P2d 1302, 51 St. Rep. 233 (1994).

Sufficiency of Final Order: A letter containing no findings of fact but only the final conclusion that the Public Employees' Retirement Board had ruled against plaintiff is not a final order or decision sufficient under this section to foreclose plaintiff a right of appeal under 2-4-702 if not taken within 30 days. State ex rel. Stowe v. Bd. of Administration, PERS, 172 M 337, 564 P2d 167 (1977).

Does Not Require a Separate Express Rule on Each Proposed Finding: Provision construed as not requiring a separate, express ruling on each proposed finding of a party provided the agency's decision and order on a party's proposed findings are clear. Consumer Counsel v. P.S.C. & Mont. Power Co., 168 M 180, 541 P2d 770 (1975).

Part 7
Judicial Review of Contested Cases

Part Case Notes

Death of Inmate While in Custody — Human Rights Commission — Administrative Appeal and Review: An 18-year-old died from delirium tremens after being arrested by Blaine County authorities and while in the custody of the Hill County Detention Center. His estate brought a case before the Human Rights Bureau, alleging that the two counties had discriminated on the basis of race and disability. The hearing officer concluded that the counties had not discriminated against the estate. On appeal, the Human Rights Commission found clear error in the hearing officer's findings and reversed. On appeal of the Commission's findings, the District Court reversed, vacated the Commission's decision, and reinstated the hearing officer's order. The estate moved to alter or amend. The District Court, acting through a second judge following the retirement of the first judge, concluded that the first judge had fashioned an improper remedy. Both parties appealed to the Supreme Court, which held that the Commission had abused its discretion by modifying the findings of the hearing examiner without first determining that the findings were not supported by substantial evidence, the Commission abused its discretion by applying the wrong standard of review, the first judge correctly concluded that the Commission had improperly modified the hearing officer's findings, the replacement judge had incorrectly concluded that the original judge had erred as a matter of law, and the Montana Human Rights Act was not a proper legal remedy for the estate. Blaine County & Hill County v. Estate of Longsoldier, Jr., 2017 MT 80, 387 Mont. 202, 394 P.3d 159.

Abuse of Discretion in Failure to Reference Statutory Judicial Review Provisions in Administrative Order Addressing Child Support Enforcement — Due Process Violation Constituting Reversible Error: The mother filed a petition with the Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) for assistance in obtaining child support from the father. CSED initiated an administrative action to determine the amount of support owing, and an administrative law judge conducted a contested case hearing on the issue and entered an order establishing the father's current and past-due child support obligation. The order included a paragraph notifying the parents of their statutory right to petition for judicial review of the administrative decision under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7 (MAPA), but did not reference 40-5-253, which contains more specific procedural requirements for appealing from an administrative decision in a child support enforcement case than the provisions in MAPA. The father filed a petition for judicial review and mailed copies to the mother and CSED but failed to properly serve the parties as required in 40-5-253. The District Court concluded that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction because the father failed to comply with 40-5-253. The court dismissed the petition. The father moved the court to amend or reconsider the petition, contending that the application of 40-5-253 violated his due process rights because he did not receive sufficient notice of the procedures by which to obtain judicial review of the administrative decision. The motion was denied, but the court nevertheless subsequently entered another order correcting the clerical error by adding a reference to 40-5-253 to the notice provision of the earlier order and then granted CSED's motion to dismiss. The father appealed. The Supreme Court noted that proper service of a petition for judicial review was a threshold requirement for the District Court to obtain jurisdiction in this case and that under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7, a petition for judicial review may be properly served by mailing copies to the agency and other parties, but there is no requirement that a summons be issued and served in conjunction with the petition. By filing the petition for judicial review and mailing copies to the mother and CSED, the father fulfilled the service requirements of MAPA and Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469 (1996). However, specific statutory requirements prevail

over general provisions such as those in MAPA, and the Supreme Court agreed that the portion of the notice informing the father that MAPA would govern the proceedings was misleading, absent any reference to the different, specific procedural requirements for CSED actions under 40-5-253. The Supreme Court adopted federal interpretations of the due process notice requirements in this regard, which provide that the opportunity to be heard is not meaningful if the notice provided does not accurately inform the person to whom it is given of how to take advantage of that opportunity. The notice provisions in the administrative order did not provide father with adequate notice to meet due process requirements, so application of 40-5-253 would violate the father's due process rights. Under these unique circumstances, it was required that the father's petition for judicial review must be governed by the service requirements of MAPA and Hilands. Those requirements were met, so the District Court did acquire subject matter jurisdiction and abused its discretion in dismissing the father's petition for judicial review based on his failure to comply with 40-5-253. The case was reversed for further proceedings under MAPA. Pickens v. Shelton-Thompson, 2000 MT 131, 300 M 16, 3 P3d 603, 57 St. Rep. 543 (2000), followed in In re Support Obligation of McGurran v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2003 MT 145, 316 M 188, 70 P3d 734 (2003). See also Mullane v. Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co., 339 US 306, 94 L Ed 2d 865, 70 S Ct 652 (1950), Gonzales v. Valuation of Improvements — Standard of Review — All Factors Including Decision of Arbitrators to Be Reviewed De Novo by Department — Arbitration Act Inapplicable: After the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) awarded a lease to Hagemeister, a three-person panel of arbitrators was appointed by the DNRC to appraise the value of improvements made by the previous lessee, Winchell. Two arbitrators agreed to a value in excess of $20,000, while a third valued the improvements at $1,407.35. The DNRC then conducted its own appraisal, set aside the higher values, and established a value of $1,564 for the improvements. The Winchells appealed the valuation to the District Court pursuant to 77-6-306(4), and the District Court granted summary judgment for the DNRC. The Supreme Court affirmed, holding that: (1) the correct standard for a de novo review of the District Court's judgment is the standard applicable to the review of a case that is not a "contested" case under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, the standard applicable in this case being whether the DNRC exceeded its statutory authority under 77-6-306(3) or whether its decision is wholly unsupported by the evidence; (2) even though the District Court applied the wrong standard of review, the standard applicable to a contested case, the District Court reached the correct result; (3) the language in 77-6-303 and 77-6-306(3) and (4), which are to be read together, indicate that the Legislature intended that the DNRC do more than review the paper records of the arbitrators in order to "fix" the value of the improvements, and the DNRC was therefore correct in using an independent valuation procedure conducted by its own appraiser in addition to considering the work of the three arbitrators; and (4) the Uniform Arbitration Act does not apply to this case because that Act establishes a District Court's standard of review in an appellate procedure. Winchell v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 1999 MT 11, 293 M 89, 972 P2d 1132, 56 St. Rep. 48 (1999).

Case Notes

Public Service Investigation Not Subject to Judicial Review: The Public Service Commission (PSC) issued two orders directing plaintiff telecommunications company to submit information regarding plaintiff's rates as part of an investigation concerning whether revenue earned by plaintiff was in excess of plaintiff's authorized rate of return. For various reasons, plaintiff declined to provide the information and requested that the PSC reconsider its orders, but the PSC denied the request for reconsideration, so plaintiff petitioned for judicial review under 2-4-701. The same day, the PSC filed a complaint in District Court seeking to compel plaintiff's compliance and requesting fines and penalties against plaintiff for failure to comply with PSC orders. The court held that the PSC orders unlawfully imposed a rate case filing requirement on plaintiff that violated state law and the PSC's own administrative rules. The PSC appealed, and the Supreme Court considered whether the PSC investigation was subject to judicial review. Plaintiff's justification for seeking intermediate review under 2-4-701 was that if plaintiff did not challenge the lawfulness of the PSC orders, then plaintiff would eventually suffer harm. However, judicial review under 2-4-701 is not justified when the only allegation of harm is speculation that further agency action may take place and, if it takes place, that it may have legal consequences. Courts may intervene in an agency process only when a specific final agency action has an actual or immediately threatened effect. Here, there was no final PSC action, only an investigation, and when an agency has not adjudicated the issues raised on appeal, there is no final agency action upon which a District Court can assume jurisdiction. Thus, the PSC investigation was not subject to judicial review, and the District Court was reversed. Qwest Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 350, 340 M 309, 174 P3d 496 (2007), following Marble v. St., 2000 MT 240, 301 M 373, 9 P3d 617 (2000). See also Lujan v. Nat'l Wildlife Fed'n, 497 US 871 (1990).

When Agency Decision Ripe for Judicial Review: The Public Service Commission (PSC) issued two orders directing plaintiff telecommunications company to submit information regarding plaintiff's rates as part of an investigation concerning whether revenue earned by plaintiff was in excess of plaintiff's authorized rate of return. For various reasons, plaintiff declined to provide the information and requested that the PSC reconsider its orders, but the PSC denied the request for reconsideration, so plaintiff petitioned for judicial review under 2-4-701. The same day, the PSC filed a complaint in District Court seeking to compel plaintiff's compliance and requesting fines and penalties against plaintiff for failure to comply with PSC orders. The court determined that the issues were ripe for judicial review. The PSC appealed, and the Supreme Court considered whether the PSC's actions were in fact ripe for judicial review. To determine ripeness, the court applied the criteria in Ohio Forestry Ass'n v. Sierra Club, 523 US 726 (1998), noting that a reviewing court must consider whether: (1) delayed review would cause hardship to the plaintiffs; (2) judicial intervention would inappropriately interfere with further administrative action; and (3) the courts would benefit from further factual development of the issues presented. In this case, the court decided that the PSC decision was not ripe for judicial review. First, judicial review of a preliminary step that has no binding legal consequences is not available even when the initiation of proceedings is serious and may have severe consequences, and because there were no irremediable adverse consequences that flowed from the PSC investigation, delayed judicial review would not cause a hardship for plaintiff. Second, judicial intervention would have inappropriately interfered with further PSC administrative action and frustrated the PSC's ability to review the information and decide the best course of action. Third, because the PSC had only initiated an investigation, the District Court reviewed issues upon which the PSC had not yet taken action, and because there was no specific factual record, further factual development of the issues would have benefited the courts. The District Court was reversed. Qwest Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 350, 340 M 309, 174 P3d 496 (2007).

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies Not Required When Futile: The District Court concluded that plaintiffs were required to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking a declaratory judgment in District Court. However, pursuant to DeVoe v. Dept. of Revenue, 263 M 100, 866 P2d 228 (1993), the Supreme Court will not require exhaustion of administrative remedies when the act would be futile. Here, exhaustion of administrative remedies would have required plaintiffs to stand by while defendant processed an application for ground water that did not fall within the exception to the Upper Missouri River basin closure law in 85-2-343. Waiting for applications to be issued before challenging them administratively or judicially would have been ineffective in preventing immediate harm to surface water in the basin and would have deprived plaintiffs of a remedy and required participation in a costly administrative process to object to applications that were expressly prohibited by the basin closure law and defendant's own rules. Thus, the futility exception to the exhaustion requirement relieved plaintiffs from having to exhaust administrative remedies before seeking judicial review, and the District Court was reversed. Mont. Trout Unlimited v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2006 MT 72, 331 M 483, 133 P3d 224 (2006).

Authority of State Agency to Determine Privacy Issues in Records in Agency's Possession: Following settlement of a human rights charge, Owen asked to examine the records of the Billings Police Department (BPD) that had been furnished to the Human Rights Bureau. The BPD objected to release of the information on grounds that the records contained information from individuals who held an expectation that the information that they had given to the BPD would be kept confidential and that the privacy rights of those individuals outweighed Owen's right to know. A Department of Labor and Industry hearings examiner subsequently denied the BPD's objection and ordered that the records be produced for Owen's inspection. The BPD sought judicial review, and the District Court voided the Department's decision, holding that the Department did not have the authority or jurisdiction to decide the constitutional issues raised by Owen. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Consistent with Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003), and Shoemaker v. Denke, 2004 MT 11, 319 M 238, 84 P3d 4 (2004), the Department had original jurisdiction to review its own records and determine if any constitutionally protected privacy rights were implicated by those records and whether those privacy rights clearly outweighed Owen's right to examine the records. The analysis by the Department involved mixed questions of fact and law and thus did not qualify as an exception to the requirement that a person must first exhaust administrative remedies. The court pointed out that denying administrative agencies the authority or jurisdiction to make the initial decision on whether the agencies' own records may be examined would require a lawsuit every time that a request to inspect records was met with an objection by the producing party and thus would put the right to know out of reach for most citizens. Billings v. Owen, 2006 MT 16, 331 M 10, 127 P3d 1044 (2006).

Presentation of Factual Issues in Conjunction With Constitutional Issues — Petition for Judicial Review of Administrative Decision Properly Dismissed for Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: The District Court dismissed plaintiff's petition for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Plaintiff appealed on grounds that this case fit the exception to the exhaustion rule because there was an issue of constitutional dimension. The Supreme Court held that plaintiff's petition for judicial review did not fit the exception because it presented, in conjunction with the constitutional issue, a challenge to the underlying factual determinations upon which the constitutional defense rested, placing plaintiff squarely within the administrative process and requiring plaintiff to argue both the factual and constitutional issue administratively. Further, plaintiff missed the administrative filing deadline, so failure to properly prosecute the claim in the administrative forum required forfeiture of plaintiff's right to review of the merits of the claim and dismissal of the appeal. Shoemaker v. Denke, 2004 MT 11, 319 M 238, 84 P3d 11 (2004), following Great Falls Tribune v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Standard of Review of Public Service Commission Conclusion of Law: The standard of review applicable to a Public Service Commission's conclusion of law is whether the Public Service Commission correctly interpreted the law in reaching the conclusion. Grouse Mtn. Associates, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 65, 943 P2d 971, 54 St. Rep. 750 (1997). See also Great Falls v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2011 MT 144, 361 Mont. 69, 254 P.3d 595.

Proper Notice of Violation and Opportunity for Discovery Required by Statute and Due Process — Remand to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Wilsons, who operated a garbage transport business under a certificate granted by the Public Service Commission, were served by the P.S.C. with a complaint and order to show cause why their certificate should not be terminated. The complaint and order did not refer to any particular rule, statute, or previous order of the Commission that was alleged to have been violated. Later, after the Commission denied an opportunity for Wilsons to discover the evidence to be used against them, the District Court granted Wilsons' motion to amend their application for a review of the P.S.C. order to include immediate review under this section. The Supreme Court held that the notice used by the P.S.C. did not comply with the requirements of 69-12-327, in that the notice did not specify the rule, statute, or order alleged to have been violated, and held that basic procedural due process was not followed by the P.S.C. in its denial of the Wilsons' request for discovery. The Supreme Court also held that judicial review of the final agency decision was not an adequate remedy when the record on which the final decision of the agency will be based contained no evidence of the statute, rule, or order violated; when no discovery was allowed; when there was no evidence that Wilsons had been notified of who would testify against them; and when, cumulatively, it appeared that Wilsons had been denied fundamental fairness. Wilson v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 260 M 167, 858 P2d 368, 50 St. Rep. 985 (1993).

Lack of District Court Jurisdiction in Claim for Damages — Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Gilpins initiated suit for damages resulting from temporary suspension of their day-care license by the Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), contending that, under 3-5-302, jurisdiction was in the District Court because the action involved a civil claim against the state for payment of money. However, the court properly dismissed the claim for lack of jurisdiction because Gilpins failed to exhaust all administrative remedies available within the agency, as required by 2-4-702, and because there was no showing made pursuant to this section that a review of the agency decision by a hearings examiner would not provide an adequate remedy. Gilpin v. St., 249 M 37, 812 P2d 1265, 48 St. Rep. 567 (1991).

Determination of Finality of Order: For purposes of judicial review the finality of an agency order depends upon the nature of the order rather than its chronology in relation to the whole of the agency proceedings. A final order need not necessarily be the very last order in an agency proceeding, but rather, the order is final for purposes of judicial review when it imposes an obligation, denies a right, or fixes some legal relationship as a consummation of the administrative process. N. Plains Resource Council v. Bd. of Natural Resources & Conservation, 181 M 500, 594 P2d 297 (1979).

Exhaustion of Remedies: Where Public Service Commission failed, refused, or neglected to act on petitioner's application for interim rate increase to meet increased costs, action was arbitrary and Supreme Court would remand cause and order prompt action of petition. State ex rel. Great Falls Gas Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, P.S.C., 169 M 68, 544 P2d 815 (1976).

2-4-702. Initiating judicial review of contested cases.

Uniform Commissioner's Comment

[The second sentence of this section beginning with "This section does not limit . . ." is taken directly from sec. 15 of the 1961 Revised Model Act, but was deleted from the proposed Act. The following commissioner's comment is an extract applicable to this sentence.]

An important question that arises under subsection (a) [2-4-702] is whether or not the review provisions should be made exclusive and all other review provisions on the statute books should be repealed. Each state will have to deal with this matter as the local circumstances dictate. On the one hand, if there is but one mode and scope of review, the state procedural structure is greatly simplified. On the other hand, local considerations, including practical considerations connected with obtaining adoption of the Model Act, may indicate or even require the retention, at least for the moment, of the pre-existing methods of judicial review.

Compiler's Comments

2017 Amendment: Chapter 126 in (2)(a) after "75-2-213, and" substituted "subsections (2)(c) and (2)(e)" for "subsection (2)(c)"; inserted (2)(e) regarding petition for review of a final decision in district court or water court and filing in a certain district court when more than one party is aggrieved by a final decision. Amendment effective October 1, 2017, and terminates September 30, 2025.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 126, L. 2017, provided: "[This act] applies to final decisions on an application for a permit or change in appropriation right issued after October 1, 2017."

Termination: Section 6(2), Ch. 126, L. 2017, provided: "Petitions filed on or before September 30, 2025, may proceed after the termination of [this act] and are not affected by this section."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 445 in (1)(a) in first sentence at beginning inserted exception clause; in (2)(a) in first sentence in exception clause inserted reference to 75-2-211 and 75-2-213; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2009.

Severability: Section 10, Ch. 445, L. 2009, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 12, Ch. 445, L. 2009, provided: "[This act] applies to judicial and board of environmental review hearing and appeal proceedings initiated on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 5, 2009.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 347 in (1)(a) near middle of first sentence after "final" inserted "written"; in (2)(a) in first sentence in two places before "decision" inserted "written"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 361 in (2)(a) near beginning of second sentence after "statute" inserted "or subsection (2)(d)"; inserted (2)(d) concerning petitions relating to certain decisions made pursuant to Title 75 or Title 82; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title 75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

Severability: Section 39, Ch. 361, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 16, 2003.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 290 in (2)(a), at beginning, inserted exception clause; inserted (2)(c) regarding applicability and jurisdiction of appeals filed pursuant to 33-16-1012(2)(c); and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (3) in second sentence, after "proper", inserted "following notice to the affected parties and an opportunity for hearing. A stay may be issued without notice only if the provisions of 27-19-315, 27-19-316, and 27-19-317 are met.

GENERAL

Appeal of Decision of Board of Oil and Gas Conservation — District Court Proceeding Subject to De Novo Review — Not Under MAPA: The plaintiffs filed a petition for judicial review of a decision by the Board of Oil and Gas Conservation in District Court. In dismissing the proceeding, the District Court ruled that the plaintiffs' sole remedy was a challenge under 82-11-144. The Supreme Court reversed the dismissal, holding that an action to seek review of a decision by the Board must proceed in District Court, is subject to de novo review, and may not proceed under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. Ostby v. Bd. of Oil & Gas Conserv., 2014 MT 105, 374 Mont. 472, 324 P.3d 1155.

Statutory Filing Deadline Not Jurisdictional — District Court to Allow Equitable Relief Upon Remand — Separation of Powers Implicated: Because of a calendaring error, the plaintiff railway's counsel missed the deadline imposed by 49-2-505 for an appeal of a decision of the Human Rights Bureau to the Human Rights Commission but submitted an out-of-time appeal. The defendant argued that the 14-day deadline imposed by 49-2-505 was jurisdictional, and the Commission and the District Court, in issuing an order to enforce the order of the Human Rights Bureau, agreed. Citing Davis v. St., 2008 MT 226, 344 Mont. 300, 187 P.3d 654, Miller v. Eighteenth Jud. Dist., 2007 MT 149, 337 Mont. 488, 162 P.3d 121, and St. v. Johnston, 2008 MT 318, 346 Mont. 93, 193 P.3d 925, among other cases, for the proposition that "categorical time prescriptions" or filing deadlines do not withdraw subject matter jurisdiction from a District Court, the Supreme Court reversed. The Supreme Court held that the District Court was not deprived of jurisdiction and that, upon remand, the District Court should consider the issue of why the railway's counsel missed the deadline and should, if it finds good cause, exercise its equitable powers to allow the appeal. The dissent argued that the majority's opinion implicated the separation of powers doctrine because the majority had no authority to allow an exception to the statutory filing deadline. BNSF Ry. Co. v. Cringle, 2010 MT 290, 359 Mont. 20, 247 P.3d 706. See also BNSF Ry. Co. v. Cringle, 2012 MT 143, 365 Mont. 304, 281 P.3d 203, and St. v. Robertson, 2015 MT 341, 381 Mont. 520, 363 P.3d 427.

Denturists' Due Process Rights Not Violated by Placement Under Board of Dentistry: Denturist plaintiffs contended that the policies, membership, and restrictions imposed on denturity by the Board of Dentistry was a violation of due process, entitling plaintiffs to a federal claim under 42 U.S.C. 1983. The District Court rejected the claim, and the Supreme Court affirmed. Although the Board was comprised mostly of dentists, under Friedman v. Rogers, 440 US 1 (1979), due process does not require that a regulatory board equally represent all professions subject to that board's regulations, nor is there a constitutional right for a profession to be regulated by a board that is sympathetic to the commercial practice of that profession. Additionally, under Zinermon v. Burch, 494 US 113 (1990), to determine whether a procedural due process violation has occurred, the adequacy of the state's process must be examined for constitutionality. Here, plaintiffs did not show that administrative procedures afforded to them were inadequate, and in fact, they did not avail themselves of the process available to them. Plaintiffs' failure to exhaust the administrative process precluded relief by judicial review. Thus, the due process claim failed, and absent a constitutional claim, the 42 U.S.C. 1983 claim failed as well. Wiser v. St., 2006 MT 20, 331 M 28, 129 P3d 133 (2006).

Improper Federal District Court Jurisdiction and Review of State Agency Decision: Ford Motor Company sought to terminate an automobile dealer franchise, and the franchise holder sought a Montana Department of Justice administrative hearing under 61-4-206. The Department's decision in favor of Ford was appealed to a Montana District Court under this section. Ford successfully removed the case to the United States District Court, which reversed the Department's decision and rendered judgment in favor of Ford. The franchise holder appealed. The Montana procedure clearly provided for state District Court appellate review, not de novo review, of the administrative agency decision. Therefore, the federal District Court had neither original jurisdiction nor removal jurisdiction over review of the administrative agency decision. The removal to the federal District Court was error. The federal District Court's reversal of the administrative agency decision and rendering of judgment in favor of Ford were also in error. The judgment was vacated, and the case was remanded to the federal District Court for further remand by it to the state District Court. Shamrock Motors, Inc. v. Ford Motor Co., 120 F3d 196 (9th Cir. 1997), overruled in BNSF Railway Co. v. O'Dea, 572 F3d 785 (9th Cir. 2009).

Approval of Preliminary Plat Not Appealable: Kalispell argued that the issuing of a preliminary plat approval by the city-county planning board was illegal because it did not conform with the master zoning plan adopted by the city and county. The Supreme Court followed the precedent of its decision in Sourdough Protective Ass'n, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 253 M 325, 833 P2d 207 (1992), holding that there is no statutory appeal process from the approval of a preliminary plat. Kalispell v. Flathead County, 260 M 258, 859 P2d 458, 50 St. Rep. 1033 (1993).

Dismissal of Appeal of Preliminary Subdivision Plat Approval Upheld: The Sourdough Protective Association petitioned the District Court for a writ of mandamus and moved to stay the Board of County Commissioners from further proceedings concerning a subdivision project for which it had granted preliminary approval. The Supreme Court held that the Association had no basis to support its petition because the Board was not subject to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act and the Legislature had not created an appeal process for cases involving conditional approval of preliminary plats. Sourdough Protective Ass'n, Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs of Gallatin County, 253 M 325, 833 P2d 207, 49 St. Rep. 563 (1992).

School Controversy — MAPA Statute of Limitations Not Applicable: After the Superintendent of Public Instruction issued an order to reinstate plaintiff to her teaching position, trustees filed a petition for judicial review after expiration of the 30-day period allowed under this section for judicial review following a final agency decision but prior to expiration of the 60-day period allowed for judicial review of a decision to terminate a tenured teacher made pursuant to 20-3-107(2). The Supreme Court reversed and remanded the District Court's order granting a motion to dismiss plaintiff's petition for judicial review, holding that MAPA did not expressly or impliedly repeal the statute of limitations provided pursuant to 20-3-107 and that the 60-day rule applied to a school controversy. Carbon County School District Trustees v. Spivey, 247 M 33, 805 P2d 61, 48 St. Rep. 79 (1991).

Necessity That Issues in Workers' Compensation Court Have Been Presented Below: Workers' Compensation Division's cited authority for claim that an issue must be first presented before the Division before it can be heard by the Workers' Compensation Court was not persuasive where its principal case was decided before establishment of the Workers' Compensation Court and at the time of that case the Division held its own contested case hearings. Hock v. Lienco Cedar Prod., 194 M 131, 634 P2d 1174, 38 St. Rep. 1598 (1981).

Appeal From Tax Appeal Ruling — Applicable Procedure: The Department of Revenue audited respondent's corporate license tax returns and assessed additional taxes. Respondent protested the assessment and appealed to the State Tax Appeal Board (STAB). After a hearing, STAB affirmed the Department's decision. Respondent filed for judicial review of the STAB decision in District Court. Respondent mailed a copy of the summons and petition to the attorney who represented the Department at the hearing and to STAB. The respondent received a default judgment and a reversal of STAB's final order. The Department contends that respondent failed to comply with 2-4-702 and thereby failed to obtain jurisdiction over the Department. Respondent asserts that 15-2-303 is the applicable statute. Section 2-4-702 is the procedure for initiating judicial review of agency decisions in contested cases, while 15-2-303 provides appeal procedures for initiating judicial review of STAB decisions. Section 15-2-303 is a specific statute while 2-4-702 is general. A specific statute controls over a general statute to the extent of any inconsistency. Dept. of Revenue v. Davidson Cattle Co., 190 M 326, 620 P2d 1232, 37 St. Rep. 2074 (1980).

Venue of Decision of Board of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Public Health and Human Services): Under 50-5-306 (repealed effective July 1, 1991), which provides for an appeal of a decision of the Board of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) regarding a certificate of need for a health care facility, venue is determined by the Montana Administrative Procedure Act and the District Court properly determined that venue should remain in Lewis and Clark County. Mont. Health Systems Agency, Inc. v. Bd. of Health & Environmental Sciences, 188 M 188, 612 P2d 1275 (1980).

Procedure for Judicial Review Under Clean Air Act to Control: The Montana Administrative Procedure Act provides generally for judicial review. However, the provisions of subsection (2)(a) of this section exclude any possible conflict with the procedure set out in 75-2-411 relating to judicial review of an order granting a preconstruction permit under the Clean Air Act of Montana. N. Plains Resource Council v. Bd. of Health & Environmental Sciences, 184 M 466, 603 P2d 684 (1979).

MAPA Not Sole Remedy: The Public Employees' Retirement Board was estopped to claim that the petitioner's sole remedy was under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) and that this remedy was not timely exercised because the Board at no time indicated it was bound by and acting pursuant to MAPA with its notice and hearing requirements. State ex rel. Stowe v. Bd. of Administration, PERS, 172 M 337, 564 P2d 167 (1977).

Underlying Principles: Three principles underlie this section: (1) that limited judicial review of administrative decisions strengthens the administrative process by encouraging the full presentation of evidence at the initial administrative hearing; (2) judicial economy requires court recognition of the expertise of administrative agencies in the field of their responsibility; and (3) limited judicial review is necessary to determine that a fair procedure was used, that questions of law were properly decided, and that the decision of the administrative body was supported by substantial evidence. Vita-Rich Dairy, Inc. v. Dept. of Business Regulation, 170 M 341, 553 P2d 980 (1976).

Appeal From County Welfare Board — Venue: Appeal of an administrative decision of the County Welfare Board does not constitute an action against the county as required by 25-2-106; such an appeal is properly brought in the county where the plaintiff resides. State ex rel. Hendrickson v. Gallatin County, 165 M 135, 526 P2d 354 (1974).

PROCEDURE

Valid Memorandum of Agreement Allowing State to Investigate Child Abuse Allegations on Reservation and Pursue Substantiation Proceedings Against Tribal Member: The Assiniboine and Sioux Tribes of the Fort Peck Reservation entered a memorandum of agreement with the Bureau of Indian Affairs and the Montana Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS), allowing DPHHS to place Indian children with enrolled tribal members living on the reservation. DPHHS subsequently placed a Minnesota Indian child with the child's great-aunt Hanna on the Fort Peck Reservation, but the placement was terminated after DPHHS received reports that the child was being abused or neglected. DPHHS subsequently initiated an investigation into the cause of the abuse and issued a substantiated report that Hanna had abused or neglected the child. Hanna moved for a fair hearing, and because no criminal charges had been filed, DPHHS began the fair hearing process. Hanna then moved to dismiss the substantiation proceeding on jurisdictional grounds. The hearings officer held that the tribe maintained exclusive jurisdiction over Indian youth and that DPHHS's substantiation proceedings interfered with tribal sovereignty. DPHHS appealed the decision in District Court, arguing that pursuant to the memorandum of agreement, DPHHS had jurisdiction to issue the substantiated report under state law and policy because DPHHS had licensed Hanna as a kinship foster care provider in the first place. The District Court agreed and reversed the hearings officer's decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The purpose of the agreement was to allow eligible Indian children on the Fort Peck Reservation to receive services and foster care maintenance payments, and the agreement was a valid, federally authorized agreement. Under the agreement, DPHHS was assigned the responsibility of investigating allegations of abuse and neglect, documenting conclusions of the investigation in a final report, and making the final decision about an individual's licensing status, and the agreement did not contemplate tribal jurisdiction regarding these issues. Therefore, DPHHS had jurisdiction to pursue substantiation proceedings against Hanna. In re Fair Hearing of Hanna, 2010 MT 38, 355 Mont. 236, 227 P.3d 596.

Lack of Required Statutory Information Precluding Dismissal of Valuation: Plaintiff protested the state's 2005 valuation of plaintiff's operating property. The State Tax Appeal Board (STAB) affirmed the valuation, and plaintiff appealed. The state moved to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction because although plaintiff's appeal contained sufficient information to comply with 15-2-303, both 15-2-301(5) and 15-2-302(5) mandate that additional information required by 2-4-702(2)(b) and 2-4-704(2)(a) also be contained in the petition for judicial review of a STAB decision. The motion was denied, and the state appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. As a more specific statute, 15-2-303 applies only to STAB decisions, while 2-4-702, a more general statute, applies to information necessary for inclusion in a petition for judicial review of an administrative decision. Therefore, it was not necessary to dismiss plaintiff's appeal on grounds that plaintiff's notice of appeal did not contain all the information required by 2-4-702(2)(b) and 2-4-704(2)(a). PacifiCorp v. St., 2009 MT 140, 350 M 336, 207 P3d 327 (2009), following Dept. of Revenue v. Davidson Cattle Co., 190 M 326, 620 P2d 1232, 37 St. Rep. 2074 (1980).

Department Properly Allowed to Participate in Judicial Review of Liquor License Transfer: Protesters to the transfer of a liquor license asserted that the District Court improperly allowed the Department of Revenue to participate in judicial review of the Department's decision regarding the license transfer on grounds that the Department was not a necessary party to the action. The Supreme Court noted that a person who is not a party to an action cannot be a party to the judgment of that action and that it is only against a party to an action that judgment can be taken. The District Court could not properly order the Department to take specific action concerning the license transfer unless the Department was a party to the action. Therefore, the District Court properly allowed the Department to participate in judicial review of the Department's decision. Forsythe v. Great Falls Holdings, LLC, 2008 MT 384, 347 M 67, 196 P3d 1233 (2008), distinguishing Young v. Great Falls, 194 M 513, 632 P2d 1111 (1981), and Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469 (1996).

Improper Consolidation of Two Cases Pending in Separate Courts — Change of Venue Granted: Drew filed an employment discrimination complaint against Yellowstone County and two County Commissioners. The Commission for Human Rights issued its decision, and Drew appealed certain aspects of the decision to the First Judicial District Court in Lewis and Clark County—a proper venue as the county where the Commission for Human Rights had its principal office. Meanwhile, Yellowstone County and the Commissioners appealed other aspects of the decision to the Thirteenth Judicial District Court in Yellowstone County. Drew moved for a change of venue to Lewis and Clark County. Yellowstone County conceded that Lewis and Clark County was a proper venue for Drew's petition, but argued in Thirteenth Judicial District Court that Yellowstone County's petition justified a separate appeal in a proper District Court of the county's choice because the issues were different from those presented in Drew's petition. The Thirteenth Judicial District Court disagreed and consolidated the appeals in Lewis and Clark County, and Drew appealed. The Supreme Court cited federal law for the proposition that cases to be consolidated must be pending in the same court, so a cause of action pending in one jurisdiction cannot be consolidated with a cause of action pending in another jurisdiction, even though there may be a disparity in the issues under appeal or cross-appeal. Therefore, even though the practical result was the same, the Thirteenth Judicial District Court's consolidation order was reversed, and the court was ordered to grant Drew's motion for a change of venue. Yellowstone County v. Drew, 2007 MT 130, 337 M 346, 160 P3d 557 (2007).

Questioning Only Validity of Statute for First Time in District Court — Other Issues to Be Raised at Administrative Level: The Commission for Human Rights enjoined the Hilands Golf Club (Hilands) from engaging in future gender discrimination, ordered Hilands to create a three-person committee to review its policies and practices, required the promotion of greater numbers of female members, and ordered Hilands to pay Ashmore $750 in damages for emotional distress. Hilands petitioned for judicial review, and the Supreme Court denied a challenge to the validity of Hilands' appeal in Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469 (1996). Following remand, Hilands moved to dismiss based on its contention that Ashmore lacked standing and that the claim was moot, and the District Court granted Hilands' motion. Ashmore appealed, contending that Hilands knew the facts that gave rise to its standing and mootness claims prior to the contested case hearing, but waived those arguments by not raising them at the administrative level. Hilands maintained that because both standing and mootness are jurisdictional issues, they can be raised at any stage of the proceedings. The Supreme Court noted that a District Court's authority to review administrative rulings is constrained by statute. A plain reading of subsection (1)(b) of this section indicates that a party may question the validity of a statute for the first time on judicial review to the District Court, but other than that exception, all other issues must be raised at the administrative level absent good cause. Because the Legislature created judicial review of administrative decisions and at the same time limited the scope of review, the general rule that justiciability questions can be raised at any time does not apply in these circumstances. Therefore, standing and mootness questions cannot be raised for the first time on judicial review of an administrative decision unless the District Court determines that there was good cause for the party's failure to raise the questions before the agency. Here, Hilands knew that the claims were viable issues that could be raised before the Commission, yet Hilands failed to raise them. If some event had occurred after the administrative hearing that raised the issues, Hilands would presumably be able to show good cause for failure to raise the issues, but the good cause exception did not exist here. Thus, the District Court erred in granting the motion to dismiss, and the Supreme Court remanded for further consideration of any substantive issues raised in the petition for judicial review. Abuse of Discretion in Failure to Reference Statutory Judicial Review Provisions in Administrative Order Addressing Child Support Enforcement — Due Process Violation Constituting Reversible Error: The mother filed a petition with the Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) for assistance in obtaining child support from the father. CSED initiated an administrative action to determine the amount of support owing, and an administrative law judge conducted a contested case hearing on the issue and entered an order establishing the father's current and past-due child support obligation. The order included a paragraph notifying the parents of their statutory right to petition for judicial review of the administrative decision under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7 (MAPA), but did not reference 40-5-253, which contains more specific procedural requirements for appealing from an administrative decision in a child support enforcement case than the provisions in MAPA. The father filed a petition for judicial review and mailed copies to the mother and CSED but failed to properly serve the parties as required in 40-5-253. The District Court concluded that it lacked subject matter jurisdiction because the father failed to comply with 40-5-253. The court dismissed the petition. The father moved the court to amend or reconsider the petition, contending that the application of 40-5-253 violated his due process rights because he did not receive sufficient notice of the procedures by which to obtain judicial review of the administrative decision. The motion was denied, but the court nevertheless subsequently entered another order correcting the clerical error by adding a reference to 40-5-253 to the notice provision of the earlier order and then granted CSED's motion to dismiss. The father appealed. The Supreme Court noted that proper service of a petition for judicial review was a threshold requirement for the District Court to obtain jurisdiction in this case and that under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7, a petition for judicial review may be properly served by mailing copies to the agency and other parties, but there is no requirement that a summons be issued and served in conjunction with the petition. By filing the petition for judicial review and mailing copies to the mother and CSED, the father fulfilled the service requirements of MAPA and Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469 (1996). However, specific statutory requirements prevail over general provisions such as those in MAPA, and the Supreme Court agreed that the portion of the notice informing the father that MAPA would govern the proceedings was misleading, absent any reference to the different, specific procedural requirements for CSED actions under 40-5-253. The Supreme Court adopted federal interpretations of the due process notice requirements in this regard, which provide that the opportunity to be heard is not meaningful if the notice provided does not accurately inform the person to whom it is given of how to take advantage of that opportunity. The notice provisions in the administrative order did not provide father with adequate notice to meet due process requirements, so application of 40-5-253 would violate the father's due process rights. Under these unique circumstances, it was required that the father's petition for judicial review must be governed by the service requirements of MAPA and Hilands. Those requirements were met, so the District Court did acquire subject matter jurisdiction and abused its discretion in dismissing the father's petition for judicial review based on his failure to comply with 40-5-253. The case was reversed for further proceedings under MAPA. Pickens v. Shelton-Thompson, 2000 MT 131, 300 M 16, 3 P3d 603, 57 St. Rep. 543 (2000), followed in In re Support Obligation of McGurran v. Extension of Time Deadline by Rule Inapplicable to Administrative Law Judge's Decision — Dismissal for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Proper: The mother petitioned for judicial review of an order by an administrative law judge regarding her child support action. The Child Support Enforcement Division moved to dismiss the petition on grounds that it was not timely filed pursuant to this section and that, as a result, the District Court lacked subject matter jurisdiction to hear the case. The mother filed a motion under former Rule 6(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), seeking an enlargement of time in which to file the petition, asserting that her failure to file the petition within the 30-day deadline was the result of excusable neglect. The motion was denied. The mother then filed for relief under former Rule 60(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), and that motion was also denied. The mother appealed from the denial of both motions. The Supreme Court held that former Rule 6(b), by its terms, applies only to acts required by the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure or by court order, but does not apply to acts required within a statutory framework, such as that established in this section. Thus, the rule does not apply, either by its terms or by analogy, to petitions for judicial review of administrative proceedings because applying the rule in that manner would extend the jurisdiction of District Courts beyond that allowed by the statute. Further, former Rule 60(b) does not provide a basis for relief in this case because the District Court was automatically deprived of jurisdiction once the 30-day period expired, and former Rule 60(b) cannot be applied to revest jurisdiction where none existed in the first place. Dismissal of the mother's petition was not an abuse of discretion, and the District Court order was affirmed. In re Support of McGurran, 1999 MT 192, 295 M 357, 983 P2d 968, 56 St. Rep. 741 (1999).

Amended Petition Seeking Declaratory Judgment Not Subject to Thirty-Day Rule on Proceedings for Judicial Review: A declaratory action pursuant to 2-4-506 is not subject to the 30-day limit imposed on proceedings for judicial review in contested cases under this section. An amended petition seeking to void amendments to administrative rules, to the extent that the petition seeks declaratory judgment on the validity of those amendments, is also not subject to the 30-day limit. Missoula City-County Air Pollution Control Bd. v. Bd. of Envtl. Review, 282 M 255, 937 P2d 463, 54 St. Rep. 338 (1997).

Improperly Perfected Petition for Judicial Review of Administrative Decision Beyond Scope of Judicial Remedy: Following an administrative hearing, Davis was found delinquent on his child support obligation in the amount of $44,975. Davis filed a petition with the District Court naming the State of Montana and the Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) as respondents, but CSED was not properly served with the petition. Davis requested that the court invalidate his divorce decree and support order because of fraud. The petition also made claims against persons who were not involved with the administrative action and sought money damages from the state. The District Court dismissed the petition, finding that the Court did not have the power to grant the relief sought by Davis and that the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure do not allow conversion of an appeal of an administrative decision into a lawsuit against the agency that made the decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that Davis had the opportunity to appeal his original divorce decree or to request modification of the support provisions in the order, but instead of pursuing those remedies, he became delinquent in his support payments. The petition for judicial review of the administrative decision did not comply with 2-4-704 and this section and sought relief beyond that which a court could grant and was properly dismissed. In re Marriage of Davis, 277 M 188, 921 P2d 275, 53 St. Rep. 727 (1996).

Petition for Judicial Review of Contested Case — Service on Parties Under Former Rule 5(b) Held Sufficient: Ashmore brought a claim before the Human Rights Commission, alleging that she had been discriminated against by Hilands Golf Club because of her gender, in violation of 49-2-304. The Commission found in favor of Ashmore and awarded her relief. Hilands filed a petition for judicial review pursuant to this section and served copies of the petition by mail upon counsel for the Commission and Hilands. No summons was served with the petition, and no service was made upon the Attorney General. Ashmore filed a motion to dismiss under former Rule 12(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), alleging that no jurisdiction had been obtained over the Commission by service of a summons upon the Attorney General, contrary to the holding in Fife v. Martin, 261 M 471, 863 P2d 403 (1993). The District Court granted the motion. The Supreme Court reversed, overruling Fife and holding that because judicial review pursuant to this section is in the nature of an appeal, in which jurisdiction over the parties has already been established, service of a summons with the petition is unnecessary and also holding that the petition may be served upon the parties by mail under former Rule 5(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). The Supreme Court noted that it was sufficient to mail a copy of the petition to the parties and the agency, whether or not the agency had been a party to the administrative proceeding. Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469, 53 St. Rep. 664 (1996), followed in Forsythe v. Great Falls Holdings, LLC, 2008 MT 384, 347 M 67, 196 P3d 1233 (2008).

Court Review and Reversal of School Board Decision Revoking Teacher's Certificate Proper: The District Court reviewed the entire record of proceedings by a hearings examiner that was relied on by a school board to revoke the certificate of a teacher accused of sexual misconduct and properly reversed the certificate revocation because: (1) the hearings examiner improperly allowed testimony of an expert concerning general statements about the behavior of victims of sexual abuse; (2) the hearings examiner's findings of sexual abuse were not supported by substantial evidence; (3) when the expert's testimony was properly disregarded, other findings by the hearings examiner did not support a conclusion that the teacher was not of good moral and professional character; and (4) the hearings examiner's findings and conclusions contained sufficient independent statements from which the court could reverse the school board's decision without requiring new findings and conclusions from the record. In re Renewal of Teaching Certificate of Thompson, 270 M 419, 893 P2d 301, 52 St. Rep. 200 (1995).

Filing More Than Thirty Days After Oral Decision but Within Thirty Days of Written Decision: The Public Employees' Retirement Board decision denying disability retirement benefits became final and was served on the day that the Board issued the decision in writing and sent it to the former employee, not on the day of the hearing when the Board orally announced its decision while the former employee and his attorneys were present. Thus, the petition for judicial review filed within 30 days of the written decision, but more than 30 days after the oral announcement of the decision at the hearing, was timely. Weber v. Pub. Employees' Retirement Bd., 270 M 239, 890 P2d 1296, 52 St. Rep. 162 (1995).

Judicial Review of Agency Paternity Action — Failure to Serve Attorney General and Agency as Real Party in Interest — Service Void — Lack of Jurisdiction: The Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) sought to compel Fife to submit to paternity testing for purposes of determining child support obligations. Fife sought judicial review of the administrative action by serving process by mail upon the mother and CSED but failed to properly name CSED as respondent or to serve the Attorney General or CSED in the manner required under the provisions of former Rule 4(D), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded). The District Court correctly held that it was without jurisdiction and properly dismissed the petition for judicial review for failure to effectuate valid service of process. Fife v. Martin, 261 M 471, 863 P2d 403, 50 St. Rep. 1414 (1993), overruled in Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 277 M 324, 922 P2d 469, 53 St. Rep. 664 (1996).

Issue Not Raised Before Agency Not Allowed to Be Raised on Judicial Review: Lincoln County argued in District Court that Sanders County had not objected to an impact plan before the Hard-Rock Mining Board and therefore had no standing to appeal the Board's decision in District Court. The Supreme Court held that Lincoln County had not argued that Sanders County was without standing when the issue was before the agency; therefore, Lincoln County could not raise the standing issue for the first time in District Court. Lincoln County v. Sanders County, 261 M 344, 862 P2d 1133, 50 St. Rep. 1352 (1993), followed in Hilands Golf Club v. Ashmore, 2002 MT 8, 308 M 111, 39 P3d 697 (2002).

Time for Filing of Petition for Judicial Review — Time of "Service" of Final Agency Decision Defined: Following proceedings in an administrative action before the Public Service Commission, the Commission mailed a copy of its decision to MCI on May 19, 1992, but MCI did not receive the decision until May 21, 1992. On June 19, 1992, MCI filed its petition for judicial review under this section. The District Court dismissed the petition as being untimely filed. The Supreme Court held that this section did not define the time of "service" at which the 30-day period for filing a petition for review began to run. Section 2-4-106 requires that former Rule 6(e), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), be applied to define when service by mail is complete for administrative decisions. Former Rule 6(e) requires that when service is made by mail, an additional 3 days must be added to the time for taking action. Thus, the time for judicial review began to run on May 23, and MCI's petition was filed within the 30-day time period provided by this section. MCI Telecommunications Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 260 M 175, 858 P2d 364, 50 St. Rep. 989 (1993), followed in Molnar v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2008 MT 49, 341 M 420, 177 P3d 1048 (2008), and distinguished in In re Support of McGurran, 1999 MT 192, 295 M 357, 983 P2d 968, 56 St. Rep. 741 (1999).

Order Staying Enforcement of Board's Order Pending Judicial Review — No Abuse of Discretion: The Board of Nursing issued an order placing hospice nurses on probation. When a District Court granted the nurses' petition for a stay of enforcement of the Board's final order, the Board appealed, alleging that the nurses were required to first apply for a stay from the Board. On appeal by the Board, the Supreme Court held that without a showing by the Board that there existed a danger that the nurses would continue the conduct addressed in the Board's order, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by issuing the stay order pending judicial review. Brackman v. Bd. of Nursing, 250 M 368, 820 P2d 1314, 48 St. Rep. 1039 (1991).

Declaratory Judgment Not Substitute for Administrative Procedure: The plaintiffs initiated an action to obtain a declaratory judgment from the District Court granting relief from an agency's ruling. The Supreme Court ruled that the lower court did not have the discretion to proceed under the Uniform Declaratory Judgments Act when the Montana Administrative Procedure Act provided a remedy for the party alleging a grievance. Roeber v. St., 243 M 437, 795 P2d 424, 47 St. Rep. 1293 (1990).

Failure to Follow Procedure for Review of Administrative Ruling — Dismissal Proper: The Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board) upheld a decision regarding assessments made by the Unemployment Insurance Division relating to classification of three corporation workers as employees. About the same time, the employer requested a contested case hearing before the Division of Workers' Compensation. Following an adverse decision by the Division of Workers' Compensation, the employer filed a complaint in District Court alleging bad faith and seeking damages. The proper procedure was to file a petition in District Court seeking review of the Board's decision. Dismissal of the complaint, based on failure to follow the proper procedure for judicial review, was proper. Cottonwood Hills, Inc. v. St., 238 M 404, 777 P2d 1301, 46 St. Rep. 1371 (1989).

Standing of Attorney General to Appeal P.S.C. Order — P.S.C. Appeal Untimely: The Montana Power Company (M.P.C.) applied to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) for a rate increase of over $96.3 million. The P.S.C. granted only $4.1 million and denied in toto M.P.C.'s request to recover costs associated with Colstrip Unit 3. The M.P.C. appealed to District Court for review under 2-4-701. The judge reversed the P.S.C. order. The Attorney General filed notice of appeal. More than 60 days after the judge's order was entered, the P.S.C. also filed notice of appeal. The M.P.C. filed a motion to dismiss the appeal of the Attorney General for lack of standing and the appeal of the P.S.C. as untimely. The Supreme Court granted the motion, holding that the Attorney General had no standing to represent the state on appeal since it was not an aggrieved party or a party to the proceedings before the District Court and because, in his official capacity, the Attorney General may not appeal a decision that is within the discretion of the P.S.C. as a party to the action. The appeal of the P.S.C. was untimely, although within 7 days of the notice of appeal filed by the Attorney General. The latter appeal being invalid, the P.S.C. appeal would have to fall within the 60-day rule. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 218 M 471, 709 P2d 995, 42 St. Rep. 1750 (1985).

Administrative Boards Not Indispensable Parties for Judicial Review: The construction and general laborer's union filed an unfair labor practice charge with the Board of Personnel Appeals. A hearing was held in which the hearings examiner confirmed the unfair labor practice charge. The Board of Personnel Appeals reviewed the hearings examiner's conclusions and confirmed the recommended order. Appellant petitioned the District Court for judicial review of the Board's order. The appellant failed to name the Board as a party as provided in 2-4-702. The court found that the administrative boards are not indispensable parties for purposes of judicial review. Young v. Great Falls, 194 M 513, 632 P2d 1111, 38 St. Rep. 1317 (1981).

"Promptly" Relating to Service of Petition Not Unconstitutionally Vague: The use of the word "promptly" as requirement for service of a petition for administrative review is not unconstitutionally vague. Its plain meaning is sufficient; a person's right of due process is not violated by its use even though clearer or more precise language might have been used. Rierson v. St., 188 M 522, 614 P2d 1020 (1980).

Prompt Service on Agency Not Violative of Equal Protection: The requirement for prompt service on the agency that rendered the decision to be reviewed applies with equal force on private individuals and government agencies who seek review of adverse administrative decisions; thus, there is no unconstitutional discrimination favoring the government violative of equal protection. Rierson v. St., 188 M 522, 614 P2d 1020 (1980).

Relation Back Not Applicable to Amended Petition When Original Petition Was Never Served: The relation back of an amended petition under former Rule 15(c), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), operates only when the original petition was served so that the opposing party has notice of the action, allowing an amended petition, even when filed after the running of the Statute of Limitations, to relate back to the date of the original filing of the petition. Therefore, an amended petition for judicial review, filed and served 16 months after the original petition was filed, cannot relate back to avoid dismissal for failure to promptly serve the petition as required by this section if the original petition was never served. Rierson v. St., 188 M 522, 614 P2d 1020 (1980).

Service on Agency of Petition for Judicial Review — 30 Days From Time of Filing Sufficient: When petitioner filed a petition for judicial review in a timely fashion but didn't serve this petition, then 16 months later filed an amended petition and served that petition on the agency, there was no prompt service within the meaning of this section. However, service of a petition for judicial review within about 30 days of filing the petition in District Court is sufficient. Rierson v. St., 188 M 522, 614 P2d 1020 (1980).

Date of Requested Rehearing — Running of Judicial Review Period: The 30-day period under 2-4-702 began to run when the Human Rights Commission issued its final order, not when the Commission denied a requested rehearing, since the Commission has no rule allowing rehearing. Bradco Supply Co. v. Larsen, 183 M 97, 598 P2d 596 (1979).

CONTESTED CASE

Appeal of Administrative Review — Franchisor Not Party to Appeal — District Court Findings of No Justiciable Controversy and Mootness Reversed: A car dealership filed an administrative protest against its franchisor and a competing car dealership after the franchisor agreed to award the competing dealership a franchise agreement. Following a hearing, the hearings examiner for the Motor Vehicle Division of the Department of Justice sustained the dealership's protest. The competing dealership appealed the ruling to the District Court, but the franchisor did not. The District Court dismissed the appeal, holding that it was moot and that no justiciable controversy existed because the franchisor had not appealed the hearings examiner's decision. The competing dealership appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed and vacated the dismissal of the appeal. The Supreme Court ruled that, in this case, the franchisor appeal was irrelevant because the competing dealership could be awarded relief on appeal. Rimrock Chrysler, Inc. v. St., 2016 MT 165, 384 Mont. 76, 375 P.3d 392.

Milk Producer's Petition to Change Rule Not Contested Case — Reasonable Necessity: An administrative proceeding following a stipulated settlement that used a hearing examiner and a formal evidentiary hearing concerning a milk producer's proposed amendments to the Board of Livestock's 12-day "sell by" date rule was a rulemaking proceeding subject to an arbitrary and capricious standard, rather than a contested case subject to judicial review under Title 2, ch. 4, part 7, and the Board of Livestock did not violate that standard when it considered evidence to maintain or abandon the 12-day rule even though it did not issue a written statement supporting its decisions. Further, the 12-day rule did not contradict statutory authorization for the rule or engraft additional or contradictory requirements, and a rule to control milk standards was reasonably necessary to regulate milk product quality and safety. Core-Mark International, Inc. v. Bd. of Livestock, 2014 MT 197, 376 Mont. 25, 329 P.3d 1278.

Failure to Allow Amendment of Affidavit Contesting Air Quality Permit — Prejudice to Substantial Rights Warranting Reversal: Plaintiffs moved to amend an affidavit contesting the issuance of an air quality permit. The Board of Environmental Review denied the motion and the District Court affirmed the Board's decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Former Rule 15(c), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), did not prevent plaintiffs from amending the affidavit, and the error prevented plaintiffs from raising potentially meritorious claims, which prejudiced plaintiffs' substantial rights and warranted reversal under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act. Additionally, 75-2-211(10) did not bar amendment of the original affidavit. The Supreme Court noted that it would make little sense and would not foster resolution of contested cases on the merits to foreclose the possibility of amendments before significant discovery occurred. Citizens Awareness Network v. Bd. of Envtl. Review, 2010 MT 10, 355 Mont. 60, 227 P.3d 583.

Venue Versus Jurisdiction — Failure to Move for Change of Venue at Initial Appearance Constituting Waiver of Right to Later Object to Venue: A mother filed in District Court in Judith Basin County for review of a child support modification consent order by the Department of Public Health and Human Services Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) reducing the father's child support obligation. CSED moved for dismissal, claiming that the mother had failed to exhaust her administrative remedies. The District Court granted the motion based on lack of jurisdiction, concluding that the petition should have been filed in a different county. The mother appealed, contending that the court confused the concepts of venue and jurisdiction and contending that dismissal of the petition for lack of jurisdiction was erroneous as a matter of law. The Supreme Court agreed and reversed. The District Court's interpretation of this section as a requirement that a petition for judicial review must be filed in the correct venue for the court to obtain jurisdiction was incorrect as a matter of law. Jurisdiction is a court's authority to hear and determine a case that goes to the power of the court and cannot be waived or conferred by consent of the parties when there is no basis for jurisdiction under the law, while venue refers to the place where a case is to be heard or where the power of the court is to be exercised and is a personal privilege of defendant that may be waived and that is considered waived pursuant to former Rule 12(b), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), unless a motion to change venue is made at defendant's initial appearance. Thus, the mother's petition for judicial review vested the Judith Basin County District Court with jurisdiction under this section. Whether venue was proper in the county where the petition was filed was an entirely different issue. This section also sets forth the proper place where a contested administrative decision can be heard, providing that the petition must be filed in the District Court for the county where the petitioner resides or has a principal place of business or where the agency maintains its principal office. Upon proper motion, the matter should have been transferred to the proper county, but CSED failed to move for a change of venue at the initial appearance, thereby waiving its right to later object to venue, opting instead to move to dismiss for lack of jurisdiction. Therefore, Judith Basin County was a proper place for trial absent agreement by the parties to transfer venue. In re Support Obligation of McGurran, 2002 MT 144, 310 M 268, 49 P3d 626 (2002).

No Evidence That Use of Siphon Tube to Regulate Temperature of Dam Outlet Water Satisfied Water Quality Standards: The Board of Health and Environmental Sciences (now Board of Environmental Review) issued "401 certifications" to the Milk River Irrigation District and the city of Gillette, Wyoming, regarding a hydroelectric generating facility at the Tiber Dam that provided in part for the placing of a siphon 60 feet below the auxiliary outlet in order to regulate the temperature of outlet water and protect the downstream fishery. As part of its contested case review, the District Court correctly concluded that the "401" application had never been amended to include the siphon scheme and that there was no evidence to support the Board's conclusion that withdrawing water from 60 feet below the auxiliary outlet satisfied applicable water quality standards, the nondegradation requirements of the Water Quality Act, Board rules, and state public policy. The court properly determined that due process would be violated if the certification could be issued without an amendment to the original application and without the holding of public hearings respecting the siphon scheme. Hi-Line Sportsmen Club v. Milk River Irrigation District, 241 M 182, 786 P2d 13, 47 St. Rep. 184 (1990).

Action to Enforce Distinguished From Action for Judicial Review of Contested Case — No Timely Exceptions or Appeal Filed: In an action based upon an order of the Board of Personnel Appeals regarding reclassification, Walch disputed parts of the order but failed to make a timely appeal or exception to the order and instead filed a petition to enforce in District Court. In upholding the District Court's dismissal, the Supreme Court distinguished an action to enforce under 2-18-1013 from an action for judicial review of a contested case under 2-4-702, noting that the latter action must be brought within 30 days after service of a final agency decision and allows the petitioner to contest the decision. However, in an action to enforce, the petitioner may not contest the decision; therefore, Walch could prevail only if the employer was not paying him according to the order. Upon a finding that Walch was being paid accordingly, the District Court's dismissal of the petition to enforce was affirmed. Walch v. Univ. of Mont., 221 M 52, 716 P2d 640, 43 St. Rep. 629 (1986).

P.S.C. Motor Carrier Certificate Issuance Not Contested Case: Where District Court nullified Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) Class D motor carrier certificate and appellant contends the court had no jurisdiction since the judicial review leading to the nullification had not been initiated within 30 days of the administrative action, as required by 2-4-702(2)(a), Supreme Court held that 2-4-702 applies only to contested cases, that P.S.C. certificate issuing process is not a contested case, and that hence 30-day limitation did not apply in this case. In re Application of Galt, 196 M 534, 644 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 106 (1982).

No Right to Judicial Review When No Right to Hearing: Under this chapter, the right of judicial review attaches only to a contested case proceeding. The court found no statutory or constitutional right of a terminated state employee to a hearing, although she had been given one; hence, the grievance proceeding was not a contested case under this chapter and no right of judicial review attached. Nye v. Dept. of Livestock, 196 M 222, 639 P2d 498, 39 St. Rep. 49 (1982).

Necessity of Prior Opportunity for Hearing: Petition for judicial review of an administrative order was properly dismissed where there had been no opportunity for administrative hearing in the matter. Under this chapter, judicial review may be had only of a final decision in a contested case, and a contested case is, among other things, one in which there has been an opportunity for a hearing. In re Selon v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 194 M 73, 634 P2d 646, 38 St. Rep. 1676 (1981).

EXHAUSTION

Authority of State Agency to Determine Privacy Issues in Records in Agency's Possession: Following settlement of a human rights charge, Owen asked to examine the records of the Billings Police Department (BPD) that had been furnished to the Human Rights Bureau. The BPD objected to release of the information on grounds that the records contained information from individuals who held an expectation that the information that they had given to the BPD would be kept confidential and that the privacy rights of those individuals outweighed Owen's right to know. A Department of Labor and Industry hearings examiner subsequently denied the BPD's objection and ordered that the records be produced for Owen's inspection. The BPD sought judicial review, and the District Court voided the Department's decision, holding that the Department did not have the authority or jurisdiction to decide the constitutional issues raised by Owen. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Consistent with Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003), and Shoemaker v. Denke, 2004 MT 11, 319 M 238, 84 P3d 4 (2004), the Department had original jurisdiction to review its own records and determine if any constitutionally protected privacy rights were implicated by those records and whether those privacy rights clearly outweighed Owen's right to examine the records. The analysis by the Department involved mixed questions of fact and law and thus did not qualify as an exception to the requirement that a person must first exhaust administrative remedies. The court pointed out that denying administrative agencies the authority or jurisdiction to make the initial decision on whether the agencies' own records may be examined would require a lawsuit every time that a request to inspect records was met with an objection by the producing party and thus would put the right to know out of reach for most citizens. Billings v. Owen, 2006 MT 16, 331 M 10, 127 P3d 1044 (2006).

Dismissal for Lack of Subject Matter Jurisdiction Proper Upon Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Absent Showing of Futility: Plaintiff filed for declaratory judgment and injunctive relief against state agencies and a subdivision water development company regarding plaintiff's provision of water to subdivisions developed by the company. The District Court dismissed for lack of subject matter jurisdiction, and plaintiff appealed. Generally, before a party can seek declaratory relief in District Court, the party must exhaust its administrative remedies, although courts generally will not require exhaustion of administrative remedies when recourse to an administrative remedy would be futile. However, the mere possibility of an adverse decision does not mean that resort to an administrative agency is futile, nor does the possibility that agencies might render decisions that could in some degree conflict justify bypassing the administrative process. Plaintiff in this case could not demonstrate futility, and seeking to skip the administrative process constituted an unwarranted intrusion into the agencies' regulatory authority. Thus, the District Court did not abuse its discretion by dismissing the action for lack of subject matter jurisdiction when plaintiff did not first exhaust its administrative remedies before seeking judicial review. Mtn. Water Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2005 MT 84, 326 M 416, 110 P3d 20 (2005), following Brisendine v. St., 253 M 361, 833 P2d 1019 (1992), and Art v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2002 MT 327, 313 M 197, 60 P3d 958 (2002).

Access to Public Service Records — Media Required to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Prior to Court Action — Review of Confidentiality Rules Ordered: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. The Commission denied the request on confidentiality grounds, but rather than challenging the confidentiality claims through the Commission's administrative procedures, the organizations filed an action in District Court. The court proceeded to make factual and legal determinations to determine whether the requested documents constituted constitutionally protected trade secrets or proprietary information without the benefit of the Commission developing a record or making threshold determinations on the complex issues. The Supreme Court held that it was improper to bypass the administrative agency and take the issue to District Court without exhausting the Commission's administrative procedures, so the District Court was reversed with orders to remand the case to the Commission for further consideration. However, the Supreme Court also required the Commission to review its administrative rules related to confidentiality challenges because the rules primarily addressed requests for information from competitor utilities and did not necessarily apply to media challenges. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Presentation of Factual Issues in Conjunction With Constitutional Issues — Petition for Judicial Review of Administrative Decision Properly Dismissed for Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: The District Court dismissed plaintiff's petition for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Plaintiff appealed on grounds that this case fit the exception to the exhaustion rule because there was an issue of constitutional dimension. The Supreme Court held that plaintiff's petition for judicial review did not fit the exception because it presented, in conjunction with the constitutional issue, a challenge to the underlying factual determinations upon which the constitutional defense rested, placing plaintiff squarely within the administrative process and requiring plaintiff to argue both the factual and constitutional issue administratively. Further, plaintiff missed the administrative filing deadline, so failure to properly prosecute the claim in the administrative forum required forfeiture of plaintiff's right to review of the merits of the claim and dismissal of the appeal. Shoemaker v. Denke, 2004 MT 11, 319 M 238, 84 P3d 11 (2004), following Great Falls Tribune v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003). For subsequent proceedings in Shoemaker, see Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies in Adjudicating Particular Issue — Lack of Jurisdiction for Judicial Review: Art hired Mason as a personal care attendant for Art's elderly mother. After the mother died, Mason filed a claim for unemployment benefits and a separate claim for unpaid overtime. Art contested both claims on grounds that Mason was an independent contractor. A compliance specialist determined that Mason was an employee, and that decision was affirmed in Workers' Compensation Court. However, the court stated that it lacked jurisdiction to decide issues regarding the overtime claim, so that claim went back to the administrative process. A second compliance specialist found that Art owed Mason overtime pay, but Art moved to suspend the administrative appeals process pending judicial review. The District Court dismissed the appeal for lack of jurisdiction, and Art appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. By failing to pursue an administrative appeal of the compliance specialists' determinations with the Hearings Bureau and then with the Board of Personnel Appeals, Art failed to exhaust all administrative remedies as required by this section, so the District Court's dismissal based on lack of jurisdiction was correct. Art v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2002 MT 327, 313 M 197, 60 P3d 958 (2002).

Issue of Whether Excess Resources Precluded Medicaid Eligibility Never Adjudicated — Motion to Declare Eligibility and Compel Medicaid Payments Properly Dismissed: Marble lived in a nursing home beginning in 1993. The Department of Public Health and Human Services determined in 1994 that Marble was eligible for Medicaid benefits. Following the death of her husband in 1996, Marble's guardian filed for a continuation of eligibility, which the Department denied because of excess resources, including a bank account with slightly more than $3,000 and about $31,000 in life insurance proceeds that Marble received, and because of her late husband's transfer of the family home to the children, which was considered a transfer of resources because her husband never received adequate compensation for the property. Marble challenged the denial of eligibility based on the transfer of resources determination, and the nursing home also became involved, seeking compensation for expenses dating back to 1996. A hearings officer determined that the transfer of resources did not disqualify Marble from receiving benefits, but the issue of excess resources was not addressed. The Department appealed the hearings officer's finding to the Board of Public Assistance, which reversed the decision and held that the house transfer did make Marble ineligible. Marble appealed to District Court for judicial review. In the meantime, the Department reversed its determination and informed the court that it would draft a settlement agreement for Marble's signature. However, because Marble insisted on attorney fees, the settlement agreement was never executed. Based on the Department's concession, both Marble and the nursing home moved the District Court to declare Marble eligible for Medicaid, compel payment of benefits, and award attorney fees. At a hearing, the Department explained that Marble remained ineligible based on the unresolved issue of excess resources, and the court agreed, denying the motions to declare Marble eligible for Medicaid, compel payment of benefits, and award attorney fees. Marble and the nursing home then appealed to the Supreme Court, asserting that because the Department had failed to raise the excess resources issue prior to the appeal, it could not now deny her eligibility. The Supreme Court affirmed. The issue of excess resources was never addressed by the hearings officer, nor was the issue before the District Court, so the court properly refrained from ruling on Marble's eligibility. The excess resources issue was never properly raised, argued, or adjudicated pursuant to the administrative process and therefore never ripe for judicial review; thus, it was necessary for that issue to be first challenged at the administrative level. Marble and the nursing home did not exhaust all administrative remedies, so there was no final decision upon which the District Court could assume jurisdiction. Marble v. St., 2000 MT 240, 301 M 373, 9 P3d 617, 57 St. Rep. 1002 (2000).

Proper Notice of Violation and Opportunity for Discovery Required by Statute and Due Process — Remand to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Wilsons, who operated a garbage transport business under a certificate granted by the Public Service Commission, were served by the P.S.C. with a complaint and order to show cause why their certificate should not be terminated. The complaint and order did not refer to any particular rule, statute, or previous order of the Commission that was alleged to have been violated. Later, after the Commission denied an opportunity for Wilsons to discover the evidence to be used against them, the District Court granted Wilsons' motion to amend their application for a review of the P.S.C. order to include immediate review under 2-4-701. The Supreme Court held that the notice used by the P.S.C. did not comply with the requirements of 69-12-327, in that the notice did not specify the rule, statute, or order alleged to have been violated, and held that basic procedural due process was not followed by the P.S.C. in its denial of the Wilsons' request for discovery. The Supreme Court also held that judicial review of the final agency decision was not an adequate remedy when the record on which the final decision of the agency will be based contained no evidence of the statute, rule, or order violated; when no discovery was allowed; when there was no evidence that Wilsons had been notified of who would testify against them; and when, cumulatively, it appeared that Wilsons had been denied fundamental fairness. Wilson v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 260 M 167, 858 P2d 368, 50 St. Rep. 985 (1993).

Lack of District Court Jurisdiction in Claim for Damages — Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: Gilpins initiated suit for damages resulting from temporary suspension of their day-care license by the Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services), contending that, under 3-5-302, jurisdiction was in the District Court because the action involved a civil claim against the state for payment of money. However, the court properly dismissed the claim for lack of jurisdiction because Gilpins failed to exhaust all administrative remedies available within the agency, as required by this section, and because there was no showing made pursuant to 2-4-701 that a review of the agency decision by a hearings examiner would not provide an adequate remedy. Gilpin v. St., 249 M 37, 812 P2d 1265, 48 St. Rep. 567 (1991).

Change in Point of Use — Judicial Review of Procedural Orders Improper: Pursuant to 1973 water use law, appellant applied for Department of Natural Resources and Conservation (DNRC) approval to change the point of use of its pre-1973 water right. DNRC hearing examiner ordered objectors to respond to appellant's discovery request, yet refused to dismiss the objections of objectors who failed to respond. Upon review, the Water Court reversed the DNRC denial. Appellant appealed, arguing review was inappropriate. The Supreme Court agreed, stating that judicial review of the hearing examiner's procedural order was improper as there had been no final decision or exhaustion of administrative remedies. Kingsbury Ditch Co. v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 223 M 379, 725 P2d 1209, 43 St. Rep. 1805 (1986).

Employment Discrimination Complaint — Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Petitioner filed a sex discrimination complaint with the Montana Human Rights Commission. The Commission's hearings officer recommended that the petition be dismissed. The petitioner filed written exceptions to the hearings officer's finding that gender was a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) but not to the findings of facts as to damages. The Commission found petitioner was unlawfully discriminated against and ordered payment of lost salary. Petitioner petitioned for judicial review on amount of damages, and school district petitioned for judicial review of BFOQ issue. The District Court denied the petition for judicial review of petitioner on the grounds that petition had failed to exhaust administrative remedies. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that petitioner did exhaust administrative remedies by raising two issues of error in his petition for judicial review even though only one of those issues was raised in petitioner's written exceptions to the administrative hearings officer's findings. The incorporation by reference of damages was sufficient to bring the issue before the Commission. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's reversal of the Commission on the issue of BFOQ and the District Court's order to vacate findings and dismiss the charge of sex discrimination. The Supreme Court held there was substantial credible evidence to support the District Court's finding of a substantial privacy issue making gender a BFOQ for the school guidance counselor position. Stone v. Belgrade School District, 217 M 309, 703 P2d 136, 41 St. Rep. 2436 (1984).

Contested Case — Requirement for Judicial Review — Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Plaintiff, a nursing home operator, was notified by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) that it was disallowing certain nursing care costs claimed by plaintiff. The Department notified plaintiff that a hearing could be requested under the Department's administrative rules. Plaintiff requested time extensions in which to submit objections, and the Department agreed. The Department finally set a time limitation that plaintiff did not meet. The Department then filed its reimbursement rate for plaintiff. Plaintiff filed a complaint in District Court for judicial review of the Department's determination. The District Court dismissed the case. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that only a party who has exhausted all administrative remedies is entitled to judicial review if aggrieved in a contested case. A contested case is a determination of legal rights after an opportunity for hearing. Because there was no hearing in this case, dismissal was proper. B.G.M. Enterprises v. St., 673 P2d 1205, 40 St. Rep. 1827 (1983) (apparently not reported in Montana Reports).

Original Action Involving Interpretation of Statute Allowed Without Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Game warden mandatorily retired under 19-8-601 lost a complaint proceeding before the Montana Commission for Human Rights, did not pursue further administrative remedies, and brought a District Court action to declare the statute invalid. The exhaustion of administrative remedies doctrine did not preclude redress because: (1) the court action was an original action and not a judicial review of an administrative action, and (2) the Commission ruling was an interpretation of law that must be made by the judiciary. Taylor v. Dept. of Fish, Wildlife, & Parks, 205 M 85, 666 P2d 1228, 40 St. Rep. 1112 (1983).

Denial of Permit to Construct Trailer Court — Mandamus Denied for Failure to Exhaust Remedies: Where the appellant brought an action in 1979 for mandamus to compel the county to issue a permit for the construction of additions to a trailer park, after such permits were denied in 1973 and 1974, the District Court did not err in holding that the appellant had failed to exhaust his administrative remedies and that the writ would therefore not be issued. After learning of the denial of the permit in 1973 and 1974, the appellant should have appealed the denial through administrative channels rather than 6 years later begin a pro se legal action in District Court. Bailey v. Dept. of Health and Environmental Sciences, 204 M 253, 664 P2d 325, 40 St. Rep. 825 (1983).

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedy Generally: If an administrative remedy is provided by statute, that relief must be sought from the administrative body and the statutory remedy exhausted before relief can be obtained by judicial review. Barnicoat v. Comm'r of Dept. of Labor and Industry, 201 M 221, 653 P2d 498, 39 St. Rep. 2070 (1982); State ex rel. Jones v. Giles, 168 M 130, 541 P2d 355 (1975).

Exhaustion of Administrative Workers' Compensation Remedies: Where (1) a claim for a $6,000 advance of workers' compensation benefits was made to the Workers' Compensation Division in a dispute between the Division and the claimant; (2) a petition for a hearing was made to the Workers' Compensation Court asking for a $19,622.72 advance; and (3) the Division argued on appeal from that court that the larger advance should not have been considered because it was not presented to the Division and because the Workers' Compensation Court hearing was an appeal from an agency requiring claimant to raise all issues before the agency and exhaust administrative remedies before being heard in court, the court properly entertained the question of the $19,622.72 advance because the Division had stated that the dispute was over the method of repayment and not the amount of the advance. Therefore, a dispute as to repayment method did in fact exist. There was no failure to exhaust administrative remedies as the Workers' Compensation Court is an administrative court deciding benefits disputes in a de novo hearing, and the Division had adequate notice and opportunity to defend. Hock v. Lienco Cedar Prod., 194 M 131, 634 P2d 1174, 38 St. Rep. 1598 (1981).

Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies — Exception for Nonparty: Plaintiffs are citizens of Great Falls who expended money for construction and improvement in reliance on the city's MELDA (Montana Economic and Land Development Act) plan. The Department of Revenue ruled that the city's plan did not conform to MELDA's provisions, and thus persons acting in reliance upon the city's plan would not receive MELDA tax treatment. The court found that the plaintiffs were nonparties even though they appeared at the administrative hearing and therefore could not appeal the Department's decision to the State Tax Appeal Board. Their remedy is in the District Court. This is an exception to the general rule that administrative remedies must be exhausted before applying for judicial review. Keller v. Dept. of Revenue, 182 M 478, 597 P2d 736 (1979).

SCOPE OF REVIEW

District Court Order Denying Petition for Judicial Review of Human Rights Commission Order Held Overbroad — District Court Ruling Held Premature and Held to Be Sua Sponte Reversal of Ruling Previously Forfeited: Denke filed complaints with the Human Rights Commission alleging that Thompson Falls and Shoemaker, a City Council member, retaliated against her for previously filing sexual harassment charges with the Commission by writing letters to the newspaper and holding a City Council meeting at which Shoemaker was allowed, with virtually no limitation, to severely criticize her conduct as city clerk and finance officer. In denying a petition for judicial review of the decision of the Commission hearing officer, the District Court held that Thompson Falls was not liable for Councilman Shoemaker's letters to the editor or for comments made by those attending the City Council meeting because of 27-1-804, protecting privileged communication, and the Montana Supreme Court case of Skinner v. Pistoria, 194 M 257, 633 P2d 672 (1981). The Supreme Court held that this statement in the District Court's order denying Denke's petition for judicial review was overbroad and had to be vacated because: (1) Denke did not seek to hold anyone at the City Council meeting liable for their statements except Shoemaker; (2) proceedings in the District Court against Shoemaker were stayed by his bankruptcy proceeding and the statement was therefore premature; and (3) the hearing examiner determined that 27-1-804 didn't apply to Shoemaker's letters to the editor and Shoemaker had previously forfeited his appeal on this issue in Shoemaker v. Denke, 2004 MT 11, 319 M 238, 84 P3d 4 (2004). The Supreme Court held that the District Court therefore wasn't in a position to rule that Shoemaker's letters were privileged. Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

Clearly Erroneous Standard of District Court Review of Agency Findings and Conclusions: A District Court reviews an administrative agency's findings of fact to determine whether the findings are clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence in the whole record. A District Court will uphold an agency's conclusions of law if the agency's interpretation of the law is correct. Bonner School District No. 14 v. Bonner Educ. Ass'n, 2008 MT 9, 341 M 97, 176 P3d 262 (2008).

Challenge of Environmental Assessment — No Jurisdiction for Administrative Review: A grain company sought a permit to build a high-speed grain loading terminal near Pompeys Pillar national monument. The permit was granted and plaintiff, a nonprofit association supporting the monument's preservation, began administrative proceedings in an effort to overturn the permit issuance on grounds that the Department of Environmental Quality erred in its preparation of the environmental assessment related to the permit. An administrative law judge concluded that the Department acted arbitrarily and capriciously by issuing a permit without preparing an environmental impact statement. The Department filed exceptions to the administrative law judge's conclusions with the Board of Environmental Review. The Board ultimately affirmed the Department's decision to issue the permit, and plaintiff appealed to District Court. The Department contended that because the challenge to the administrative decisions did not contain any air quality issues, but only addressed environmental assessment issues governed by the Montana Environmental Policy Act (MEPA), and that because MEPA does not provide for administrative review of challenges to MEPA compliance, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. The District Court agreed and dismissed plaintiff's petition for lack of subject matter jurisdiction. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Had plaintiff challenged air quality issues, it would have been entitled to administrative proceedings. However, plaintiff's challenge pertained only to issues related to the environmental assessment, which is governed by MEPA. MEPA requires that a compliance challenge be brought in District Court, rather than through administrative proceedings. Thus, the administrative law judge and the Board did not have jurisdiction to preside over the appeal, nor did the District Court have jurisdiction to review the administrative proceedings. Plaintiff's petition was properly dismissed. Pompeys Pillar Historical Ass'n v. Dept. of Environmental Quality, 2002 MT 352, 313 M 401, 61 P3d 148 (2002).

Independent Contractor Issue Not Raised During Administrative Proceedings — Judicial Review Precluded: After review of the proceedings of an administrative hearing, the District Court concluded that the Department of Labor and Industry possessed jurisdiction to award wages to a claimant seeking pay earned as a housekeeper. Employer maintained that the Department lacked jurisdiction because the housekeeper was not an employee but an independent contractor. However, because the issue of employment status was not raised at the administrative level, the employer was precluded from raising the issue upon judicial review. Searight v. Howell, 248 M 122, 809 P2d 588, 48 St. Rep. 370 (1991).

Judicial Review — Treatment of Gain and Cost of Equity Capital: After receiving a $7,917,936 rate increase from the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.), Montana-Dakota Utilities Company (M.D.U.) requested reconsideration of the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of capital and its order that the gain on reacquired debt be amortized over the remaining life of the indebtedness, the amortized amount to reduce interest expense to M.D.U. The P.S.C. denied reconsideration. On appeal, the District Court held that the P.S.C. correctly authorized the 13.35% rate return on equity capital but that its treatment of gain constituted a confiscation without due process. After appeal by both the P.S.C. and M.D.U., the Supreme Court held that the P.S.C.'s assignment of a 13.35% rate on return of equity capital was not arbitrary or capricious. However, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court, ruling that the P.S.C.'s order to amortize the gain on reacquired debt over the remaining life of the indebtedness was not confiscatory to either M.D.U. or its shareholders. Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 223 M 191, 725 P2d 548, 43 St. Rep. 1648 (1986).

Action to Enforce Distinguished From Action for Judicial Review of Contested Case — No Timely Exceptions or Appeal Filed: In an action based upon an order of the Board of Personnel Appeals regarding reclassification, Walch disputed parts of the order but failed to make a timely appeal or exception to the order and instead filed a petition to enforce in District Court. In upholding the District Court's dismissal, the Supreme Court distinguished an action to enforce under 2-18-1013 from an action for judicial review of a contested case under 2-4-702, noting that the latter action must be brought within 30 days after service of a final agency decision and allows the petitioner to contest the decision. However, in an action to enforce, the petitioner may not contest the decision; therefore, Walch could prevail only if the employer was not paying him according to the order. Upon a finding that Walch was being paid accordingly, the District Court's dismissal of the petition to enforce was affirmed. Walch v. Univ. of Mont., 221 M 52, 716 P2d 640, 43 St. Rep. 629 (1986).

District Court Bound by Factual Findings of Board of Personnel Appeals — Wrongful Discharge — Reinstatement — No Backpay: An employee of the state was discharged from employment because he used a state-owned vehicle for private purposes. He appealed the decision of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and the Board of Personnel Appeals ruled that though his discharge was properly justified, the Department had never adopted a policy regarding such use of vehicles and had not punished similar usage; thus, the discharge was wrongful and he was entitled to reinstatement. He was offered a substantially equivalent position but appealed the Board's denial of backpay and benefits and, upon losing the District Court appeal, pursued the issues before the Supreme Court. The court upheld the District Court on all issues, observing that both courts were bound by factual findings of the Board and stipulations by the parties. The District Court was not obligated to hold a hearing on the facts. Hutchin v. St., 213 M 15, 688 P2d 1257, 41 St. Rep. 1916 (1984).

District Court Order Granting Relief Beyond Issues Addressed by Administrative Agency: Where the District Court reversed an order of the Office of Public Instruction (OPI) and found that the plaintiff was a teacher subject to the tenure laws of the state, the Supreme Court found on appeal that the District Court erred in that its order went beyond the scope of the issues determined in the OPI order. The Superintendent of Public Instruction did not address the issue of the reinstatement of the plaintiff or award him backpay, and the District Court can review only those issues determined by the agency. The District Court should have reversed the Superintendent on the issue of teacher tenure and remanded the case for negotiations between the plaintiff and the school district. Harris v. Bauer, 206 M 480, 672 P2d 26, 40 St. Rep. 1793 (1983).

Issues Subject to Review on Appeal: Sorlie argued that the school district could not appeal a salary decision made by the Superintendent of Public Instruction because it did not directly petition the District Court for review. The Supreme Court disagreed. Issues brought before the agency proceeding automatically become subject to judicial review. The salary issue was raised at the agency level and reviewed by the District Court. The school district, as an aggrieved party, can appeal from the decision of the District Court. Sorlie's petition for judicial review raised the salary question, and the school district was aggrieved by the District Court decision on that question. Consequently the school district can appeal on that basis. Sorlie v. School District, 205 M 22, 667 P2d 400, 40 St. Rep. 1070 (1983).

Issue Raised Before Agency: Where District Court nullified Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) motor carrier certificate and appellant contends under 2-4-702(1)(b) that validity had not been an issue in the administrative hearing and that the court was therefore precluded from reviewing question of validity, Supreme Court held that record shows that issue of validity had been raised before the P.S.C. and therefore court did not exceed its scope of judicial review. In re Application of Galt, 196 M 534, 644 P2d 1019, 39 St. Rep. 106 (1982).

Exhaustion of Administrative Workers' Compensation Remedies: Where (1) a claim for a $6,000 advance of workers' compensation benefits was made to the Workers' Compensation Division in a dispute between the Division and the claimant; (2) a petition for a hearing was made to the Workers' Compensation Court asking for a $19,622.72 advance; and (3) the Division argued on appeal from that court that the larger advance should not have been considered because it was not presented to the Division and because the Workers' Compensation Court hearing was an appeal from an agency requiring claimant to raise all issues before the agency and exhaust administrative remedies before being heard in court, the court properly entertained the question of the $19,622.72 advance because the Division had stated that the dispute was over the method of repayment and not the amount of the advance. Therefore, a dispute as to repayment method did in fact exist. There was no failure to exhaust administrative remedies as the Workers' Compensation Court is an administrative court deciding benefits disputes in a de novo hearing, and the Division had adequate notice and opportunity to defend. Hock v. Lienco Cedar Prod., 194 M 131, 634 P2d 1174, 38 St. Rep. 1598 (1981).

Nonadministrative Question to Be Decided on Judicial Review: The Department of Revenue ruled that the Great Falls MELDA (Montana Economic and Land Development Act) plan did not conform to MELDA provisions. Plaintiffs acted in reliance on the city's plan, but because of the Department's decision they did not receive MELDA tax treatment. In appealing the administrative decision, the plaintiffs were challenging the Department's decision not to utilize MELDA in assessing plaintiff's property and seeking a determination of the effect of MELDA's repeal. Clearly these are not administrative questions, and plaintiffs should not be required to present their case to the State Tax Appeal Board. Keller v. Dept. of Revenue, 182 M 478, 597 P2d 736 (1979).

Legality of Regulation: There was no merit to appellant's challenge to the validity of the Banking Board's rulemaking process. Furthermore, such a question must have been raised first before the administrative agency unless there was good cause for failure to do so. W. Bank of Billings v. St. Banking Bd., 174 M 331, 570 P2d 1115 (1977), followed in In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

Case Notes

Denial of Leave to Present Additional Evidence — Abuse of Discretion: A truck driver filed a wage claim with the Department of Labor and Industry against his employer, a trucking company, claiming that he was owed base and overtime wages. During discovery, the employee sought employment contracts of the trucking company. After the company refused to produce the contracts, the employee requested that the Department's Hearings Bureau issue a subpoena. The Bureau ignored the request, and a hearings officer dismissed the employee's claim. The employee then filed petitions for District Court review and for leave to present additional evidence. The District Court affirmed the hearings officer's decision and denied the request to present additional evidence. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, concluding that the hearings officer had acted arbitrarily and capriciously and that the District Court had abused its discretion by not allowing additional evidence. The court remanded the matter to the District Court to allow the employee to secure and present the contracts. Arlington v. Miller's Trucking, Inc., 2012 MT 89, 364 Mont. 534, 277 P.3d 1198. See also Arlington v. Miller's Trucking, Inc., 2015 MT 68, 378 Mont. 324, 343 P.3d 1222.

Presentation of Additional Evidence to Trial Court After Agency Hearing: The plaintiff sued the defendant for back overtime pay. The defendant argued that no overtime was due because the plaintiff had been an executive employee, as defined in ARM 24.16.201. The Department of Labor and Industry determined that the plaintiff was not an executive employee and that he was owed overtime pay. The defendant appealed the decision to District Court and moved to enter additional testimony from one of the owners of the defendant business as to the employment status of the plaintiff. The only reason given for the failure to introduce the testimony earlier was that the owner was unable to attend the hearing. The Supreme Court ruled that the mere statement by the owner that she could not attend the original hearing was inadequate, particularly since she had requested the hearing. Holbeck v. Stevi-West, Inc., 240 M 121, 783 P2d 391, 46 St. Rep. 1990 (1989). However, see Arlington v. Miller's Trucking, Inc., 2012 MT 89, 364 Mont. 534, 277 P.3d 1198 (District Court erred in not allowing an employee to offer additional evidence after a state hearings officer precluded him from securing supportive documents from his former employer), and Arlington v. Miller's Trucking, Inc., 2015 MT 68, 378 Mont. 324, 343 P.3d 1222.

Presentation of Additional Evidence in Contested Cases: Under this section, when the court has allowed additional evidence, it may be presented to the agency but not to the court. This limitation accords with the standard of review of contested MAPA cases under 2-4-704, which confines court review to the record. O'Neill v. Dept. of Revenue, 227 M 226, 739 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1037 (1987).

Review of STAB Decision — Additional Evidence: When additional evidence is presented during review of a STAB decision under 15-2-303, such evidence may be introduced before the court rather than the agency. Findings of fact and conclusions of law are then required to be made by the court. If the court does not permit or receive additional evidence, written findings and conclusions by the court are not required. Hi-Line Radio Fellowship v. Dept. of Revenue, 227 M 150, 737 P2d 886, 44 St. Rep. 955 (1987).

Additional Evidence Denied: In an appeal by a school district from an administrative order reinstating and compensating a discharged school principal, the District Court did not err in denying the school district's motion to order receipt of additional evidence. The court had properly determined that the Superintendent of Public Instruction correctly used his discretion when previously denying the school district's request to submit additional evidence. The affidavits in question were not subject to cross-examination and were of questionable quality. The county-level hearing was a thorough hearing, and the evidence supports the county-level decision. Pryor School District v. Supt. of Pub. Instruction, 218 M 73, 707 P2d 1094, 42 St. Rep. 1405 (1985).

Scope of Agency Review: This section and 2-4-621 indicate a legislative intent that in reviewing a hearing examiner's decision the agency's determination should be based on a review of all material evidence. Billings v. Mont. Human Rights Comm'n, 209 M 251, 681 P2d 33, 41 St. Rep. 688 (1984).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 361 inserted (3) relating to constitutional challenges under Title 75 or Title 82; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 3, of the Montana Constitution enumerates certain inalienable individual rights, including the right to a clean and healthful environment, the right of pursuing life's basic necessities, the right of enjoying and defending an individual's life and liberty, the right of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property, and the right of seeking individual safety, health, and happiness in all lawful ways; and

WHEREAS, the constitutionally enumerated rights are by their very nature bound to result in competing interests in specific fact situations; and

WHEREAS, Article IX, section 1, of the Montana Constitution provides that the state and each person shall maintain and improve a clean and healthful environment in Montana for present and future generations and directs the Legislature to provide for the administration and enforcement of this duty and also directs the Legislature to provide adequate remedies for the protection of the environmental life support system from degradation and to provide adequate remedies to prevent unreasonable depletion and degradation of natural resources; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has reviewed the intent of the framers of the 1972 Montana Constitution as evidenced in the verbatim transcripts of the constitutional convention; and

WHEREAS, there is no indication that one enumerated inalienable right is intended to supersede other inalienable rights, including the right to use property in all lawful means; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature, mindful of its constitutional obligation to provide for the administration and enforcement of the constitution, has enacted a comprehensive set of laws to accomplish the goals of the constitution, including the Montana Clean Indoor Air Act of 1979, Title 50, chapter 40, part 1, MCA; the Montana Environmental Policy Act, Title 75, chapter 1, parts 1 through 3, MCA; the Clean Air Act of Montana, Title 75, chapter 2, parts 1 through 4, MCA; water quality laws, Title 75, chapter 5, MCA; The Natural Streambed and Land Preservation Act of 1975, Title 75, chapter 7, part 1, MCA; The Montana Solid Waste Management Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 2, MCA; The Montana Hazardous Waste Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 4, MCA; the Comprehensive Environmental Cleanup and Responsibility Act, Title 75, chapter 10, part 7, MCA; the Montana Megalandfill Siting Act, sections 75-10-901 through 75-10-945, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Installer and Inspector Licensing and Permitting Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 2, MCA; the Montana Underground Storage Tank Act, Title 75, chapter 11, part 5, MCA; the Montana Major Facility Siting Act, Title 75, chapter 20, MCA; the Open-Space Land and Voluntary Conservation Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 6, MCA; the Environmental Control Easement Act, Title 76, chapter 7, MCA; The Strip and Underground Mine Siting Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 1, MCA; The Montana Strip and Underground Mine Reclamation Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 2, MCA; The Opencut Mining Act, Title 82, chapter 4, part 4, MCA; and The Nongame and Endangered Species Conservation Act, Title 87, chapter 5, part 1, MCA."

Severability: Section 39, Ch. 361, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 41, Ch. 361, L. 2003, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to actions for judicial review or other causes of action challenging the issuance of a permit, petition for review, amendment, license, arbitration, action, certificate, or inspection that are pending but not yet decided on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective April 16, 2003.

1989 Amendment: At beginning of (2)(b) deleted "because" and reoutlined subsection (2).

GENERAL

Death of Inmate While in Custody — Human Rights Commission — Administrative Appeal and Review: An 18-year-old died from delirium tremens after being arrested by Blaine County authorities and while in the custody of the Hill County Detention Center. His estate brought a case before the Human Rights Bureau, alleging that the two counties had discriminated on the basis of race and disability. The hearing officer concluded that the counties had not discriminated against the estate. On appeal, the Human Rights Commission found clear error in the hearing officer's findings and reversed. On appeal of the Commission's findings, the District Court reversed, vacated the Commission's decision, and reinstated the hearing officer's order. The estate moved to alter or amend. The District Court, acting through a second judge following the retirement of the first judge, concluded that the first judge had fashioned an improper remedy.

Both parties appealed to the Supreme Court, which held that the Commission had abused its discretion by modifying the findings of the hearing examiner without first determining that the findings were not supported by substantial evidence, the Commission abused its discretion by applying the wrong standard of review, the first judge correctly concluded that the Commission had improperly modified the hearing officer's findings, the replacement judge had incorrectly concluded that the original judge had erred as a matter of law, and the Montana Human Rights Act was not a proper legal remedy for the estate. Blaine County & Hill County v. Estate of Longsoldier, Jr., 2017 MT 80, 387 Mont. 202, 394 P.3d 159.

No Due Process Violation for Introduction of Report After Hearing on Grievance — Extensive Cross-Examination of Witnesses at Hearing: An employee of a state agency filed a grievance after she was demoted following the release of a report containing the results of an investigation into allegations of her poor work behavior. Over the employee's objection, and after the hearing on her grievance had concluded, the hearings examiner allowed the entire report to be introduced. The employee claimed that introducing the full report after the hearing's conclusion violated her due process rights and that she would have more aggressively cross-examined witnesses had she known the report would be introduced. She then appealed to the Board of Personnel Appeals, which agreed that her due process rights had been violated. The state agency for which she worked then appealed to the District Court, which concluded that the employee's due process rights had not been violated because those witnesses had already been subject to extensive cross-examination at the hearing. The employee appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed. Dept. of Transportation v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2016 MT 282, 385 Mont. 274, 384 P.3d 49.

Unwarranted Exercise of Discretion — Reversal by BOPA of Hearing Officer's Finding Improper: An employee for a state agency filed a grievance, and a hearings examiner recommended that her grievance be denied. The employee then appealed to the Board of Personnel Appeals (BOPA), which found that the examiner had been "grossly unfair" to the employee and voted unanimously to grant her grievance, reinstate her, and award her back pay. The state agency for which she worked appealed to the District Court, which concluded that the BOPA had improperly reversed the hearing examiner's findings of facts and that its actions constituted an unwarranted exercise of discretion. The employee appealed to the Supreme Court, which affirmed. Dept. of Transportation v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 2016 MT 282, 385 Mont. 274, 384 P.3d 49.

Right to Participate — Improper Finding of Plaintiffs' Claim as Not Ripe: The plaintiffs sued the Montana Board of Oil and Gas Conservation for violating their constitutional right to participate and challenged the Board's approval of well stimulation activities. The plaintiffs argued that although they had received public notice of a hearing on the application for a permit to drill in the area, the Board then improperly expanded the permit's scope to allow for well stimulation activities at the hearing and the plaintiffs had received no notice of this expansion. The District Court held that the plaintiffs' claim was not ripe because it was speculative. On appeal, the Supreme Court disagreed and reversed, holding that the plaintiffs' claim raised an actual and present controversy. Carbon County Resource Council v. Mont. Bd. of Oil & Gas Conserv., 2016 MT 240, 385 Mont. 51, 380 P.3d 798.

District Court Erred in Acting as Trier of Fact in Judicial Review of Administrative Decision: The role of a District Court conducting judicial review of an administrative decision is limited to a review confined to the record of the agency. The District Court may not substitute its judgment for the judgment of the agency as to the weight of the factual evidence, may not engage in a wholesale substitution of its opinion for the opinion of the agency, and may not reweigh the evidence on questions of fact. Peretti v. St., 2016 MT 105, 383 Mont. 340, 372 P.3d 447.

Plaintiff's Failure to File Accurate Complaint Not Detrimental — Defendant Had Notice of Nature of Claim: A tenant filed a complaint with the Human Rights Commission alleging that her landlord committed sexual harassment under the public accommodations provision in 49-2-304. The Commission determined that 49-2-304 was inapplicable, as the rental property was private property, but it allowed the tenant to pursue a claim based on the real estate transaction provision in 49-2-305. The landlord then petitioned the District Court for judicial review, reasoning that his due process rights would be violated if the tenant was allowed to pursue a claim under 49-2-305. The District Court agreed with the landlord and reversed the Commission, but the Supreme Court, in turn, reversed the District Court and determined that while the tenant could have been clearer in asserting a claim under 49-2-305, the landlord had sufficient notice of the nature of the claim and no evidence was presented showing that the landlord would have presented any additional evidence in a 49-2-305 defense. Bates v. Neva, 2013 MT 246, 371 Mont. 466, 308 P.3d 114.

Preelection Challenge to Legislative Referendum — Constitutional Amendments by Statutory Referendum — Justiciable Where Proposed Law Facially Defective: The Legislature passed a bill to put a referendum on the ballot to change elections for Supreme Court justices from statewide to regional. Prior to the election, citizens from each of the seven proposed regions filed an action against the Secretary of State, seeking a declaratory judgment that the proposed referendum was unconstitutional as well as an injunction to bar the Secretary of State from putting the measure on the ballot. The District Court granted the plaintiffs summary judgment and the state appealed. The Supreme Court agreed with the District Court that the matter was justiciable even though the voters had not yet passed the referendum. Nevertheless, the Supreme Court concluded that preelection consideration of the appeal was appropriate because the proposed law was facially unconstitutional. The measure sought to amend the Montana Constitution by means of a statutory referendum, in clear violation of constitutional provisions. Therefore, the Supreme Court agreed the matter was justiciable and affirmed the District Court's granting of summary judgment. Reichert v. St., 2012 MT 111, 365 Mont. 92, 278 P.3d 455.

Not Clearly Erroneous to Compensate Engineering Technician IVs and Specialist IIIs Differently: While Technician IVs and Specialist IIIs have the same predominant work duties more than 50% of the time, the nonpredominant work duties are different. In addition, educational requirements and market demands are different for Technician IVs and Specialist IIIs, justifying differing compensation. Fellows v. Dept. of Administration, 2011 MT 88, 360 Mont. 167, 252 P.3d 196.

Denial of Application for Temporary Change in Water Rights Held to Be Arbitrary Action by Department: The plaintiffs filed for a temporary change of irrigation water rights to instream flow. The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation denied the application on the basis of an alleged incomplete return flow analysis. The Supreme Court held that 85-2-408(7) dealing with return flow analysis did not require the applicant to provide the analysis; rather, it gives the Department the discretion to limit the amount that may be taken by an applicant. The Supreme Court further held that the Department's denial of the application for want of a complete return flow analysis without further explanation when it had granted similar applications in the past constituted arbitrary conduct and was an abuse of discretion. Hohenlohe v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2010 MT 203, 357 Mont. 438, 240 P.3d 628.

Failure of Public Service Commission to Factor Avoided Costs in Setting Reasonable Rate for Utility Purchase of Qualified Facility-Generated Electricity — Augmentation of Record Proper: The District Court reviewed plaintiff's utility rate case and concluded that the rate set by the Public Service Commission (PSC) was unreasonable and ordered that the case be remanded to the PSC to set a new rate that took avoided cost data into consideration. The court also ordered that plaintiff be allowed to augment the record to include updated avoided cost data. The PSC appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The PSC based the avoided cost tariff on outdated data, in violation of its own administrative rules, resulting in a rate that was unlawful and unreasonable. Therefore, remand of the case to the PSC for rate recalculation was proper, and allowing plaintiff to augment the record to include current data was justified. Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2010 MT 2, 355 Mont. 15, 223 P.3d 907.

Order for Remand Considered Final Appealable Order: The District Court reviewed plaintiff's utility rate case and concluded that the rate set by the Public Service Commission (PSC) was unreasonable and ordered that the case be remanded to the PSC to set a new rate that took avoided cost data into consideration. The PSC appealed, but plaintiff contended that the remand was an interlocutory order that did not finally decide the case and was thus unappealable. The Supreme Court disagreed. Section 2-4-702 provides for judicial review of an agency decision in a contested case, and to force the PSC to recalculate the rate in accordance with the District Court's remand instructions would have undermined the PSC's right to appeal under 2-4-711. Therefore, the remand order was considered final for purposes of appeal by the PSC. Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2010 MT 2, 355 Mont. 15, 223 P.3d 907, followed in Williamson v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2012 MT 299, 367 Mont. 379, 291 P. 3d 1116.

Lack of Required Statutory Information Precluding Dismissal of Valuation: Plaintiff protested the state's 2005 valuation of plaintiff's operating property. The State Tax Appeal Board (STAB) affirmed the valuation, and plaintiff appealed. The state moved to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction because although plaintiff's appeal contained sufficient information to comply with 15-2-303, both 15-2-301(5) and 15-2-302(5) mandate that additional information required by 2-4-702(2)(b) and 2-4-704(2)(a) also be contained in the petition for judicial review of a STAB decision. The motion was denied, and the state appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. As a more specific statute, 15-2-303 applies only to STAB decisions, while 2-4-702, a more general statute, applies to information necessary for inclusion in a petition for judicial review of an administrative decision. Therefore, it was not necessary to dismiss plaintiff's appeal on grounds that plaintiff's notice of appeal did not contain all the information required by 2-4-702(2)(b) and 2-4-704(2)(a). PacifiCorp v. St., 2009 MT 140, 350 M 336, 207 P3d 327 (2009), following Dept. of Revenue v. Davidson Cattle Co., 190 M 326, 620 P2d 1232, 37 St. Rep. 2074 (1980).

Public Service Investigation Not Subject to Judicial Review: The Public Service Commission (PSC) issued two orders directing plaintiff telecommunications company to submit information regarding plaintiff's rates as part of an investigation concerning whether revenue earned by plaintiff was in excess of plaintiff's authorized rate of return. For various reasons, plaintiff declined to provide the information and requested that the PSC reconsider its orders, but the PSC denied the request for reconsideration, so plaintiff petitioned for judicial review under 2-4-701. The same day, the PSC filed a complaint in District Court seeking to compel plaintiff's compliance and requesting fines and penalties against plaintiff for failure to comply with PSC orders. The court held that the PSC orders unlawfully imposed a rate case filing requirement on plaintiff that violated state law and the PSC's own administrative rules. The PSC appealed, and the Supreme Court considered whether the PSC investigation was subject to judicial review. Plaintiff's justification for seeking intermediate review under 2-4-701 was that if plaintiff did not challenge the lawfulness of the PSC orders, then plaintiff would eventually suffer harm. However, judicial review under 2-4-701 is not justified when the only allegation of harm is speculation that further agency action may take place and, if it takes place, that it may have legal consequences. Courts may intervene in an agency process only when a specific final agency action has an actual or immediately threatened effect. Here, there was no final PSC action, only an investigation, and when an agency has not adjudicated the issues raised on appeal, there is no final agency action upon which a District Court can assume jurisdiction. Thus, the PSC investigation was not subject to judicial review, and the District Court was reversed. Qwest Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 350, 340 M 309, 174 P3d 496 (2007), following Marble v. St., 2000 MT 240, 301 M 373, 9 P3d 617 (2000). See also Lujan v. Nat'l Wildlife Fed'n, 497 US 871 (1990).

When Agency Decision Ripe for Judicial Review: The Public Service Commission (PSC) issued two orders directing plaintiff telecommunications company to submit information regarding plaintiff's rates as part of an investigation concerning whether revenue earned by plaintiff was in excess of plaintiff's authorized rate of return. For various reasons, plaintiff declined to provide the information and requested that the PSC reconsider its orders, but the PSC denied the request for reconsideration, so plaintiff petitioned for judicial review under 2-4-701. The same day, the PSC filed a complaint in District Court seeking to compel plaintiff's compliance and requesting fines and penalties against plaintiff for failure to comply with PSC orders. The court determined that the issues were ripe for judicial review. The PSC appealed, and the Supreme Court considered whether the PSC's actions were in fact ripe for judicial review. To determine ripeness, the court applied the criteria in Ohio Forestry Ass'n v. Sierra Club, 523 US 726 (1998), noting that a reviewing court must consider whether: (1) delayed review would cause hardship to the plaintiffs; (2) judicial intervention would inappropriately interfere with further administrative action; and (3) the courts would benefit from further factual development of the issues presented. In this case, the court decided that the PSC decision was not ripe for judicial review. First, judicial review of a preliminary step that has no binding legal consequences is not available even when the initiation of proceedings is serious and may have severe consequences, and because there were no irremediable adverse consequences that flowed from the PSC investigation, delayed judicial review would not cause a hardship for plaintiff. Second, judicial intervention would have inappropriately interfered with further PSC administrative action and frustrated the PSC's ability to review the information and decide the best course of action. Third, because the PSC had only initiated an investigation, the District Court reviewed issues upon which the PSC had not yet taken action, and because there was no specific factual record, further factual development of the issues would have benefited the courts. The District Court was reversed. Qwest Corp. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 2007 MT 350, 340 M 309, 174 P3d 496 (2007).

Failure to Provide Notice of Child Abuse Substantiation Hearing Not Affecting Employment as Physical Therapy Assistant — No Prejudice to Substantial Rights: When Dowell applied to work at a day-care center, the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) denied the request, without a substantiation hearing, based on Dowell's previous child abuse and neglect proceedings. The District Court affirmed. On appeal, Dowell contended that the DPHHS's failure to provide her with timely notice prejudiced her constitutional right to subsequent employment as a physical therapy assistant. Under this section, judicial review of an agency decision must be confined to the record that was brought before the agency. Implications on licensure as a physical therapist are determined by the Board of Physical Therapists, not the DPHHS, and Dowell provided no evidence that the substantiation determination by the DPHHS impacted employment as a physical therapist, so Dowell's substantial rights were not affected. The District Court was affirmed. Dowell v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2006 MT 55, 331 M 305, 132 P3d 520 (2006).

Right to Substantiation Hearing on Licensing Issue Barred by Collateral Estoppel: When Dowell applied to work at a day-care center, the Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) denied the request, without a substantiation hearing, based on Dowell's previous child abuse and neglect proceedings. The District Court affirmed on grounds that Dowell's right to a substantiation hearing was barred by collateral estoppel, and Dowell appealed. The Supreme Court found that all the elements of collateral estoppel were met: (1) the issues in the child abuse and neglect proceedings were the same as those in the substantiation decision; (2) there was a final adjudication on the merits in the prior child abuse and neglect proceedings; (3) Dowell was the same party in both proceedings; and (4) Dowell had a full and fair opportunity to litigate the issue at the prior hearing. Dowell's right to a substantiation hearing was barred by collateral estoppel, and Dowell was not allowed to relitigate the issue. Dowell v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2006 MT 55, 331 M 305, 132 P3d 520 (2006).

Failure of State to Present Complete Administrative Record for District Court Review — Remand: Following recommendation for revocation of an all-beverages license in an administrative hearing, the licensee appealed the revocation to the District Court. The parties each filed various documents and exhibits with their briefs, but the state neglected to submit the administrative record, and the court apparently made its decision based on the documents and exhibits rather than on a complete administrative record. On appeal, the Supreme Court considered this a serious lapse on the part of the state and the District Court and vacated the appeal without prejudice. Under 2-4-614 and this section, a litigant seeking judicial review of an administrative decision is entitled to have the court's decision based on a review of the complete administrative record. The Supreme Court remanded the case for further proceedings that included a consideration of the administrative record as required by law. Owens v. Dept. of Revenue, 2006 MT 36, 331 M 166, 130 P3d 1256 (2006).

Full-Time Employment Wage Disparity Not Pleaded in Sex Discrimination Case — Improper Amendment of Pleadings by Hearings Examiner to Include Full-Time Employment Claim — Reversal of Commission Order Affirmed: Sprow brought an employment discrimination case, claiming that because of her sex, she was paid less than other employees at plaintiff's corporation. Sprow had started the job as a full-time employee, but received a pay decrease upon moving to part-time work, at which time she discovered the pay disparity between part-time employees and filed the claim. The hearings examiner reported that plaintiff had provided a legitimate nondiscriminatory reason for paying Sprow less as a part-time employee, but that Sprow had established that for full-time work, Sprow was as qualified as other workers. The hearings examiner concluded that plaintiff had discriminated against Sprow based on pay discrepancies in her full-time employment. In order to reach that conclusion, the hearings examiner amended the original pleadings, which only alleged discrimination regarding part-time employment. Plaintiff appealed to District Court, and the court reversed on grounds that the court had no jurisdiction to determine discrimination in full-time employment because Sprow's complaint concerned only part-time wage disparity. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Sprow never pleaded wage disparity in full-time employment, the hearings examiner erred by inserting the issue into the pleadings, and the Commission for Human Rights erred by concluding that Sprow had alleged full-time wage disparity based on the improperly amended pleadings. The District Court properly reversed in favor of plaintiff. Centech Corp. v. Sprow, 2006 MT 27, 331 M 98, 128 P3d 1036 (2006).

Authority of State Agency to Determine Privacy Issues in Records in Agency's Possession: Following settlement of a human rights charge, Owen asked to examine the records of the Billings Police Department (BPD) that had been furnished to the Human Rights Bureau. The BPD objected to release of the information on grounds that the records contained information from individuals who held an expectation that the information that they had given to the BPD would be kept confidential and that the privacy rights of those individuals outweighed Owen's right to know. A Department of Labor and Industry hearings examiner subsequently denied the BPD's objection and ordered that the records be produced for Owen's inspection. The BPD sought judicial review, and the District Court voided the Department's decision, holding that the Department did not have the authority or jurisdiction to decide the constitutional issues raised by Owen. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. Consistent with Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003), and Shoemaker v. Denke, 2004 MT 11, 319 M 238, 84

P3d 4 (2004), the Department had original jurisdiction to review its own records and determine if any constitutionally protected privacy rights were implicated by those records and whether those privacy rights clearly outweighed Owen's right to examine the records. The analysis by the Department involved mixed questions of fact and law and thus did not qualify as an exception to the requirement that a person must first exhaust administrative remedies. The court pointed out that denying administrative agencies the authority or jurisdiction to make the initial decision on whether the agencies' own records may be examined would require a lawsuit every time that a request to inspect records was met with an objection by the producing party and thus would put the right to know out of reach for most citizens. Billings v. Owen, 2006 MT 16, 331 M 10, 127 P3d 1044 (2006).

Court Deference to Hearings Examiner Rather Than Reweighing Evidence: A court reviewing an agency decision may not substitute its judgment for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on questions of fact. As long as the court determines that substantial credible evidence exists to support the findings of the trier of fact, the court may not reweigh the evidence, but must instead defer to the hearings examiner. Benjamin v. Anderson, 2005 MT 123, 327 M 173, 112 P3d 1039 (2005), followed in Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008). See also Moran v. Shotgun Willies, Inc., 270 M 47, 889 P2d 1185 (1995).

Outfitter's Obligation to Ensure Licensure of Guide — Board's Failure to Notify Outfitter of Unlicensed Guide Not Due Process Violation: Crismore hired an unlicensed guide and was sanctioned by the Board of Outfitters. Crismore appealed on grounds that he was denied due process because he was not informed until after the contested case hearing that the guide had applied for a license through a different outfitter but the application was returned for administrative reasons, denying Crismore of the opportunity to present a full and complete defense at the hearing. Although acknowledging that Crismore had a property interest in the outfitter's license that entitled him to due process protections, the Supreme Court nevertheless affirmed that Crismore was not denied due process. It is the responsibility of an outfitter to employ only licensed guides and to sign a guide's license when the guide is employed. It is not the responsibility of the Board to inform every licensed outfitter of the name of each person who unsuccessfully applies for a guide's license. Crismore was given a timely and meaningful opportunity to present his case to the Board as to why he hired an unlicensed guide. Crismore v. Bd. of Outfitters, 2005 MT 109, 327 M 71, 111 P3d 681 (2005). See also In re Crow Water Compact, 2015 MT 353, 382 Mont. 46, 364 P.3d 584.

Improper Standard of Review Applied by Board of Environmental Review in Contested Case Hearing — Remand: Plaintiffs requested a hearing before the Board of Environmental Review, contending that an air quality permit issued by the Department of Environmental Quality for a coal-fired power plant and the application for the permit suffered from various procedural and substantive deficiencies. The Board held a contested case hearing, addressed plaintiffs' contentions whether the Department's decision was erroneous, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion, and approved the Department's decision to grant the permit. Plaintiffs petitioned for judicial review of the Board's order, and the District Court affirmed the Board's findings, conclusions, and order. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that hearings related to the issuance of an air quality permit must be conducted under the contested case provisions of Title 2, ch. 4, part 6, rather than this part, which sets out the standard of judicial review. The role of the Board was to receive evidence from the parties, enter findings of fact based on a preponderance of the evidence, and then enter conclusions of law based on the findings. The determination of whether an agency decision is erroneous, arbitrary, capricious, or an abuse of discretion is the role of the District Court. Thus, the Board applied a standard of review not legally available to it as the finder of fact in a contested case hearing. The District Court erred in determining that the Board applied the correct standard, so the case was remanded with instructions that the Board enter new findings of fact and conclusions of law in conformity with Title 2, ch. 4, part 6. Water Appropriation Application Amendments So Significant as to Constitute New Appropriations — Original Applications Considered Shams — New Applications Barred by Subbasin Closure: Just 10 days before the Legislature closed the Bitterroot River subbasin to new water appropriations in 1999, defendants submitted four appropriation applications to develop ponds on their property for the beneficial use of wildlife. All four applications were subsequently amended to variously revise volume and flow rates, proposed pond depth, points and means of diversion, place of use, and beneficial uses. Numerous parties objected to the proposed appropriations, including plaintiff, which moved to terminate the applications on grounds that the amendments were submitted in bad faith and were new applications and that deficiencies in the applications were not cured within the statutory time limit. A hearings examiner denied the motion to terminate the applications, but nevertheless denied the applications on numerous grounds. Defendants filed exceptions to the hearings examiner's decision, and the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation reversed the hearings examiner and granted all four applications. Plaintiff petitioned the District Court for review, and the court concluded that the Department erred in accepting and processing the amended applications after the subbasin closure and in other ways and denied the applications. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The amendments to the applications were not mere refinements, but constituted changes so significant that the amended applications bore such little resemblance to the original applications as to be considered shams. The nature and extent of the changes could be consistent only with new applications with new priority dates, which were prohibited by the subbasin closure. The Supreme Court noted that to hold otherwise would establish a precedent allowing a prospective appropriator to file a deficient application and later amend the application without penalty, thereby gaining an advantage over other appropriators and circumventing other restrictions associated with a subbasin closure. Presentation of Factual Issues in Conjunction With Constitutional Issues — Petition for Judicial Review of Administrative Decision Properly Dismissed for Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies: The District Court dismissed plaintiff's petition for failure to exhaust administrative remedies. Plaintiff appealed on grounds that this case fit the exception to the exhaustion rule because there was an issue of constitutional dimension. The Supreme Court held that plaintiff's petition for judicial review did not fit the exception because it presented, in conjunction with the constitutional issue, a challenge to the underlying factual determinations upon which the constitutional defense rested, placing plaintiff squarely within the administrative process and requiring plaintiff to argue both the factual and constitutional issue administratively. Further, plaintiff missed the administrative filing deadline, so failure to properly prosecute the claim in the administrative forum required forfeiture of plaintiff's right to review of the merits of the claim and dismissal of the appeal. Business Owner's Burden of Proof in Showing Independent Contractor Status Not Considered Unfair or Unconstitutional: The District Court held that a business owner had the burden of proof to rebut a presumption of employee status, that the burden was constitutionally valid, and that the employer failed to demonstrate that application of the presumption implicated any fundamental liberty or property interests. The Supreme Court affirmed. Requiring the business owner to show independent contractor status did not create an irrebuttable presumption, but rather placed the burden of proof on the workers—those individuals who could most effectively demonstrate whether they were employees or independent contractors. Here, the business owner did not attempt to have its workers testify or try to obtain tax information, thus failing to meet the burden of showing that several of its workers were independent contractors. Spain v. Dept. of Revenue, 2002 MT 146, 310 M 282, 49 P3d 615 (2002).

Standard of Review for Statutes Applicable to Administrative Rules — Rules of Statutory Construction Inapplicable Absent Ambiguity in Statute or Rule — Deference Afforded Longstanding Agency Interpretation of Administrative Rule: The Supreme Court generally applies the same principles in construing administrative rules as it applies to statutes. If the plain meaning of a statute or rule can be determined from the language used, the court is not at liberty to add or detract from the language, and absent ambiguity in the language, the court may not consider legislative history or other means of statutory construction. When an agency's interpretation of an administrative rule or statute has stood unchallenged for a considerable length of time, it will be regarded as having great importance in arriving at the proper construction. However, even when a particular meaning has been ascribed to a statute by an agency through a long and continuous course of consistent interpretation, that interpretation will be afforded respectful consideration but is still not binding on the courts. Glendive Medical Center, Inc. v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2002 MT 131, 310 M 156, 49 P3d 560 (2002).

Standard of Appellate Review of Administrative Decision in Contested Case: When reviewing a District Court order affirming or reversing an administrative decision in a contested case, the Supreme Court employs the same standard applied by the District Court to determine whether the findings of fact are clearly erroneous and whether the agency correctly interpreted the law.

Substitution of District Court Property Valuation for That of Tax Appeal Board Improper — Remand for Reinstatement of State Tax Appeal Board Assessment Absent Clear Error or Abuse of Discretion: The O'Neills contested the valuation ascribed to two parcels of property. The Department of Revenue had applied the market data approach in valuing one parcel, and the cost approach method in valuing the other parcel. The State Tax Appeal Board (STAB) ultimately granted further reductions to the land values and ordered that the properties be entered into the county tax rolls. Dissatisfied with the STAB reduction, the O'Neill appealed the STAB ruling to the District Court. The court applied the comparable sales method of valuation, and concluded that an even lower value should have been applied. The court then vacated the STAB valued and assigned significantly lower values to the properties. The Department of Revenue appealed. The Supreme Court applied this section, holding that the section does not contemplate a wholesale substitution of the District Court's opinion for that of the agency. The District Court could have reversed or modified the STAB decision and remanded the case for further proceedings if the O'Neills' substantial rights had been prejudiced because the administrative findings were clearly erroneous, but the court did not reach that conclusion, and instead simply applied its own analysis in place of the STAB analysis. Absent findings of clear error or abuse of discretion required in this section, the STAB valuation will be upheld. Thus, the Supreme Court reversed and remanded for reinstatement of the STAB assessments. O'Neill v. Dept. of Revenue, 2002 MT 130, 310 M 148, 49 P3d 43 (2002), followed in Ostergren v. Erroneous Determination That Public Service Commission Interpretation of Electric Utility Deregulation Act Unconstitutional Taking — Issue Not Ripe for Adjudication Given Speculation Regarding Utility's Future Loss: As part of the deregulation process, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC). Foreseeing imminent uncertainty in the costs of electricity, MPC proposed that a current estimation of some transition costs be deferred, or tracked, for as long as 25 to 30 years, so that a more accurate figure of those costs could be determined in the future. Thus, with regard to certain assets, MPC in essence offered no estimation of any transition costs, proposing instead that those costs be determined and recovered at a later time. The PSC determined that a tracking system that would adjust transition costs in the future as the costs occurred, rather than reaching a current estimated fixed sum, was not consistent with Title 69, ch. 8, and that in order for the MPC plan to be approved, transition costs must be reduced to a fixed net amount. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover, and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. MPC sought judicial review, arguing that the PSC improperly precluded the use of trackers in its plan, and requested that the District Court reverse the PSC's decision and permanently enjoin the PSC from enforcing its interpretation. The court reasoned that the PSC's interpretation had great potential for unconstitutionally depriving MPC or Montana consumers of property, and ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The PSC appealed. The Supreme Court found that MPC's claim to an unconstitutional taking at the hands of the PSC's ruling on the proposed tracking mechanism was as hypothetical and speculative as the future of electricity costs in Montana. The PSC action had yet to deprive MPC of any property, and the court refused to interpret the law and enjoin state action to preserve a property interest that did not, and might not ever, exist. The very likely potential of an unconstitutional taking was distinguishable from the imminent and very real violations of constitutional rights and remedies at risk in past cases in which the Supreme Court has held that a taking occurred, such as Yurkovich v. Indus. Accident Bd., 132 M 77, 314 P2d 866 (1957), and its progeny, holding that the District Court erred in finding that the PSC's interpretation produced a taking that prejudiced MPC's substantial rights. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

Finality of Costs Considered Overarching Intent of Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act — PSC Denial of System That Would Allow Charging Future Transition Costs Correct Interpretation of Act: As part of the deregulation process pursuant to the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC) that would have allowed the future recovery of certain transition costs as they became known over a period of 25 to 30 years. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. Upon judicial review, the District Court ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The Supreme Court was subsequently asked to determine whether the PSC interpretation of the Act was correct. The court held that MPC's proposed cost-tracking method, whereby some, but not all, transition costs would be unknown and therefore subject to the caprice of future events, was entirely inconsistent with the principle of finality and with statutory mandates in the Act placed on the PSC that all costs be determined to be: (1) verifiable; (2) unrecoverable; (3) affirmatively shown; (4) reasonably mitigated; (5) reasonably demonstrable; (6) reduced to a net sum; and (7) reduced to an amount in a final order. The principle of finality was also expressed in 69-8-211 (now repealed), which declared that PSC approval of transition costs, as well as the subsequent collection of those costs through transition charges, was a settlement of all transition costs claimed by a public utility. This finality was the overarching intent of the Act, in that the needs of consumers to effectively plan today takes precedence over precise cost analysis extending for years or even decades into the future. It is the PSC that assumes the role of arbiter in determining and fixing a utility's transition costs, if any, that will be discharged at the consumers' expense. Thus, the PSC's interpretation of the Act was correct, and the District Court's mandate requiring the PSC to allow the use of trackers would require the PSC to bend if not violate the law and could not be sustained. The District Court was reversed, and the PSC order was reinstated. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

New Circumstances Requiring Supplemental Environmental Impact Statement — Arbitrary Agency Decision to Not Prepare Supplemental Constituting Reversible Error: Under ARM 18.2.247, an agency is required to prepare a supplemental EIS when there are significant new circumstances that change the basis for the agency's decision and the supplement is required to describe any impacts, alternatives, or other items that were not covered in the original statement or that must be revised based on the new information or circumstances concerning the proposed agency action. When an agency action is challenged for failure to prepare a supplemental EIS, the reviewing court must consider whether the agency made a reasoned decision based on its evaluation of the significance or lack of significance of the new information, whether the decision was based on a consideration of the relevant factors, and whether there has been a clear error of judgment. Here, the decision of the Department of Transportation to build the Forestvale interchange in the Helena Valley was challenged on grounds that the Department did not comply with the supplemental EIS requirements of ARM 18.2.247. The Department conducted an in-house review and determined in 1999 that a supplemental EIS to the original 1991 draft EIS was not necessary because the changes in the proposed project's scope of work and the new information did not result in any significant environmental impacts. The Supreme Court disagreed. The change in traffic patterns, the development around the Capitol interchange, the patterns of development in Helena, and the proposed alternatives to the Forestvale interchange were all significant new circumstances that required a supplemental EIS, and the Department's decision not to prepare one was arbitrary, constituting reversible error. Mont. Envtl. Information Center, Inc. v. Dept. of Transportation, 2000 MT 5, 298 M 1, 994 P2d 676, 57 St. Rep. 18 (2000), following N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862, 46 St. Rep. 1409 (1989), and Marsh v. Oreg. Natural Resources Council, 490 US 360 (1989).

Employee Who Spent Eighty Percent of Time on Nonmanagerial Work Considered Manager Exempt From Overtime Requirements: Showers sued Kemp for unpaid wages allegedly owed for Showers' work as a chef. The Board of Personnel Appeals found that Kemp owed $5,820.15 in unpaid overtime, and the District Court affirmed. On appeal, Kemp maintained that Showers was employed in an executive capacity under 29 U.S.C. 213(a)(1) and was thus exempt from the overtime provisions of the Fair Labor Standards Act. The Supreme Court considered the factors in 29 CFR 541.103 in determining whether Showers' primary duty was management: (1) time spent performing managerial duties; (2) the relative importance of the employee's managerial duties as compared with other duties; (3) the frequency with which the employee exercises discretionary powers; (4) the employee's relative freedom from supervision; and (5) the relationship between the employee's salary and wages paid to subordinates for the nonexempt work performed by the employee. Generally, an employee who spends 50% or more of time in management would have management as the primary duty, but time is not the sole test. An employee may spend less than 50% of time on management and still be considered a manager if other factors support that conclusion. Here, Showers spent only 20% of her time performing managerial work and 80% of her time cooking, but the managerial duties were more important than her other duties because they needed to be done so that her subordinates could work and so the kitchen could operate successfully. Further, Showers frequently exercised discretionary powers by making weekly, if not daily, decisions concerning operation of the kitchen, was relatively, if not totally, free from supervision, and was compensated better than her subordinates. Although exemptions from the Fair Labor Standards Act are to be narrowly construed against the employer asserting the exemption and the employer has the burden of proving that the employee fits plainly and unmistakably within the terms of the exemption, the Supreme Court found that, considering the other factors in the federal regulations, Showers was an exempt employee whose primary duty was management, even though she spent 80% of her time performing nonmanagerial work. Kemp v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 1999 MT 255, 296 M 319, 989 P2d 317, 56 St. Rep. 1015 (1999).

District Court Error in Substituting Its Judgment for That of Factfinder in Nonrenewal of Principal's Contract: The contract of a tenured assistant high school principal was not renewed by the school board of trustees. Appeal was made to the County Superintendent of Schools, who affirmed the trustees' decision. The County Superintendent's decision was affirmed by the State Superintendent of Schools, whose decision was in turn appealed to District Court. The court reviewed the County Superintendent's decision and determined that the findings were supported by reliable, probative, substantial evidence and that none of the County Superintendent's conclusions were in error, but then reversed the agency decision and ordered the principal to be reinstated and paid back wages and benefits on grounds that the County Superintendent failed to consider the principal's due process and first amendment rights pursuant to Pickering v. Bd. of Educ., 391 US 563, 20 L Ed 2d 811, 88 S Ct 1731 (1968). The Supreme Court reversed, noting that the policy used in determining that the principal's due process rights were violated was inapplicable and that a Pickering analysis was not necessary because the principal was not terminated because of the exercise of free speech, but rather for other good causes. It was error for the court to substitute its judgment for that of the factfinder regarding the weight of the evidence. Quick v. Bozeman School District No. 7, 1999 MT 175, 295 M 240, 983 P2d 402, 56 St. Rep. 682 (1999).

Employee Handbook — Adoption by Employer After Employee Began Work — Consideration Found in Continuation of Employment — Part of "Bargained" Contract — Gates Distinguished — Remand Unnecessary: After Langager went to work for Crazy Creek Products (CCP), CCP distributed an employee handbook that Langager felt changed the terms of her oral contract regarding earning and using paid vacation days by requiring that she be present to work immediately before and after a paid vacation. At a meeting of CCP employees that was held after distribution of the handbook, CCP supervisors asked if there were any comments from employees concerning the handbook. After Langager went on a 2-week vacation but was refused pay for her vacation weeks because she quit her job and was not at work the shift following her vacation, she filed an action to recover her wages earned while she was on vacation. The Supreme Court held that because Langager remained an employee at CCP after the handbook was distributed, there was sufficient consideration for the change in her contract represented by the handbook and that because employees were asked for their input concerning the handbook, the change in the employment contract represented by the handbook had been "bargained" for. In so holding, the Supreme Court distinguished Gates v. Life of Mont. Ins. Co., 196 M 178, 638 P2d 1063 (1982), in which an employee handbook was adopted many years after some employees commenced employment, was not bargained for, and constituted a unilateral amendment of an employment contract. The Supreme Court also held that since there was general evidence throughout the District Court record that the terms of the handbook were bargained for and that new consideration was given for the change, it was unnecessary, in response to CCP's argument that the District Court substituted its judgment for that of the Board of Personnel Appeals in violation of this section, to remand the case to the District Court. In re Wage Claim of Langager v. Crazy Creek Products, Inc., 1998 MT 44, 287 M 445, 954 P2d 1169, 55 St. Rep. 169 (1998).

Reviewing Court May Look Beyond Record During Judicial Review: In deciding whether the lower court erred in holding that the agency acted properly in making its decision, the Supreme Court stated that the standard of review for an informal agency decision is whether the agency's decision was arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful and that, in addition, unless the reviewing court looks beyond the record to determine what matters the agency should have considered, it is impossible for the court to determine if the agency took into consideration all relevant factors in reaching its decision. Skyline Sportsmen's Ass'n v. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 286 M 108, 951 P2d 29, 54 St. Rep. 1326 (1997).

Summary Judgment Holding Board of Land Commissioners' Decision Approving Land Exchange Not Arbitrary, Capricious, or Unlawful Found Improper: The plaintiffs, various environmental groups, sought a preliminary injunction to prevent the exchange of certain properties during the pendency of their lawsuit challenging the action of the Board of Land Commissioners. The District Court denied the injunction and entered a summary judgment in favor of the Board, holding that the Board's decision to make the exchange was based on an adequate consideration of the requirements set forth in 77-2-203(2) and therefore was not arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful. The Supreme Court vacated and remanded the lower court's decision, finding that the plaintiffs had raised genuine issues of material fact, including whether the streams on the land to be given to the state have a significant public use value; whether a "potential to" provide significant public use value is equivalent to providing significant public use value; and the weight, if any, to be accorded an increase in stream mileage. The Supreme Court held that as a result of the material issues of fact raised by the plaintiffs, a material issue of fact also existed as to whether the Board's decision approving the proposed land exchange was arbitrary, capricious, or unlawful. Skyline Sportsmen's Ass'n v. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 286 M 108, 951 P2d 29, 54 St. Rep. 1326 (1997).

Improperly Perfected Petition for Judicial Review of Administrative Decision Beyond Scope of Judicial Remedy: Following an administrative hearing, Davis was found delinquent on his child support obligation in the amount of $44,975. Davis filed a petition with the District Court naming the State of Montana and the Child Support Enforcement Division (CSED) as respondents, but CSED was not properly served with the petition. Davis requested that the court invalidate his divorce decree and support order because of fraud. The petition also made claims against persons who were not involved with the administrative action and sought money damages from the state. The District Court dismissed the petition, finding that the Court did not have the power to grant the relief sought by Davis and that the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure do not allow conversion of an appeal of an administrative decision into a lawsuit against the agency that made the decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted that Davis had the opportunity to appeal his original divorce decree or to request modification of the support provisions in the order, but instead of pursuing those remedies, he became delinquent in his support payments. The petition for judicial review of the administrative decision did not comply with 2-4-702 and this section and sought relief beyond that which a court could grant and was properly dismissed. In re Marriage of Davis, 277 M 188, 921 P2d 275, 53 St. Rep. 727 (1996).

Board's Rejection of Hearings Examiner's Findings Abuse of Discretion: The Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) denied Shodair's claim for reimbursement for certain psychiatric care on the basis that the treatment was not medically necessary. Shodair requested a hearing, and the hearings examiner entered findings denying the claim. The Department then appealed to the Board of Social and Rehabilitation Services Appeals (now Board of Public Assistance), which summarily reversed the hearings examiner's findings based on the "undisputed facts" of the record. The District Court reversed. The Supreme Court held that the Board abused its discretion because it could not reject or modify the hearings examiner's findings unless it stated with particularity that the findings were not based on competent substantial evidence. St. v. Shodair Hosp., 273 M 155, 902 P2d 21, 52 St. Rep. 879 (1995). See also St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002).

Classification of Oil Refinery Equipment as Class Eight Property — Standard of Review: An industrial appraiser for the Department of Revenue properly classified and appraised as class eight property, rather than class four property, certain new oil refinery equipment, including a boiler house fuel gas manifold, cooling tower header improvements, a coal filter bed upgrade, three parts of a hydrocarbon loss recovery system, a plant air drier, an opticrom ADV gasoline chromatograph, a Grabner CCA-V, an alky unit KOH scrubber, two oxygen analyzers, asphalt product handling improvements, a crude truck unloading system for tank storage, a heavy product flash point tester, two spare fuel oil pumps, eight hydrogen sulfide and carbon dioxide monitors, a breathing air compressor, a manlift, and tank level gauges. Class eight property is not limited to property used directly in a manufacturing process. Despite the fact that the District Court applied the "clearly erroneous" standard of review rather than the proper "correct interpretation" standard, the correct result was reached and the decision was affirmed on appeal. Initial Agency Decision Subject to Judicial Review: As clarified in Baldridge v. Rosebud County School District No. 19, 264 M 199, 870 P2d 711 (1994), in multilevel proceedings and reviews under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, the agency decision to be scrutinized on judicial review is that of the agency that issued the initial decision. Prairie County Co-op St. Grazing District v. Kalfell Ranch, Inc., 269 M 117, 887 P2d 241, 51 St. Rep. 1488 (1994).

Standard of Review for Decisions of County Superintendents: Baldridge appealed his dismissal by the school board to the acting County Superintendent, Barrick. Barrick reinstated Baldridge, and the school board appealed to the State Superintendent, Keenan. Keenan reviewed Barrick's reinstatement order and remanded it to Barrick, with instructions to assess the credibility of witnesses testifying as to other incidents of wrongdoing by Baldridge. Barrick again reinstated Baldridge in an order much the same as the first order. The school board again appealed. In the second review, Keenan stated that Barrick had acted in an arbitrary and capricious manner in reinstating Baldridge when the transcript indicated that there was sufficient evidence to reach a conclusion that the board had a standard of good cause for dismissal. Baldridge appealed to the District Court, which affirmed Keenan on the basis that the State Superintendent had found that good cause existed for Baldridge's dismissal. The Supreme Court held that Barrick had not set out sufficient findings of fact for her conclusions, as required by statute and rule. The Supreme Court stated that Keenan's standard of review was whether or not the findings were sufficient to support the County Superintendent's conclusions. If the findings were not sufficient, then the State Superintendent's only proper recourse was to again remand the case with instructions to set out more fully a statement of facts in support of the County Superintendent's conclusions. Keenan was in error in interpreting the facts to see if there was a standard of good cause to support the board's dismissal of Baldridge. The Supreme Court also held that the lower court was in error in supporting Keenan's finding of good cause for termination and that the lower court was also limited to determining if the findings of fact reached by the County Superintendent were sufficient to support her conclusions. Baldridge v. Rosebud County School District No. 19, 264 M 199, 870 P2d 711, 51 St. Rep. 166 (1994).

Failure to Provide Adequate Grounds for Rejecting Hearing Examiner's Determination of Witness Credibility: The District Court held that the Board of Nursing failed to provide adequate grounds for rejecting the hearing examiner's determinations of the credibility of witnesses. The Board asserted that this section prohibits not only the court but the hearing examiner from making any judgment that is binding on the Board as to the weight of witness testimony. However, the hearing examiner had the best opportunity to judge the credibility of the witnesses. The District Court did not err in finding that the Board's review of the hearing examiner's proposed findings was substantially impaired by the Board's improper rejection of the examiner's opinion. Holding That Statute Elaborates on Standard of Judicial Review of Unemployment Insurance Benefits Claim Overturned: The Supreme Court overturned that portion of the decision in Slayter v. Employment Sec. Div., 208 M 166, 676 P2d 220 (1984), that held that this section elaborates on the judicial review provisions of the unemployment insurance laws. Schneeman v. Dept. of Labor and Industry, 257 M 254, 848 P2d 504, 50 St. Rep. 256 (1993).

Applicability of Attorney-Client Privilege to Inadvertently Released Documents: Pacificorp inadvertently produced eight documents during discovery that it claimed were subject to the attorney-client privilege. The Supreme Court held that Pacificorp took immediate steps to protect its privilege upon learning of the inadvertent disclosure and that therefore it had not relinquished its rights. Because the privileged documents might have contributed to the decision, the lower court erred in allowing the State Tax Appeal Board to consider the documents. Pacificorp v. Dept. of Revenue, 254 M 387, 838 P2d 914, 49 St. Rep. 774 (1992).

Statutory Due Process Safeguards for Police Officers Met — Continuance Properly Denied: Ex-wife served a citizen's complaint with the police department against her former husband Wong, a police officer, alleging an ongoing pattern of harassment against herself, her babysitters, certain friends, and others that took place while Wong was on duty. A formal complaint alleging 39 charges was served on Wong 22 days before the police commission hearing was scheduled to begin. Following problems in retaining counsel, Wong moved for a continuance before the hearing, but the motion was denied. Wong subsequently appeared at the hearing pro se. The District Court held that the notice for hearing was statutorily sufficient but that the commission's denial of a continuance was arbitrary, capricious, and an abuse of discretion that denied Wong of procedural due process. The District Court reversed and remanded for another hearing based on the commission's failure to grant a continuance. The Supreme Court reversed the lower court after finding that the statutory safeguards for police officers were met, including provision of proper notice and a hearing at which Wong appeared and presented witnesses in his defense. Wong's appearance without counsel was due to his own actions. Denial of the continuance was not error. In re Termination of Wong v. Billings, 252 M 111, 827 P2d 90, 49 St. Rep. 158 (1992).

"Clearly Erroneous" Test Applicable to Review of Agency Decision: In reviewing the findings of a trial court sitting without a jury, the Supreme Court will apply the following three-part test to determine if the trial court's findings on an agency decision are clearly erroneous: (1) the record will be reviewed to see if the findings are supported by substantial evidence; (2) if the findings are supported by substantial evidence, it will be determined whether the trial court misapprehended the effect of evidence; and (3) if substantial evidence exists and the effect of evidence has not been misapprehended, the Supreme Court may still decide that a finding is clearly erroneous when, although there is evidence to support it, a review of the record leaves the court with the definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been committed. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund v. Lee Rost Logging, 252 M 97, 827 P2d 85, 49 St. Rep. 102 (1992), following Interstate Prod. Credit Ass'n v. DeSaye, 250 M 320, 820 P2d 1285, 48 St. Rep. 986 (1991), overruling any conflicting standard delineated in Billings v. Billings Firefighters Local No. 521, 200 M 421, 651 P2d 627 (1982), and followed in Synek v. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund, 272 M 246, 900 P2d 884, 52 St. Rep. 651 (1995), Weitz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 284 M 130, 943 P2d 990, 54 St. Rep. 807 (1997), Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 65, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997), and Total Mechanical Heating & Air Conditioning v. Employment Relations Div., 2002 MT 55, 309 M 84, 50 P3d 108 (2002). The clearly erroneous test was also applied in Hughes v. Mont. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 2003 MT 305, 318 M 181, 80 P3d 415 (2003), Baldwin v. Bd. of Chiropractors, 2003 MT 306, 318 M 188, 79 P3d 810 (2003), In re Fair Hearing of Hofer v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2005 MT 302, 329 M 368, 124 P3d 1098 (2005), and McCormick v. Brevig, 2007 MT 195, 338 M 370, 169 P3d 352 (2007). See also St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002).

Director's Rejection of Grievance Committee Recommendations Without Further Hearing or Review of Complete Record — Abuse of Discretion: The unanimous recommendations of a grievance committee were passed along to the Director of the Department of Institutions, who rejected two of the committee's factual findings without conducting an additional hearing or receiving any additional evidence. Arbitrary rejection of the findings by the Director, who neither heard nor personally observed the testimony, without a review of the complete record, as required in 2-4-621, was an abuse of discretion within the meaning of this section. Brander v. Dept. of Institutions, 247 M 302, 806 P2d 530, 48 St. Rep. 207 (1991), followed in Brackman v. Bd. of Nursing, 258 M 200, 851 P2d 1055, 50 St. Rep. 497 (1993), and Moran v. Shotgun Willies, Inc., 270 M 47, 889 P2d 1185, 52 St. Rep. 71 (1995). See also In re Grievance of Brady, 1999 MT 153, 295 M 75, 983 P2d 292, 56 St. Rep. 600 (1999).

Standards of Judicial Review:

In reviewing a state agency's conclusions of law under this section, the standard is to determine if the state agency's interpretation of the law is correct, rather than the former, and inappropriate, abuse of discretion standard. Steer, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, 245 M 470, 803 P2d 601, 47 St. Rep. 2199 (1990), followed in GBN, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, 249 M 261, 815 P2d 595, 48 St. Rep. 715 (1991), Tokumoto v. Dept. of Revenue, 264 M 56, 869 P2d 782, 51 St. Rep. 144 (1994), and Baldridge v. Rosebud County School District No. 19, 264 M 199, 870 P2d 711, 51 St. Rep. 166 (1994), which also clarifies Throssell v. Bd. of Trustees, 248 M 392, 812 P2d 767 (1991), and Weitz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 284 M 130, 943 P2d 990, 54 St. Rep. 807 (1997). Steer, Inc., was also followed in Phoenix Physical Therapy v. Unemployment Ins. Div., 284 M 95, 943 P2d 523, 54 St. Rep. 791 (1997), Waste Management Partners of Bozeman, Ltd. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 284 M 65, 944 P2d 210, 54 St. Rep. 866 (1997), Ulrich v. State ex rel. Bd. of Funeral Serv., 1998 MT 196, 289 M 407, 961 P2d 126, 55 St. Rep. 822 (1998), Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800, 56 St. Rep. 1065 (1999), and Hughes v. Mont. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 2003 MT 305, 318 M 181, 80 P3d 415 (2003). See also Prairie County Co-op St. Grazing District v. Kalfell Ranch, Inc., 269 M 117, 887 P2d 241, 51 St. Rep. 1488 (1994).

The standards for judicial review of a determination by an administrative agency are set forth in this section. Findings of fact by an administrative agency are subject to the clearly erroneous standard of review. P.W. Berry Co., Inc. v. Freese, 239 M 183, 779 P2d 521, 46 St. Rep. 1605 (1989).

Overtime Wage Claim — Inadequate Facts — Reversal of Default Judgment in Error: When the District Court was not adequately informed as to reasons for respondent's failure to respond to the Department of Labor's notice, it was error for the court to set aside the Department's default judgment. Under this section, the District Court should have remanded the case back to the Department for further factfinding and decision relative to the default. Smail v. Al's Sales, Inc., 245 M 18, 797 P2d 235, 47 St. Rep. 1808 (1990).

Insufficient Findings to Be Remanded: The District Court ruled that the findings of the hearing examiner for the Department of Labor and Industry were incorrect and substituted its findings for those of the agency. The Supreme Court held that it was reversible error to fail to remand the case to the Department for suitable findings of fact. Stewart v. Region II Child & Family Serv., 242 M 88, 788 P2d 913, 47 St. Rep. 572 (1990).

Termination Procedures Not Followed — Termination Upheld on Other Grounds: The school trustees decided, prior to any hearing, to terminate a tenured teacher due to lack of funds. The Supreme Court agreed that the termination violated the statutory procedures but upheld the trustees' action because the firing was for economic reasons and did not reflect on the personal qualifications of the teacher. Birrer v. Trustees, 241 M 262, 786 P2d 1161, 47 St. Rep. 247 (1990).

Standard of Review Applicable to Noncontested Cases — Approval of Plan for Drilling Exploratory Well: The District Court incorrectly applied the "clearly erroneous" standard set out in this section when reviewing whether the Department of State Lands (now Department of Environmental Quality) properly approved a plan proposing drilling of an exploratory well on a leased tract near Glacier Park. The court found that shortcomings in the approval procedure, coupled with the fact that information gathered by the Department indicating that the well would generate a significant environmental impact, necessitated preparation of an environmental impact statement. However, this section was inapplicable because the case was not truly contested. No hearing was requested or held before the Department, there was no action initiated until after the Department had approved the operating plan, and there was no evidentiary record against which to measure the Department's decision and determine whether it was clearly erroneous. Rather, the proper standard of review was whether the record established that the Department acted arbitrarily, capriciously, or unlawfully. The fact that the Department conducted two preliminary environmental reviews, conditioned approval on 42 protective stipulations, and considered the concerns raised in the approval process and took significant steps to address them indicated that the decision to forego preparation of an environmental impact statement was not arbitrary, capricious, or illegal. N. Fork Preservation Ass'n v. Dept. of State Lands, 238 M 451, 778 P2d 862, 46 St. Rep. 1409 (1989), distinguishing Conner v. Burford, 605 F. Supp. 107 (D.C. Mont. 1985), and followed in Ravalli County Fish & Game Ass'n, Inc. v. Dept. of State Lands, 273 M 371, 903 P2d 1362, 52 St. Rep. 996 (1995), Mont. Envtl. Information Center, Inc. v. Dept. of Transportation, 2000 MT 5, 298 M 1, 994 P2d 676, 57 St. Rep. 18 (2000), and Friends of the Wild Swan v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 2000 MT 209, 301 M 1, 6 P3d 972, 57 St. Rep. 816 (2000), in which omission of a cumulative impact analysis was directly related to the "unlawful" portion of the MEPA standard of review. See also Winchell v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 1999 MT 11, 293 M 89, 972 P2d 1132, 56 St. Rep. 48 (1999), and Madison River R.V. Ltd. v. Ennis, 2000 MT 15, 298 M 91, 994 P2d 1098, 57 St. Rep. 84 (2000).

Issuance of License — Off-the-Record Site Visit Improper: After an administrative hearing, the Director of the Department of Revenue awarded a beer and wine license to one of two parties after unannounced site visits to the premises of each party. On appeal, the District Court overruled the Director's decision and reinstated the order of the hearing examiner, which proposed award of the license to the other party. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's order vacating the Director's order because it was founded on an unlawful procedure that violated the appellant's due process interests. Whether the conduct prejudiced both contenders' rights equally is irrelevant. Lack of prior notice, coupled with lack of any documentation, is fatal to an ordinarily permissible inspection. This type of conduct under a Montana Administrative Procedure Act proceeding violates certain other safeguards built in by statute: the right to respond and present evidence and argument on all relevant issues and the right to conduct a cross-examination sufficient for full and true disclosure of facts. However, the trial judge erred in ordering the adoption of the hearing examiner's proposal. This was not an alternative authorized by statute. The case was remanded to the Department for final determination. Frascell, Inc. v. St., 235 M 152, 766 P2d 850, 45 St. Rep. 2267 (1988).

Remand of Teacher Tenure Question — Collective Bargaining Agreement Admissible: After finding a collective bargaining agreement to be admissible on the question of teacher tenure, the District Court abused its discretion in not remanding the case to the County Superintendent for resolution of the issue of tenure rights. Beck v. Bd. of Trustees, 233 M 319, 760 P2d 83, 45 St. Rep. 1520 (1988).

Structured Interviews Not Sole Determination of Teacher Competence When Other Means Available: The District Court improperly substituted its judgment for a finding by the State Superintendent of Public Instruction that the school district board of trustees failed to prove a tenured teacher was incompetent. The board relied solely on the teacher's performance in four structured interviews but failed to consider 13 years of satisfactory classroom evaluations. Bd. of Trustees v. Anderson, 232 M 501, 757 P2d 1315, 45 St. Rep. 1232 (1988).

Inclusion of Tax Deferrals in Stock and Debt Indicator: The State Tax Appeal Board (STAB) found that a tax deferral account was a true liability. The District Court reversed after finding the account was merely an accounting device that reflected value owed on the books but could not be included under ARM 42.22.113 because it was neither an instrument traded on the financial market nor a true liability as required by the regulation. The Supreme Court reversed the decision as an incorrect substitution of the trial court's judgment for that of STAB on a question of fact, holding that the District Court should not have interpreted the Department's regulation so narrowly as to frustrate the mandate for finding market value. Further, use of the words "outstanding debt" in the regulation was sufficiently comprehensive to include an account that must serve to offset the loss of depreciation deductions that may be experienced in the future. Puget Sound Power & Light Co. v. Dept. of Revenue, 232 M 314, 761 P2d 336, 45 St. Rep. 1078 (1988).

Offset of Jury Award — Pretrial Agreement: Parties agreed prior to trial that any amount awarded by the jury for lost wages would be offset by the amount of the grievance panel award and the amount of unemployment benefits received. Therefore, the District Court properly reduced a jury award of $850 by the grievance panel award of $671.05 and unemployment compensation of $178.95. Myers v. Dept. of Agriculture, 232 M 286, 756 P2d 1144, 45 St. Rep. 1056 (1988).

Award of Teacher's Backpay — Income of Second Job Not Offset: Income earned at a second job should not offset an award of backpay for a teacher unless it can be shown that the recipient of the award would have been unable to hold the second job at the same time as the job for which he is receiving backpay. Harris v. Bauer, 230 M 207, 749 P2d 1068, 45 St. Rep. 147 (1988).

Presentation of Additional Evidence in Contested Cases: Under 2-4-703, when the court has allowed additional evidence, it may be presented to the agency but not to the court. This limitation accords with the standard of review of contested MAPA cases under this section, which confines court review to the record. O'Neill v. Dept. of Revenue, 227 M 226, 739 P2d 456, 44 St. Rep. 1037 (1987).

Review of STAB Decision — Additional Evidence: When additional evidence is presented during review of a STAB decision under 15-2-303, such evidence may be introduced before the court rather than the agency. Findings of fact and conclusions of law are then required to be made by the court. If the court does not permit or receive additional evidence, written findings and conclusions by the court are not required. Hi-Line Radio Fellowship v. Dept. of Revenue, 227 M 150, 737 P2d 886, 44 St. Rep. 955 (1987).

Tuition Transfer — School Board Decision Improperly Reversed — Reviewing Agency Analysis: It was improper for the State Superintendent of Public Instruction to reverse school board denial of a tuition transfer by including findings that were not part of the record, were irrelevant, or were conjectures or conclusions rather than facts. Findings of the reviewing agency may not be properly included as facts when they are not part of the record below, and the reviewing agency must confine itself to an analysis of whether the findings are clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the whole record or whether they are arbitrary, capricious, or characterized by abuse of discretion. Frazer School District v. Flynn, 225 M 299, 732 P2d 409, 44 St. Rep. 248 (1987). This holding is dispositive of a later appeal in a companion case, Frazer School District v. Forsness, 226 M 244, 734 P2d 1218, 44 St. Rep. 624 (1987).

Ambiguous Statutory Interpretation — Agency Interpretation Rejected as Leading to Absurd Results: Where the grandfather clause for licensure of used video poker machines was found susceptible to two interpretations and the agency implementing the statute chose an interpretation that would lead to absurd results, rejection by the District Court of the agency interpretation was proper. Further, evidence gleaned by court examination of the legislative history to determine legislative intent was properly admitted when the intent could not be determined from the statutory language. Mont. Tavern Ass'n v. St., 224 M 258, 729 P2d 1310, 43 St. Rep. 2180 (1986).

Appellant's Burden of Showing Prejudice: Appellant has the burden of showing prejudice from a clearly erroneous decision. Carruthers v. Bd. of Horse Racing, 216 M 184, 700 P2d 179, 42 St. Rep. 729 (1985), followed in Terry v. Bd. of Regents 220 M 214, 714 P2d 151, 43 St. Rep.

304 (1986) and in Hoven, Vervick, & Amrine, P.C. v. Comm'r of Labor, 237 M 525, 774 P2d 995, 46 St. Rep. 1024 (1989).

District Court Reversal of Board of Nursing Decision Upheld: White was refused licensing by endorsement under 37-8-417 (now repealed) by the Board of Nursing (Board) because although he was licensed as a practical nurse by New York State, he had not graduated from a practical nursing school. Instead, as is permitted in New York, he had taken the licensed practical nurse examination after completion of a substantial portion of a registered nursing program. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's ruling that the Board must issue the license. The Board's interpretation of 37-8-415 is hypertechnical. Section 37-8-415 should be interpreted to mean the applicant's education has been approved and authorized by the state in which he has been licensed. Further, the Board's interpretation defeats the intention of the Legislature as expressed in 37-8-101(2). In re White, 220 M 36, 712 P2d 1344, 43 St. Rep. 151 (1986).

State Tax Appeal Board — Standard of Review: The District Court, as a reviewing court, may reverse or modify the decisions of the State Tax Appeal Board and remand the case for further proceedings if substantial rights of the appellant have been prejudiced because the administrative findings, inferences, conclusions, or decisions are clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence of the whole record. The same is true for actions of the Board found to be arbitrary, capricious, or characterized by an abuse of discretion. Dept. of Revenue v. Grouse Mtn. Dev., 218 M 353, 707 P2d 1113, 42 St. Rep. 1642 (1985). (But see case note on Steer, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, under above catchline "Standards of Judicial Review".) Further, reversal or modification of a STAB decision may be warranted if substantial rights of the appellant have been prejudiced because findings of fact, upon issues essential to the decision, were not made, although requested. Devoe v. Dept. of Revenue, 233 M 190, 759 P2d 991, 45 St. Rep. 1414 (1988).

Oral Argument Not Heard — No Request in Record: The District Court did not err in reaching a decision without hearing oral argument when the record on appeal did not reflect a request for oral argument. The court's decision reflected a review of the record. Carruthers v. Bd. of Horseracing, 216 M 184, 700 P2d 179, 42 St. Rep. 729 (1985).

Human Rights Commission Award of Backpay Contrary to Legal Conclusion of Hearing Examiner: It was not error for the Montana Human Rights Commission to award backpay when the hearing examiner, as a matter of law, refused to do so. After reviewing the record, the Commission may, under 2-4-621, reject or modify an examiner's conclusions of law. The Commission also has the authority under 49-2-506 to use its discretion to rectify harm done a person discriminated against. European Health Spa v. Human Rights Comm'n, 212 M 319, 687 P2d 1029, 41 St. Rep. 1766 (1984).

District Court's Finding of Fact Different From Agency's — Restatement by Judge of Unclear Agency Finding: The District Court's findings of fact appeared to conflict with the administrative agency's hearing examiner's findings of fact, thus exceeding the standards of judicial review set forth in this section, but a reading of the record disclosed that the hearing examiner's finding was not clearly stated. The District Court acted correctly when it merely translated the hearing examiner's finding of fact without substituting its judgment for that of the agency on the weight of the evidence on questions of fact. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

MAPA Inapplicable to Pre-1977 County School Superintendent Decision — Substantial Evidence: Plaintiff was terminated from her tenured teaching position by the County Board of Trustees in 1977. The decision was reviewed and upheld by the County Superintendent of Schools, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the District Court. On appeal to the Supreme Court, plaintiff contended that the County Superintendent had not complied with the Montana Administrative Procedure Act (MAPA) since he failed to include statements of underlying facts supporting his findings and failed to rule on plaintiff's proposed findings. The Supreme Court noted that MAPA was made applicable to school districts by a 1977 amendment. The court, relying on sec. 26, Ch. 2, Ex. L. 1971, which provided that the adoption of MAPA would not affect pending proceedings, held that MAPA did not apply to this case, which was begun prior to the 1977 amendment. The court determined that the school district's decision was supported by substantial evidence and was not clearly erroneous, the standard for review under 2-4-704. Donnes v. State ex rel. Supt. of Pub. Instruction, 206 M 530, 672 P2d 617, 40 St. Rep. 1834 (1983).

District Court Order Granting Relief Beyond Issues Addressed by Administrative Agency: Where the District Court reversed an order of the Office of Public Instruction (OPI) and found that the plaintiff was a teacher subject to the tenure laws of the state, the Supreme Court found on appeal that the District Court erred in that its order went beyond the scope of the issues determined in the OPI order. The Superintendent of Public Instruction did not address the issue of the reinstatement of the plaintiff or award him backpay, and the District Court can review only those issues determined by the agency. The District Court should have reversed the Superintendent on the issue of teacher tenure and remanded the case for negotiations between the plaintiff and the school district. Harris v. Bauer, 206 M 480, 672 P2d 26, 40 St. Rep. 1793 (1983).

Methodology of Determination Substantiated by Record — Failure to Object in Administrative Proceeding: The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) did not commit error in the application of the "rate of return" methodology, rather than the "market value" methodology, in determining the reasonableness of contract cost for the purchase of coal by the Montana Power Company (MPC) from a wholly-owned subsidiary. While the Supreme Court stated a preference for the "market value" methodology in Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. Bollinger, 193 M 508, 632 P2d 1086 (1981), the court did not prohibit the P.S.C. from using a different methodology if the evidence warrants its use. In this case, the evidence introduced by the P.S.C. was not challenged by MPC. Rather, MPC seeks to do so for the first time on appeal. Limited review of the administrative record is appropriate, and that record supports the findings of the Commission. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 204 M 224, 665 P2d 1121, 40 St. Rep. 805 (1983).

Union Contract as Implied Part of Employment Relationship: Bishop was hired by petitioner to be head of his wine department. The specifics of the employment were not discussed. Bishop was given a copy of a union contract covering other employees although he was not a union member. After his discharge, Bishop filed a wage claim with the Department of Labor and Industry. The hearings officer found the union contract to be the best indicator of the employment relationship and awarded back wages. The District Court reversed, saying there was no mutual consent as to overtime or holiday pay. On appeal, the Supreme Court reinstated the hearing officer's findings because they were supported by substantial evidence. There were a number of correlations between the parties' actual conduct and the union contract. The union contract was held to be an implied part of the employment relationship between Bishop and the petitioner. Bronken's Goodtime Co. v. Bishop, 201 M 360, 664 P2d 292, 39 St. Rep. 2165 (1982).

Agency Factual and Legal Decisions — Clarification of Standard of Review: The standard of review to be applied to findings of fact by an agency is whether they are "clearly erroneous". Factual findings will be upheld if supported by substantial credible evidence. If there is substantial credible evidence in the record, the findings are not "clearly erroneous". If the record supports the factual determinations of the agency, the reviewing court may not weigh the evidence but is bound by the agency's findings. Billings v. Billings Firefighters Local No. 521, 200 M 421, 651 P2d 627, 39 St. Rep. 1844 (1982), and overruled with regard to any inconsistencies to the standard set out in St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund v. Lee Rost Logging, 252 M 97, 827 P2d 85, 49 St. Rep. 102 (1992), and followed in Stansberry v. Argenbright, 227 M 123, 738 P2d 478, 44 St. Rep. 935 (1987), Hammerquist v. Employment Sec. Div., 230 M 347, 749 P2d 535, 45 St. Rep. 261 (1988), Swan Corp. v. Dept. of Revenue, 232 M 210, 755 P2d 1388, 45 St. Rep. 998 (1988), Dept. of Revenue v. Gallatin Outpatient Clinic, Inc., 234 M 425, 763 P2d 1128, 45 St. Rep. 2025 (1988), Ramage v. Dept. of Revenue, 236 M 69, 768 P2d 864, 46 St. Rep. 187 (1989), W.R. Grace & Co. v. Dept. of Revenue, 238 M 439, 779 P2d 470, 46 St. Rep. 1399 (1989), and in V.K. Putnam, Inc. v. McFarlane, 239 M 300, 779 P2d 905, 46 St. Rep. 1699 (1989).

Grandfather Clause — Supervisory Personnel Allowed to Remain in Unit — Two-Part Test: The city of Billings and its firefighters' union requested the Board of Personnel Appeals (BPA) to conduct a hearing to clarify the membership of the bargaining unit. At issue was whether Local No. 521, the bargaining unit since 1968, fell within the grandfather clause of 39-31-109, or whether the unit contained supervisory personnel in violation of 39-31-201. The hearing officer recommended an order concluding the unit fell within the grandfather clause's protection. The city appealed the recommendation to the BPA. The BPA remanded the case to use a two-part test: (1) a determination of the nature of each position; and (2) whether the inclusion of the position would create an actual substantial conflict. The BPA then adopted the recommended order. The city appealed to the District Court, which overturned the decision, finding it to be arbitrary and capricious because inclusion of supervisory personnel in the unit created an inherent conflict. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that BPA's interpretation of 39-31-109 was rational and did not involve an abuse of discretion. (But see case note on Steer, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, under above catchline "Standards of Judicial Review".) The decision recognized a violation of 39-31-201, but in light of 39-31-109, the two-part test applied by BPA was a rational approach for determining unit membership. The hearing officer's findings relating to each position were supported by substantial credible evidence. There was no arbitrary or capricious action. The order of the BPA was reinstated. Billings v. Billings Firefighters Local No. 521, 200 M 421, 651 P2d 627, 39 St. Rep. 1844 (1982).

Unfair Labor Practice — Statute of Limitations Not a Rule of Evidence: Carlson, an animal warden employed by defendant, was terminated allegedly because of insubordination and noncooperation resulting from an incident involving a schnauzer and because of earlier noncooperation. Carlson filed an unfair labor practice complaint with the Board of Personnel Appeals (BPA) alleging that the actual reason for her termination was her union activity. BPA ruled in favor of Carlson and ordered her reinstated with backpay. On appeal, the District Court reversed on the basis of unlawful procedure, contending that BPA gave primary weight to incidents occurring more than 6 months prior to the filing of Carlson's claim in violation of 29-31-404. The Supreme Court held that 39-31-404 requires an employee to file a charge within 6 months after an alleged unfair labor practice; it does not forbid the introduction of relevant evidence bearing on the issue of whether a violation has occurred during the 6-month period. Bd. of Personnel Appeals v. Billings, 199 M 302, 648 P2d 1169, 39 St. Rep. 1414 (1982).

Environmental Impact Statements — Scope of Appellate Review of Findings of Sufficiency of Statement: The Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (now Board of Environmental Review) issued a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need under the Montana Utility Siting Act of 1973 (now the Montana Major Facility Siting Act of 1975) for the construction of several powerlines, following the completion of an environmental impact statement under the Montana Environmental Policy Act. The Supreme Court refused to apply a de novo standard of review of the District Court's finding that the impact statement was sufficient. The court held that the correct scope of appellate review of agency decisions was stated in N. Plains Resources Council v. Bd. of Natural Resources and Conserv., 181 M 500, 594 P2d 297 (1979), to be whether the agency's decision was clearly erroneous in light of substantial evidence on the whole record. Mont. Wilderness Ass'n v. Bd. of Natural Resources and Conserv., 200 M 11, 648 P2d 734, 39 St. Rep. 1238 (1982).

Unfair Labor Practice — Scope of Judicial Review Exceeded: A decision by the Board of Personnel Appeals found that the refusal of a school district to arbitrate whether the procedural steps for nonrenewal of a nontenured teacher were followed was a breach of the collective bargaining agreement and constituted an unfair labor practice. On appeal, the District Court went on to decide the broader issue of whether the school district was required to arbitrate the substantive basis of nontenured teacher renewal. The District Court exceeded the proper scope of judicial review. Savage Pub. Schools v. Savage Educ. Ass'n, 199 M 39, 647 P2d 833, 39 St. Rep. 1192 (1982).

Agency Default Does Not Suspend Standard of Review: The Department of Revenue audited respondent's corporate license tax returns and assessed additional taxes. Respondent protested the assessment and appealed to the State Tax Appeal Board (STAB). After a hearing, STAB affirmed the Department's decision. Respondent filed for judicial review of the STAB decision in District Court. Respondent mailed a copy of the summons and petition to the attorney who represented the Department at the hearing and to STAB. The respondent received a default judgment and a reversal of STAB's final order. Separate standards of review for STAB decisions are not provided, with the exception of 15-2-303 which states that the District Court may permit additional evidence notwithstanding 2-4-704. The District Court reversed STAB's determination and granted the relief requested by respondent based on the Department's failure to answer and appear. The failure to appear does not suspend the standard of review. The District Court was not entitled to enter a default judgment reversing STAB without reviewing the record and complying with the standard of review contained in 2-4-704. Dept. of Revenue v. Davidson Cattle Co., 190 M 326, 620 P2d 1232, 37 St. Rep. 2074 (1980).

Findings to Be Proposed: A surveyor whose license was revoked contended that the hearings examiner failed to make proper findings of fact. The findings made by the hearings examiner were supported by the evidence presented. Findings raised on appeal were not included in proposed findings at the hearing level. The findings not having been requested, the Supreme Court could not rely on them to overturn the license revocation. In re Shaw, 189 M 310, 615 P2d 910 (1980).

Workers' Compensation — Factual Findings:

Where there is sufficient credible evidence in the record to support the decision of the workers' compensation court, the Supreme Court on appeal is bound by the workers' compensation court's decision on the facts. Catteyson v. Glacier Gen. Assurance Co., 183 M 284, 599 P2d 341 (1979), following McGee v. Becktel Corp., 182 M 149, 595 P2d 1156 (1979).

The findings and conclusions of the workers' compensation court, like those of District Courts, may not stand if there is a preponderance of the evidence against them when viewed in the light most favorable to the prevailing party. The findings of fact will not be set aside unless they are clearly erroneous. However, the Supreme Court is in as good a position to judge record testimony, as opposed to oral testimony, as the trial court. Hert v. Lumberman Mut. Cas. Co., 178 M 355, 584 P2d 656 (1978), clarified and rehearing denied in Hert v. Lumberman Mut. Cas. Co., 179 M 160, 587 P2d 11 (1978). Hert was held to no longer be authority for admissibility of medical records, in light of the 1990 adoption of ARM 24.5.317, in Miller v. Frasure, 264 M 354, 871 P2d 1302, 51 St. Rep. 233 (1994).

Burden of Appellant: The burden resting on an appealing party to a District Court from an agency decision is a substantial one. N. Plains Resource Council v. Bd. of Natural Resources & Conservation, 181 M 500, 594 P2d 297 (1979).

Legality of Banking Board Rule — Issue to Be Raised Before Agency: There was no merit to appellant's challenge to the validity of the State Banking Board's rulemaking process. Furthermore, such a question must have been raised first before the administrative agency unless there was good cause for failure to do so. W. Bank of Billings v. St. Banking Bd., 174 M 331, 570 P2d 1115 (1977), followed in In re Sorini, 220 M 459, 717 P2d 7, 43 St. Rep. 526 (1986).

FINDING OF SUBSTANTIAL CREDIBLE EVIDENCE

No Enforceable Obligation — Utility Not Required to Commit to Purchase Electricity Without Further Development — Substantial Evidence to Support P.S.C.'s Findings: The plaintiff, a small power production company, attempted to negotiate a contract with a public utility for the sale of electricity. After the parties were unable to reach an agreement, the plaintiff petitioned the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) to set a long-term avoided cost rate for the future sale of electricity pursuant to Title 69, ch. 3, part 6. After a remand to the P.S.C. on a variety of issues in Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2010 MT 2, 355 Mont. 15, 223 P.3d 907, the P.S.C. concluded that the plaintiff had not incurred a legally enforceable obligation, which it defined as an absolute, unconditional commitment to deliver energy, capacity, or energy and capacity. On appeal, the District Court reversed the P.S.C. and determined that the utility's refusal to negotiate created a legally enforceable obligation, but the Supreme Court reversed the District Court and reinstated the P.S.C.'s order. In upholding the P.S.C., the Supreme Court applied the standard of review in 2-4-704 and held that there was substantial evidence in the record to support the P.S.C.'s findings, including the fact that the plaintiff had yet to conduct avian studies, obtain permits, and gain site control over the proposed project. In essence, the plaintiff sought to have the P.S.C. establish a long-term avoided cost rate in order to determine the financial viability of the project before it incurred an obligation to proceed. Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n., 2015 MT 119, 379 Mont. 119, 347 P.3d 1273.

Use of Earnings-to-Price Ratios Upheld for Valuation of Centrally Assessed Property — Substantial Evidence Before STAB Upheld: The State Tax Appeal Board (STAB) upheld the method used by the Department of Revenue (DOR) to centrally assess PacifiCorp's property, a method based on earnings-to-price ratios. PacifiCorp challenged that method of valuation. The District Court reversed STAB because of an "admission" made by one of DOR's expert witnesses during a hearing that the witness was not familiar with the method of valuation used by DOR. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that, despite the "admission" of DOR's expert, there was substantial evidence in the record, in the form of testimony by other experts and publications, to support the method of valuation relied on by DOR and that evidence supported STAB's decision to tax PacifiCorp's property at 100% of value based on that method of valuation. The Supreme Court held that the District Court had erroneously substituted its judgment for that of STAB, when the applicable standard was whether there was substantial evidence in the record to support STAB's decision. PacifiCorp v. St., 2011 MT 93, 360 Mont. 259, 253 P.3d 847.

No Error in Denial of Liquor License Transfer to Excluded Inholding Within Exterior Boundary of Resort: The District Court affirmed the findings and conclusions of a Department of Revenue hearings examiner that a liquor license could not be transferred to a site that was within the exterior boundaries of Big Mountain Ski Resort but that was excluded from the resort area itself as an excluded inholding. The license applicant appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. The hearings examiner properly interpreted 16-4-202 to allow the corporate entity that owned the resort to selectively exclude properties within the designated resort boundary from being in the resort area itself. Pursuant to the statute, properties not owned by a resort developer can be brought into the resort area if brought under the developer's control by contract, lease, option, or permit. The site in question was in fact located within the resort boundaries but was never owned or controlled by the resort developer and was excepted from the resort area by virtue of the legal description on the plats. Therefore, denial of the liquor license transfer to an excepted inholding that was not part of the resort area was proper. In re Application for Transfer of Location for All-Alcoholic Beverages Resort License, 2008 MT 165, 343 M 331, 184 P3d 324 (2008).

Express Trust Relationship Between Hutterite Colony and Colony Members: The District Court overruled a hearings examiner's findings that an express trust existed between an incorporated Hutterite Colony and the colony members. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied neutral secular principles of law to this church property dispute and reversed. All colony property was held in the name of the corporation under a communal property arrangement wherein all colony members shared their productivity and no one owned individual property. The articles of incorporation provided that the colony was devoted exclusively to agricultural pursuits for the livelihood of its members, and corporate assets were held in trust for the benefit of colony members and their heirs. Thus, an express trust existed between the colony and its members, and as trustee, the colony had a duty to administer the trust in the interest of its members as beneficiaries. The hearings examiner's findings that a trust existed was supported by substantial credible evidence, and the District Court erred in overturning those findings. In re Fair Hearing of Hofer v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2005 MT 302, 329 M 368, 124 P3d 1098 (2005), following Second Int'l Baha'i Council v. Chase, 2005 MT 30, 326 M 41, 106 P3d 1168 (2005), and followed in part and distinguished in part in New Hope Lutheran Ministry v. Faith Lutheran Church of Great Falls, Inc., 2014 MT 69, 374 Mont. 229, 328 P.3d 586.

Question of Applicability of Federal Medicaid Law to Members of Hutterite Colony — Remand: The District Court overruled a hearings examiner's findings that an express trust existed between an incorporated Hutterite Colony and the colony members. The hearings examiner determined that because colony trust assets were available to colony members and that because trust assets were in excess of the $3,000 allowable resource limit, the colony members were ineligible to receive federal Medicaid benefits. On appeal, the Supreme Court applied neutral secular principles of law to this church property dispute and held that an express trust existed between the corporation and the colony members. However, the court did not reach the issues of whether the colony owed a legal duty to support its members and whether colony members were eligible for benefits under the family-related Medicaid program, so the case was remanded for further findings and consideration of applicable federal law. In re Fair Hearing of Hofer v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2005 MT 302, 329 M 368, 124 P3d 1098 (2005).

Medical Provider Liable for Reimbursement of Medicaid Payments Erroneously Billed Under Pre-1999 Billing Codes: A 1999 change in Medicaid billing procedures implemented a national bill coding system that required medical providers to bill for each visit rather than for the actual time spent providing the service. Despite the change, Kirchner continued to use the old billing method until an audit revealed the problem. The Department of Public Health and Human Services (DPHHS) then required Kirchner to pay back fees that were improperly paid to Kirchner using the old coding system. Kirchner contested the DPHHS findings, but all administrative factfinders and the District Court concluded that Kirchner had in fact overbilled the Medicaid program. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that the DPHHS interpretation of its rules and the billing codes was reasonable, that the findings of the hearings officer were adequately supported by the evidence and not clearly erroneous, and, in deference to the DPHHS interpretation of its rule, that the agency's interpretation would be sustained. Thus, Kirchner was not entitled to payment for overbilled services and was liable for reimbursement of the overpayment. Kirchner v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2005 MT 202, 328 M 203, 119 P3d 82 (2005).

Failure to Actively Pursue Administrative Mining Permitting Process — Mineral Lease Properly Terminated: Plaintiffs had an operating permit pending for a cyanide leach pit gold mine when voters passed Initiative Measure No. 137 (I-137) that prohibited cyanide mining in Montana. Plaintiffs then filed a legal challenge to I-137, but failed to pursue any administrative actions in pursuit of the permitting process. The state Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) subsequently terminated plaintiffs' mineral leases prior to resolution of the legal challenge on grounds that plaintiffs had not actively pursued permitting until requesting an administrative hearing 2 weeks after the leases expired, and the District Court upheld the agency's decision. Plaintiffs contended on appeal that the leases were improperly terminated, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Challenging the validity of a voter-passed initiative, without more, did not constitute an administrative act of pursuing a permit. The DEQ was not obligated to extend the primary terms of the leases to include the time necessary for plaintiffs to seek invalidation of I-137, and because plaintiffs did not pursue the administrative process during the legal challenge, the leases were properly terminated. Seven Up Pete Venture v. St., 2005 MT 146, 327 M 306, 114 P3d 1009 (2005).

Substantial Evidence Supporting Hearings Examiner's Finding of Sexual Discrimination — Commission for Human Rights Reversal of Hearings Examiner's Findings Reversed: Schmidt was hired as a live-in maid at a motel but was told by the manager that as part of the job, she would be required to have sex with him and with motel customers. Schmidt filed a human rights complaint against the motel manager and the owner, alleging that the manager and the motel discriminated against her on the basis of sex in employment by subjecting her to sexual harassment. A hearings examiner determined that the manager illegally discriminated against Schmidt by subjecting her to quid pro quo sexual harassment as a condition of employment as a maid and that the owner was jointly and severally liable for failing to provide a sexual harassment policy. The owner appealed the final agency decision to the Commission for Human Rights, which reversed the agency decision and dismissed Schmidt's complaint. The District Court affirmed the Commission decision, and Schmidt appealed. The Supreme Court found that although there may have been evidence in the record that supported contrary findings, substantial credible evidence supported the hearings examiner's findings. Thus, the Commission for Human Rights erred in reversing the hearings examiner, and the District Court erred in affirming the Commission. The case was reversed and remanded for further proceedings. Schmidt v. Cook, 2005 MT 53, 326 M 202, 108 P3d 511 (2005).

Agency Rejection and Order for Modification of Conclusions of Law Regarding Employee's Entitlement to Overtime Pay Proper — Correct Standard of Review Applied: Winkler filed an overtime wage claim, and a state compliance specialist awarded Winkler the entire amount plus a 15% statutory penalty. A state hearings officer found that Winkler was not entitled to overtime. The Board of Personnel Appeals reversed the hearings officer, and the District Court affirmed the Board. The employer appealed on grounds that the Board and the District Court erroneously substituted their judgment for the findings of fact of the hearings officer, but the Supreme Court found no abuse of discretion and affirmed. Under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act, to avoid paying overtime, an employer has the burden of proving that the employee fits plainly and unmistakably within the Act's exemption requirements. The Board concluded that the hearings officer failed to show that Winkler was exempt, and the District Court agreed. Thus, the Board and the court did not modify the findings of the hearings officer in violation of this section, but did comply with 2-4-621 in rejecting and ordering a modification of the hearings officer's conclusions of law. Further, the Board and the District Court applied the correct standard of review set out in Moran v. Shotgun Willies, Inc., 270 M 47, 889 P2d 1185 (1995), in holding that the hearings officer's findings were based on competent substantial evidence that Winkler did not agree to work for a set number of hours each week. Key W., Inc. v. Winkler, 2004 MT 186, 322 M 184, 95 P3d 666 (2004).

Liquidated Damages for Failure to Pay Overtime Warranted Absent Showing That Employer Acted in Good Faith and With Reasonable Grounds in Paying Wages — Fees and Costs of Appeal Allowed to Employee: The federal Fair Labor Standards Act provides that employees who are not paid overtime may recover liquidated damages in the amount of unpaid wages in addition to the unpaid wages. In this case, Winkler was awarded liquidated damages, and the employer appealed on grounds that it paid Winkler's wages in good faith and had reasonable grounds to believe that it did not violate the Act, so liquidated damages were not warranted under 29 U.S.C. 260. The Supreme Court applied the test in Walton v. United Consumers Club, Inc., 786 F2d 303 (7th Cir. 1986), to determine what constitutes good faith and reasonable grounds. The Walton standard is whether, when objectively viewed through the lens of the tort law reasonable person standard, the employer acted in good faith and had reasonable grounds for believing that the employer's act or omission did not violate the Act. The hearings officer found that, based on the entire record, the employer failed to present sufficient evidence of good faith and reasonable grounds, and the Supreme Court declined to substitute its judgment for that of the agency as to the weight of the evidence on the factual question. Winkler was also entitled to court costs and attorney fees for appeal as the prevailing party under 39-3-214 and 29 U.S.C. 216(b). Key W., Inc. v. Winkler, 2004 MT 186, 322 M 184, 95 P3d 666 (2004).

Proper Denial of Petition for Judicial Review of Board of Medical Examiners' Decision to Disallow Reconsideration of Stipulation of Unprofessional Conduct: The Board of Medical Examiners found that a doctor had conducted himself in an unprofessional manner by drawing a smiley face on the breast of a cancer patient. The doctor attended two out-of-state facilities at the request of the professional assistance program and subsequently sued the program and several program physicians for false imprisonment, conspiracy, and other charges. The program then withdrew from the treatment arrangement, and the Board produced a stipulation, which the doctor signed, wherein he admitted that the conduct was unprofessional. The doctor's conduct was reported to the national practitioner database, and he was placed on probation for 1 year. After probation was terminated, the doctor petitioned for reconsideration of the stipulation on grounds that it was signed under duress, that the conduct was not unprofessional, and that the record of the charge made it difficult to find employment. The Board denied reconsideration, the District Court affirmed, and the doctor appealed, but the Supreme Court also affirmed. Substantial evidence supported the District Court's findings that the stipulation was not signed under duress, and the court's failure to address the Board's omission of the doctor's requested findings of fact was not in error. The Board has wide discretion under 37-3-324 whether to reconsider a prior action, and the District Court did not err in concluding that the Board acted within its discretion in denying the petition for reconsideration. Hughes v. Mont. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 2003 MT 305, 318 M 181, 80 P3d 415 (2003).

Board Modification of Hearings Examiner Findings Warranted Regarding Classification of Child Support Enforcement Investigators: Under St. v. Shodair Hosp., 273 M 155, 902 P2d 21 (1995), and this section, a reviewing court may reverse a decision by the Board of Personnel Appeals if it was arbitrary or capricious or characterized by an abuse of discretion or a clearly unwarranted exercise of discretion. Here, the Board properly rejected a portion of a hearings examiner's findings that 80% of child support enforcement investigators' work involved case monitoring, and, absent substantial evidence, it was error for a District Court to find that the Board's rejection was improper. Further, the Board was correct in concluding that the hearings examiner mistakenly omitted the investigators' proposed findings regarding establishment duties, and the District Court erred in holding that the Board's modified findings failed to reflect the investigators' predominant duties under the predominant duty rule. St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002).

Agency's Findings of Fact — Not Overturned Unless Clearly Erroneous: The plaintiff sued the defendant for past wages and overtime. The defendant argued that no overtime was owed on the grounds that the plaintiff was an executive employee as set out in ARM 24.16.201. The Department of Labor and Industry determined that the plaintiff was not an executive employee and was entitled to overtime pay. The Supreme Court ruled that the Department's findings were supported by substantive evidence and therefore could not be overturned by the District Court. Holbeck v. Stevi-West, Inc., 240 M 121, 783 P2d 391, 46 St. Rep. 1990 (1989), followed in Searight v. Howell, 248 M 122, 809 P2d 588, 48 St. Rep. 370 (1991). See also St. v. Shodair Hosp., 273 M 155, 902 P2d 21, 52 St. Rep. 879 (1995).

"Liquor" to Include Table Wine — Fine for Possession of Untaxed Table Wine Affirmed: A $1,500 fine was properly assessed against an all-beverages licensee found in possession for sale of table wine upon which no Montana tax had been paid, because the wine came within the definition of "liquor" as the term was used in 16-6-301 prior to 1987 amendment. The District Court was constrained by this section to affirm the penalty, absent a showing of abuse of discretion by the Department of Revenue. (But see case note on Steer, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, under above catchline "Standards of Judicial Review".) Swan Corp. v. Dept. of Revenue, 232 M 210, 755 P2d 1388, 45 St. Rep. 998 (1988).

Findings of Fact Not Requested by Appellant — Standard of Review: An order transferring territory from one elementary district to another did not contain a finding that the four elements of a valid petition listed in 20-6-213 (now repealed) were met, nor did the order contain findings that the transfer was in the best interests of the residents of the affected territory. Although 2-4-623 requires that a final decision in a contested case must include findings of fact, the Supreme Court found substantial credible evidence supporting the transfer, including unanimous favorable testimony from residents of the affected territory. Additionally, the court noted that appellants failed to request findings of fact from the County Superintendent or the Board of County Commissioners and that such failure barred court reversal for lack of factfindings, pursuant to 2-4-704(2)(g). Bd. of Trustees, Clinton School District v. Bd. of Trustees, Bonner School District, 221 M 341, 719 P2d 1240, 43 St. Rep. 877 (1986).

Determining Property Value — Function of Administrative Body: In considering the decision of the State Tax Appeal Board relating to the method of determining the taxable valuation of the respondents' golf course, the District Court overstepped its bounds when it usurped the function of the administrative body and determined the value of the property. Dept. of Revenue v. Grouse Mtn. Dev., 218 M 353, 707 P2d 1113, 42 St. Rep. 1642 (1985), followed in Ostergren v. Dept. of Revenue, 2004 MT 30, 319 M 405, 85 P3d 738 (2004).

Employment Discrimination Complaint — Exhaustion of Administrative Remedies: Petitioner filed a sex discrimination complaint with the Montana Human Rights Commission. The Commission's hearings officer recommended that the petition be dismissed. The petitioner filed written exceptions to the hearings officer's finding that gender was a bona fide occupational qualification (BFOQ) but not to the findings of facts as to damages. The Commission found petitioner was unlawfully discriminated against and ordered payment of lost salary. Petitioner petitioned for judicial review on amount of damages, and school district petitioned for judicial review of BFOQ issue. The District Court denied the petition for judicial review of petitioner on the grounds that petition had failed to exhaust administrative remedies. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that petitioner did exhaust administrative remedies by raising two issues of error in his petition for judicial review even though only one of those issues was raised in petitioner's written exceptions to the administrative hearings officer's findings. The incorporation by reference of damages was sufficient to bring the issue before the Commission. The Supreme Court affirmed the District Court's reversal of the Commission on the issue of BFOQ and the District Court's order to vacate findings and dismiss the charge of sex discrimination. The Supreme Court held there was substantial credible evidence to support the District Court's finding of a substantial privacy issue making gender a BFOQ for the school guidance counselor position. Stone v. Belgrade School District, 217 M 309, 703 P2d 136, 41 St. Rep. 2436 (1984).

Reasonable Diligence in Seeking Interim Employment: Once the Board of Personnel Appeals has established the amount of backpay owed a wrongfully discharged employee, the burden is upon the employer to produce evidence to mitigate its liability. Here, the evidence of Young's job-hunting efforts and the detrimental effect of weather and economic conditions on the job market were uncontroverted. The City did not demonstrate how the available evidence could reasonably be interpreted as indicative of indifference, insincerity, or slothfulness on Young's part in his search for employment. There is substantial evidence to support the finding of the Board that Young had exercised reasonable diligence. Great Falls v. Young, 211 M 13, 686 P2d 185, 41 St. Rep. 1174 (1984).

Public Service Commission Methodology of Rate Structure:

The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) adopted a marginal cost method rate structure in determining how the increased rates were to be allocated to residential, business, irrigation, and industrial users. That order was reviewed by the District Court, which reversed the orders of the P.S.C. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court and reinstated the P.S.C. rate structure. The District Court substituted its own judgment for that of the P.S.C. While the District Court may disagree with the opinion of the experts the P.S.C. chose to follow, it is beyond the scope of review to reverse the P.S.C. on this ground. State ex rel. Dept. of Public Service Regulation v. Mont. Irrigators, Inc., 209 M 375, 680 P2d 963, 41 St. Rep. 768 (1984).

The Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) did not commit error in the application of the "rate of return" methodology, rather than the "market value" methodology, in determining the reasonableness of contract cost for the purchase of coal by the Montana Power Company (MPC) from a wholly-owned subsidiary. While the Supreme Court stated a preference for the "market value" methodology in Montana-Dakota Util. Co. v. Bollinger, 193 M 508, 632 P2d 1086 (1981), the court did not prohibit the P.S.C. from using a different methodology if the evidence warrants its use. In this case, the evidence introduced by the P.S.C. was not challenged by MPC. Rather, MPC seeks to do so for the first time on appeal. Limited review of the administrative record is appropriate, and that record supports the findings of the Commission. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 204 M 224, 665 P2d 1121, 40 St. Rep. 805 (1983).

Review of Human Rights Commission Decision: A District Court's choice of the substantial evidence standard as the proper standard of review of a decision of the Human Rights Commission was proper. Billings v. Mont. Human Rights Comm'n, 209 M 251, 681 P2d 33, 41 St. Rep. 688 (1984).

Selective Treatment of Record Prohibited: Wessell was terminated from her position with plaintiff. Wessell filed for unemployment benefits. Plaintiff alleged Wessell had been terminated for misconduct. A claims examiner determined there was no evidence of misconduct and approved Wessell's application. Plaintiff appealed, and a hearing appeals referee affirmed the award of benefits, finding Wessell had been terminated for reasons other than misconduct. The Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board) affirmed the referee. Plaintiff then appealed to District Court, which concluded that Wessell had been fired for misconduct and terminated her benefits. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that although testimony was sometimes conflicting and equivocal, there was substantial credible evidence to support the Board's determination. The District Court's determination could be supported only by selective treatment of certain aspects of the record. The court also had to weigh testimony and credibility differently from the referee and the Board. Because the Board's finding was not clearly erroneous in view of the whole record, the decision of the District Court was reversed. Slater v. Employment Sec. Div., 208 M 166, 676 P2d 220, 41 St. Rep. 243 (1984).

District Court's Finding of Fact Different From Agency's — Restatement by Judge of Unclear Agency Finding: The District Court's findings of fact appeared to conflict with the administrative agency's hearing examiner's findings of fact, thus exceeding the standards of judicial review set forth in this section, but a reading of the record disclosed that the hearing examiner's finding was not clearly stated. The District Court acted correctly when it merely translated the hearing examiner's finding of fact without substituting its judgment for that of the agency on the weight of the evidence on questions of fact. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984). See also St. v. Shodair Hosp., 273 M 155, 902 P2d 21, 52 St. Rep. 879 (1995).

Public Service Commission — Telephone Service Not Reasonably Adequate: The Public Service Commission's finding that service provided by telephone company was not reasonably adequate was supported by substantial credible evidence where 20 area residents testified to the poor quality of the service. Order stating that the service was not reasonably adequate was not overturned on appeal. Intermountain Tel. and Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 201 M 74, 651 P2d 1015, 39 St. Rep. 1962 (1982).

Agency Factual and Legal Decisions — Clarification of Standard of Review: The standard of review to be applied to findings of fact by an agency is whether they are "clearly erroneous". Factual findings will be upheld if supported by substantial credible evidence. If there is substantial credible evidence in the record, the findings are not "clearly erroneous". If the record supports the factual determinations of the agency, the reviewing court may not weigh the evidence but is bound by the agency's findings. Billings v. Billings Firefighters Local No. 521, 200 M 421, 651 P2d 627, 39 St. Rep. 1844 (1982), followed in V.K. Putnam, Inc. v. McFarlane, 239 M 300, 779 P2d 905, 46 St. Rep. 1699 (1989). See also Carruthers v. Bd. of Horseracing, 216 M 184, 700 P2d 179, 42 St. Rep. 729 (1985).

Interpretation of Employment Contract — No Error of Law: Claiming that ambiguities in his employment contract were interpreted incorrectly, an employee appealed the District Court's affirmance of a decision of the Labor Standards Division. Even when the contract was interpreted most strongly against the employer, the District Court order was neither clearly erroneous nor based on an error of law. Landon v. Labor Standards Div., 200 M 153, 649 P2d 1341, 39 St. Rep. 1641 (1982).

Certificate of Environmental Compatibility and Public Need: The Board of Natural Resources and Conservation (now Board of Environmental Review) issued a certificate of environmental compatibility and public need for the construction of a powerline, following completion of an environmental impact statement under the Montana Environmental Policy Act. The Supreme Court upheld the judgment of the District Court that there was substantial evidence supporting the Board's findings that a need for the powerline existed and that conservation measures and alternative energy sources would not reduce the need for the powerline so as to make its construction unnecessary. Mont. Wilderness Ass'n v. Bd. of Natural Resources and Conserv., 200 M 11, 648 P2d 734, 39 St. Rep. 1238 (1982).

Discrimination — Reference to Federal Law Proper: Petitioner filed an employment discrimination claim with the Human Rights Commission alleging that he was forced to resign from his position as a welder with respondent because of racial harassment. The hearing examiner found no discrimination, and petitioner appealed. The District Court and the Supreme Court affirmed the hearing examiner's determination and held that Title VII of the federal Civil Rights Act of 1964 and reference to pertinent federal case law in determining claims under Title 49 (MCA) are both useful and appropriate. Where the hearing examiner's findings were supported by substantial credible evidence and petitioner had failed to make a prima facie showing of discrimination, the court could not substitute its judgment and the hearing examiner's findings were upheld. Snell v. Montana-Dakota Util. Co., 198 M 56, 643 P2d 841, 39 St. Rep. 763 (1982).

Termination of Tenured Teacher — Standard of Review: A tenured teacher was not offered a new contract. The decision of the Board of Trustees not to rehire was upheld by the County Superintendent and State Superintendent. The Board of Trustees based its decision on findings that defendant demonstrated a lack of fitness for teaching in statements made to his junior high class to the effect that his "girlfriend" had to move out of his house because some people did not like his living arrangements. The Trustees also concluded that defendant demonstrated a lack of moral values by cohabiting in Polson with a female teacher, not his wife, which adversely affected his performance as a teacher. The County Superintendent found that although the discussion of abortion and display of fetuses were not in themselves sufficient grounds for dismissal, together with the resultant controversy, they were indicative of the adverse impact defendant's living arrangements were having on his teaching. The State Superintendent did not discuss the abortion or fetus findings. The Supreme Court found that the County Superintendent's findings allowed them to consider the issues. The District Court held that the finding that the cohabitation was a matter of public knowledge was clearly erroneous. The Supreme Court held that the County Superintendent was in the position of the trier of fact and so was able to hear and evaluate the evidence of the various witnesses. Where the evidence was conflicting and the County Superintendent and State Superintendent both found that the Trustees' reasons were supported by the evidence, the Supreme Court, applying the standard of 2-4-704, found the findings not clearly erroneous and reversed the District Court. Yanzick v. School District, 196 M 375, 641 P2d 431, 39 St. Rep. 191 (1982). See also Booth v. Argenbright, 225 M 272, 731 P2d 1318, 44 St. Rep. 227 (1987), and Trustees, Carbon County School District No. 28 v. Spivey, 262 M 513, 866 P2d 208, 50 St. Rep. 1664 (1993), in which the State Superintendent erred in reversing the County Superintendent's decision to terminate a teacher.

Human Rights Commission — District Court's Redetermination of Facts Held Improper: Upon reviewing a decision of the Human Rights Commission, which found the complainant had been subject to employment discrimination by a county welfare department, the District Court erred in redetermining the credibility of witnesses who appeared before the Commission and the weight given to evidence by the Commission. The effect of 2-4-704 is to limit a reviewing District Court to a determination of whether or not substantial evidence exists to support the agency decision. Conflicts in the evidence regarding the complainants prima facie case were decided in favor of the complainant by the Commission. An attempt to review and redecide these conflicts would exceed the statutory authority of the District Court. Martinez v. Yellowstone County Welfare Dept., 192 M 42, 626 P2d 242, 38 St. Rep. 474 (1981).

Determination of Employment Status — Administrative Finding Upheld: In determining whether salesmen for a livestock product manufacturer were independent contractors and therefore exempt from the unemployment compensation tax, the court will uphold an administrative agency's finding where there is sufficient credible evidence in the record to support its holding. Where there are several factors weighing on both sides of the issue, the court will look to 39-51-203(4)(c) as controlling. This subsection concerns whether an individual is customarily engaged in an independently established trade, occupation, profession, or business. Here, the court found that the salesmen had no business apart from their relationship with the company, were dependent upon the company for their employment, had no authority to hire subordinates, had no liability for a peremptory termination of their relationship, and therefore found the salesmen to be employees rather than independent contractors. Standard Chem. Mfg. Co. v. Employment Security Div., 185 M 241, 605 P2d 610 (1980).

Workers' Compensation — Award Justified:

The workers' compensation court did not err in affirming the Workers' Compensation Division order that awarded compensation for permanent total disability under 39-71-116 since there was sufficient evidence to justify the award. Claimant was not required to make a reasonable effort to find regular employment; it was only necessary that the Division find that he had no reasonable prospect of finding regular employment. Brurud v. Judge Moving & Storage, Inc., 172 M 249, 563 P2d 558 (1977), followed in Larson v. Cigna Ins. Co., 276 M 283, 915 P2d 863, 53 St. Rep. 394 (1996).

After considering law and evidence on temporary disability, the holding of workers' compensation court refusing to extend temporary total disability was upheld. Substantial rights were not denied plaintiff because of the administrative findings. McAlear v. McKee, 171 M 462, 558 P2d 1134 (1976).

Welfare Assistance — Unsolicited Opinion: In an appeal from an order of District Court finding respondents eligible for county medical assistance, the Supreme Court found that evidence in the form of an unsolicited opinion voiced by an interested party, with no foundation, did not constitute substantial evidence which would render the decision clearly erroneous. Wheatland County v. Bleeker, 175 M 478, 575 P2d 48 (1978).

No Evidence on One Allegation — Substantial Rights Not Prejudiced: An application for a certificate of authorization to organize a new Montana bank was sufficient to give respondent board justification to proceed with the hearing and appellant was not prejudiced, even if the application omitted evidence on one point as alleged. W. Bank of Billings v. St. Banking Bd., 174 M 331, 570 P2d 1115 (1977).

Findings Adequate Based on Reasonable Inferences — Wage Claim: Worksheet used to compute wage claim was an adequate "finding". Inferences as to hours worked were reasonable when employer offered no evidence or records, and proof was reliable, probative, and substantial. Garsjo v. Dept. of Labor & Industry, 172 M 182, 562 P2d 473 (1977), followed in America's Best Contractors, Inc. v. Singh, 2014 MT 70, 374 Mont. 254, 321 P.3d 95.

LACK OF SUBSTANTIAL CREDIBLE EVIDENCE CLEARLY ERRONEOUS

Failure of Licensing Board to Overcome Presumption That License Renewal Timely Mailed and Received: Dr. Baldwin's chiropractor license renewal was due September 1, and the renewal packet was mailed to the Board of Chiropractors on August 17, but the Board never received it. After seeing two patients on September 2, the doctor called the Board to inquire whether the license had been reissued. The doctor was instructed to stop seeing patients because the license had not been renewed. The doctor was subsequently found to have engaged in unprofessional conduct for practicing without a license and placed on probation for 1 year, and a private letter of reprimand was placed in the doctor's license file. The doctor appealed the decision, but the District Court denied the request to reverse the decision. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The Board did not dispute that the packet was mailed on August 17, but simply asserted that the packet was not received without offering any additional evidence of nonreceipt. Absent additional evidence, the Board failed to overcome the rebuttable presumption in 26-1-602(24) that a letter duly directed and mailed was received in the regular course of the mail. The District Court erred in affirming the Board's decision that the doctor failed to renew the license on time and practiced without a license. Baldwin v. Bd. of Chiropractors, 2003 MT 306, 318 M 188, 79 P3d 810 (2003).

Improperly Working Commission for Human Rights Fax Machine Rendering Attempt to File Appeal Brief Untimely — Commission's Dismissal of Appeal Clearly Erroneous: Sprow contended that CenTech Corporation (CenTech) discriminated against her on the basis of gender, and filed a complaint with the Department of Labor and Industry. A contested case hearing was held, and the Department found in Sprow's favor. CenTech filed a timely notice of appeal with the Commission for Human Rights. The appeal brief was due May 15, 2000. CenTech attempted to fax the brief to the Commission on that date, but because of communication errors with the Commission's fax machine, only one page of the brief was received by the Commission. CenTech attempted to fax the brief again the next day, but again the fax equipment was not functioning. A CenTech representative contacted the Commission and was told that the communication error was likely due to the long-distance connection, so CenTech mailed the brief instead, but it was received 2 days after the filing deadline. Nevertheless, the Commission declined to consider CenTech's brief because it was considered untimely, and maintained that the Commission was not responsible for communication errors. CenTech appealed to District Court, and the court upheld the Commission's findings that numerous other faxes were received on May 15 and that the fax machine was working properly. The court concluded that by waiting until "almost literally the last minute" to file the brief, CenTech assumed the risk associated with the late filing and today's technology. CenTech appealed, and the Supreme Court reversed. Substantial evidence indicated that CenTech attempted to fax the entire brief within the allotted time but was prevented from doing so because of communication errors with the Commission's own fax machine. Thus, the District Court erred in holding that the Commission's findings and conclusions were not clearly erroneous in view of the reliable, probative, and substantial evidence on the record. Further, Commission regulations allow the suspension, waiver, or modification of its rules to prevent manifest injustice to a party, ensure a fair hearing, or afford substantial justice. Failure to do so in this case unreasonably elevated form over substance and prejudiced CenTech. CenTech did not have to assume the risk of a fax malfunction, and given its good faith effort to file the brief, justice required that its attempt be honored. CenTech Corp. v. Sprow, 2001 MT 298, 307 M 481, 38 P3d 812 (2001).

Agency Interpretation Held Clearly Erroneous: The Department of Natural Resources and Conservation concluded that the defendants were engaged in recreational use of state lands. The Supreme Court upheld the District Court's decision that noted that the hearings examiner had acknowledged that no elk or deer had been killed, shot at, or pursued on leased state land by the defendants and therefore reversed the hearings examiner's decision as being based upon faulty reasoning, conjecture, and speculation. Weitz v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 284 M 130, 943 P2d 990, 54 St. Rep. 807 (1997).

Court Review and Reversal of School Board Decision Revoking Teacher's Certificate Proper: The District Court reviewed the entire record of proceedings by a hearings examiner that was relied on by a school board to revoke the certificate of a teacher accused of sexual misconduct and properly reversed the certificate revocation because: (1) the hearings examiner improperly allowed testimony of an expert concerning general statements about the behavior of victims of sexual abuse; (2) the hearings examiner's findings of sexual abuse were not supported by substantial evidence; (3) when the expert's testimony was properly disregarded, other findings by the hearings examiner did not support a conclusion that the teacher was not of good moral and professional character; and (4) the hearings examiner's findings and conclusions contained sufficient independent statements from which the court could reverse the school board's decision without requiring new findings and conclusions from the record. In re Renewal of Teaching Certificate of Thompson, 270 M 419, 893 P2d 301, 52 St. Rep. 200 (1995).

Ambiguous Statutory Interpretation — Agency Interpretation Rejected as Leading to Absurd Results: Where the grandfather clause for licensure of used video poker machines was found susceptible to two interpretations and the agency implementing the statute chose an interpretation that would lead to absurd results, rejection by the District Court of the agency interpretation was proper. Further, evidence gleaned by court examination of the legislative history to determine legislative intent was properly admitted when the intent could not be determined from the statutory language. Mont. Tavern Ass'n v. St., 224 M 258, 729 P2d 1310, 43 St. Rep. 2180 (1986).

Appellant's Burden of Showing Prejudice: Appellant has the burden of showing prejudice from a clearly erroneous decision. Carruthers v. Bd. of Horse Racing, 216 M 184, 700 P2d 179, 42 St. Rep. 729 (1985), followed in Terry v. Bd. of Regents 220 M 214, 714 P2d 151, 43 St. Rep. 304 (1986).

Erroneous Reversal of Department Order — Wage Claim: Chagnon brought a wage claim against the Hardy Construction Company before the Department of Labor and Industry. A hearing was held, after which the Department dismissed the claim. On judicial review, the District Court reversed the Department and awarded wages, penalties, costs, and attorney fees. On appeal, the Supreme Court found that there was sufficient evidence before the hearings officer to support his dismissal of the claim. The District Court committed error in reversing the Department order. The District Court cannot properly substitute its own judgment for that of the agency. Chagnon v. Hardy Constr. Co., 208 M 420, 680 P2d 932, 41 St. Rep. 441 (1984). See also Foster v. Comm'r of Labor & Indus., 225 M 246, 731 P2d 1313, 44 St. Rep. 207 (1987).

Incorrect Legal Conclusion in Agency's Finding of Fact — Finding "Clearly Erroneous": An agency's hearing examiner's finding of fact contained legal conclusions implicit in the findings. In determining whether the District Court erred in modifying the finding, the Supreme Court must have a definite and firm conviction that a mistake has been made. Although there is evidence to support the finding, it must also have a reasonable basis in law; if as a matter of law the legal conclusions are incorrect, the findings are "clearly erroneous" and may be modified as provided in this section. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

Unfair Labor — Merit Increase Not to Preclude Consideration of Prior Work History: Carlson, an animal warden employed by defendant, was terminated allegedly because of insubordination and noncooperation resulting from an incident involving a schnauzer and because of earlier noncooperation. Carlson filed an unfair labor practice complaint with the Board of Personnel Appeals (BPA) alleging that the actual reason for her termination was her union activity. BPA ruled in favor of Carlson and ordered her reinstated with backpay. On appeal, the District Court reversed on the basis of unlawful procedure, contending that BPA failed to consider Carlson's conduct prior to the time that she received a merit increase in salary. The District Court's position was correct, and BPA was instructed to consider evidence of events prior to the merit increase on remand. The fact of a merit increase does not cause prior work history to vanish; it remains relative and to ignore it is to place an unwarranted artificial limitation on the employer's review process. Bd. of Personnel Appeals v. Billings, 199 M 302, 648 P2d 1169, 39 St. Rep. 1414 (1982).

Substantial Credible Evidence Supporting Claimant: Where the only credible substantial evidence in the entire record concerning causation and injury supports the claimant, the findings, conclusions, and judgment of the workers' compensation court to the contrary are not supported by the record. Termination of claimant's benefits was improper, and the decision was reversed. Hume v. St. Regis Paper Co., 187 M 53, 608 P2d 1063 (1980).

Case Notes

Order for Remand Considered Final Appealable Order: The District Court reviewed plaintiff's utility rate case and concluded that the rate set by the Public Service Commission (PSC) was unreasonable and ordered that the case be remanded to the PSC to set a new rate that took avoided cost data into consideration. The PSC appealed, but plaintiff contended that the remand was an interlocutory order that did not finally decide the case and was thus unappealable. The Supreme Court disagreed. Section 2-4-702 provides for judicial review of an agency decision in a contested case, and to force the PSC to recalculate the rate in accordance with the District Court's remand instructions would have undermined the PSC's right to appeal under 2-4-711. Therefore, the remand order was considered final for purposes of appeal by the PSC. Whitehall Wind, LLC v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2010 MT 2, 355 Mont. 15, 223 P.3d 907.

Finality of Costs Considered Overarching Intent of Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act — PSC Denial of System That Would Allow Charging Future Transition Costs Correct Interpretation of Act: As part of the deregulation process pursuant to the Electric Utility Industry Restructuring and Customer Choice Act, the Montana Power Company (MPC) submitted a transition cost recovery plan to the Public Service Commission (PSC) that would have allowed the future recovery of certain transition costs as they became known over a period of 25 to 30 years. The PSC ordered MPC to amend its transition plan to specifically identify and demonstrate all transition costs that it sought to recover and not to rely on a future tracking mechanism. Upon judicial review, the District Court ordered the PSC to allow the tracking system. The Supreme Court was subsequently asked to determine whether the PSC interpretation of the Act was correct. The court held that MPC's proposed cost-tracking method, whereby some, but not all, transition costs would be unknown and therefore subject to the caprice of future events, was entirely inconsistent with the principle of finality and with statutory mandates in the Act placed on the PSC that all costs be determined to be: (1) verifiable; (2) unrecoverable; (3) affirmatively shown; (4) reasonably mitigated; (5) reasonably demonstrable; (6) reduced to a net sum; and (7) reduced to an amount in a final order. The principle of finality was also expressed in 69-8-211 (now repealed), which declared that PSC approval of transition costs, as well as the subsequent collection of those costs through transition charges, was a settlement of all transition costs claimed by a public utility. This finality was the overarching intent of the Act, in that the needs of consumers to effectively plan today takes precedence over precise cost analysis extending for years or even decades into the future. It is the PSC that assumes the role of arbiter in determining and fixing a utility's transition costs, if any, that will be discharged at the consumers' expense. Thus, the PSC's interpretation of the Act was correct, and the District Court's mandate requiring the PSC to allow the use of trackers would require the PSC to bend if not violate the law and could not be sustained. The District Court was reversed, and the PSC order was reinstated. Mont. Power Co. v. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2001 MT 102, 305 M 260, 26 P3d 91 (2001).

P.S.C. Appeal Untimely — Standing of Attorney General to Appeal P.S.C. Order: The Montana Power Company (M.P.C.) applied to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) for a rate increase of over $96.3 million. The P.S.C. granted only $4.1 million and denied in toto M.P.C.'s request to recover costs associated with Colstrip Unit 3. The M.P.C. appealed to District Court for review under 2-4-701. The judge reversed the P.S.C. order. The Attorney General filed notice of appeal. More than 60 days after the judge's order was entered, the P.S.C. also filed notice of appeal. The M.P.C. filed a motion to dismiss the appeal of the Attorney General for lack of standing and the appeal of the P.S.C. as untimely. The Supreme Court granted the motion, holding that the Attorney General had no standing to represent the state on appeal since it was not an aggrieved party or a party to the proceedings before the District Court and because, in his official capacity, the Attorney General may not appeal a decision that is within the discretion of the P.S.C. as a party to the action. The appeal of the P.S.C. was untimely, although within 7 days of the notice of appeal filed by the Attorney General. The latter appeal being invalid, the P.S.C. appeal would have to fall within the 60-day rule. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 218 M 471, 709 P2d 995, 42 St. Rep. 1750 (1985).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 400, L. 1993, provided: "WHEREAS, negotiated rulemaking is a process that reflects an agency's recognition that regulatory objectives, consistent with legislative directives, can be accomplished in more than one way; and

WHEREAS, negotiated rulemaking brings together the regulating agency and regulated and other interested parties during the development of a rule to negotiate and resolve potential problems with the rulemaking in order to develop a rule acceptable to all parties; and

WHEREAS, negotiated rulemaking may improve the substance of a proposed rule, shorten the length of time necessary to implement a final rule, and reduce litigation, thereby effectuating legislative purposes and aiding in the prompt delivery of governmental services; and

WHEREAS, federal agencies and other states have extensive experience with and success at negotiating rulemaking."

Individual Privacy Outweighed by Public's Right to Know — Position of Public Trust: The respondents sought information under the public's constitutional right to know from the petitioner school district concerning an individual who held a position of public trust. The petitioner sought judicial review of the documents to be released. The District Court conducted an in camera review, ruling that the public's right to know outweighed the individual's privacy interests for several documents in the individual's personnel file. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed, holding that for a person occupying a position of public trust, there is no blanket exemption from the public's right to know simply because the documents are contained in a personnel file. Case Notes

Dissemination of Incomplete Document Used to Make Decision — Right to Participate Entails Complying With Right to Know: A school district assembled a group of people to research and advise the district on the closure of schools, and a member of the group summarized the closure research information on a computer-generated spreadsheet and delivered various versions of the spreadsheet to various people and groups. The version given the school district contained a system rating the schools and explaining the rating system, but the group of parents that plaintiff belonged to was given a version not containing the rating system when a member of the group requested a copy. The school district told the group that a spreadsheet comparing the schools did not exist. The spreadsheet was a document of a public body subject to public inspection prior to the time that the school district's board met and used the spreadsheet to help determine which schools to close. The school district violated plaintiff's right to examine public documents. At a minimum, the "reasonable opportunity" standard articulated in Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., and 2-3-111 for the right to participate demands compliance with the right to know contained in Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const. When the school district violated plaintiff's right to know, it reduced what should have been a genuine interchange into a mere formality. Bryan could and did voice her opinion to the school district, but did so without the ratings information contained on the version of the spreadsheet used by the school district. Therefore, the school district also violated her Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., right of participation. The Supreme Court stated that this violation tainted the entire process from start to finish and ruled that the school district's closure decision was void. The court stated that on remand, the school district should allow plaintiff an opportunity to rebut the closure decision and should then reexamine the decision and affirm or modify it. Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002).

Standing of Parent When Information on Proposed School Closure Requested by Another: School district parents, including Bryan, worked in concert to rebut a school closure recommendation, delegating duties among themselves. Schroeder, but not Bryan, requested information from the school authorities, which was not received. Bryan sued as a result of the school closure. That Bryan did not personally request the information did not prevent her from having standing to claim a violation of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const. Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002).

Title Insurer Not Obligated to Search City Engineer or Water Department Records — Public Records as Properly Recorded Documents — Reasonable Expectations Doctrine Inapplicable: The Millers sought to hold a title insurance company responsible for costs involved in relocating a neighbor's water and sewer lines that were discovered on the property. The lines were of record with the city engineer and the water department, but their existence was not recorded in the chain of title. The title insurance policy defined public records as "those records which by law impart constructive notice of matters relating to said land". The Supreme Court held that the definition was unambiguous and clearly related to records filed and docketed with the County Clerk and Recorder because it was proper recordation that imparted constructive notice of matters relating to the property. Nothing in Montana recordation law required the title insurer to search city engineer or water department records. For the same reason, the Millers' attempt to apply the reasonable expectations doctrine also failed because the policy did not insure against loss or damage by reason of "easements, or claims of easements, not shown by the public records". Miller v. Title Ins. Co. of Minn., 1999 MT 230, 296 M 115, 987 P2d 1151, 56 St. Rep. 908 (1999). See also Am. Family Mut. Ins. Co. v. National Honor Society Records Not "Documents of Public Body" — Writ of Mandate Properly Denied: The father of a high school student sought a writ of mandate to obtain names and rankings of teachers who evaluated the student and whose low rankings prevented the student from being admitted into the National Honor Society. The Supreme Court held that because the teachers acted voluntarily and the school did not keep records related to Honor Society membership, the documents sought were not "documents of a public body" as provided in the Montana Constitution. Therefore, the District Court's denial of the writ of mandate was correct. Becky v. Butte-Silver Bow School District No. 1, 274 M 131, 906 P2d 193, 52 St. Rep. 1154 (1995).

Public Hearing — Public Document: Plaintiffs filed a libel action against the state of Montana, its agents, and its agencies for alleged libelous statements published in various Montana newspapers. The newspaper articles were based on a letter written by a state employee and submitted into evidence in a relicensure hearing. The District Court granted summary judgment for defendants, and the Supreme Court affirmed. When the letter was submitted into evidence in a public hearing, it became a public writing. All statements made by defendants were communications made in the proper discharge of their official duties. Plaintiffs did not sustain their burden of proof that genuine issues of material fact existed to be tried; therefore, defendants were entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law. Denny Driscoll Boys Home v. St., 227 M 177, 737 P2d 1150, 44 St. Rep. 991 (1987).

Preliminary Court Pleadings — Public's Right to Know: In a defamation case, an affirmative defense based on the privilege under 27-1-804(4) extends to newspaper accounts of preliminary pleadings. The Supreme Court acknowledged that the public has a right to know what happens in the judicial system, including the filing of civil suits. Cox v. Lee Enterprises, Inc., 222 M 527, 723 P2d 238, 43 St. Rep. 1476 (1986), followed, with respect to Commission on Practice investigation, in Lence v. Hagadone Inv., 258 M 433, 853 P2d 1230, 50 St. Rep. 601 (1993).

Land Records: A certified copy of portions of the minutes of the State Board of Land Commissioners relating to lands involved in a boundary action and reciting, in effect, that the federal government survey thereof had been incorrectly made, that the Board had ordered a resurvey by the state engineer, that adjustments were made to correct acreage inaccuracies in outstanding land contracts, etc., was admissible as an exhibit under 2-6-101 (now repealed) and 93-1001-5, R.C.M. 1947 (2-6-102, now repealed), as copies of public records. Nemitz v. Reckards, 98 M 229, 38 P2d 980 (1934).

Requirement for Report: A public officer cannot by incorporating in a report something the law does not require to be incorporated therein make the writing admissible in evidence as a public writing. St. v. Yegen, 74 M 126, 238 P 603 (1925), distinguished in St. v. Ray, 88 M 436, 294 P 368 (1930).

Verification of Reports: Reports made to the State Bank Examiner (now State Banking Board, Department of Administration) by his deputies as to a private bank's financial condition, not verified or signed, were not admissible in evidence in a prosecution of the owner for receiving deposits while the bank was insolvent as public writings in the absence of proof of their contents. St. v. Yegen, 74 M 126, 238 P 603 (1925).

Retirees of Teachers' Retirement System — Disclosure of Benefits: The individual rights of privacy in the amounts of retirement benefits of members of the Montana Teachers' Retirement System do not clearly exceed the public's right to know. Retirement benefits are paid with public funds and, therefore, disclosure is subject to the public's interest in how pension funds are calculated and how taxpayer funds are spent. 54 A.G. Op. 3 (2011).

Lists of Destroyed Personal Property Not Subject to Disclosure: Lists of destroyed personal property, generated by an individual for no governmental function or purpose and not as the result of the fulfillment of a public employee's duty or for documenting government business, do not constitute public writings or records subject to disclosure laws. 45 A.G. Op. 17 (1993).

Buyer's Affidavit and Certification Subject to Public Disclosure: The buyer's affidavit and certification submitted to the Board of Housing pursuant to the mortgage credit certificate program is subject to public disclosure. 43 A.G. Op. 25 (1989).

Property Record Cards — Public Inspection: The Department of Revenue may not withhold property record cards from public inspection. Although property record cards might not be "public writings", 2-6-102 (now repealed, similar provision in 2-6-1003), concerning "public writings", is not controlling with respect to questions of public access. 39 A.G. Case Notes

Request for Release of Student's Disciplinary Records — Remand to Determine Whether Exception Under FERPA Applies: The District Court ordered the defendant, a university system, to release certain student disciplinary records to the plaintiff, an out-of-state journalist. The defendant appealed, arguing that the university system was prohibited from releasing the records under the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (FERPA) and 20-25-515. The plaintiff contended that the requested information could be provided under an exception to FERPA. The Supreme Court concluded that it was unable to determine whether the exception applied and remanded the matter for the District Court to perform an in camera review of the documents to determine whether they fell under the FERPA exception and whether the student's right to privacy exceeded the public's right to know. Krakauer v. St. Comm'r of Higher Educ., 2016 MT 230, 384 Mont. 527, 381 P.3d 524.

Student's Right to Privacy Against Public Right to Know — Remand for In Camera Inspection of Records and Weighing of Each Right: The District Court ordered the defendant, a university system, to release a certain student's disciplinary records to the plaintiff, an out-of-state journalist. On appeal, the defendant argued that the District Court erred in finding that the student did not have a reasonable expectation of privacy for his redacted disciplinary records. The Supreme Court ruled that the District Court should have conducted an in camera inspection of the records and remanded to have the District Court consider what records, if any, could be released after weighing the constitutional rights against each other. Krakauer v. St. Comm'r of Higher Educ., 2016 MT 230, 384 Mont. 527, 381 P.3d 524.

Reasonable Expectation of Privacy in City Employee Identity in Disciplinary Matters: The defendant city of Billings appealed the District Court's order that the identity of five city employees who were disciplined for viewing pornography on their work computers be released to the plaintiff newspaper. The Supreme Court reversed. The employees had an actual or subjective expectation of privacy regarding their identities in internal disciplinary matters that society would be willing to accept as reasonable because the employees were not in positions of public trust and the misconduct involved did not violate a duty requiring a high level of public trust, and the employees' reasonable expectation of privacy in the disciplinary action outweighed the limited merits of public disclosure. Billings Gazette v. Billings, 2013 MT 334, 372 Mont. 409, 313 P.3d 129.

Publicly Filed Floodplain Study Not Considered Trade Secret — Denial of Injunction to Prohibit Copying of Study Proper: Plaintiff conducted a floodplain study that was filed with the city of Kalispell as part of a property development permit request. Owners of nearby property sought to review and copy the study. The city allowed review of the study, but the request for a copy was denied without permission of plaintiff. Plaintiff denied the copy request and sought an injunction to prohibit the city from providing copies of the study, but the request for an injunction was denied, so plaintiff appealed, citing trade secrets and copyright protection. The Supreme Court noted that a trade secret must be the subject of reasonable efforts to maintain its secrecy. However, the study document was readily ascertainable by anyone who wished to view it, so plaintiff could not argue that the study was a confidential trade secret. Further, plaintiff failed to show that the contemplated use of the data would violate copyright law. Last, plaintiff argued that the District Court failed to engage in the constitutional balancing analysis required in 2-6-102 (now repealed, similar provision in 2-6-1003), but the Supreme Court held that plaintiff did not establish any individual privacy or property interest that could be balanced against the merits of public disclosure. Thus, denial of the injunction request was affirmed. Billmayer v. Kalispell, 2007 MT 116, 337 M 242, 160 P3d 869 (2007).

Release of Redacted Student Disciplinary Records Not Violative of Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act: A Cut Bank newspaper sought redacted student disciplinary records related to school board actions following a BB gun incident at a local school. The District Court held that the federal Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 (FERPA), 20 U.S.C. 1232(g), prohibited the school board from releasing the names of the students, any violations committed, and any action imposed without the consent of the students and their parents. The Supreme Court disagreed. The newspaper specifically requested that students' names be redacted from the disciplinary records and thus sought no information that would personally identify any students involved. Because FERPA does not prohibit disclosure of records that do not reveal personally identifying information, there was no basis under FERPA for the board's refusal to release the redacted public documents to the newspaper, nor was the newspaper's request clearly outweighed by any privacy interest at issue. The newspaper was therefore entitled to a redacted copy of the board's disciplinary records regarding disciplinary measures imposed on the students, and the District Court was reversed. Bd. of Trustees, Cut Bank Pub. Schools v. Cut Bank Pioneer Press, 2007 MT 115, 337 M 229, 160 P3d 482 (2007).

Public Service Commission Rules Creating Impermissible Presumption of Confidentiality in Trade Secrets: Several media organizations sought access to power company documents filed with the Public Service Commission. Applying its administrative rules, the Commission evaluated the power company's claims of confidentiality against basic trade secret law, found that the company had met the initial burden of establishing trade secrets, and concluded that because the media had presented no evidence or argument to the contrary, the company information was entitled to constitutional protection as a matter of law. The Supreme Court disagreed. To the extent that the Commission's rules relied on mere company representations that the information contained trade secrets, the Commission unconstitutionally shifted the initial burden of proof to the public to challenge the confidentiality claims, creating a presumption of confidentiality that directly conflicted with the public's right to view public records and the Commission's duty to make its records available to the public. The court held that a nonhuman entity seeking protective measures for alleged confidential materials filed with a governmental regulating agency must support its claim with a supporting affidavit making a prima facie showing that the materials constitute property rights that are protected by due process. Further, the showing must be more than conclusory and specific enough for the Commission, any objecting parties, and reviewing authorities to clearly understand the nature and basis of the confidentiality claim. The agency then must review the materials at the time of filing, in accordance with 30-14-402(4)(b) and supporting case law, and make an independent determination whether the materials are in fact property rights entitled to due process protection. To the extent that Commission rules required less, the court directed revision of Commission rules to comport with this holding. Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Trade Secrets — When to Be Disclosed and to Whom — Protectable Property: A telephone utility was required to disclose trade secrets to the Public Service Commission (PSC) to aid in a decision on its rate increase request. The utility was entitled to a protective order preventing access to the secrets by the general public, but the Montana Consumer Counsel and any citizen whose interest related to the ratemaking function of the PSC could have access to the information. Use or disclosure of the trade secrets except for purposes of the ratemaking proceeding was prohibited. Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 194 M 277, 634 P2d 181, 38 St. Rep. 1479 (1981). Mtn. States and its progeny were overruled to the extent that those decisions relied on the constitutional balancing test of the right to individual privacy against the public's right to examine documents or observe governmental deliberations as a basis of protecting trade secrets and other confidential proprietary information of nonhuman entities in Great Falls Tribune v. Mont. Pub. Serv. Comm'n, 2003 MT 359, 319 M 38, 82 P3d 876 (2003).

Dissemination of Incomplete Document Used to Make Decision — Right to Participate Entails Complying With Right to Know: A school district assembled a group of people to research and advise the district on the closure of schools, and a member of the group summarized the closure research information on a computer-generated spreadsheet and delivered various versions of the spreadsheet to various people and groups. The version given the school district contained a system rating the schools and explaining the rating system, but the group of parents that plaintiff belonged to was given a version not containing the rating system when a member of the group requested a copy. The school district told the group that a spreadsheet comparing the schools did not exist. The spreadsheet was a document of a public body subject to public inspection prior to the time that the school district's board met and used the spreadsheet to help determine which schools to close. The school district violated plaintiff's right to examine public documents. At a minimum, the "reasonable opportunity" standard articulated in Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., and 2-3-111 for the right to participate demands compliance with the right to know contained in Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const. When the school district violated plaintiff's right to know, it reduced what should have been a genuine interchange into a mere formality. Bryan could and did voice her opinion to the school district, but did so without the ratings information contained on the version of the spreadsheet used by the school district. Therefore, the school district also violated her Art. II, sec. 8, Mont. Const., right of participation. The Supreme Court stated that this violation tainted the entire process from start to finish and ruled that the school district's closure decision was void. The court stated that on remand, the school district should allow plaintiff an opportunity to rebut the closure decision and should then reexamine the decision and affirm or modify it. Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002).

Standing of Parent When Information on Proposed School Closure Requested by Another: School district parents, including Bryan, worked in concert to rebut a school closure recommendation, delegating duties among themselves. Schroeder, but not Bryan, requested information from the school authorities, which was not received. Bryan sued as a result of the school closure. That Bryan did not personally request the information did not prevent her from having standing to claim a violation of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const. Bryan v. Yellowstone County Elementary School District No. 2, 2002 MT 264, 312 M 257, 60 P3d 381 (2002).

Unconstitutionality of Department of Revenue Rule Concerning Confidentiality of Coal Severance Tax Information: Plaintiffs sought information regarding coal severance tax payments that had been routinely supplied to the Department of Revenue by coal mine operators prior to adoption of ARM 42.2.701 (now repealed), which declared certain information, such as tax returns that taxpayers are required to submit to the Department and Department-prepared documents that identify taxpayers, to be confidential. Plaintiffs challenged the rule on grounds that it violated constitutional and statutory rights to public information. The Department asserted that the rule was adopted to protect taxpayers' constitutional right to privacy and to inform the public of the Department's procedures regarding the confidentiality of tax information. The District Court found that the rule was adopted after balancing the public's right to know with the coal producers' right to privacy and that the producers had a reasonable and ongoing expectation of privacy that outweighed the public's right to know. On appeal, the Supreme Court disagreed, finding ARM 42.2.701 (now repealed) unconstitutional on its face. The rule presumes a wholesale constitutionally protected right to privacy for all taxpayers that prevails over public disclosure without balancing the taxpayers' right to privacy with the public's right to know. Prior to adoption of the rule, coal producers did not have an actual or subjective expectation of privacy in revenue information submitted to the Department. After the rule was adopted, the producers could assert a subjective expectation of privacy. However, based on a facially unconstitutional rule, the expectation was not one society would be willing to recognize as reasonable, especially when the information had been routinely available for nearly 20 years before ARM 42.2.701 (now repealed) was adopted. Neither prong of the two-part privacy test in Great Falls Tribune Co., Inc. v. Day, 1998 MT 133, 289 M 155, 959 P2d 508 (1998), having been met, a constitutionally protected privacy interest in the information was ruled out. Assoc. Press, Inc. v. Dept. of Revenue, 2000 MT 160, 300 M 233, 4 P3d 5, 57 St. Rep. 657 (2000).

Economic Advantage Inadequate Reason for Denial of Public Right to Observe Government Deliberations in Corrections Vendor Process: A newspaper company sought to restrain the Department of Corrections from excluding the public from meetings of the committee that reviewed proposals for operating private prison facilities. The District Court held that the public had no right to observe the negotiation phase of the committee's work, but that once negotiations were completed, the process by which the conclusions were arrived at must be open to public observation. Both parties appealed. The Supreme Court noted that as part of an Executive Branch agency, the Department and the committee were considered governmental bodies pursuant to 2-15-104 for purposes of procurement and that under the constitutional right to know, proposals submitted by private vendors were considered documents of a public body or agency that, under 2-6-102 (now repealed, similar provision in 2-6-1003), the public has a right to inspect. Under the two-part test in Missoulian v. Bd. of Regents, 207 M 513, 675 P2d 962 (1984), the only exception to the constitutional provision arises when the demand of individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure. The state contended that the meetings at issue were closed for economic advantage, but economic advantage is neither a privacy interest nor a sufficient reason for denying the public the opportunity to observe deliberations of public bodies or to examine public documents, including proposals submitted to the public body by a vendor, unless the proposal concerns a privacy interest involving legitimate trade secrets or individual safety. A public agency's desire for privacy does not provide an exception to the public's constitutional right to observe its government at work. To the extent that provisions in 18-4-304 or ARM 2.5.602 require exclusion of the public from the competitive bid process, those provisions are unconstitutional and unenforceable. Great Falls Tribune Co., Inc. v. Day, 1998 MT 133, 289 M 155, 959 P2d 508, 55 St. Rep. 524 (1998), following Mtn. States Tel. & Tel. Co. v. National Honor Society Records Not "Documents of Public Body" — Writ of Mandate Properly Denied: The father of a high school student sought a writ of mandate to obtain names and rankings of teachers who evaluated the student and whose low rankings prevented the student from being admitted into the National Honor Society. The Supreme Court held that because the teachers acted voluntarily and the school did not keep records related to Honor Society membership, the documents sought were not "documents of a public body" as provided in the Montana Constitution. Therefore, the District Court's denial of the writ of mandate was correct. Becky v. Butte-Silver Bow School District No. 1, 274 M 131, 906 P2d 193, 52 St. Rep. 1154 (1995).

Affidavit — Public Document: The provisions of Art. II, sec. 9, Mont. Const., apply to local government. The Clerk of the District Court is an office of local government. Request of Law Enforcement Records for School Project — Information Beyond Public Reach: The District Court properly refused the request of a student who sought Sheriff's department information for a school project. Information requested included: (1) records of the daily log of phone calls; (2) case files of criminal investigations; (3) preemployment investigation reports; and (4) lists of arrested persons. Persons involved had an actual expectation of privacy, and the interests of society were furthered by recognition of the privacy interest as reasonable. The student had the right to view and record statistical information pursuant to 44-5-103, but the requested information was protected by the Montana Constitution and the Montana Criminal Justice Information Act of 1979 and was beyond the reach of the public sector. Engrav v. Cragun, 236 M 260, 769 P2d 1224, 46 St. Rep. 344 (1989).

Selective Service Records: Evidence introduced by the state to show that defendant was over 18 years of age in the form of a record of the office of the local selective service board required to be kept by law, showing that defendant, a resident of another state the Governor of which held possession of the original, was registered under the Federal Service Act, was admissible under 2-6-102 (now repealed, similar provision in 2-6-1003) and section 93-1001-2, R.C.M. 1947 (2-6-101, now repealed, similar provision in 2-6-1002), there having been no objection made that the record related to a person other than defendant. Referendum Petitions: Whether referendum petitions delivered to Clerk and Recorder for certification to Secretary of State are "public records" and so open to inspection, they are at least

District Court Clerk Not Authorized to Charge Nonparty State Agency for Copies and Certification of Public Records: Access to and fees for copying public court records are not absolute and are controlled by state law. Fees allowed by law are enumerated in 25-1-201, and the collection of those fees is mandatory. Fees for preparing copies and for certification of documents are also specified in that section. Section 25-10-405 clarifies that fees are collectible from state agencies that are a party to an action but has no effect in cases in which the agency is not a litigant. In those cases, the rule in 7-4-2516 applies, exempting agencies of state and county government from paying official fees. Therefore, a Clerk of District Court may not charge a nonparty state agency for copies and certification of public District Court records. 47 A.G. Op. 3 (1997).

Lists of Destroyed Personal Property Not Subject to Disclosure: Lists of destroyed personal property, generated by an individual for no governmental function or purpose and not as the result of the fulfillment of a public employee's duty or for documenting government business, do not constitute public writings or records subject to disclosure laws. 45 A.G. Prohibition Against Distribution of Mailing Lists Applicable Both to Lists of Individuals and Corporations: The prohibition against the distribution of mailing lists by state agencies applies to mailing lists of both individual persons and corporations. 43 A.G. Op. 73 (1990), overruling in part a contrary holding in 38 A.G. Op. 59 (1979).

Original Documents Submitted to Retirement Division Not Subject to Public Inspection for Mailing List Purposes: Original documents submitted by applicants to the Public Employees' Retirement Division of the Department of Administration contain private information about third parties and thus are not open to public inspection for the purpose of compiling a mailing list. 42 A.G. State Agency Lists as Mailing Lists: Agencies are prohibited from distributing a list of persons only if the intended use of such list is for unsolicited mass mailings, house calls or distributions, or telephone calls. The prohibition pertains only to lists of natural persons, not businesses, corporations, governmental agencies, or other associations. Agencies are not required to affirmatively ascertain the intended use for which the list is sought; a clear written disclaimer from the agency as to the proscriptions and penalty is sufficient. 38 A.G. Op. 59 (1979), overruled with regard to applicability to corporations in 43 A.G. Op. 73 (1990).

Transfer of Functions: The functions performed by the state in this part have been transferred between state departments three times. In 1981, as provided in sec. 7, Ch. 274, L. 1981, the Department of Community Affairs was abolished and its functions under this part were transferred to the Department of Administration. In 1983, as provided in sec. 1, Ch. 287, L. 1983, the functions of this part were transferred from the Department of Administration to the Department of Commerce. In 2001, as provided in sec. 8, Ch. 483, L. 2001, the functions of this part were transferred from the Department of Commerce to the Department of Administration.

Part Administrative Rules

Title 2, chapter 4, subchapter 4, ARM Administrative financial services — Single Audit Act.

Part Case Notes

County Financial Mismanagement — Insufficient Taxpayer Standing: The plaintiff taxpayers argued that the failure of the defendant, Glacier County, to cure its alleged financial mismanagement would foreseeably result in property tax increases, but Glacier County had adequate financial resources to meet its liabilities and it had planned corrective actions in response to audit deficiencies. Even if Glacier County had inadequately budgeted for certain funds, the plaintiffs' alleged foreseeable economic injury was insufficient to establish the constitutional "case-or controversy" requirement for standing to sue the county. Mitchell v. Glacier County, 2017 MT 258, 389 Mont. 122, 406 P.3d 427.

Declaratory Judgments — Private Attorney General Doctrine — Justiciable Controversy Required: The private attorney general doctrine is not a cause of action requirement, and the requirement of a justiciable controversy applies to declaratory judgment actions. Without a concrete, threatened injury, the taxpayer plaintiffs were unable to establish standing to sue the county or the state for mismanagement of county finances under the Single Audit Act or the Local Government Budget Accounting Act. Mitchell v. Glacier County, 2017 MT 258, 389 Mont. 122, 406 P.3d 427, following Marbut v. Secretary of St., 231 Mont. 131, 752 P.2d 148 (1988).

Scope of County Auditor's Duties — Mandate to Provide Adequate Budget Erroneously Issued: Where the petitioner, a County Auditor, brought an action seeking a Writ of Mandamus to compel the respondent Board of County Commissioners to include sufficient funds in the Auditor's budget to allow the Auditor to conduct audits to determine county compliance with applicable statutes, the trial court erred in making findings and conclusions supporting the petitioner and in issuing the Writ. While the Board has a legally enforceable duty to fund the Auditor's office at a level that allows her to perform her duties at the minimum level imposed by law, the language of the applicable statute and a comparison of the Auditor's duty under 7-6-2409 with the duties of the Legislative Auditor and the duties of the Department of Community Affairs (now Department of Administration) indicate that the County Auditor's functions under 7-6-2409 are limited to bookkeeping and account balancing. This conclusion is also indicated by the fact that the Legislature has required no professional qualifications of the County Auditors but has established minimum levels of education and experience for the Legislative Auditor. Reep v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 191 M 162, 622 P2d 685, 38 St. Rep. 108 (1981).

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Forfeited Appearance Bonds — Credited to Elementary School District Foundation (Now "BASE Funding"): Forfeited appearance bonds should be credited by the County Treasurer to the equalization of the county elementary school district foundation programs (now "BASE funding") in the same manner as fines are credited under 20-9-331. This is the general method practiced as shown by audits of local government units. 38 A.G. Op. 96 (1980).

CHAPTER 8
LEGISLATIVE REVIEW

Part 1
Periodic Agency Evaluation

Part Compiler's Comments

Former "Sunset" Review — 1979-1983: This chapter, as originally enacted in 1977, provided that approximately 47 state agencies were to be reviewed by the Legislative Audit Committee, with the Legislative Auditor to undertake performance audits and to recommend to the Legislature whether the audited entity should continue in existence. Each agency was to automatically terminate on a specific date unless an affirmative bill passed the Legislature reestablishing the agency. Approximately one-third of the entities were reviewed each legislative interim. After one complete 6-year cycle was made, this chapter was amended to halt the automatic termination provisions. The Office of the Legislative Auditor prepared an audit report for each sunset audit they performed. During the operation of the sunset law, the following state agencies were reviewed:

1. For the period ending July 1, 1979:

Reestablished:

In the Department of Commerce (then in the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing and now the Department of Labor and Industry): Board of Public Accountants; Board of Architects; State Banking Board; State Electrical Board; Board of Professional Engineers and Professional Land Surveyors; Board of Landscape Architects; Board of County Printing; Board of Plumbers; and Board of Physical Therapy Examiners. In the State Auditor's Office: Office of Commissioner of Insurance and Insurance Department; and Office of Securities Commissioner.

Terminated:

In the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry): Board of Abstracters; Board of Real Estate; and State Board of Warm Air Heating, Ventilation, and Air Conditioning. In the Department of Institutions (now Department of Corrections and Human Services): Board of Institutions.

2. For the period ending July 1, 1981:

Reestablished:

In the Department of Labor and Industry: Commission for Human Rights. In the Department of Commerce (then in the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing and now the Department of Labor and Industry): Montana State Board of Medical Examiners; Board of Dentistry; Board of Pharmacists; Board of Nursing; Board of Optometrists; Board of Chiropractors; Board of Radiologic Technologists; Board of Speech Pathologists and Audiologists; Board of Hearing Aid Dispensers; Board of Psychologists; Board of Veterinarians (now, the Board of Veterinary Medicine); Board of Morticians; Board of Barbers; Board of Cosmetologists; and Board of Sanitarians. In the Department of Veteran's Affairs (then in the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services and now the Department of Military Affairs): Board of Veteran's Affairs.

Terminated:

In the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Labor and Industry): Board of Athletics; Board of Massage Therapists; Board of Osteopathic Physicians; and Board of Podiatry Examiners.

3. In the period ending July 1, 1983:

Reestablished:

In the Department of Commerce: Board of Aeronautics (now allocated to Department of Transportation); Board of Horseracing (now in Department of Livestock); Board of Milk Control (now in Department of Livestock); Board of Waterwell Contractors (now in Department of Natural Resources and Conservation). In the Department of Agriculture: State Board of Hail Insurance. In the Department of Livestock: Board of Livestock. In the Department of Natural Resources and Conservation: Board of Oil and Gas Conservation. In the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks: Montana Outfitters' Council (now Board of Outfitters, Department of Labor and Industry). In the Department of Public Service Regulation: Public Service Commission. In the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences: Board of Water and Wastewater Operators.

Legal Action to Survive Agency Termination: Section 10, Ch. 562, L. 1977, read: "This act shall not affect the right to institute or prosecute any cause of action by or against an agency terminated pursuant to this act if the cause of action accrued prior to the date the agency was terminated. Any causes of action pending on the date the agency is terminated, or instituted thereafter, shall be prosecuted or defended in the name of the state by the department of justice."

(b) Is there a reasonable relationship between the exercise of the state's police power and the protection of the public health, safety, or welfare?

(c) Is there another less restrictive method of regulation available which could adequately protect the public?

(d) Does the regulation have the effect of directly or indirectly increasing the costs of any goods or services involved and, if so, to what degree?

(e) Is the increase in cost more harmful to the public than the harm which could result from the absence of regulation?

(f) Are all facets of the regulatory process designed solely for the purpose of and have as their primary effect the protection of the public?"; near end of (4) after "parts of statutes" substituted "relating to" for "for which"; and at end of (4) substituted "agency's or program's activities" for "agency reviewed is responsible".

Attorney General's Opinions

Intent of Legislature in Allowing Board of Abstracters to Terminate: The Legislature, by allowing the Board of Abstracters to "sunset", by plain import of the statutory language involved, was not expressing the opinion that a certificate required by 76-3-612 was no longer necessary. Rather, it was a determination that the Board's licensing function did not meet the criteria set forth in 2-8-112. 38 A.G. Op. 48 (1979).

Part Case Notes

County Attorney Immunity for Handling of Streambed Preservation and Stalking Complaints — Summary Judgment Proper: The Madison County Attorney filed a misdemeanor complaint against Rosenthal for a possible streambed preservation violation, but later moved to dismiss the complaint when the state's expert was not confident that a violation had occurred. The County Attorney also forwarded a stalking complaint against Rosenthal to the Attorney General's office because of a possible conflict of interest. Rosenthal subsequently filed a malicious prosecution complaint and also claimed intentional and negligent emotional distress. The District Court determined that the prosecutor's conduct was within the scope of his authority and that he was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity and granted summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The prosecutor properly exercised discretion both in filing the streambed protection complaint and then in dismissing the complaint when faced with the state expert's equivocation and was entitled to absolute immunity for this conduct. Regarding the handling of the stalking complaint, the allegedly injurious conduct arguably fell outside the County Attorney's quasi-judicial functions, so the court applied the test in Sacco v. High Country Independent Press, Inc., 271 M 209, 896 P2d 411 (1995), to determine whether the qualified immunity shield applied. Rosenthal asserted no violation of a clearly established constitutional right, so qualified immunity barred the suit. At the very least, the County Attorney was entitled to qualified immunity for his actions, and the District Court did not err in determining that, as a matter of law, the County Attorney was entitled to immunity, either absolute or qualified, for his actions in prosecuting the complaints against Rosenthal. Rosenthal v. Madison County, 2007 MT 277, 339 M 419, 170 P3d 493 (2007), following Losleben v. Oppedahl, 2004 MT 5, 319 M 269, 83 P3d 1271 (2004).

"Class of One" Equal Protection Law Not Established at Time of Discharge From Public Employment — Saucier Test — Official Entitled to Qualified Immunity: Losleben was terminated from state employment in 1999, and following an unsuccessful grievance, Losleben filed a complaint in District Court, alleging that his former supervisors violated his right to equal protection by engaging in a vindictive and spiteful campaign to terminate his employment. Two supervisors were subsequently dismissed from the suit, and the District Court granted the third supervisor qualified immunity, concluding that Losleben's equal protection claim for a "class of one" was not clearly established at the time of the alleged misconduct. Losleben appealed. Traditionally, a person bringing an equal protection claim must show intentional discrimination because of membership in a particular class, not merely that the person was treated unfairly as an individual. However, in Village of Willowbrook v. Olech, 528 US 562 (2000), the U.S. Supreme Court concluded that an equal protection claim may be brought by a claimant as a "class of one" even though the claimant is not a member of a traditionally recognized protected class. The court subsequently held in Saucier v. Katz, 533 US 194 (2001), that a two-part test is to be applied in determining whether state officials are entitled to qualified immunity: (1) when taken in a light most favorable to the party asserting injury, do the facts alleged show that an official's conduct violated a constitutional right; and (2) if so, was the right clearly established at the time that it was allegedly infringed. The District Court in this case erred by not applying the first step of the Saucier test, but because only the qualified immunity issue was certified to the Supreme Court, it was assumed that a constitutional violation could have occurred, so the Supreme Court proceeded to the second step of the Saucier analysis. The law in effect when Losleben was terminated in 1999, prior to Olech, did not recognize an equal protection "class of one" claim, so any equal protection right held by Losleben at that time was not well enough established to impute knowledge of it to Losleben's supervisor. Thus, the District Court properly granted the supervisor qualified immunity and dismissed the supervisor from the case. Losleben v. Oppedahl, 2004 MT 5, 319 M 269, 83 P3d 1271 (2004).

No State and Local Employee Qualified Immunity for Violation of State Constitution Similar to Qualified Immunity of Federal Employee Violating Federal Constitution: Montana has no immunity for a state or local government employee who violates a person's rights under the Montana Constitution comparable to the federal common-law presumption of qualified immunity of a federal employee for violating a person's rights under the U.S. Constitution and laws. In fact, Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., prohibits immunity unless it is specifically provided for by a two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature. The Legislature has not provided a qualified immunity for state and local employees who violate a person's rights under the Montana Constitution, and the court need not decide whether it can. Furthermore, Art. II, sec. 16, Mont. Const., provides that courts of justice are open to every person and that speedy remedy is afforded for every injury of person, property, or character. For these reasons, state and local government employees do not have qualified immunity for violation of a person's rights under the Montana Constitution. Dorwart v. Caraway, 2002 MT 240, 312 M 1, 58 P3d 128 (2002).

Liability of State to Suit — Active Duty U.S. Army Worker Injured While Assigned to National Guard — Tort Claim Not Barred: While in full-time service to the U.S. Army, Trankel was assigned to a Montana Army National Guard unit rebuilding armored vehicles and was injured by toxic chemicals during the rebuilding project. Trankel sued the state, asserting violations of the Occupational Health Act of Montana, the Montana Safety Act, and the Employee and Community Hazardous Chemical Information Act. The state contended that Feres v. U.S., 340 US 135, 95 L Ed 152, 71 S Ct 153 (1950), and Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160 (1986), barred a claim that was incident to military service regardless of the substantive law upon which the claim was based, the status of the plaintiff at the time of injury, or the status of the party against whom the claim was made and that the alleged violations of the state Acts did not provide a private cause of action and could be remedied only through the administrative remedies provided for in the Acts. The District Court agreed with the state and

dismissed Trankel's complaint with prejudice. On appeal, the Supreme Court distinguished Feres and related federal cases because they were based on federal rather than state tort claims, with little bearing on rights under state law and the Montana Constitution. The Supreme Court overruled the holding in Evans that the National Guard was not a political subdivision subject to suit, finding instead that the National Guard and the Department of Military Affairs were clearly governmental entities within the meaning of 2-9-101 and that the constitutional premise on which Evans was based did not apply. Consistent with other applications of Art. II, sec. 16, Mont. Const., any statute or court decision that deprives an employee of the right to full legal redress, as defined by general Montana tort law against third parties, is absolutely prohibited. Because Trankel was not employed by the Montana Army National Guard or the Department of Military Affairs at the time of injury, Trankel's claim against the state pursuant to the tort claims statutes was not barred. Further, applying the rationale in Pollard v. Todd, 148 M 171, 418 P2d 869 (1966), the Supreme Court held that the statutory state Acts did not give rise to causes of action independent from a claim of negligence subject only to the administrative remedies contained in the Acts, but rather established duties, the violation of which is negligence per se. Trankel v. St., 282 M 348, 938 P2d 614, 54 St. Rep. 380 (1997), distinguishing Feres v. U.S., 340 US 135, 95 L Ed 152, 71 S Ct 153 (1950), U.S. v. Johnson, 481 US 681, 95 L Ed 2d 648, 107 S Ct 2063 (1987), and Stauber v. Cline, 837 F2d 395 (9th Cir. 1988); following Webb v. Mont. Masonry Constr. Co., 233 M 198, 761 P2d 343 (1988), Meech v. Hillhaven W., Inc., 238 M 21, 776 P2d 488 (1989), and Francetich v. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund, 252 M 215, 827 P2d 1279 (1992); overruling Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160 (1986); and followed in Lake v. St., 282 M 484, 938 P2d 698, 54 St. Rep. 442 (1997), and Oberson v. Federated Mut. Ins. Co., 2005 MT 329, 330 M 1, 126 P3d 459 (2005).

Filing of Tort Claim Against State in District Court Improper — Review Required: A corporation filed a complaint against the state in District Court, seeking damages for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing that attached to its workers' compensation contract. However, under this part, all tort claims against the state must first be filed with and reviewed by the Department of Administration. Upon failure to follow this procedure, the District Court had no jurisdiction to review the matter, and dismissal of the complaint was proper. Cottonwood Hills, Inc. v. St., 238 M 404, 777 P2d 1301, 46 St. Rep. 1371 (1989).

National Guardsman Injured on Weekend Drill — No Right to Sue State — Summary Judgment Upheld: The Supreme Court affirmed summary judgment granted state by District Court because: (1) issues raised on appeal were not genuine issues of material fact but rather questions of law, therefore summary judgment was proper; (2) the National Guard is a military force, not a political subdivision of the state, so appellant had no right to sue under the Tort Claims Act (Title 2, ch. 9, parts 1 through 3); and (3) traditionally, the federal government and state governments have not been held liable in tort for injuries that arise in the course of activity incident to military service (Feres v. U.S., 340 US 135, 95 L Ed 152, 71 S Ct 153 (1950)). Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160, 43 St. Rep. 1930 (1986), distinguished in Grove v. Mont. Army Nat'l Guard, 264 M 498, 872 P2d 791, 51 St. Rep. 366 (1994), and overruled in Trankel v. St., 282 M 348, 938 P2d 614, 54 St. Rep. 380 (1997).

Liability of Municipality: In Montana, a municipality is a government entity and is liable for its acts or omissions like an ordinary private party. Kaiser v. Whitehall, 221 M 322, 718 P2d 1341, 43 St. Rep. 846 (1986).

Evidence of Alteration of Accident Scene After the Accident Excluded: Evidence of subsequent repairs or improvements by a defendant altering the scene of an accident may not be admitted in evidence to show negligence on the part of the defendant. The evidence erroneously admitted here put before the jury the idea that the state, by constructing an additional guardrail at the scene of the accident after the accident, admitted to antecedent negligence. Cech v. St., 183 M 75, 598 P2d 584 (1979), affirmed on rehearing, 184 M 522, 604 P2d 97 (1979).

1985 Amendment: In (1) inserted second sentence construing what is considered a single claim.

Immunity From Suit: If Ch. 389, L. 1985, is interpreted to be a legislative imposition of immunity from suit within the meaning of Art. II, sec. 18, of the Montana Constitution, then under Art. II, sec. 18, Ch. 389, L. 1985, should have been approved by a 2/3 vote of each house of the Legislature. Chapter 389 was approved by a vote of 65-33 in the House and 42-7 in the Senate.

1983 Amendment: Deleted former (2), which read: "(2) As used in 2-9-104, the following definitions apply:

(a) "Economic damages" means tangible pecuniary losses.

(b) "Noneconomic damages" means those damages not included in economic, punitive, or exemplary damages including, without limitation, damages for pain and suffering, loss of consortium, mental distress, and loss of reputation."

Case Notes

Public Duty Doctrine Inapplicable: Plaintiff sued the city of Columbia Falls for negligence, premises liability, breach of professional duties, and wrongful death after her husband died following a skateboarding accident on a subdivision walking path, the design of which the city had monitored and approved. The District Court applied the public duty doctrine and granted the city summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed. The public duty doctrine does not apply when a governmental defendant has a specific duty to a plaintiff arising from generally applicable principles of law that would support a tort claim, i.e., if a private person would be liable to the plaintiff for the acts that were committed by the government, then the governmental entity would be similarly liable. Because the city was actively involved in the design of the walking path and exercised its statutory and contractual authority to approve it, the city could be held liable for violation of a statutory duty and the voluntary assumption of a duty to act with ordinary care; therefore, the District Court erred in applying the public duty doctrine. Kent v. Columbia Falls, 2015 MT 139, 379 Mont. 190, 350 P.3d 9.

Limit on Damages Recoverable From Municipality Inapplicable Absent Claim of Injury to or Destruction of Tangible Property: Plaintiff sued the city of Bozeman for lost profits and alleged constructive fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage related to a real estate purchase and development issue. During the course of litigation, the District Court, as a sanction for discovery abuse, ordered that the city was liable for interfering with the property purchase and development, resulting in injury to plaintiff. During trial, the court denied the city's jury instruction that plaintiff was required to prove that the city had caused damages, and instead the jury was instructed to determine the amount of damages plaintiff suffered. The jury awarded $3 million in damages. The city argued that the governmental liability damages cap of $750,000 in 2-9-108 should have limited the damage amount, but the court held that the cap did not apply, so the city appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. The statutory cap applies only to claims for personal injury or property damage, and because plaintiff made no claim for injury or destruction of tangible property, the cap did not apply. Delaney & Co. v. Bozeman, 2009 MT 441, 354 M 181, 222 P3d 618 (2009).

State Entitled to Immunity From Suit Absent Proof That Mental Patient Made Actual Threat of Physical Violence — Liability to Attach to State Only When Private Person Similarly Liable: After being treated and medically stabilized at the state hospital for schizoaffective disorder, a man was conditionally released from involuntary commitment and subsequently killed his brother less than 1 week later, even though the man had shown no signs of aggression or violence and had made no threats of physical violence while hospitalized. The mother of the men sued the state for negligence. The District Court determined that the state was entitled to summary judgment as a matter of law on the mother's claims, and the mother appealed. The Supreme Court noted that under 2-9-101, state liability for tort claims attaches only when a private person would be similarly liable. Under 27-1-1102, a mental health professional has no duty to warn of violent behavior unless a patient has communicated to the professional an actual threat of physical violence by specific means against a clearly identified or reasonably identifiable victim, and unless that duty exists, the professional is immune from liability under 27-1-1103. In this case, absent an actual threat of physical violence, the state was also entitled to immunity from suit pursuant to 27-1-1102 and 27-1-1103, and the District Court was affirmed. Gudmundsen v. St. ex rel. Mont. St. Hosp. Warm Springs, 2009 MT 56, 349 M 297, 203 P3d 813 (2009).

Respondeat Superior Applicable to City Council Member Who Severely Criticized City Employee — Criticism Within Scope of Employment for Respondeat Superior but Not for Application of Legislative Immunity: Shoemaker, a member of the Thompson Falls City Council, severely criticized Denke, the city clerk and finance officer, in two letters to the editor and in a City Council meeting for her job performance that Shoemaker alleged caused the city to hire a CPA. Denke charged that Shoemaker's criticism was unlawful retaliatory conduct for her previous filing of a sexual harassment complaint against the Mayor. Following Kenyon v. Stillwater County, 254 M 142, 835 P2d 742 (1992), the Supreme Court held that Shoemaker was a city employee. The Supreme Court held that Shoemaker was acting as a member of the City Council when he signed the letters and that the city had admitted in an administrative hearing that Shoemaker was within the scope of his employment. The court held that: (1) Shoemaker didn't have to be Denke's supervisor for purposes of applying respondeat superior; (2) Shoemaker's unlawful retaliatory conduct was not within the official discharge of Shoemaker's duties for the purposes of legislative immunity under 27-1-804, but the conduct was within the scope of Shoemaker's employment for purposes of respondeat superior; and (3) the statement of the city in the Human Rights Commission administrative hearing that Shoemaker was acting as a member of the City Council constituted a judicial admission, was an "acknowledgment" under 2-9-305, and was binding upon the city for the purposes of its liability for retaliation. Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

Initiative Banning Cyanide Mining — Reverse Condemnation Against State Not Justiciable in Federal Court: Initiative Measure No. 137, codified as 82-4-390, which banned the use of open-pit mining using cyanide leaching except as to mines operating with existing permits, could not be the basis of a reverse condemnation action in federal court because such an action is jurisdictionally barred by the 11th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Eleventh amendment immunity cannot be avoided by the application of Ex parte Young, 209 US 123 (1908), since a reverse condemnation action is a form of retroactive relief and not a claim for prospective relief. Seven Up Pete Venture v. Schweitzer, 523 F3d 948 (9th Cir. 2008).

School District Not Considered Person Engaged in Business Subject to Liability Under Montana Unfair Trade Practices Act: The Great Falls school district entered exclusive agreements with Coke and Pepsi to provide soft drinks in school facilities in exchange for $500,000 over a 10-year period. Plaintiff, which had supplied soft drinks to the district for almost 20 years, sued the school district for violation of the Montana Unfair Trade Practices and Consumer Protection Act of 1973. The school district contended that it was not subject to suit under the Act because by definition, it was not a person engaged in business, and the Supreme Court agreed. The plain meaning of person in 30-14-202 does not include a school district. To conclude otherwise would infringe on a school district's statutory power to raise revenue for funding education. A school district is also not a business as defined in the Act because a business is a person, which does not include a school district. Further, in accordance with the purpose set out in 30-14-201, the Act was created to apply to competitive businesses, not government, which generally acts as a market regulator and not a competitor. Mont. Vending, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Mont., 2003 MT 282, 318 M 1, 78 P3d 499 (2003).

No Obligation to Extinguish Lien Until Debt Fully Satisfied — Summary Dismissal of Action for Slander of Title Proper: Following a business default, defendant sought to enforce a lease agreement and received a judgment in Justice's Court for $7,156.56, including interest. In an effort to satisfy the judgment, plaintiff's wife paid $7,121.14. Plaintiff later attempted to refinance the disputed property and found that defendant's lien had not been extinguished, so plaintiff requested a partial satisfaction of judgment to his wife and release of the lien on the judgment. When defendant refused to release the lien, plaintiff sued for slander of title. Slander of title is an action in which one maliciously publishes false matter that brings into question or disparages the title to property, thereby causing special damages to the owner. Defendant was under no obligation to extinguish the lien until the judgment was fully satisfied. Because the wife's payment was $35.42 short of completely satisfying the judgment, defendant could not be said to have maliciously published false matter regarding the lien, so slander of title was not proved, and summary judgment for defendant was proper. Pryor v. Babcock Bldg. Corp., 2002 MT 68, 309 M 222, 45 P3d 35 (2002). See also First Sec. Bank of Bozeman v. Tholkes, 169 M 422, 547 P2d 1328 (1976), and Felska v. Justice Department Investigator Not Entitled to Prosecutorial Immunity for Administrative Acts in Gambling License Application Investigation: Kelman applied to the Department of Justice for a gambling operator's license in connection with her contractual interest in two casinos. The Department assigned Losleben to investigate and report on the application. Losleben filed a 37-page "offense report" recommending that the Department deny the application and prosecute Kelman and others listed in the report for alleged criminal violations. Kelman filed suit against Losleben, alleging invasion of privacy, injurious falsehood, wrongful use of civil proceedings, tortious interference with contract, and actual fraud. The District Court dismissed the claims, concluding that Losleben was a government official entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity. On appeal, the Supreme Court focused on whether the alleged wrongful conduct occurred in the course of filing and maintaining criminal charges, in accord with Smith v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 266 M 1, 878 P2d 870 (1994), and whether the conduct was intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process, as set out in Imbler v. Pachtman, 424 US 409, 47 L Ed 2d 128, 96 S Ct 984 (1976). A review of the record showed that Losleben was acting in an administrative capacity while investigating and reporting on Kelman's application as an agent of the Department, rather than in a prosecutorial capacity of filing and maintaining criminal charges. As such, Losleben was not entitled to prosecutorial immunity, and the District Court's dismissal of the claim of civil liability constituted reversible error. Kelman v. Losleben, 271 M 156, 894 P2d 955, 52 St. Rep. 387 (1995).

University as "State" and Not "Political Subdivision" for Purposes of Venue: Minervino filed an action in Cascade County against the University of Montana (now University of Montana-Missoula), claiming that because the University is a political subdivision under 25-2-126(3), the University campus in Great Falls established proper venue in Cascade County. The Supreme Court traced the legislative history of 25-2-126 and concluded that because it was once codified as part of Title 2, ch. 9, the definition of "state" in this section applied. Because the University is part of the state under 25-2-126(1), venue was not proper in Cascade County because Minervino did not claim that she was a resident there nor did the claim arise there. Minervino v. Univ. of Mont., 258 M 493, 853 P2d 1242, 50 St. Rep. 629 (1993).

Failure to State Claim — False Arrest and Imprisonment: The District Court properly dismissed plaintiff's suit when plaintiff was arrested for the offense of custodial interference for returning children to the Department of Family Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) rather than to their lawful custodian as required by 45-5-304. Contway v. Camp, 236 M 169, 768 P2d 1377, 46 St. Rep. 270 (1989).

Medical Malpractice — Physicians Treating Inmates Not Department Employees — Not Immune From Suit: A doctor was an independent contractor and thus not entitled to immunity from suit as a state employee even though he: (1) was the only doctor employed by the state to care for state prison inmates; (2) treated inmates in facilities and with medical support services provided by the state; (3) was paid a salary; and (4) participated in the state retirement system. Therefore, his associate, who treated the inmate twice, was likewise not immune from suit. Kyriss v. St., 218 M 162, 707 P2d 5, 42 St. Rep. 1487 (1985).

School District Not Entitled to Protection of Eleventh Amendment — Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Action: Where the plaintiff schoolteacher brought an action against the defendant school district under the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act and the defendant claimed it was entitled to the protection of the 11th amendment as against the plaintiff's claims for summary damages, the federal District Court held, under the analysis required by Mt. Healthy City Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, 429 US 274 (1977), and under Montana law, that a school district is not the "alter ego" of the State itself and therefore is not entitled to 11th amendment protection against actions for damages granted to states. Because the court held that the defendant district did not constitute the State, it did not reach the issue of whether the State had waived its 11th amendment immunity. Kenny v. Bd. of Trustees, 563 F. Supp. 95, 40 St. Rep. 940 (D.C. Mont. 1983).

Prosecutorial Immunity: Notwithstanding inclusion of coverage for malicious prosecution, the common-law prosecutorial immunity remains in effect in this state. State ex rel. Dept. of Justice v. District Court, 172 M 88, 560 P2d 1328 (1976).

Negligence of Police Officers — Liability of City: The power in the city to control its policemen in both broad and detailed affairs related to their work brings the policemen squarely within the definition of "employee" and subjects the city to liability for torts committed within the scope of their employment or duties. St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976).

State Not Responsible for Negligence of Municipal Police Officers: City's claim that state is liable under doctrine of respondeat superior where plaintiff sustained injuries allegedly due to negligence of city police was without merit. St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976).

2-9-102. Governmental entities liable for torts except as specifically provided by legislature.

Case Notes

Negligence Claim for Improper Removal of Children Rejected — State Entitled to Immunity — No Evidence Employees Were Grossly Negligent or Provided False Information: Plaintiff alleged that the state and Broadwater County negligently failed to adequately investigate a social worker's report before removing her children from her care. The state moved for summary judgment, arguing that it was immune from suit under 41-3-203. The District Court denied the state's immunity claim but granted summary judgment to the state on the grounds that the plaintiff had not provided expert testimony necessary to establish that the investigator was subject to and violated a standard of care. On appeal, the Supreme Court held that the state is entitled as a matter of law to immunity from the plaintiff's claims under 41-3-203. The court reasoned that the plaintiff failed to establish a genuine issue of material fact to support her claim that the state employees involved in the investigation were grossly negligent or knowingly provided false information. Weber v. St., 2015 MT 161, 379 Mont. 388, 352 P.3d 8.

Tardy Public Duty Doctrine Defense Not Allowed: In a suit for negligent firefighting techniques, the state submitted a proposed pretrial order claiming that the public duty doctrine applied and that the state did not owe a specific duty to the plaintiff. The District Court determined that the public duty doctrine was an affirmative defense that was waived after the state failed to plead or otherwise raise it, and alternatively, even if it was not an affirmative defense it prejudiced the plaintiffs. On appeal, the Supreme Court declined to analyze whether the public duty doctrine must be raised as an affirmative defense, and it upheld the District Court on the grounds that raising the defense at such a late stage in the proceedings would unfairly prejudice the plaintiffs. Weaver v. St., 2013 MT 247, 371 Mont. 476, 310 P.3d 495.

City Playground Injury — City Liable if Willful or Wanton Misconduct Shown: Based on agreement of the parties, the Supreme Court assumed, without deciding, that playing in a city park constituted a "recreational purpose" under the recreational use statute. The issue of whether the city committed willful or wanton misconduct for failure to maintain a park and the playground area was remanded to the District Court. Gatlin-Johnson v. Miles City, 2012 MT 302, 367 Mont. 414, 291 P.3d 1129.

Public Duty Doctrine Inapplicable for City Playground Injury: The public duty doctrine did not apply in a negligence claim against a city for the failure to maintain a playground area given the applicability of clear and established rules of premises liability. Based on an analysis of foreseeability, it was reasonable and proper to hold the city to a duty to exercise reasonable care in maintaining its public parks. Gatlin-Johnson v. Miles City, 2012 MT 302, 367 Mont. 414, 291 P.3d 1129, followed in Kent v. Columbia Falls, 2015 MT 139, 379 Mont. 190, 350 P.3d 9.

No Negligence in Officers' Response to Robbery Call or in Brief Detention of Robbery Victim: Plaintiff worked at a convenience store when a person entered the store, held a knife to plaintiff's throat, and robbed the store. Plaintiff managed to dial 9-1-1, but could not speak with police. Officers determined where the call came from and surrounded the store. However, even though officers could see two people inside, it was not possible to determine who was involved in the robbery. Meanwhile, plaintiff was taken to a back room and raped. Officers arrested the perpetrator immediately after he left the store and then ordered any other persons inside to exit. Plaintiff then left the store and was subdued and handcuffed for about 30 seconds before officers determined that she was an employee and had been raped. Plaintiff subsequently sued the county, law enforcement agencies, and several individual officers for negligently responding to the situation, allowing plaintiff to be raped, and improperly arresting plaintiff when she left the store. The District Court granted summary judgment for defendants and plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Under the circumstances, the officers responded quickly and professionally and got plaintiff to a safe position and to medical care as immediately as possible. The officers did not have custody or control of either the plaintiff or the robber at the time the rape occurred and therefore were in no position to undertake specific actions to protect the plaintiff until she came out of the store and her identity and role in the events were established. Additionally, the brief detention of plaintiff was justified and provided no cause of action against defendants. Gonzales v. Bozeman, 2009 MT 277, 352 M 145, 217 P3d 487 (2009).

Respondeat Superior Applicable to City Council Member Who Severely Criticized City Employee — Criticism Within Scope of Employment for Respondeat Superior but Not for Application of Legislative Immunity: Shoemaker, a member of the Thompson Falls City Council, severely criticized Denke, the city clerk and finance officer, in two letters to the editor and in a City Council meeting for her job performance that Shoemaker alleged caused the city to hire a CPA. Denke charged that Shoemaker's criticism was unlawful retaliatory conduct for her previous filing of a sexual harassment complaint against the Mayor. Following Kenyon v. Stillwater County, 254 M 142, 835 P2d 742 (1992), the Supreme Court held that Shoemaker was a city employee. The Supreme Court held that Shoemaker was acting as a member of the City Council when he signed the letters and that the city had admitted in an administrative hearing that Shoemaker was within the scope of his employment. The court held that: (1) Shoemaker didn't have to be Denke's supervisor for purposes of applying respondeat superior; (2) Shoemaker's unlawful retaliatory conduct was not within the official discharge of Shoemaker's duties for the purposes of legislative immunity under 27-1-804, but the conduct was within the scope of Shoemaker's employment for purposes of respondeat superior; and (3) the statement of the city in the Human Rights Commission administrative hearing that Shoemaker was acting as a member of the City Council constituted a judicial admission, was an "acknowledgment" under 2-9-305, and was binding upon the city for the purposes of its liability for retaliation. Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

No Duty of Care Owed by State to Deceased Who Was Allegedly Victim of Malpractice by Doctor: Title 37, chapter 3, is not intended to protect a specific class of persons of which the deceased is a member from a particular type of harm, and thus no special relationship existed between the state and the deceased that gave rise to a special duty. Therefore the statutory special relationship exception to the public duty doctrine did not exist. Nelson v. St., 2008 MT 336, 346 M 206, 195 P3d 293 (2008).

Initiative Banning Cyanide Mining — Reverse Condemnation Against State Not Justiciable in Federal Court: Initiative Measure No. 137, codified as 82-4-390, which banned the use of open-pit mining using cyanide leaching except as to mines operating with existing permits, could not be the basis of a reverse condemnation action in federal court because such an action is jurisdictionally barred by the 11th amendment to the U.S. Constitution. Eleventh amendment immunity cannot be avoided by the application of Ex parte Young, 209 US 123 (1908), since a reverse condemnation action is a form of retroactive relief and not a claim for prospective relief. Seven Up Pete Venture v. Schweitzer, 523 F3d 948 (9th Cir. 2008).

County Attorney Immunity for Handling of Streambed Preservation and Stalking Complaints — Summary Judgment Proper: The Madison County Attorney filed a misdemeanor complaint against Rosenthal for a possible streambed preservation violation, but later moved to dismiss the complaint when the state's expert was not confident that a violation had occurred. The County Attorney also forwarded a stalking complaint against Rosenthal to the Attorney General's office because of a possible conflict of interest. Rosenthal subsequently filed a malicious prosecution complaint and also claimed intentional and negligent emotional distress. The District Court determined that the prosecutor's conduct was within the scope of his authority and that he was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity and granted summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The prosecutor properly exercised discretion both in filing the streambed protection complaint and then in dismissing the complaint when faced with the state expert's equivocation and was entitled to absolute immunity for this conduct. Regarding the handling of the stalking complaint, the allegedly injurious conduct arguably fell outside the County Attorney's quasi-judicial functions, so the court applied the test in Sacco v. High Country Independent Press, Inc., 271 M 209, 896 P2d 411 (1995), to determine whether the qualified immunity shield applied. Rosenthal asserted no violation of a clearly established constitutional right, so qualified immunity barred the suit. At the very least, the County Attorney was entitled to qualified immunity for his actions, and the District Court did not err in determining that, as a matter of law, the County Attorney was entitled to immunity, either absolute or qualified, for his actions in prosecuting the complaints against Rosenthal. Rosenthal v. Madison County, 2007 MT 277, 339 M 419, 170 P3d 493 (2007), following Losleben v. Oppedahl, 2004 MT 5, 319 M 269, 83 P3d 1271 (2004).

Immunity of Juvenile Probation Officer for Discretionary Supervisory Acts: Completion of a factsheet by a juvenile probation officer regarding a youth who was on probation was a discretionary, quasi-judicial act. The probation officer was thus entitled to immunity from prosecution for alleged omissions of information from the factsheet, and summary judgment dismissing the probation officer from a suit by the victim of an injury caused by the youth was proper. Eklund v. Trost, 2006 MT 333, 335 M 112, 151 P3d 870 (2006).

Public Duty Doctrine Inapplicable Based on Special Relationship Between Pursuing Officers and Pedestrian: Plaintiff was injured when defendant, a runaway juvenile probationer, hit plaintiff with a stolen vehicle while being pursued by law enforcement officers during a high-speed chase through Harlowton. Plaintiff sued the county and the County Sheriff for damages related to the crash. The District Court granted summary judgment to the county and the County Sheriff, holding that the public duty doctrine applied and that neither plaintiff's nor the juvenile's actions were foreseeable. On appeal, the Supreme Court disagreed. The public duty doctrine generally shields law enforcement officers from negligence claims, but an exception arises when there is a special relationship between an officer and an individual that gives rise to a special duty that is more particular than the duty owed to the public at large. Applying the circumstances set out in Nelson v. Driscoll, 1999 MT 193, 295 M 363, 983 P2d 972 (1999), the court noted that the first exception to the public trust doctrine is whether a statute intended to protect a specific class of persons, of which plaintiff is a member, creates a special relationship. Under 61-8-107, a duty of care is created on the part of the drivers of emergency vehicles to drive with due regard for the safety of all persons. Based on this special relationship, the court held that the public duty doctrine did not apply. As a bystander on a public road, plaintiff was within the scope of risk and was thus a foreseeable plaintiff. Last, the court considered the issue of causation. Plaintiff claimed negligence on the part of the county and the officers, but plaintiff was actually injured by the actions of the juvenile, so the question was whether the juvenile's actions were intervening superseding acts that broke the chain of causation as a matter of law. Whether plaintiff's injuries were caused primarily by the juvenile or by the officers was an issue that reasonable minds might disagree upon and therefore appropriately adjudicated by a jury, so the Supreme Court reversed the summary judgment and remanded for trial on the issues of breach of duty, causation, including intervening superseding cause, and damages. Eklund v. Trost, 2006 MT 333, 335 M 112, 151 P3d 870 (2006), applying Stenberg v. Neel, 188 M 333, 613 P2d 1007 (1980), and Day v. St., 980 P2d 1171 (Utah 1999).

Sledding in City Park Considered Recreational Purpose for Which City Immune From Liability: Plaintiff was injured on a sledding hill at a city park. The trial court held that the city was immune from liability pursuant to 70-16-302. Citing Dobrocke v. Columbia Falls, 2000 MT 179, 300 M 348, 8 P3d 71 (2000), plaintiff contended that because city parks are freely available to the public, it was unnecessary for the law to encourage availability by limiting a city's tort liability. The Supreme Court disagreed and distinguished Dobrocke, holding that the use of city parks is discretionary, unlike the use of city streets and boulevards that was at issue in Dobrocke, so the legislative rationale behind 70-16-302 to encourage the availability of recreational areas applied. Winter sports, such as sledding, are explicitly listed in the statute as a recreational purpose, so summary judgment for the city was affirmed. Weinert v. Great Falls, 2004 MT 168, 322 M 38, 97 P3d 1079 (2004).

Legal Duty of Sheriff to Protect Domestic Violence Victim — Exception to Public Duty Doctrine Immunity Created Between Sheriff and Victim: Plaintiffs' mother was a domestic violence victim who was killed by her husband. Plaintiffs sued the County Sheriff for negligently failing to take action to protect the victim. A jury found the Sheriff negligent and awarded plaintiffs $358,000. The Sheriff moved for judgment as a matter of law, and the District Court granted the motion and vacated the jury verdict, finding that no special relationship existed between the victim and the Sheriff under the domestic violence statutes that would trigger a legal duty upon the Sheriff to protect the victim. On appeal, the Supreme Court noted an exception to the public duty doctrine's immunity provision in cases when a special relationship between the victim and an officer has been created. The domestic violence statutes created such a special relationship, which gave rise to a special duty by virtue of the victim's status as a member of a protected class. The Sheriff had a statutory duty to protect the victim with a notice of her rights under 46-6-602, and by failing to give the victim the required notice, the jury could conclude that the Sheriff was negligent and, arguably, negligent per se. Although arrest of the husband was discretionary, the Sheriff also had a mandatory duty under 46-6-603 to seize the husband's weapon, which had been displayed during a prior domestic dispute, but failed to do so. Thus, the jury had sufficient evidence to conclude that the Sheriff's negligence or negligent per se conduct led to the victim's death, and the District Court committed reversible error in granting judgment to the contrary. Massee v. Thompson, 2004 MT 121, 321 M 210, 90 P3d 394 (2004), following Nelson v. Driscoll, 1999 MT 193, 295 M 363, 983 P2d 972 (1999).

"Class of One" Equal Protection Law Not Established at Time of Discharge From Public Employment — Saucier Test — Official Entitled to Qualified Immunity: Losleben was terminated from state employment in 1999, and following an unsuccessful grievance, Losleben filed a complaint in District Court, alleging that his former supervisors violated his right to equal protection by engaging in a vindictive and spiteful campaign to terminate his employment. Two supervisors were subsequently dismissed from the suit, and the District Court granted the third supervisor qualified immunity, concluding that Losleben's equal protection claim for a "class of one" was not clearly established at the time of the alleged misconduct. Losleben appealed. Traditionally, a person bringing an equal protection claim must show intentional discrimination because of membership in a particular class, not merely that the person was treated unfairly as an individual. However, in Village of Willowbrook v. Olech, 528 US 562 (2000), the U.S. Supreme Court concluded that an equal protection claim may be brought by a claimant as a "class of one" even though the claimant is not a member of a traditionally recognized protected class. The court subsequently held in Saucier v. Katz, 533 US 194 (2001), that a two-part test is to be applied in determining whether state officials are entitled to qualified immunity: (1) when taken in a light most favorable to the party asserting injury, do the facts alleged show that an official's conduct violated a constitutional right; and (2) if so, was the right clearly established at the time that it was allegedly infringed. The District Court in this case erred by not applying the first step of the Saucier test, but because only the qualified immunity issue was certified to the Supreme Court, it was assumed that a constitutional violation could have occurred, so the Supreme Court proceeded to the second step of the Saucier analysis. The law in effect when Losleben was terminated in 1999, prior to Olech, did not recognize an equal protection "class of one" claim, so any equal protection right held by Losleben at that time was not well enough established to impute knowledge of it to Losleben's supervisor. Thus, the District Court properly granted the supervisor qualified immunity and dismissed the supervisor from the case. Losleben v. Oppedahl, 2004 MT 5, 319 M 269, 83 P3d 1271 (2004).

Police Dispatcher Credibility Having No Bearing on Wrongful Death Action Given City's Admission of Negligence: Plaintiff requested that a medical team be sent to her home to attend to her husband who was in respiratory arrest, but the police dispatcher sent the medics to the wrong address. The husband subsequently died, and the wife brought a wrongful death and negligence action against the city. The city admitted negligence, but the jury found for the city, holding that the city's negligence was not a substantial factor in the death. Plaintiff appealed, but the Supreme Court affirmed. Given the city's admission of negligence, the dispatcher's failure to report the address confusion did not make the city's negligence or liability for the death any more or less probable. Further, the dispatcher's credibility, even if damaged by the revelation of the misdirection, had no bearing on the case, nor did plaintiff indicate how impairment of the dispatcher's credibility would matter, given the admission of negligence by the city. Christofferson v. Great Falls, 2003 MT 189, 316 M 469, 74 P3d 1021 (2003).

Actionable Section 1983 Claim Under State-Created Danger Theory: A government official who, while acting under color of state law, deprives an individual of constitutionally protected rights may be subject to personal liability for civil damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1983. Generally, a government official's failure to protect an individual from harm does not constitute a due process violation. Inaction by the state, even when a danger is known, does not trigger a due process obligation except under the "state-created danger" theory, derived from DeShaney v. Winnebago County Dept. of Social Services, 489 US 189, 103 L Ed 2d 249, 109 S Ct 998 (1989), which provides that a constitutional duty to protect may be imposed when state actors have affirmatively acted to create plaintiff's danger or to render plaintiff more vulnerable to it. Adopting the test in Huffman v. County of Los Angeles, 147 F3d 1054 (9th Cir. 1998), the Supreme Court held that to assert an actionable 42 U.S.C. 1983 claim under the state-created danger theory, plaintiff must demonstrate that the state acted affirmatively, with deliberate indifference, in creating a foreseeable danger to plaintiff, leading to deprivation of plaintiff's constitutional rights. In the present case, material facts existed as to whether an officer affirmatively and with deliberate indifference placed a woman in danger, increased her vulnerability to danger, or deprived her of her right to life; thus, summary dismissal of her husband's personal liability claim against the officer was reversible error. Nelson v. Driscoll, 1999 MT 193, 295 M 363, 983 P2d 972, 56 St. Rep. 744 (1999). See also Wood v. Ostrander, 879 F2d 583 (9th Cir. 1989), and Kneipp v. Tedder, 95 F3d 1199 (3rd Cir. 1996).

Public Duty Doctrine as Applied to Law Enforcement Personnel — Exception in Cases of Special Relationship: Trina admitted that she had been drinking when stopped in her vehicle by Officer Driscoll, who nevertheless believed that sufficient probable cause did not exist to arrest the woman. Instead, thinking Trina might be impaired, the officer suggested a ride home or that Trina walk the 2-mile distance and warned Trina about returning to the vehicle. Trina decided instead to walk to a phone and call for a ride and was killed in traffic. Trina's husband brought suit for civil damages under 42 U.S.C. 1983, claiming that the officer breached the duty to protect, in violation of Trina's due process rights. The District Court summarily dismissed the claim, holding that because no probable cause existed for Trina's arrest, the officer had no duty to protect Trina from harm and that without a duty, the action failed. The public duty doctrine provides that a police officer's duty to protect and preserve the peace is owed to the public at large rather than to a particular person, unless a special relationship exists, thus giving rise to a special duty that is more particular than that owed to the public. A special relationship is established: (1) by a statute intended to protect a specific class of persons, of which the plaintiff is a member, from a particular type of harm; (2) when a government agent undertakes specific action to protect a person or property; (3) by governmental actions that reasonably induce detrimental reliance by a member of the public; and (4) under certain circumstances when the agency has actual custody of the plaintiff or of a third person who harms the plaintiff. Relying on Stewart v. Standard Publishing Co., 102 M 43, 55 P2d 694 (1936), the Supreme Court agreed that although the officer may not have initially owed Trina a duty to protect, that duty was assumed as a matter of law when the officer prevented the woman from driving her car and ensured that she did not attempt to drive. The question of whether the duty to protect was breached is a question of fact for the jury, so summary dismissal was improper. Nelson v. Driscoll, 1999 MT 193, 295 M 363, 983 P2d 972, 56 St. Rep. 744 (1999), clarifying and distinguishing Phillips v. Billings, 233 M 249, 758 P2d 772 (1988), and followed in Massee v. Thompson, 2004 MT 121, 321 M 210, 90 P3d 394 (2004). Nelson was followed, as to elements of exception to the public duty doctrine (nonlaw enforcement case), in Orr v. St., 2004 MT 354, 324 M 391, 106 P3d 100 (2004), and Prosser v. Kennedy Enterprises, Inc., 2008 MT 87, 342 M 209, 179 P3d 1178 (2008). See also Krieg v. Law Not Clearly Established at Time — Qualified Immunity Extended: Police officers searched Dorwart's home pursuant to writs of execution and seized his personal property, but without Dorwart's permission or a search warrant. The District Court held that the officers were entitled to qualified immunity from individual liability for Dorwart's due process claims because the constitutional notice-related rights that were violated were not clearly established at the time of the officers' entry, so the officers could not have known that their actions violated Dorwart's rights. In analyzing whether an official is entitled to qualified immunity, a court must identify the right violated and must determine whether the right was clearly established at the time of the violation and, if so, whether a reasonable person or the official would have known that the conduct violated that right. If plaintiff shows that the right was clearly established at the time of the violation, the burden then shifts to defendant asserting qualified immunity to prove that the conduct was reasonable even though it violated the law. Under the law as it existed at the time that the officers entered Dorwart's home and levied upon his property, it was not clearly established whether a writ of execution pursuant to which the deputies acted, in and of itself, authorized entry into a private residence or whether the officers' entry pursuant only to the writ violated Dorwart's right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure. Plaintiff Dorwart never satisfied the initial burden of proving that the right that the deputies violated was clearly established at the time of the violation, so the deputies were entitled to qualified immunity from individual liability for Dorwart's search and seizure claim. Dorwart's general assertion of the right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure was too broad for purposes of determining the clearly established right portion of the qualified immunity determination, which requires that violation of the right be established in a more particularized, relevant sense. Dorwart v. Caraway, 1998 MT 191, 290 M 196, 966 P2d 1121, 55 St. Rep. 777 (1998), following Hamilton v. Endell, 981 F2d 1062 (9th Cir. 1992), and Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009 (1997).

Qualified Immunity Defense Unavailable in Action for Declaratory or Injunctive Relief: Plaintiff did not seek monetary damages for a due process claim, requesting only a declaratory judgment and permanent injunction. Qualified immunity is a defense to damages liability but is not available in actions for declaratory or injunctive relief. The District Court erred in applying qualified immunity in the context of this due process claim. Dorwart v. Caraway, 1998 MT 191, 290 M 196, 966 P2d 1121, 55 St. Rep. 777 (1998), following Am. Fire, Theft & Collision Managers, Inc. v. Gillespie, 932 F2d 816 (9th Cir. 1991).

Sovereign Immunity Bars Tort Action by Individual Against State in Tribal Court: Following a fatal accident on a state-maintained highway located within the exterior boundaries of the Blackfeet Reservation, Gilham, the mother of the victim, filed suit in Blackfeet Tribal Court against the driver and the State of Montana, alleging negligence. After the Blackfeet Tribal Court entered a judgment against the state, Montana filed an action in federal District Court challenging the jurisdiction of the tribal court. The District Court granted the state's motion, ruling that as a sovereign, Montana enjoys immunity from suit in tribal courts and that the waiver of immunity under Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., waives Montana's immunity only from suit in Montana state courts. On appeal, the Ninth Circuit Court affirmed, ruling that states have retained their historic sovereign immunity from suits by individuals and that this immunity is not abrogated by the inherent powers of tribes. The waiver of immunity found in Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., applies only to suits in Montana's own courts. Mont. v. Gilham, 133 F3d 1133 (9th Cir. 1998).

Justice Department Investigator Not Entitled to Prosecutorial Immunity for Administrative Acts in Gambling License Application Investigation: Kelman applied to the Department of Justice for a gambling operator's license in connection with her contractual interest in two casinos. The Department assigned Losleben to investigate and report on the application. Losleben filed a 37-page "offense report" recommending that the Department deny the application and prosecute Kelman and others listed in the report for alleged criminal violations. Kelman filed suit against Losleben, alleging invasion of privacy, injurious falsehood, wrongful use of civil proceedings, tortious interference with contract, and actual fraud. The District Court dismissed the claims, concluding that Losleben was a government official entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity. On appeal, the Supreme Court focused on whether the alleged wrongful conduct occurred in the course of filing and maintaining criminal charges, in accord with Smith v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 266 M 1, 878 P2d 870 (1994), and whether the conduct was intimately associated with the judicial phase of the criminal process, as set out in Imbler v. Pachtman, 424 US 409, 47 L Ed 2d 128, 96 S Ct 984 (1976). A review of the record showed that Losleben was acting in an administrative capacity while investigating and reporting on Kelman's application as an agent of the Department, rather than in a prosecutorial capacity of filing and maintaining criminal charges. As such, Losleben was not entitled to prosecutorial immunity, and the District Court's dismissal of the claim of civil liability constituted reversible error. Kelman v. Losleben, 271 M 156, 894 P2d 955, 52 St. Rep. 387 (1995).

Limited Application of Nondelegable Duty Exception to Respondeat Superior Doctrine: Application of the nondelegable duty exception to the respondeat superior doctrine is limited to instances of safety in which the subject matter is inherently dangerous. The Supreme Court declined to modify the presently accepted version of the doctrine by adopting the exception, set out in section 214 of Restatement (Second) of Agency, that a master or other principal who is under a duty to provide protection for or to have care used to protect others or their property and who confides the performance or duty to a servant or other person is subject to liability to others for harm caused to them by the failure of the agent to perform the duty. Noting that there are several reasons for and against extending the liability of an employer when an intentional tort is committed only because or by virtue of the employment situation, the court opted to leave adoption of such a major doctrinal change to the Legislature. Maguire v. St., 254 M 178, 835 P2d 755, 49 St. Rep. 688 (1992), followed in Estate of Strever v. Cline, 278 M 165, 924 P2d 666, 53 St. Rep. 576 (1996).

Summary Dismissal of Wrongful Discharge Claim Against County Attorney Acting in Official Capacity: When an action is brought against a county based on actionable conduct by an employee, the employee is immune from individual liability for the conduct if the county acknowledges that the conduct arose out of the course and scope of the employee's official duties. A County Attorney who dismissed his secretary when he took office was acting within the scope of his duties and was therefore immune from a wrongful discharge suit and was entitled to summary judgment on the claim. Kenyon v. Stillwater County, 254 M 142, 835 P2d 742, 49 St. Rep. 673 (1992), followed in Germann v. Stephens, 2006 MT 130, 332 M 303, 137 P3d 545 (2006). See also Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008), and Baumgart v. St., 2014 MT 194, 376 Mont. 1, 332 P.3d 225, concerning a state employee.

No Immunity Under Claim That State Not Liable for Joint and Several Liability Not Attributable to State Employee: The state, wishing to avoid the effects of joint and several liability, claimed that the state could not be jointly liable for the 42% negligence of an accident victim because the victim was not an officer or employee of the state. The Supreme Court found no applicable statutory or other theory that would preclude the general rule that the state has no immunity for its torts unless otherwise provided by the Legislature. Whiting v. St., 248 M 207, 810 P2d 1177, 48 St. Rep. 396 (1991).

Failure to Review Application for Self-Insurance — Quasi-Judicial Immunity Not Applicable: The Division of Workers' Compensation (now State Fund) admitted negligence for failing to conduct an adequate review of a corporation's financial ability to self-insure under plan No. 1, but claimed immunity under the rationale of Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988), for its acts as a government agency. The Supreme Court, noting that for immunity to apply, the function of the Division (now State Fund) must be quasi-judicial rather than administrative or ministerial, distinguished Koppen based on the lack of discretion necessary for the Division (now State Fund) to perform its statutory duty. Because simply performing this duty did not involve the use of quasi-judicial discretion, the act was purely ministerial and not protected by quasi-judicial immunity. The discretionary function exemption will not apply when a statute, regulation, or policy specifically prescribes a course of action for an employee to follow and the employee has no rightful option but to adhere to the directive. State ex rel. Div. of Workers' Comp. v. District Court, 240 M 225, 805 P2d 1272, 47 St. Rep. 1911 (1990), following Berkovitz v. U.S., 486 US 531, 100 L Ed 2d 531, 108 S Ct 1945 (1988). See also Meinecke v. McFarland, 122 M 515, 206 P2d 1012 (1949).

State and State Officials Not "Persons" for Purposes of Federal Suit Involving Deprivation of Rights: Neither the state nor its officials acting in their official capacities are "persons" for purposes of a civil action for deprivation of rights under 42 U.S.C. 1983. State ex rel. Div. of Workers' Comp. v. District Court, 246 M 225, 805 P2d 1272, 47 St. Rep. 1911 (1990), following Will v. Mich. Dept. of State Police, 491 US 58, 105 L Ed 2d 45, 109 S Ct 2304 (1989), and Brandon v. Holt, 469 US 464, 83 L Ed 2d 878, 105 S Ct 873 (1985).

Right to Sue Under 42 U.S.C. 1983 for Death Caused by Shots Fired by Police: Two police officers responded to a report of a shot fired in a residential area. The officers knocked on the door of an apartment identified by a local resident as the one entered by the man who had fired the shot. One of the officers shot and killed plaintiff's husband after the husband opened the door and allegedly pointed a shotgun at the officers. His wife sued the officers, the police department, and Butte-Silver Bow County under 42 U.S.C. 1983. The court held that the action was recognizable under that section since the wife alleged that the defendants acted with gross negligence amounting to deliberate indifference to her husband's well-being. A local government may be held liable under 42 U.S.C. 1983 for a federal constitutional violation when execution of its policy or custom, whether by its lawmakers or by those whose edicts or acts may fairly be said to represent official policy, inflicts an injury. Scott v. Henrich, 700 F. Supp. 498, 45 St. Rep. 2444 (D.C. Mont. 1988).

Initiation of Lawsuit by School District — Waiver of Sovereign Immunity: When a school district sued respondents for return of school transportation payments allegedly made in error, the school district was not entitled to use the doctrine of sovereign immunity as a defense to respondents' counterclaim. School District v. Simonsen, 210 M 100, 683 P2d 471, 41 St. Rep. 944 (1984).

School District Not Entitled to Protection of Eleventh Amendment — Federal Age Discrimination in Employment Action: Where the plaintiff schoolteacher brought an action against the defendant school district under the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act and the defendant claimed it was entitled to the protection of the 11th amendment as against the plaintiff's claims for summary damages, the federal District Court held, under the analysis required by Mt. Healthy City Bd. of Educ. v. Doyle, 429 US 274 (1977), and under Montana law, that a school district is not the "alter ego" of the State itself and therefore is not entitled to 11th amendment protection against actions for damages granted to states. Because the court held that the defendant district did not constitute the State, it did not reach the issue of whether the State had waived its 11th amendment immunity. Kenny v. Bd. of Trustees, 563 F. Supp. 95, 40 St. Rep. 940 (D.C. Mont. 1983).

Wrongful Placement of Special Education Child — Duty Owed by School District — Sovereign Immunity No Bar to Claim for Damages: The plaintiff, a minor child, was diagnosed as needing special education and was to be educated in a class with other "normal" children but was later removed to a class of retarded children and as a result regressed in development. The school district's action of placement of the child was subject to judicial review and was not barred from review by the doctrine of sovereign immunity merely because it was discretionary. The school authorities owed the child a duty of reasonable care in testing and placing her in an appropriate special education program, and the District Court therefore erred in dismissing the child's action for damages. B.M. v. St., 200 M 58, 649 P2d 425, 39 St. Rep. 1285 (1982). See also State ex rel. Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363, 46 St. Rep. 1929 (1989).

Federal Suit by Prisoner — City Not a Proper Defendant: A state prison inmate brought a civil rights action in federal District Court against his parole officers, a deputy sheriff, and the city of Deer Lodge. Because the parole officers were employed by the state, the Deputy Sheriff was employed by the county, and the plaintiff failed to oppose the city's motion for summary judgment, the city was properly dismissed as a defendant. Harvey v. Pomroy, 535 F. Supp. 78, 39 St. Rep. 657 (D.C. Mont. 1982).

Stipulation of Dismissal of Action Against Police Officer as Applying to City and County Under "Respondeat Superior" Doctrine: A man fleeing from police officers was shot by one of them. The man later entered into a stipulation for dismissal with prejudice of the claim against the officer, but later the city and county, also defendants in the suit, were denied their motions for dismissal with prejudice. The Montana Supreme Court held that a stipulation of dismissal with prejudice of a defendant is tantamount to a judgment on the merits; accordingly, such a dismissal with prejudice is res judicata as to every issue reasonably raised by the pleadings. Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, an employer defendant's liability is vicarious or derivative and does not arise until an employee acts negligently within the scope of his employment. A dismissal with prejudice of a claim against an employee is equivalent to a finding that the employee was not negligent. Under the doctrine of respondeat superior, such a dismissal of an employee operates to exonerate the employer. The Supreme Court will look at the dismissal with prejudice on its face and will not look behind the words "with prejudice". State ex rel. Havre v. District Court, 187 M 181, 609 P2d 275 (1980).

Highway Death — Sovereign Immunity: The state may not under Montana's Constitution or any law maintain a defense of sovereign immunity against claims arising from death, and there is no such defense as "financial feasibility or discretion" that would relieve the state of liability for traffic deaths resulting from highways maintained unsafely. St. v. District Court, 175 M 63, 572 P2d 201 (1977).

Prosecutorial Immunity: Prosecutorial immunity and sovereign immunity are different concepts supported by different considerations of public policy. It is an established general principle that any statutory waiver of a state's immunity from suit be strictly construed. Prosecutorial immunity remains in this state and applies to the state and the Department of Justice, specifically. State ex rel. Dept. of Justice v. District Court, 172 M 88, 560 P2d 1328 (1976).

State Not Responsible for Negligence of Municipal Police Officers: City's claim that state is liable under doctrine of respondeat superior where plaintiff sustained injuries allegedly due to negligence of city police was without merit. St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976).

Torts Committed by Police Officers — Liability of City: The power in the city to control its policemen in both broad and detailed affairs related to their work brings the policemen squarely within the definition of "employee" and subjects the city to liability for torts committed within the scope of their employment or duties. St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976).

Taxation — Levy for Liability Insurance: The levy provided by 2-9-212 does not require an election. The school trustees may authorize the levy upon determining that it is in the best interests of the school district. The annual property tax may be used to fund all policies of insurance required or permitted by law. 37 A.G. Op. 109 (1978), reversing contrary language in 35 A.G. Op. 44 (1973).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Case Notes

Firefighter Age Restriction Unconstitutional: Jaksha filed a complaint against the county alleging that he had been unlawfully denied employment as a probationary entry-level firefighter because of his age. Jaksha challenged the constitutionality of 7-33-4107, which disqualified an individual from receiving an original appointment as a firefighter if the individual was more than 34 years of age. The District Court denied the constitutional challenge and found in favor of the county, and Jaksha appealed. The Supreme Court reversed. Section 7-33-4107 violates the equal protection clause of the Montana Constitution by discriminating against an individual on the basis of age and is therefore unconstitutional. The jury's verdict, which was premised on the constitutionality of 7-33-4107, was therefore vacated. Nevertheless, Jaksha's claims for damages and back pay were barred under 2-9-103, because the county relied on 7-33-4107 in good faith and Jaksha failed to allege or prove that the county acted with malice or corruption. Jaksha v. Butte-Silver Bow County, 2009 MT 263, 352 M 46, 214 P3d 1248 (2009).

Writs of Execution Used to Enter, Search, and Seize — Damages for Violation of Constitutional Rights — Immunity of Peace Officers: Two brothers sued the Sheriff and two deputies for violating their Montana constitutional rights to privacy, due process, and freedom from unreasonable searches and seizures. Neither writs of execution issued to enforce default judgments against one brother nor the postjudgment statutes under which they were issued expressly directed or authorized local peace officers to enter the other brother's house and search for and seize property of the brother against whom the writs were issued and who lived in the house. Therefore, this section did not give the peace officers immunity from suit on the basis that they acted "under the authority of law". However, to the extent that any claim for damages for violation of due process is based on failure to provide the brother against whom the writs were issued with notice of property that is exempt from execution and a timely hearing, the claim results from the execution statutes' constitutional inadequacy, and recovery for those procedural inadequacies is barred by the provision in this section for immunity for an action under authority of a law subsequently found unconstitutional. The District Court's dismissal, based on statutory immunity, of the brothers' other claims was reversed. Dorwart v. Caraway, 2002 MT 240, 312 M 1, 58 P3d 128 (2002).

City Not Liable for Reliance on Age Restriction Employment Statute: Plaintiff sued the city of Great Falls, alleging that the city was liable when it applied the provisions of 7-32-4112, which requires that police officer applicants be between the ages of 18 and 35. The District Court did not err when it held that even if 7-32-4112 was unconstitutional, the city cannot be held liable for relying on the statute. Ross v. Great Falls, 1998 MT 276, 291 M 377, 967 P2d 1103, 55 St. Rep. 1127 (1998).

Law Not Clearly Established at Time — Qualified Immunity Extended: Police officers searched Dorwart's home pursuant to writs of execution and seized his personal property, but without Dorwart's permission or a search warrant. The District Court held that the officers were entitled to qualified immunity from individual liability for Dorwart's due process claims because the constitutional notice-related rights that were violated were not clearly established at the time of the officers' entry, so the officers could not have known that their actions violated Dorwart's rights. In analyzing whether an official is entitled to qualified immunity, a court must identify the right violated and must determine whether the right was clearly established at the time of the violation and, if so, whether a reasonable person or the official would have known that the conduct violated that right. If plaintiff shows that the right was clearly established at the time of the violation, the burden then shifts to defendant asserting qualified immunity to prove that the conduct was reasonable even though it violated the law. Under the law as it existed at the time that the officers entered Dorwart's home and levied upon his property, it was not clearly established whether a writ of execution pursuant to which the deputies acted, in and of itself, authorized entry into a private residence or whether the officers' entry pursuant only to the writ violated Dorwart's right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure. Plaintiff Dorwart never satisfied the initial burden of proving that the right that the deputies violated was clearly established at the time of the violation, so the deputies were entitled to qualified immunity from individual liability for Dorwart's search and seizure claim. Dorwart's general assertion of the right to be free from unreasonable search and seizure was too broad for purposes of determining the clearly established right portion of the qualified immunity determination, which requires that violation of the right be established in a more particularized, relevant sense. Dorwart v. Caraway, 1998 MT 191, 290 M 196, 966 P2d 1121, 55 St. Rep. 777 (1998), following Hamilton v. Endell, 981 F2d 1062 (9th Cir. 1992), and Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009 (1997).

Qualified Immunity Defense Unavailable in Action for Declaratory or Injunctive Relief: Plaintiff did not seek monetary damages for a due process claim, requesting only a declaratory judgment and permanent injunction. Qualified immunity is a defense to damages liability but is not available in actions for declaratory or injunctive relief. The District Court erred in applying qualified immunity in the context of this due process claim. Dorwart v. Caraway, 1998 MT 191, 290 M 196, 966 P2d 1121, 55 St. Rep. 777 (1998), following Am. Fire, Theft & Collision Managers, Inc. v. Gillespie, 932 F2d 816 (9th Cir. 1991).

2-9-105. State or other governmental entity immune from exemplary and punitive damages.

Case Notes

Government Punitive Damages Immunization — Constitutionality: Plaintiff had a constitutional right to redress against the state for all of her injuries but did not have a constitutional right to punitive damages. Thus the rational basis test, rather than the strict scrutiny test, was applied to equal protection review of 2-9-105, immunizing the state and other governmental entities from exemplary and punitive damages. There is a rational basis for distinguishing governmental from other entities in the grant of punitive damages, in that such damages are to punish the wrongdoer and deter future similar conduct of the wrongdoer and others similarly disposed. The deterrent effect upon a government is extremely small, and innocent taxpayers are the persons punished. Therefore, 2-9-105 is not unconstitutional. White v. St., 203 M 363, 661 P2d 1272, 40 St. Rep. 507 (1983). See also Birkenbuel v. Mont. St. Comp. Ins. Fund, 212 M 139, 687 P2d 700, 41 St. Rep. 1647 (1984).

Claims Prior to Effective Date of Section: Irrigation district, a state government entity, was subject to punitive damages in tort action where action arose in and was limited to summer of 1974. The 1972 Montana Constitution provided that the state, counties, cities, towns, and all other local governmental entities have no immunity from suit for injury to person or property except as may be specifically provided by law by a two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature, and the Legislature did not provide immunity for certain governmental entities until 1977 when it enacted 2-9-104 and this section, which cannot be retroactively applied. Dvorak v. Huntley Project Irrigation District, 196 M 167, 639 P2d 62, 38 St. Rep. 2176 (1981).

Immunity of State Employees: This section does not apply to individuals so as to make them immune from punitive damages; their immunity from damages is covered in 2-9-305. Dvorak v. Huntley Project Irrigation District, 196 M 167, 639 P2d 62, 38 St. Rep. 2176 (1981).

1997 Amendment: Chapter 337 inserted (2) providing that state, county, municipality, taxing districts, and other state political subdivisions are not liable for negligent actions of officers, agents, or employees for damages suffered by persons on the premises of a correctional or detention facility who are serving a sentence for a crime, creating an exemption to immunity for medical malpractice, gross negligence, willful or wanton conduct, and intentional tort, and providing that subsection (2) does not create an exception from the dollar limitations established in subsection (1); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 22, 1997.

Repeal of Termination Date: Section 1, Ch. 239, L. 1993, amended sec. 9, Ch. 22, Sp. L. June 1986, by deleting the June 30, 1987, termination date applicable to this section. Section 2, Ch. 239, L. 1993, amended sec. 1, Ch. 228, L. 1987, by deleting the June 30, 1991, termination date applicable to this section. Section 3, Ch. 239, L. 1993, amended sec. 1, Ch. 803, L. 1991, by deleting the June 30, 1993, termination date applicable to this section. The effect of the 1993 act was to make this section permanent. Amendment effective April 1, 1993.

Effective Date — Termination — Special Vote Requirement: Section 1, Ch. 228, L. 1987, extended the effective period of the temporary versions of 2-9-101 and 2-9-108 from June 30, 1987, to June 30, 1991.

Section 2, Ch. 228, L. 1987, provided: "Because this act amends and extends the effect of a statute imposing limited immunity on governmental entities, Article II, section 18, of the Montana constitution may require a two-thirds vote of the members of each house of the legislature to be effective." Chapter 228 was passed by a vote of 90-5 in the House of Representatives and 47-3 in the Senate.

Applicability — Termination — 1986 Enactment: Sections 7 and 9, Ch. 22, Sp. L. June 1986, provided that 2-9-108 was effective July 10, 1986; applies to all claims, lawsuits, and causes of action arising after July 10, 1986; and terminates on June 30, 1987.

Immunity From Suit — 1986 Enactment: Since Ch. 22, Sp. L. June 1986, imposed limited immunity on governmental entities, Article II, section 18, of the Montana Constitution required a vote of two-thirds of the members of each house of the Legislature to be effective. Chapter 22 was approved by a vote of 85-8 in the House and 43-7 in the Senate.

Severability — 1986 Enactment: Section 6, Ch. 22, Sp. L. June 1986, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

Limit on Damages Recoverable From Municipality Inapplicable Absent Claim of Injury to or Destruction of Tangible Property: Plaintiff sued the city of Bozeman for lost profits and alleged constructive fraud, negligent misrepresentation, and intentional interference with prospective economic advantage related to a real estate purchase and development issue. During the course of litigation, the District Court, as a sanction for discovery abuse, ordered that the city was liable for interfering with the property purchase and development, resulting in injury to plaintiff. During trial, the court denied the city's jury instruction that plaintiff was required to prove that the city had caused damages, and instead the jury was instructed to determine the amount of damages plaintiff suffered. The jury awarded $3 million in damages. The city argued that the governmental liability damages cap of $750,000 in 2-9-108 should have limited the damage amount, but the court held that the cap did not apply, so the city appealed. The Supreme Court affirmed. The statutory cap applies only to claims for personal injury or property damage, and because plaintiff made no claim for injury or destruction of tangible property, the cap did not apply. Delaney & Co. v. Bozeman, 2009 MT 441, 354 M 181, 222 P3d 618 (2009).

Refusal to Treat Separate Recoveries as Single Claim of Damages: When a rape and subsequent pregnancy were the subjects of a complaint and at trial defendant admitted to two additional rapes of the same victim, the District Court did not err in refusing to treat the separate recoveries as a single claim of damages under this section because each rape was a separate wrongful act. Maguire v. St., 254 M 178, 835 P2d 755, 49 St. Rep. 688 (1992), followed in Estate of Strever v. Cline, 278 M 165, 924 P2d 666, 53 St. Rep. 576 (1996).

Limitations on Certain Types of Government Tort Damages — Constitutionality:

The Supreme Court invalidated 2-9-107 (repealed 1986) as violative of the fundamental right to redress, insofar as it limits the liability of the state or any political subdivision, in tort actions for damages suffered from an act or omission of an officer, agent, or employee of the entity, to amounts not in excess of $300,000 for each claimant and $1,000,000 for each occurrence. The court rejected the legislative findings that prefaced enactment of 2-9-107 as a substitute for 2-9-104 (repealed 1983), which was declared unconstitutional in White v. St., 203 M 363, 661 P2d 1272, 40 St. Rep. 507 (1983). The legislative findings denigrate the right of the individual to full legal redress in favor of not raising taxes and do not constitute a compelling state interest. Pfost v. St., 219 M 206, 713 P2d 495, 42 St. Rep. 1957 (1985).

Article II, sec. 16, Mont. Const., guarantees that all persons shall have a speedy remedy for every injury to person, property, or character. The Constitution's language "every injury" embraces all recognized compensable components of injury, including the right to be compensated for physical pain, mental anguish, and the loss of enjoyment of living. The right to bring a civil action for personal injury is a fundamental right, and the strict scrutiny test requiring that the statutory scheme be found unconstitutional unless the state could demonstrate that it was necessary to promote a compelling government interest applied to 2-9-104 (repealed, 1983), which provided that the state, a county, municipality, taxing district, or any other political subdivision of the state was not liable in tort for noneconomic damages or for economic damages in excess of $300,000 a claimant and $1 million an occurrence. White v. St., 203 M 363, 661 P2d 1272, 40 St. Rep. 507 (1983).

Subsection (1) of 2-9-104 (repealed, 1983) provided that neither the state, a county, municipality, taxing district, nor any other political subdivision of the state was liable in tort for economic damages in excess of $300,000 a claimant and $1 million an occurrence or for noneconomic damages. The state argued a compelling state interest in insuring that there would be sufficient funds to supply needed services to those governed by state and local government and that government has to engage in a wide range of activities, some extremely dangerous and not confronted by private industry. This bare assertion fell far short of justifying the subsection (1)(a) class discrimination that infringed upon fundamental rights. Denying noneconomic damages while allowing economic damages was unconstitutional under the strict scrutiny equal protection test. Furthermore, to strike (1)(a) and leave (1)(b) intact would create new discrimination problems in that those with economic loss could get only limited damages, while those with noneconomic loss would have no limit imposed; and since the state failed to demonstrate a compelling state interest justifying any limitation, subsection (1) was unconstitutional in its entirety. Though some liability limit may comport with equal protection, the limitation could not discriminate between those suffering pain and loss of life quality and those suffering primarily economic loss. White v. St., 203 M 363, 661 P2d 1272, 40 St. Rep. 507 (1983).

Initiation of Lawsuit by School District — Waiver of Sovereign Immunity: When a school district sued respondents for return of school transportation payments allegedly made in error, the school district was not entitled to use the doctrine of sovereign immunity as a defense to respondents' counterclaim. School District v. Simonsen, 210 M 100, 683 P2d 471, 41 St. Rep. 944 (1984).

State's Liability Insurance Not Limit on Recovery Against State: Former law providing for waiver of sovereign immunity defense up to limits of any existing liability insurance policy was not applicable because the defense could not be raised in instant case. Jacques v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 199 M 493, 649 P2d 1319, 39 St. Rep. 1565 (1982).

Injuries Prior to Enactment of Former Section Limiting Liability — Governing Law: Plaintiff's tort damages were substantive, and their measure was governed by the law in effect on the date of his injury. Therefore, where 2-9-104 (repealed 1984) was enacted after plaintiff's accident, for which the state was found liable, but was in effect at the time of the trial, the limits in 2-9-104 governing the state's liability did not apply. Jacques v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 199 M 493, 649 P2d 1319, 39 St. Rep. 1565 (1982).

Immunity of State Employees: Section 2-9-104 (repealed 1984) did not apply to individuals so as to make them immune from punitive damages; their immunity from damages is covered in 2-9-305. Dvorak v. Huntley Project Irrigation District, 196 M 167, 639 P2d 62, 38 St. Rep. 2176 (1981).

Limitation of Damages as Reinstatement of Immunity — Final Judgment on Noneconomic Damages Required — Remedies of Plaintiff: Where the plaintiff brought an action against the state for injuries received by her minor son from the explosion of a National Guard practice grenade, claiming $93,000 in noneconomic damages and claiming that the limitation on noneconomic damages imposed by 2-9-104 (repealed 1984) was an unconstitutional limitation on the immunity of the state, the Supreme Court declined to rule on the constitutionality of the limitation and held instead that the District Court improperly granted partial summary judgment for the state, excluding all economic damages, as 2-9-104 allowed a plaintiff to petition the governing body of the defendant governmental entity for payment of economic damages only after a final judgment has been obtained as to those damages. Makin v. St., 190 M 363, 621 P2d 477, 37 St. Rep. 1998 (1980).

1991 Amendments: Chapter 818 inserted (5)(b) relating to liability for surface water and ground water contamination. Amendment effective May 24, 1991.

Chapter 821 in (1)(a), near beginning after "government entity", substituted "means only" for "includes" and after "school districts" inserted language concerning any other local governmental entity or political subdivision vested with legislative power; in (1)(b), near beginning after "legislative body", substituted "means only" for "includes" and near middle, after "Montana and", deleted "any local governmental entity given legislative powers by statute, including school boards" and inserted language concerning local government entities or political subdivisions empowered to enact statutes, charters, ordinances, orders, rules, policies, resolutions, or resolves; inserted (1)(c) defining legislative act and excepting from definition administrative action undertaken in execution of law or public policy; in (2), near beginning before "act or omission", inserted "legislative" and after "legislative body" substituted "or any member or staff of the legislative body, engaged in legislative acts" for "a member, officer, or agent thereof"; at beginning of (3) substituted "Any member or staff of a legislative body" for "A member, officer, or agent of a legislative body" and near end, after "associated with", substituted "legislative acts of the legislative body" for "the introduction or consideration of legislation or action by the legislative body"; inserted (4) concerning acquisition of insurance as not constituting waiver of immunity provided by section; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 24, 1991.

Severability: Section 3, Ch. 818, and sec. 2, Ch. 821, L. 1991, were severability clauses.

Effective Date — Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 818, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval [approved May 24, 1991] and applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to causes of action that have not been reduced to final judgment on or before [the effective date of this act] [effective May 24, 1991]."

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 821, L. 1991, provided that this section applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to causes of action that have not been reduced to final judgment on or before [the effective date of this act]. Effective May 24, 1991.

Case Notes

DECISIONS AFTER 1991 AMENDMENTS

Conduct of City Council Meeting Hearing Criticism of City Employee — Not Restricted by Free Speech and Privileged Communication Cases and Statute — Not Legislative Act Shielded by Legislative Immunity: Denke filed complaints with the Human Rights Commission alleging that Thompson Falls and Shoemaker, a City Council member, retaliated against her for previously filing sexual harassment charges with the Commission by holding a City Council meeting at which Shoemaker was allowed, with virtually no limitation, to severely criticize her conduct as city clerk and finance officer. The Commission hearing examiner, the Commission, and the District Court held that Shoemaker's criticism of Denke's actions as city bookkeeper aired during the City Council meeting was a "legislative act" within the meaning of 2-9-111 and the city was therefore immune from a charge of retaliation. The Supreme Court held that 27-1-804(2) and free speech cases such as New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 US 254 (1964), and Skinner v. Pistoria, 194 M 257, 633 P2d 672 (1981), did not limit the City Council's ability to regulate the time, place, and manner of Shoemaker's criticism. The Supreme Court also held that Denke's claim did not involve the calling of the City Council meeting (for which the city would be immune under 2-9-114) so much as the manner in which the meeting was conducted and that the conduct of the meeting did not fall within the definition of a "legislative act", and remanded the case for further proceedings. Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

No School District Immunity for Entering Exclusive Commercial Contract for Sale of Products in School Facilities: The Great Falls school district adopted policies to enhance revenue from nontax sources and subsequently entered exclusive agreements with Coke and Pepsi to provide soft drinks in school facilities in exchange for $500,000 over a 10-year period. Plaintiff, which had supplied soft drinks to the district for almost 20 years, sued the school district, Coke, and Pepsi. The school district claimed immunity from suit pursuant to this section, asserting that adopting exclusive contracts constituted legislative actions resulting in the adoption of school board policies under 20-3-323. The Supreme Court agreed that this section insulated the school district from legal challenge for its decision to enhance revenue from nontax sources by way of commercial engagements because the adoption of policies is a legislative act. However, administrative acts undertaken in the execution of the policies are not immunized under this section, so the school district was not immune from suit for entering the exclusive contracts. Mont. Vending, Inc. v. Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Mont., 2003 MT 282, 318 M 1, 78 P3d 499 (2003).

Absolute Common-Law Immunity Against Civil Suits for Legislative Actions: A consumer suit against several private electric and natural gas utilities and various state elected officials, including 58 members of the Montana House of Representatives and 25 members of the Montana Senate during the 1997 legislative session, was properly dismissed as to state legislators because they have absolute common-law immunity against civil suits for legislative actions. Single Moms, Inc. v. Mont. Power Co., 331 F3d 743 (9th Cir. 2003).

Award of Attorney Fees Under Private Attorney General Doctrine Inapplicable to Legislative Actions: Plaintiffs, including several individuals and cities, prevailed in an action declaring as unconstitutional a statutory process for designating a county building code jurisdictional area and eliminating municipal jurisdictional areas by an election procedure limited to record owners of real property instead of the general constituency. Plaintiffs sought attorney fees from defendants, including several counties and the state, under the private attorney general doctrine exception established in Montanans for Responsible Use of School Trust v. State ex rel. Bd. of Land Comm'rs, 1999 MT 263, 296 M 402, 989 P2d 800 (1999). The Supreme Court found that although it might be equitable to award attorney fees to plaintiffs under the doctrine, the inequity of imposing those fees against the defendant counties who neither fashioned nor passed the unconstitutional law was overriding. Thus, the only entity remaining against whom fees could be assessed was the state, for the actions of the Legislature, but under this section, the Legislature is immune from suit for any action or omission, so there was no avenue whereby attorney fees could be assessed, and the request for fees was denied. Finke v. State ex rel. McGrath, 2003 MT 48, 314 M 314, 65 P3d 576 (2003).

Immunity of Council Members From Suit Relating to Approval or Denial of Subdivision Plat Application by City Council: A legislative act is an action by a legislative body that results in the creation of law or declaration of public policy. An administrative act is an action taken in the execution of a law or public policy. The approval or denial of a subdivision plat application is an administrative act. Therefore, neither the governmental entity nor a member of it who acts for the entity is immune under this section from suit based on the approval or denial. However, in this case, all the claims alleged by the developer suing over the conditions that the City Council attached to its approval of the preliminary plat application related to actions performed by City Council members acting as the City Council. Therefore, under 2-9-305, the individual Council members were immune from suit. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Statute Held to Grant Discretion to Approve or Deny Tax Reduction — County Immunity Not Implicated by Declaratory Judgment Action: After granting new or expanded industry tax reductions to several applicants whose property also received a tax break pursuant to another program, the Board of County Commissioners of Yellowstone County amended its resolution implementing the new or expanded industry tax reduction to provide that applicants were to no longer be entitled to a reduction but that reductions would be granted in the discretion of the Board and would not be granted by the Board if the property of the applicant was already subject to a tax break through some other program. Pursuant to these changes, the County Commissioners denied Cenex's application for a tax reduction under 15-24-1402 on pollution control equipment that had already received a different tax reduction from the state. Cenex brought a declaratory judgment action against the Board, claiming that the Board had illegally withheld the tax reduction. Noting the construction previously given to the statutory use of the term "approval" in McCarten v. Sanderson, 111 M 407, 109 P2d 1108 (1941), the Supreme Court held that 15-24-1402 clearly gives the County Commissioners discretion over whether or not to grant approval of the tax reduction and does not require that approval to be granted. The Supreme Court also held that the Board could change its position as to whether the tax reductions would be granted for property subject to other tax breaks and was not required to continue to grant the tax reductions under 15-24-1402 after the Board discovered the fiscal effect of granting a reduction on property that already received a tax break under another program. The Supreme Court held that because Cenex sought a declaratory judgment, the Board's liability wasn't an issue and that for that reason, the Supreme Court would not address the Board's claim of immunity under this section. Cenex, Inc. v. Yellowstone County Bd. of Comm'rs, 283 M 330, 941 P2d 964, 54 St. Rep. 695 (1997).

Federal Court Summary Judgment Final — Subsequent State Court Action Barred as Res Judicata: Mills filed a claim in U.S. District Court against Lincoln County for negligence. The county filed a motion for summary judgment, claiming immunity under this section, and the court granted the motion. Shortly thereafter, the Legislature amended this section to clarify that legislative immunity extended only to legislative bodies and to legislative actions taken by those bodies. Rather than filing a motion for reconsideration in federal court, Mills filed a complaint in state District Court, effectively precluding any relief from the federal system and rendering the federal court judgment final. A federal court summary judgment is a final judgment on the merits, and Mills' subsequent state action was therefore barred as res judicata. Mills v. Lincoln County, 262 M 283, 864 P2d 1265, 50 St. Rep. 1552 (1993), followed in State ex rel. Harlem Irrigation District v. District Court, 271 M 129, 894 P2d 943, 52 St. Rep. 364 (1995).

Good Faith Considerations Improperly Considered in Context of Age Discrimination Claim: The District Court granted summary judgment to employer on an age discrimination claim, concluded that immunity under this section did not apply, and then went on to grant summary judgment to the employer on a wrongful discharge claim based on its determination that the employee was terminated for good cause, as defined in 39-2-903. The good cause discussion and conclusion followed immediately upon the court's consideration of the employer's long-term dissatisfaction with the employee's work performance in the context of the age discrimination claim. The motion for summary judgment and supporting arguments on the wrongful discharge claim differed significantly from those relating to the age discrimination claim, and the good cause issue as it related to the wrongful discharge claim was not raised or argued by either party. By granting summary judgment on an issue not before it, the court effectively denied Kenyon notice and an opportunity to be heard on the issue. The case was remanded. Kenyon v. Stillwater County, 254 M 142, 835 P2d 742, 49 St. Rep. 673 (1992), overruled, with regard to plaintiff's burden to adduce facts that, if believed, support a reasonable inference that plaintiff was denied an employment opportunity and, if the employer rebuts the inference of discrimination with evidence of legitimate, nondiscriminatory reasons, to demonstrate with specific facts that the employer's explanation is a pretext, in Heiat v. E. Mont. College, 275 M 322, 912 P2d 787, 53 St. Rep. 162 (1996).

Change in Governmental Immunity Law — Extraordinary Circumstance Warranting Reversal of Prior Judgment — Reasonable Time for Filing Claim for Relief: Although generally a change in decisional law is not a valid reason under which a prior judgment may be reversed pursuant to former Rule 60(b)(5), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), extraordinary circumstances may warrant modification, under former Rule 60(b)(6), M.R.Civ.P. (now superseded), of a final judgment. Legislative revision of this section, enacted in response to the decisions in Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363 (1990), and Crowell v. School District No. 7, 247 M 38, 805 P2d 522 (1991), significantly changed the statute and modified the theories expressed in those immunity cases so as to constitute circumstances extraordinary enough to warrant reversal. This does not establish a general rule for reopening a final judgment merely because there has been a substantial change in statutory law upon which that judgment was based because only when extraordinary circumstances are found to exist may former Rule 60(b)(6) be used to modify a final judgment. Further, the fact that plaintiffs' motion was filed 48 days after the Crowell decision was not so unreasonable as to make the motion untimely. The discretion of the Supreme Court to revisit a final judgment is flexible enough to allow reconsideration of individual case facts in the interests of justice. Koch v. Billings School District No. 2, 253 M 261, 833 P2d 181, 49 St. Rep. 517 (1992).

School District Not Immune From Suit for Act or Omission by Teacher:

The day after the decision in Hedges v. School District No. 73, 248 M 365, 812 P2d 334, 48 St. Rep. 449 (1991), below, a law was signed that significantly amended this section by removing the immunity of a legislative body for the negligent acts of its employees. The Supreme Court found no relationship between the alleged negligence of a teacher and the adoption by the school board of policies that would constitute a legislative act sufficient to trigger immunity. Because the teacher's actions did not arise from the lawful discharge of an official duty associated with a legislative act, under the amended statute, there was no immunity for the school district or any member or staff of the district. Hedges v. School District No. 73, 253 M 188, 832 P2d 775, 49 St. Rep. 469 (1992). See also Dagel v. Great Falls, 250 M 224, 819 P2d 186, 48 St. Rep. 919 (1991). Dagel was followed as to member of city council in Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

Consistent with this section as it read prior to the 1991 amendment, a school district was immune from suit for an act or omission by its agent, including that of a teacher acting as an agent of the district. Hedges v. School District No. 73, 248 M 365, 812 P2d 334, 48 St. Rep. 449 (1991), following Crowell v. School District No. 7, 247 M 38, 805 P2d 522, 48 St. Rep. 81 (1991). See also S.M. v. R.B., 248 M 322, 811 P2d 1295, 48 St. Rep. 453 (1991).

Road Maintenance — No Immunity: The city of Missoula held a public hearing to address residents' proposed closure of a dirt road. Upon motion, the resolution was denied. The residents filed suit, claiming inverse condemnation and a continuing nuisance. The city alleged immunity because of consideration of the issue by the City Council. The Supreme Court held that immunity applies only to legislative acts. A legislative act is an action by a legislative body that results in creation of law or declaration of public policy. The duty of a city in connection with the maintenance of streets is an administrative function. A municipality is not immune from nuisance claims. Knight v. Missoula, 252 M 232, 827 P2d 1270, 49 St. Rep. 230 (1992).

City Liable for Nonlegislative Act of City Employee — Applicability of 1991 Amendment: Dagel sued the city of Great Falls under this section for wrongful discharge and both negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, based on harassment against her by Manzer, her city supervisor. Dagel alleged that under this section, the city was responsible for the individual acts of its agent, Manzer. The 1991 amendments to this section clearly provided that a legislative body is not immune from the negligent acts of its employees and that the purchase of insurance does not waive liability. Because harassment by a superior is not a legislative act, Dagel's claim of constructive discharge is not related to action by a legislative body and the city is therefore not immune from suit under this section. To the extent that the 1991 amendment does not conform with contrary prior decisions in Crowell v. School District No. 7, 247 M 38, 805 P2d 522, 48 St. Rep. 81 (1991), Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363 (1990), and Peterson v. School District No. 1, 237 M 376, 733 P2d 316 (1989), the 1991 version of this section prevails. Dagel v. Great Falls, 250 M 224, 819 P2d 186, 48 St. Rep. 919 (1991), followed, with regard to county immunity, in Quirin v. Weinberg, 252 M 386, 830 P2d 537, 49 St. Rep. 331 (1992), and followed, with regard to liability of city for actions of member of city council, in Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

Damages for Contamination of Water Supply: Plaintiffs sued the landfill district for damages caused by a contaminated water supply. The District Court dismissed the landfill district from the suit on the basis of legislative immunity under this section. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded in view of the 1991 legislative revisions to this section. Sanders v. Scratch Gravel Landfill District, 249 M 232, 814 P2d 1005, 48 St. Rep. 660 (1991).

Immunity Defense Unavailable in State Court if Unavailable in Federal Court: The District Court neglected to analyze a complaint and the relevant facts made against a school district under 42 U.S.C. 1983 and to apply the law in deciding whether the claim was barred, assuming that the claims under 42 U.S.C. 1983 would be barred under this section. The Supreme Court, in remanding for consideration of the issue, cited Howlett v. Rose, 496 US 356, 110 L Ed 2d 332, 110 S Ct 2430 (1990), for the proposition that a state immunity defense is not available in an action under 42 U.S.C. 1983 brought in a state court if that defense would not be available if the action were brought in a federal court. S.M. v. R.B., 248 M 322, 811 P2d 1295, 48 St. Rep. 453 (1991).

Liability of City for Actions of Executive Branch Officers of City With Self-Governing Powers: Although 7-14-4122 gives city councils the power to regulate and repair sidewalks, the section does not apply when a city has adopted a charter that provides for separate branches of government and delegates different duties to each branch. When a charter gave the executive branch the power to enforce the ordinance pertaining to sidewalk repair, any negligent acts or omissions connected with the maintenance of sidewalks were attributable to the executive branch and neither the city's legislative body nor its agents were implicated by the executive's failure to repair the sidewalks. Accordingly, the city was not immune from suit under this section for the negligent maintenance of a city sidewalk. Woods v. Billings, 248 M 254, 811 P2d 534, 48 St. Rep. 421 (1991).

Constructive Discharge of Superintendent — School District Not Immune: A state law defense of sovereign immunity under this section is not available in a suit filed pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1983 in which a defendant school board is otherwise subject to suit in a state court and in which such a defense would not be available had the action been brought in a federal forum. Doohan v. Bigfork School District No. 38, 247 M 125, 805 P2d 1354, 48 St. Rep. 121 (1991).

DECISIONS PRIOR TO 1991 AMENDMENTS

City Administrator Not Immune From Suit: The plaintiff sued the city for damages resulting from personal injuries suffered because of a traffic condition created by the city. The city charter provided that the city administrator had authority for the oversight and regulation of traffic. The Supreme Court held that under the city charter, the administrator was a member of the executive branch rather than the legislative branch of city government and therefore was not immune from suit. Irion v. Peterson, 247 M 459, 807 P2d 714, 48 St. Rep. 258 (1991).

Immunity Waived to Extent of Insurance Coverage: A student filed a complaint against the school district and her physical education teacher after she was injured in class while attempting to perform an unsupervised gymnastics routine. Although the district had purchased liability insurance covering the school and teachers, the District Court dismissed the action on the grounds that the defendants were immune from suit. The Supreme Court reversed and remanded, holding that while the district and teacher were immune from suit, the purchase of liability insurance by the school district waived its immunity to the extent of the coverage granted by the insurance policy. Crowell v. School District No. 7, 247 M 38, 805 P2d 522, 48 St. Rep. 81 (1991), followed in R.B., 248 M 322, 811 P2d 1295, 48 St. Rep. 453 (1991), and distinguished in Hyde v. Evergreen Volunteer Rural Fire Dept., 252 M 299, 828 P2d 1377, 49 St. Rep. 259 (1992).

Irrigation District a Governmental Entity Immune From Suit: The plaintiffs filed suit in August 1983, alleging that the irrigation district's actions had resulted in crop losses for the plaintiffs. In November 1989, the lower court allowed the defendant to amend its answer to include the defense that the irrigation district was a governmental entity immune from suit. After allowing the amendment, the lower court dismissed the suit on a summary judgment motion. The Supreme Court upheld the lower court's decision on the basis that it was within the lower court's discretion and that the plaintiffs had failed to show that they were prejudiced by the amendment. Love v. Harlem Irrigation District, 245 M 443, 802 P2d 611, 47 St. Rep. 2190 (1990). After the 1990 Love decision, supra, Loves filed another amended complaint alleging contractual violations, negligence, fraud, and additional damages. Following Whirry v. Swanson, 254 M 248, 836 P2d 1227 (1992), and Mills v. Lincoln County, 262 M 283, 864 P2d 1265 (1993), and distinguishing Boucher v. Dramstad, 522 F. Supp. 604 (D.C. Mont. 1981), the Supreme Court held that despite Loves' claims of issues of fundamental fairness and new theories of recovery, all four elements composing the doctrine of res judicata were met. The issues having been previously decided in the 1990 Love decision, judgment for the irrigation district on the issues raised by the amended complaint was granted. State ex rel. Harlem Irrigation District v. District Court, 271 M 129, 894 P2d 943, 52 St. Rep. 364 (1995), followed in Bozeman v. AIU Ins. Co., 272 M 349, 900 P2d 929, 52 St. Rep. 823 (1995).

School Board Immune From Suit for Breach of Covenant of Good Faith and Fair Dealing: The plaintiff was terminated as a school psychologist for incompetence. The Supreme Court held that he could not bring a suit for breach of the covenant of good faith and fair dealing because the school board was immune under state law. Harris v. Bailey, 244 M 279, 798 P2d 96, 47 St. Rep. 1622 (1990).

Governmental Immunity of County Board of Health — Not Affected by Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act: The Supreme Court held that a county board of health was an agent of the County Commissioners and therefore covered by state law creating governmental immunity. The court also held that there was no intent by the Legislature when it passed the Wrongful Discharge From Employment Act to create remedies when earlier immunity statutes denied recovery. Burgess v. Lewis & Clark City-County Bd. of Health, 244 M 275, 796 P2d 1079, 47 St. Rep. 1619 (1990). The Supreme Court held that this case is no longer controlling in view of the 1991 legislative revisions to this section. Sanders v. Scratch Gravel Landfill District, 249 M 232, 814 P2d 1005, 48 St. Rep. 660 (1991).

Park Board Not Legislative Body or Agent for Legislative Body: The trial court dismissed the plaintiffs' wrongful termination case on the basis that the park board was a legislative body immune from suit. The Supreme Court reversed the decision, stating that the board performed statutory executive functions and therefore was not a legislative body. The Supreme Court also ruled that the board was not an agent of the County Commissioners with respect to the employment of the plaintiffs and was not immune from suit on that basis. Koch v. Yellowstone County, 243 M 447, 795 P2d 454, 47 St. Rep. 1312 (1990).

Specific Wording Unnecessary for Alleging 1983 Claim: The District Court dismissed the plaintiff's claim against the town and council on the grounds that the complaint did not allege that the defendants had acted "under the color of state law". The Supreme Court reversed, stating that the complaint contained factual allegations indicating that the defendants had acted in their official capacity and that no specific language was required in bringing a section 1983 claim. Cummings v. Plains, 242 M 236, 790 P2d 486, 47 St. Rep. 769 (1990).

Statutory Immunity Not Extended to Board of Regents: The Board of Regents of Higher Education is not a local governmental entity within the meaning of this section, and therefore no immunity from suit is extended to the Board of Regents by this section. Mitchell v. Univ. of Mont., 240 M 261, 783 P2d 1337, 46 St. Rep. 2109 (1989).

Janitors Employed by School Board Immune From Negligence Suit: Plaintiff fell on a stairway owned by a school district and subsequently filed a negligence action against the district and school janitors for their alleged failure to maintain the stairway in a safe condition. Under this section, both the school district and its employees are immune from suit. The school board is the governing body, i.e., the legislative body, of the governmental entity, the school district. As agents of the school board, the janitors are immune. Their alleged omission arose from the lawful discharge of an official duty associated with an alleged omission by the legislative body. A failure to take legislative action, i.e, a legislative omission, will give rise to the immunity afforded by the statute. Any alleged failure by the school district to provide sufficient funding for maintenance of stairways and employment of additional janitors is an omission by its legislative body, the school board. The alleged omission by the janitors occurred during the lawful discharge of duties associated with the omission by the board. Thus, the janitors are immune under subsection (3) of this section. Also, under the plain language of subsection (2), the school district is clearly immune for an omission by an agent of the school board. State ex rel. Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363, 46 St. Rep. 1929 (1989).

Immunity Extends to Body's Acts, Not Just Its Legislative Acts: A school district was immune from a wrongful discharge suit by a custodian fired by an administrative assistant employed by the school district. The custodian's contention that the termination was an administrative, not a legislative, action was not considered relevant by the court, which stated that the plain language of this section shows that the immunity is not limited to legislative acts of a legislative body, but rather extends to an act or omission of the legislative body whether or not the act or omission is legislative. Peterson v. School District, 237 M 376, 773 P2d 316, 46 St. Rep. 880 (1989), followed in State ex rel. Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363, 46 St. Rep. 1929 (1989), Miller v. Fallon County, 240 M 241, 783 P2d 419, 46 St. Rep. 2087 (1989), and in Hayworth v. School District No. 19, 243 M 503, 795 P2d 470, 47 St. Rep. 1361 (1990).

Immunity of City Council Members: City Council members are immune from suit resulting from the actions of a Council agent in performance of an official duty associated with the Council's actions. Mogan v. Harlem, 238 M 1, 775 P2d 686, 46 St. Rep. 1043 (1989).

Right to Full Legal Redress Not Violated by Grant of Immunity for Acts of Legislative Body: The right to full legal redress under the state constitution is not violated by a statute granting a legislative body immunity from suit for its acts. The right involved in this case is one of access to the courts. It is not fundamental. The immunity statute's constitutionality in regard to the right is thus presumed, and the state need only show a rational basis for the immunity statute. The statute has previously passed that test. Peterson v. School District, 237 M 376, 773 P2d 316, 46 St. Rep. 880 (1989), followed in Miller v. Fallon County, 240 M 241, 783 P2d 419, 46 St. Rep. 2087 (1989), and in Hayworth v. School District No. 19, 243 M 503, 795 P2d 470, 47 St. Rep. 1361 (1990).

Equal Protection Not Violated by Statutory Immunity From Suit: This section, which grants immunity from suit for legislative acts and omissions, does not violate the equal protection guarantee of Art. II, sec. 4, Mont. Const. Bieber v. Broadwater County, 232 M 487, 759 P2d 145, 45 St. Rep. 1218 (1988), followed in State ex rel. Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363, 46 St. Rep. 1929 (1989).

Immunity of County Commissioner Acting Within Lawful Duty: It was within the official duty of a County Commissioner to fire a county road crew member, and immunity from suit was proper under this section. Bieber v. Broadwater County, 232 M 487, 759 P2d 145, 45 St. Rep. 1218 (1988), followed in State ex rel. Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363, 46 St. Rep. 1929 (1989).

County Commission Decision Not to Renew Lease Agreement — County Immune From Suit: A hospital and nursing home administrator brought a complaint against the county when he lost his job upon failure of the County Commission to renew a lease agreement with a hospital association. The District Court dismissed the action on the ground that the suit was barred by this section. The Supreme Court agreed, finding that the Commissioners clearly possessed the authority to choose not to renew the lease pursuant to lawful discharge of official duty, and as such the action fell within the statutory governmental immunity. Barnes v. Koepke, 226 M 470, 736 P2d 132, 44 St. Rep. 810 (1987), followed in State ex rel. Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363, 46 St. Rep. 1929 (1989).

County Immune From Suit — Act of Legislative Body: In a negligence action brought against a county and its legislative body (the Board of County Commissioners), when the Board granted final approval of the plat of a subdivision without requiring subdivision improvements or a bond guaranteeing the improvements, the county was immune from suit under 2-9-111. Counties are immune from suit for acts of their legislative bodies, and members of a legislative body are immune from suit for damages arising from the lawful discharge of an official duty. In this instance, the claimed negligent act was the failure of the Commissioners to require compliance with subdivision regulations prior to approval of the plat, which comes expressly within the plain language of 2-9-111. W.D. Constr., Inc. v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 218 M 348, 707 P2d 1111, 42 St. Rep. 1638 (1985), followed in Bieber v. Broadwater County, 232 M 487, 759 P2d 145, 45 St. Rep. 1218 (1988).

Immunity for City's Failure to Take Legislative Action: The failure of the city of Billings to declare an irrigation ditch a nuisance may not be the basis of a suit against it for liability since the city is immune under this section. Limberhand v. Big Ditch Co., 218 M 132, 706 P2d 491, 42 St. Rep. 1460 (1985), followed in State ex rel. Eccleston v. District Court, 240 M 44, 783 P2d 363, 46 St. Rep. 1929 (1989).

2-9-112. Immunity from suit for judicial acts and omissions.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Case Notes

Quasi-Judicial Immunity for Guardian Ad Litem to Collect Debt From Party: A court-ordered guardian ad litem attempted to enforce collection of a debt owed by the plaintiff for services provided as ordered by the court. The plaintiff then sued the defendant, the guardian ad litem, for violating the Montana Consumer Protection Act. The District Court granted the defendant summary judgment, holding that the defendant was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity from the consumer protection claim under 2-9-112. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed the ruling, holding that the defendant was acting within the scope of her duties as guardian ad litem when she sought to collect the debt for services rendered. Amour v. Collection Professionals, Inc., 2015 MT 150, 379 Mont. 344, 350 P.3d 71.

Judge Entitled to Immunity From Suit for Judicial Acts — Order of Sanctions Appropriate: District Judges acting within their jurisdiction when making decisions are entitled to immunity from suit regardless of whether the decisions were in error. Sanctions were appropriate against a litigant who repeatedly filed groundless and burdensome litigation against District Judges. Hartsoe v. Tucker, 2013 MT 256, 371 Mont. 539, 309 P.3d 39.

No Quasi-Judicial Immunity in Granting Medical License to Doctor Who Had Committed Unprofessional Conduct: Irrespective of whether the functions of the Board of Medical Examiners in investigating a license application of a doctor who had previously been subject to disciplinary action in other states for unprofessional conduct were discretionary actions, the Board was not operating in the context of a controversy or adversarial proceeding. Thus, the District Court committed error when it granted the state's motion for summary judgment based upon quasi-judicial immunity. Nelson v. St., 2008 MT 336, 346 M 206, 195 P3d 293 (2008).

County Immunity From Judicial Acts and Omissions Affirmed: Silvestrone was arrested for misdemeanor assault, pleaded guilty in Justice's Court, and was fined $350 then subsequently sought counsel and moved the District Court to withdraw the guilty plea. The motion was granted, and the case was remanded to Justice's Court for trial. On the same day that the motion was granted, the Justice's Court issued a bench warrant for Silvestrone for failure to pay the fine in the underlying misdemeanor case, and 2 years later, Silvestrone was arrested and taken to jail. When the county discovered that the District Court had remanded the case for trial, the county moved to dismiss the original charge in the interests of justice, and the motion was granted. Silvestrone then filed a tort action in District Court for damages and emotional duress stemming from the Justice's Court's wrongfully issued arrest warrant. The District Court held that the county was immune from suit and granted summary judgment for the county despite Silvestrone's plea for additional time for discovery. On appeal, Silvestrone contended that summary judgment was premature and also sought to challenge the constitutionality of 2-9-112.The Supreme Court noted that because Silvestrone failed to provide meaningful submissions raising genuine issues of material fact, the District Court was entitled to rule on the county's summary judgment motion without providing additional discovery time. Additionally, Silvestrone failed to raise the constitutionality of the judicial immunity statute in District Court, so the Supreme Court declined to address it. The District Court's remand and the Justice's Court's issuance of the warrant were judicial acts, and the county's failure to remand the matter to the Justice's Court for trial was a judicial omission. The government is immune from liability for both judicial acts and omissions under 2-9-112, so the county was entitled to judgment as a matter of law, and the District Court was affirmed. Silvestrone v. Park County, 2007 MT 261, 339 M 299, 170 P3d 950 (2007).

Commission on Unauthorized Practice of Law Immune From Suit: Paralegal O'Neil was investigated by the Supreme Court's Commission on the Unauthorized Practice of Law, and the District Court issued a permanent injunction prohibiting O'Neil from engaging in the practice of law. O'Neil filed a counterclaim against the Commission for defamation, tortious interference with contract, and interference with privacy. The District Court summarily dismissed the claims against the Commission, and on appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. Claims against the Commission are barred under judicial immunity pursuant to this section, and summary judgment was appropriate. Mont. Supreme Court Comm'n on Unauthorized Practice of Law v. O'Neil, 2006 MT 284, 334 M 311, 147 P3d 200 (2006).

Municipality Not Liable Solely on Respondeat Superior Theory — Causal Link Required: In evaluating a local government's liability under 42 U.S.C. 1983, courts must determine whether plaintiff's harm was caused by a constitutional violation and, if so, whether the local government unit is responsible for the violation. A municipality or local government unit cannot be held liable under the federal law on a respondeat superior theory solely because it employs a tortfeasor. Rather, a plaintiff must show that the local government action was taken with the requisite degree of culpability and must demonstrate a direct causal link between the action and the deprivation of federal rights. Municipal liability under section 1983 attaches only when a deliberate choice to follow a course of action is made from among various alternatives by the official responsible for establishing final policy with respect to the subject matter in question. In the case at bar, the city of Red Lodge obtained immunity by extension based on individual immunities unavailable to local government units. The District Court, applying Reisdorff v. Yellowstone County, 1999 MT 280, 296 M 525, 989 P2d 850 (1999), granted summary judgment for the city on judicial and quasi-judicial immunity grounds. The extension of immunity to employees of governmental entities in Reisdorff was correct; however, the blanket immunity extended to all defendants including the local governmental unit itself was erroneous, and to that extent, Reisdorff was overruled. Miller v. Red Lodge, 2003 MT 44, 314 M 278, 65 P3d 562 (2003). See also Monell v. New York City Dept. of Social Services, 436 US 658 (1978), Pembaur v. Cincinnati, 475 US 469 (1986), Collins v. Harker Heights, Tex., 503 US 115 (1992), and Bd. of County Comm'rs v. Brown, 520 US 397 (1997).

Board of Psychologists — Immunity From Suit: Rahrer sought to hold the Board of Psychologists liable for damages arising out of a contested case hearing involving the Board's investigation of a complaint against Rahrer, a licensed psychologist. Applying Butz v. Economou, 438 US 478, 57 L Ed 2d 895, 98 S Ct 2894 (1978), and Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988), the Supreme Court held that the Board of Psychologists was entitled to quasi-judicial immunity. Initiating, investigating, and presenting a case pursuant to the Montana Administrative Procedure Act involve precisely the types of decisions for which the state and its agencies are granted quasi-judicial immunity. Rahrer v. Bd. of Psychologists, 2000 MT 9, 298 M 28, 993 P2d 680, 57 St. Rep. 53 (2000).

Test for Judicial Immunity From Federal Section 1983 Case — Quasi-Judicial Immunity Extended to Official Acting Under Valid Court Order: State immunity laws do not shield the state or its officials from liability based on 42 U.S.C. 1983. To be immune from a claim based on that section, the immunity must be found in federal law. In Stump v. Sparkman, 435 US 349 (1978), the U.S. Supreme Court established a two-part test for determining when a judge is entitled to immunity from a sec. 1983 action. The first part is whether the judge dealt with the plaintiff in a judicial capacity. If the judge was not dealing in a judicial capacity, there is no immunity. If the judge was dealing in a judicial capacity, the second part of the test is whether the judge acted in the clear absence of all jurisdiction. From the doctrine of judicial immunity has come the doctrine of quasi-judicial immunity. Officials acting pursuant to a facially valid court order have absolute immunity from damages for actions taken to execute that order. In the present case, the Justice of the Peace was clearly acting in a judicial capacity when issuing an order that Reisdorff feed and care for her animals. Reisdorff did not argue that the order was facially invalid, and the District Court did not err in holding that officials carrying out the order were entitled to quasi-judicial immunity. Reisdorff v. Yellowstone County, 1999 MT 280, 296 M 525, 989 P2d 850, 56 St. Rep. 1128 (1999), overruled, to the extent that liability under 42 U.S.C. 1983 was extended to local government units pursuant to the doctrines of judicial and quasi-judicial immunity in Miller v. Red Lodge, 2003 MT 44, 314 M 278, 65 P3d 562 (2003). See also Patterson v. Von Riesen, 999 F2d 1235 (8th Cir. 1993).

Judicial Immunity Inapplicable to Parole Officer: A parole officer miscalculated the good time allowance creditable to Brunsvold while he was on probation while serving a suspended sentence, resulting in Brunsvold's wrongful incarceration. Brunsvold's subsequent civil suit named the state, the Department of Institutions (now Department of Corrections), the prison warden, and the parole officer as defendants. Under this section, judicial immunity was properly extended to the first three parties; however, the parole officer was not immune from suit because he performed an administrative task in calculating good time credits as a routine part of his daily job requirements. This task was not such an intimate association with a judicial act as to allow the parole officer to be considered an agent of the judiciary discharging an official duty associated with judicial action of the court. Brunsvold v. St., 250 M 500, 820 P2d 732, 48 St. Rep. 939 (1991).

City and Its Agent Immune for Cleanup of Defendant's Property Pursuant to Court Order: The defendant was brought to trial by the City of Great Falls under a criminal statute for failure to clean up her property. The defendant was given 7 days to abate the nuisance, and when she failed to do so, the city had its employees perform the cleanup and bill the defendant for the cost. The Supreme Court ruled that the defendant could not sue the city or its employees for alleged damages resulting from the cleanup in that they were immune because the cleanup was the result of a judicial act. Great Falls v. Price, 238 M 99, 775 P2d 1260, 46 St. Rep. 1120 (1989), followed in Reisdorff v. Yellowstone County, 1999 MT 280, 296 M 525, 989 P2d 850, 56 St. Rep. 1128 (1999).

Board of Medical Examiners — Immunity From Suit: In the exercise of its quasi-judicial authority, the Board of Medical Examiners is entitled to the absolute immunity from suit afforded executive officials. Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988).

Quasi-Judicial Immunity as Common Law: The doctrine of quasi-judicial immunity is not a subject of statutory law, and the question of its applicability was therefore decided under the common-law rule as reviewed in Butz v. Economou, 438 US 478, 57 L Ed 2d 895, 98 S Ct 2894 (1978). The grant of judicial immunity in this section is not in derogation of the right to sue the state, granted by Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., and quasi-judicial immunity is therefore extended to state boards and to the state itself. Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988), followed in Rahrer v. Bd. of Psychologists, 2000 MT 9, 298 M 28, 993 P2d 680, 57 St. Rep. 53 (2000), distinguished in State ex rel. Div. of Workers' Comp. v. District Court, 246 M 225, 805 P2d 1272, 47 St. Rep. 1911 (1990), and discussed in Newville v. St., 267 M 237, 883 P2d 793, 51 St. Rep. 758 (1994).

Immunity of Judge, County, and Its Commissioners, for Discharge of Judge's Predecessor's Personal Secretary: Historically, judges have enjoyed absolute immunity for judicial acts, a doctrine which is codified in this section and which provides that a member of the judiciary is immune from suit for damages arising from his lawful discharge of an official duty associated with judicial actions of the court. This doctrine clothes District Courts with inherent and statutory powers to do all that is necessary to render their jurisdiction effective. The public policy of judicial immunity safeguards principled and independent decisionmaking. A judge's personal secretary occupies a distinct and unique status among District Court employees, and it is not a violation of public policy for a newly elected or appointed District Court Judge to discharge his predecessor's secretary and select his own. The lower court's dismissal, on the basis of judicial immunity under this section, of dismissed secretary's action alleging violation of her right to due process, breach of implied covenant of good faith and fair dealing, and wrongful discharge, was proper. Since the discharge was a judicial act, the codefendant county and County Commissioners cannot be held liable because they are expressly immunized under the provision of this section that governmental units are immune from suits for acts or omissions of the judiciary. Mead v. McKittrick, 223 M 428, 727 P2d 517, 43 St. Rep. 1886 (1986), distinguished, with regard to applicability of judicial immunity to bar a grievance hearing regarding the suspension by a Justice of the Peace of a court manager who was not a key employee, in Clark v. Dussault, 265 M 479, 878 P2d 239, 51 St. Rep. 642 (1994). See also Hartsoe v. Christopher, 2013 MT 57, 369 Mont. 223, 296 P.3d 1186.

Sentencing — "Judicial Act": Petitioner was convicted of issuing a bad check in 1979. Her sentence was deferred, and she was placed on probation for 3 years. In 1982, petitioner's deferral was revoked because she was convicted of forgery. As a result of the revocation, she was sentenced to serve 5 years in prison. Later in 1982, the Supreme Court, relying on Crist v. Segna, 191 M 210, 622 P2d 1028, 38 St. Rep. 150 (1981), ordered petitioner's release because at the time of her imprisonment she had accumulated sufficient good time credit on probation that her deferred sentence would have been fully served. Petitioner then sued for damages for illegal imprisonment. The Supreme Court held that the State was immune from suit under 2-9-112 because the sentence imposed on petitioner for her violation of probation was a judicial act. Knutson v. St., 211 M 126, 683 P2d 488, 41 St. Rep. 1258 (1984).

Prosecutor's Quasi-Judicial Immunity From Prosecution: Plaintiff's civil action against a County Attorney, based upon alleged unlawful arrest by certain policemen and challenging the legality of the criminal prosecution against him, must be dismissed because the County Attorney enjoys absolute immunity for prosecutorial actions done in a quasi-judicial capacity. Hall v. Lympus, 478 F. Supp. 644 (D.C. Mont. 1979).

2-9-114. Immunity from suit for certain actions by local elected executives.

Case Notes

Conduct of City Council Meeting Hearing Criticism of City Employee — Not Restricted by Free Speech and Privileged Communication Cases and Statute — Not Legislative Act Shielded by Legislative Immunity: Denke filed complaints with the Human Rights Commission alleging that Thompson Falls and Shoemaker, a City Council member, retaliated against her for previously filing sexual harassment charges with the Commission by holding a City Council meeting at which Shoemaker was allowed, with virtually no limitation, to severely criticize her conduct as city clerk and finance officer. The Commission hearing examiner, the Commission, and the District Court held that Shoemaker's criticism of Denke's actions as city bookkeeper aired during the City Council meeting was a "legislative act" within the meaning of 2-9-111 and the city was therefore immune from a charge of retaliation. The Supreme Court held that 27-1-804(2) and free speech cases such as New York Times Co. v. Sullivan, 376 US 254 (1964), and Skinner v. Pistoria, 194 M 257, 633 P2d 672 (1981), did not limit the City Council's ability to regulate the time, place, and manner of Shoemaker's criticism. The Supreme Court also held that Denke's claim did not involve the calling of the City Council meeting (for which the city would be immune under 2-9-114) so much as the manner in which the meeting was conducted and that the conduct of the meeting did not fall within the definition of a "legislative act", and remanded the case for further proceedings. Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

Title 2, chapter 6, subchapter 2, ARM State vehicle use.

Case Notes

State's Liability Insurance Not Limit on Recovery Against State: Former law providing for waiver of sovereign immunity defense up to limits of any existing liability insurance policy was not applicable because the defense could not be raised in instant case. Jacques v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 199 M 493, 649 P2d 1319, 39 St. Rep. 1565 (1982).

Attorney General's Opinions

Taxation — Levy for Liability Insurance: The levy provided by 2-9-212 does not require an election. The school trustees may authorize the levy upon determining that it is in the best interests of the school district. The annual property tax may be used to fund all policies of insurance required or permitted by law. 37 A.G. Op. 109 (1978), reversing contrary language in 35 A.G. Op. 44 (1973).

2-9-202. Apportionment of costs — creation of deductible reserve.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 532 in (3), in third sentence after "fund", substituted "must be used by" for "are statutorily appropriated, as provided in 17-7-502, to"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1985 Amendment: In (3) substituted third and fourth sentences concerning proceeds of the self-insurance reserve fund and expenditures for expenses required for administration of the fund for "Proceeds of the fund may be used only to pay claims under parts 1 through 3 of this chapter and for actual and necessary expenses required for the efficient administration of the fund".

2011 Amendment: Chapter 350 in (1) in second and third sentences substituted "33-2-302(2)(a)(ii) through (2)(a)(iv)" for "33-2-302(1)(b) through (1)(d)". Amendment effective May 6, 2011.

Severability: Section 19, Ch. 350, L. 2011, was a severability clause.

Applicability: Section 21, Ch. 350, L. 2011, provided: "[This act] applies to any surplus lines insurance issued or renewed on or after July 1, 2011."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 191 in (1) in second and third sentences substituted reference to 33-2-302(1)(b) through (1)(d) for reference to 33-2-302(2) through (4). Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 29 in (5) near end of first sentence after "exceeding" substituted "0.18% of the total assessed value of taxable property, determined as provided in 15-8-111, within" for "3% of the taxable value of". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Saving Clause: Section 33, Ch. 29, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

Applicability: Section 35, Ch. 29, L. 2001, provided: "(1) [This act] applies to the authorization and issuance of bonds occurring on or after July 1, 2001.

(2) Debt limits established under [this act] do not apply to bonds authorized before July 1, 2001, regardless of when the bonds are issued."

1995 Amendment: Chapter 68 in (1) inserted last two sentences that read: "Political subdivisions that elect to procure insurance jointly (pooled fund) under this section may obtain excess coverage from a surplus lines insurer without proceeding under the provisions of 33-2-302(2) through (4). Political subdivisions that are not in a pooled fund may obtain excess coverage from a surplus lines insurer without proceeding under the provisions of 33-2-302(2) through (4) only if the insurer carries an A rating or better by a nationally recognized rating company or is a Lloyds of London underwriter"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 22, 1995.

1986 Amendment: At end of (2) after "reserve" and near beginning of (3) after "reserve fund" inserted "separately or jointly with other subdivisions"; at end of second sentence of (3) added "or from the proceeds of bonds or notes authorized by subsection (5)"; and inserted (5) allowing funding of a self-insurance or deductible reserve fund.

Case Notes

Port Authority Insured Under County Insurance Policy — Extrinsic Evidence Considered — Policy Construed Against Drafter — Insurer Not Immune From Suit as Reinsurer: After a port authority building was destroyed by a fire, the port claimed that it qualified as an insured under a county insurance company policy that included county members and any other county entities that receive insurance through a county joint insurance authority. The insurance company claimed that the language in the policy did not extend to county entities such as the port. Additionally, the insurance company claimed that it was a reinsurer and therefore it was improper for the port to bring a direct claim against it. The Supreme Court held that the port qualified as an insured under terms of the policy and that a direct claim was proper. In reaching a conclusion that was contrary to the language of the policy, the court gave meaning to the entire contract, considered extrinsic evidence, and construed ambiguous language in the policy against the insurer as the drafter. In determining that a direct claim was proper, the court reasoned that the port dealt directly with the insurance company, and therefore the insurer was an excess insurance carrier, rather than a reinsurer. Lincoln County Port Authority v. Allianz Global Risks US Ins. Co., 2013 MT 365, 373 Mont. 60, 315 P.3d 934.

Liability of Political Subdivisions: This section, along with sections 82-4309 and 82-4318, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-9-212 and 2-9-304), and section 82-4326, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), manifests a legislative intent that political subdivisions should be responsible for the torts of their employees, to the exclusion of any liability on the part of the state. St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976).

Attorney General's Opinions

Joint Solid Waste Management District as Political Subdivision — No Authority to Issue Bonds for Workers' Compensation Reserve Fund: Because a joint solid waste management district has been vested with broad plenary powers that may be exercised independent of a city or county governing body, a joint district must be considered a political subdivision within the meaning of this section. However, a joint solid waste management district or similar political subdivision does not have specific or express authority under 39-71-403 to participate in workers' compensation plan No. 1 or to issue bonds to establish a workers' compensation self-insurance fund. The bonding authority in this section may not be used as a basis for issuance of bonds for the establishment of a reserve fund to guarantee payment of workers' compensation claims. 45 A.G. Op. 22 (1994).

Nonexclusive Means of Establishing Insurance Program: An interlocal agreement pursuant to 7-11-104 is not the exclusive means by which counties might establish a joint self-insurance program, provided that the method selected is not specifically prohibited by law. 38 A.G. Op. 75 (1980).

Joint Self-Insurance Programs: Montana counties may procure insurance separately or jointly and may use a deductible or self-insurance plan. Therefore, it is permissible for counties to enter into a joint self-insurance program. 38 A.G. Op. 75 (1980).

Taxation — Levy for Liability Insurance: The levy provided by 2-9-212 does not require an election. The school trustees may authorize the levy upon determining that it is in the best interests of the school district. The annual property tax may be used to fund all policies of insurance required or permitted by law. 37 A.G. Op. 109 (1978), reversing contrary language in 35 A.G. Op. 44 (1973).

2-9-212. Political subdivision tax levy to pay contributions.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 412 in (1) near middle substituted "contribution" for "premium"; in (2) after "benefits under 2-18-703" substituted reference to excess amount determined under 2-18-703(4)(c) for "on or before July 1, 2001, the increase in the political subdivision's property tax levy for the political subdivision's premium contributions" and after "group benefits under 2-18-703" deleted "beyond the amount of contributions in effect at the beginning of the last fiscal year"; inserted (2)(a)(i) regarding contributions for group benefits; inserted (3) defining group benefits; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2009 Transition Levy: Section 4, Ch. 412, L. 2009, provided: "(1) Except as provided in subsection (2), a political subdivision that levied mills for group contributions pursuant to 2-18-703 in fiscal year 2009 may for the fiscal years 2010 through 2014 levy the greater of:

(a) the dollar amount levied in 2009; or

(b) the amount determined in 2-18-703.

(2) The actual dollar amount under subsection (1)(a) may not include an amount for group benefits paid from user charges described in 2-9-212(2)(a)(i)."

Saving Clause: Section 5, Ch. 412, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 529 in (2)(a) at beginning of first sentence inserted "If a political subdivision made contributions for group benefits under 2-18-703 on or before July 1, 2001" and near middle after "in effect" substituted "at the beginning of the last fiscal year" for "on July 1, 1999" and inserted second through fifth sentences concerning calculation and reporting of the permissive medical levy; in (2)(b) at beginning inserted "Each year" and near middle after "subsection (2)(a)" inserted "after notice of the hearing given under 7-1-2121 or 7-1-4127"; inserted (2)(c) providing that a levy under this section in the previous year may not be included in the amount of property taxes for the purposes of determining the amount that a governmental entity may assess under the provisions of 15-10-420(1)(a) and that when a levy under this section decreases or is no longer levied, the revenue may not be combined with the revenue determined in 15-10-420(1)(a); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 26, 2003.

Transition — Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 529, L. 2003, provided: "A levy made prior to [the effective date of this act] [effective April 26, 2003] under 2-9-212(2) may not be included as a levy in a previous year in determining the amount of property taxes that a governmental entity may assess under the provisions of 15-10-420(1)(a). If a levy made prior to [the effective date of this act] [effective April 26, 2003] under 2-9-212(2) decreased or was no longer levied, the difference between that levy and the next year levy may not be carried forward for imposition in a subsequent year under 15-10-420(1)(b)."

Section 6, Ch. 529, L. 2003, provided that the transition provisions in sec. 3, Ch. 529, L. 2003, applied retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to levies made after December 31, 1998.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 511 near beginning of (1) inserted reference to subsection (2); inserted (2) exempting increases in local government's property tax levy for the employer's premium contributions for group health insurance benefits from the mill levy calculation limitation and requiring public hearing prior to implementing levy; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 584 at beginning substituted reference to 15-10-420 for "Notwithstanding any provisions of law to the contrary" and after "2-9-211(5)" deleted "even though as a result of such levy the maximum levy as otherwise restricted by law is exceeded thereby, provided that the revenues derived therefrom may not be used for any other purpose"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 10, 1999.

Severability: Section 172, Ch. 584, L. 1999, was a severability clause.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 175, Ch. 584, L. 1999, provided that this section applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax years beginning after December 31, 1998.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning substituted "a political subdivision, except for a school district" for "all political subdivisions". Amendment effective April 23, 1991.

1986 Amendment: Near middle after "herein authorized" inserted "and to pay the principal and interest on bonds or notes issued pursuant to 2-9-211(5)".

Liability of Political Subdivisions: This section, along with sections 82-4306 and 82-4318, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-9-211 and 2-9-304), and section 82-4326, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), manifests a legislative intent that political subdivisions should be responsible for the torts of their employees, to the exclusion of any liability on the part of the state. St. v. District Court, 170 M 15, 550 P2d 382 (1976).

Attorney General's Opinions

Allowable Insureds: It is apparent that the insurance authorized by this part is for the political subdivision itself and is not provided to the subdivision's employees as a negotiated benefit. The tax allowed by 2-9-212 may not be used for health and disability insurance for school district employees. The holding in 37 A.G. Op. 109 (1980) is not to the contrary. 39 A.G. Op. 56 (1982).

Taxation — Levy for Liability Insurance: The levy provided by 2-9-212 does not require an election. The school trustees may authorize the levy upon determining that it is in the best interests of the school district. Liability of State to Suit — Active Duty U.S. Army Worker Injured While Assigned to National Guard — Tort Claim Not Barred: While in full-time service to the U.S. Army, Trankel was assigned to a Montana Army National Guard unit rebuilding armored vehicles and was injured by toxic chemicals during the rebuilding project. Trankel sued the state, asserting violations of the Occupational Health Act of Montana, the Montana Safety Act, and the Employee and Community Hazardous Chemical Information Act. The state contended that Feres v. U.S., 340 US 135, 95 L Ed 152, 71 S Ct 153 (1950), and Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160 (1986), barred a claim that was incident to military service regardless of the substantive law upon which the claim was based, the status of the plaintiff at the time of injury, or the status of the party against whom the claim was made and that the alleged violations of the state Acts did not provide a private cause of action and could be remedied only through the administrative remedies provided for in the Acts. The District Court agreed with the state and dismissed Trankel's complaint with prejudice. On appeal, the Supreme Court distinguished Feres and related federal cases because they were based on federal rather than state tort claims, with little bearing on rights under state law and the Montana Constitution. The Supreme Court overruled the holding in Evans that the National Guard was not a political subdivision subject to suit, finding instead that the National Guard and the Department of Military Affairs were clearly governmental entities within the meaning of 2-9-101 and that the constitutional premise on which Evans was based did not apply. Consistent with other applications of Art. II, sec. 16, Mont. Const., any statute or court decision that deprives an employee of the right to full legal redress, as defined by general Montana tort law against third parties, is absolutely prohibited. Because Trankel was not employed by the Montana Army National Guard or the Department of Military Affairs at the time of injury, Trankel's claim against the state pursuant to the tort claims statutes was not barred. Further, applying the rationale in Pollard v. Todd, 148 M 171, 418 P2d 869 (1966), the Supreme Court held that the statutory state Acts did not give rise to causes of action independent from a claim of negligence subject only to the administrative remedies contained in the Acts, but rather established duties, the violation of which is negligence per se. Trankel v. St., 282 M 348, 938 P2d 614, 54 St. Rep. 380 (1997), distinguishing Feres v. U.S., 340 US 135, 95 L Ed 152, 71 S Ct 153 (1950), U.S. v. Johnson, 481 US 681, 95 L Ed 2d 648, 107 S Ct 2063 (1987), and Stauber v. Cline, 837 F2d 395 (9th Cir. 1988); following Webb v. Mont. Masonry Constr. Co., 233 M 198, 761 P2d 343 (1988), Meech v. Hillhaven W., Inc., 238 M 21, 776 P2d 488 (1989), and Francetich v. St. Comp. Mut. Ins. Fund, 252 M 215, 827 P2d 1279 (1992); overruling Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160 (1986); and followed in Lake v. St., 282 M 484, 938 P2d 698, 54 St. Rep. 442 (1997), and Oberson v. Federated Mut. Ins. Co., 2005 MT 329, 330 M 1, 126 P3d 459 (2005).

Nature of National Guard Service — State Court Jurisdiction: Members of the National Guard serve a dual responsibility, both to the State of Montana and to the United States of America. While Guard units consist of members enlisted in the United States Army, they are also a Montana military unit consisting of Montana citizens. The District Court improperly dismissed a suit brought by members of the Montana Army National Guard on grounds that the court did not have jurisdiction, absent proof that the members were on federal active duty as opposed to state active duty. The case was remanded for further findings. Grove v. Mont. Army Nat'l Guard, 264 M 498, 872 P2d 791, 51 St. Rep. 366 (1994), distinguishing Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160 (1986).

National Guardsman Injured on Weekend Drill — No Right to Sue State — Summary Judgment Upheld: The Supreme Court affirmed summary judgment granted state by District Court because: (1) issues raised on appeal were not genuine issues of material fact but rather questions of law, therefore summary judgment was proper; (2) the National Guard is a military force, not a political subdivision of the state, so appellant had no right to sue under the Tort Claims Act (Title 2, ch. 9, parts 1 through 3); and (3) traditionally, the federal government and state governments have not been held liable in tort for injuries that arise in the course of activity incident to military service (Feres v. U.S., 340 US 135, 95 L Ed 152, 71 S Ct 153 (1950)). Evans v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 223 M 482, 726 P2d 1160, 43 St. Rep. 1930 (1986), distinguished in Grove v. Mont. Army Nat'l Guard, 264 M 498, 872 P2d 791, 51 St. Rep. 366 (1994), and overruled in Trankel v. St., 282 M 348, 938 P2d 614, 54 St. Rep. 380 (1997).

No Waiver of Immunity From Suit in Constitution — State Officials Liable in Federal Civil Rights Suit: A former state employee sued the state for violations of his civil rights while he worked for the state. Under 2-15-104, the Department of Institutions (now Department of Corrections), the plaintiff's former employer, was held an alter ego of the state and not the sort of separate corporate entity held to be a citizen for purposes of federal diversity. The federal District Court held that neither Title 2, ch. 9, part 3, (prior to the 1983 amendment) nor the legislative history of Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., suggests an intent to submit the state to suit in federal court. The 11th amendment immunity of the state from suit is not waived. However, the court also held that 2-9-305 was intended to facilitate suit against the sovereign and its employees and that there was no evidence in that section of an intent to impart immunity to state officials as individuals in a federal civil rights suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (1976). Holladay v. St., 506 F. Supp. 1317, 38 St. Rep. 285 (D.C. Mont. 1981).

Statute of Limitations — Lawsuit Against County — County's Failure to Respond to Claim Letter: The decedent died as a passenger while involved in a high-speed police chase on December 16, 2011. His estate submitted a claim letter to the county on September 11, 2014, seeking $750,000 from the county for wrongful death. The county never responded, and the estate filed a complaint against the county on March 3, 2015. The District Court granted the county's motion to dismiss, concluding that the estate's claims were time-barred. On appeal, the Supreme Court ruled that the statute of limitations was tolled and did not begin to run until the claimant received notice of the county's denial of claim. In re Estate of Woody v. Big Horn County, 2016 MT 180, 384 Mont. 185, 376 P.3d 127.

Claim Barred by Statute of Limitations — Statute Not Unconstitutionally Vague: Wing, who was involved in a vehicular accident, filed a claim by mail on April 23 against the state, alleging that the accident occurred because the state's contractor failed to adequately sign a road construction site. Upon receiving Wing's claim on April 26, the state denied the allegations and argued that Wing's claim was barred by the statute of limitations. The District Court granting summary judgment for the state, ruling that Wing's complaint was subject to 27-2-204, the statute prescribing a 3-year statute of limitations, and to this section, the statute that tolls the statute of limitations for 120 days when a claimant provides notice. On appeal, Wing argued that this section is unconstitutionally vague because it directs a claimant to present a claim, then tolls the statute of limitations upon receipt of the claim. Wing contended that the court erred in calculating the 120-day tolling period, alleging that the 120-day tolling period should have started the day on which she mailed the claim rather than the day on which the state received the claim. In affirming the District Court decision, the Montana Supreme Court held that this section is not unconstitutionally vague because receipt of the claim means the day on which the state actually receives the claim. The plain language of the statute sets a clear time for when the tolling of the statute of limitations begins. Wing v. St., 2007 MT 72, 336 M 423, 155 P3d 1224 (2007).

No Abuse of Discretion in Disallowing Futile Amendment to Pleadings: Reier Broadcasting Co. (Reier) filed a three-count complaint in July 2002, alleging that defendant university had wrongfully failed to award Reier's radio station a contract to broadcast the university's athletic events. The next month, Reier filed an amended complaint as a matter of right, deleting one of the original claims and adding a new claim. The next month, Reier moved to amend the amended complaint to add a new tort claim. Defendant opposed the motion and sought dismissal of the amended complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction and failure to state a claim for which relief could be granted. Five months later, Reier filed a second motion to amend the amended complaint, requesting leave to seek a declaratory judgment that 18-4-242 was unconstitutional and seeking damages. The District Court dismissed the amended complaint and the first motion to amend because the tort claims had not been properly presented as required by the state tort claims act (Title 2, ch. 9, part 3). The court also dismissed the second motion to amend, and Reier appealed on grounds that it was error not to allow the amendment to address the constitutionality of 18-4-242. The Supreme Court noted that generally it is an abuse of discretion to refuse amendments to pleadings that are offered at a reasonable time and that would further justice, but also noted that futile amendments need not be permitted. Reier's proposed amendments to add a constitutional challenge were futile because Reier failed to take the steps necessary under this section to preserve the tort claims, so dismissal of the second motion to amend was not an abuse of discretion. Reier Broadcasting Co., Inc. v. Mont. St. Univ.-Bozeman, 2005 MT 240, 328

M 471, 121 P3d 549 (2005), distinguishing Debcon, Inc. v. Glasgow, 2001 MT 124, 305 M 391, 28 P3d 478 (2001), and Hickey v. Baker School District No. 12, 2002 MT 322, 313 M 162, 60 P3d 966 (2002).

Latent Disease Case Comprising Exposure to Harmful Substance Over Extended Period — Continuing Tort Theory Contrary to Public Policy: Gomez contended that the exposure to chemical fumes that allegedly injured him occurred each day that he worked and was thus in the nature of a continuing tort. Because the date of last exposure to the fumes occurred on Gomez's last day of employment, he contended that the 3-year statute of limitations did not begin to run until that date. Citing Handa v. PPG Indus., Inc., 236 M 493, 771 P2d 956, 46 St. Rep. 532 (1989), the Supreme Court noted that, in latent disease or injury cases, the point at which the statute of limitations begins to run is ascertained by applying the discovery rule and determining when the injured person knew, or in the exercise of due diligence should have known, of the facts constituting the cause of action. The court declined to apply the continuing tort theory to delay the statute of limitations until the last injurious exposure because doing so could delay running of the limitations period indefinitely and is contrary to the general policy underlying statutes of limitations. Gomez was aware of his injuries, of the cause of those injuries, and of the fact that he had a cause of action by 1992 or earlier, but he did not take action on the claims until 1996, essentially sleeping on his rights. Thus, the District Court did not err in concluding that Gomez's complaint was not timely filed or in granting summary judgment to the state on grounds that Gomez's causes of action were barred by the statute of limitations. Gomez v. St., 1999 MT 67, 293 M 531, 975 P2d 1258, 56 St. Rep. 272 (1999), distinguishing Shors v. Branch, 221 M 390, 720 P2d 239, 43 St. Rep. 919 (1986), and Graveley Ranch v. Scherping, 240 M 20, 782 P2d 371 (1989).

Tort Claim Against Political Subdivision — No Requirement for Filing of Administrative Claim — Statute Clear and Unambiguous: Lincoln County Deputy Sheriff Stratemeyer filed a tort action against Lincoln County for failing to properly train, debrief, and counsel him to cure his posttraumatic stress disorder incurred from observing a suicide victim. The Supreme Court held that there is no requirement under subsection (3) of this section similar to the requirement under subsection (1) of this section that a tort claim against a political subdivision first be presented for administrative settlement. To the extent that such a requirement was implied in Rouse v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 250 M 1, 817 P2d 690 (1991), the Supreme Court expressly overruled that case. The Supreme Court also held that subsection (3) of this section is clear and unambiguous in its lack of requirement of an administrative claim and that Stratemeyer therefore filed his tort action within the 3-year statute of limitations contained in 27-2-204. Stratemeyer v. Lincoln County, 276 M 67, 915 P2d 175, 53 St. Rep. 245 (1996).

Tort Claims Filing Procedure Applies Retroactively: The events upon which the plaintiff based his tort claim against the state occurred prior to the adoption of the statute creating new claim filing procedures. The plaintiff filed his claim directly in District Court after the new law became effective. The Supreme Court affirmed the dismissal of the claim on the basis that the statute applied retroactively because it was merely procedural and did not impair substantive rights. The court did point out that the plaintiff could file again under 27-2-407. Buettner v. St., 240 M 389, 784 P2d 906, 46 St. Rep. 2220 (1989).

Standing to Sue Government in General — Annexation Proceedings in Particular: Before one has standing to sue a governmental entity, there must be a case or controversy. The plaintiff must clearly allege past, present, or threatened injury to a property or civil right, and the injury must be distinguishable from injury to the public in general, though it need not be exclusive to the plaintiff. In an annexation protest, annexation is a political matter exclusively for legislative control, absent a constitutional prohibition. The annexation must be void ab initio, and the challenger must be a property owner who would suffer a tax increase. The available remedy is an injunction, not monetary damages. A count of petition signatures for only one of many annexed areas, by a plaintiff who used his own criteria for the count, is insufficient to support a claim that the government entity inaccurately counted the signatures. Since plaintiff here had no standing to directly attack the annexation, he could not collaterally attack it by attempting to show negligence. O'Donnell Fire Serv. & Equip. Co. v. Billings, 219 M 317, 711 P2d 822, 42 St. Rep. 2051 (1985), followed in Knudsen v. Ereaux, 275 M 146, 911 P2d 835, 53 St. Rep. 83 (1996), and Lohmeier v. Gallatin County, 2006 MT 88, 332 M 39, 135 P3d 775 (2006).

Constitutionality: Subsection (1) of this section (formerly section 82-4311, R.C.M. 1947) relating to the state, as construed prior to 1977 amendment deleting a 120-day limitation on filing a claim, was declared unconstitutional under Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., which abolished sovereign immunity and limitations upon the waiver of sovereign immunity. Noll v. Bozeman, 166 M 504, 534 P2d 880 (1975).

Statute of Limitations — Lawsuit Against County — County's Failure to Respond to Claim Letter: The decedent died as a passenger while involved in a high-speed police chase on December 16, 2011. His estate submitted a claim letter to the county on September 11, 2014, seeking $750,000 from the county for wrongful death. The county never responded, and the estate filed a complaint against the county on March 3, 2015. The District Court granted the county's motion to dismiss, concluding that the estate's claims were time-barred. On appeal, the Supreme Court ruled that the statute of limitations was tolled and did not begin to run until the claimant received notice of the county's denial of claim. In re Estate of Woody v. Big Horn County, 2016 MT 180, 384 Mont. 185, 376 P.3d 127.

Local Government to Deny Claim Before Six-Month Limitation for Filing in District Court Commences: Rouse sued the county to recover damages for alleged police brutality. The lower court dismissed the claim on the basis that the statute of limitations had run. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the county had never denied the claim and that the 6-month limitation for filing an action in District Court did not commence until the county denied the claim. Rouse v. Anaconda-Deer Lodge County, 250 M 1, 817 P2d 690, 48 St. Rep. 834 (1991), overruled in part in Stratemeyer v. Lincoln County, 276 M 67, 915 P2d 175, 53 St. Rep 245 (1996).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 306 inserted (3) allowing employee who is a party to a settlement to waive right of individual privacy in order to release records or details of settlement that pertain to the employee personally. Amendment effective May 4, 2017.

Retroactive Applicability — Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 306, L. 2017, provided: "(1) For compromise or settlements entered into on or after July 1, 2010, until [the effective date of this act] [May 4, 2017], [this act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, unless the compromise or settlement contract provides that the records or details of the compromise or settlement, such as personnel records, that pertain to the employee personally may not be released.

(2) [This act] applies without limitation to compromise or settlements entered into on or after [the effective date of this act] [May 4, 2017]."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 172 at end of (2) inserted "unless a right of individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 30, 2001.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 4, Ch. 172, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to the compromise or settlement of claims entered into prior to [the effective date of this act]." Effective March 30, 2001.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 97 in second sentence of (1), after "deductible reserve fund", inserted "exceeding $10,000".

Chapter 111 inserted (2) relating to public inspection of governmental portion of settlement agreement.

1981 Amendment: Added phrase to authorize district courts other than those of first judicial district to compromise claims.

Settlement Agreement Involving Minor Child Open for Public Inspection — No Right of Privacy Recognized — Demands of Privacy Do Not Exceed Merits of Public Disclosure: Pengra and the state agreed to a settlement of Pengra's suit against the state on behalf of his daughter and himself involving the death of his wife. Pengra requested that the settlement document be sealed and thereby made unavailable for public inspection. In a challenge to the sealing of the settlement agreement, the Supreme Court held that: (1) minors have no greater right of privacy than adults in settlement agreements involving claims against the state; (2) Pengra had no subjective expectation of privacy in the settlement agreement; (3) by the Legislature's enactment of this section, society is not willing to recognize any privacy expectation of Pengra regarding the settlement agreement; (4) compelling policy reasons support the disclosure of the settlement; and (5) any right of privacy by Pengra in the settlement agreement did not outweigh the merits of public disclosure of that agreement. Pengra v. St., 2000 MT 291, 302 M 276, 14 P3d 499, 57 St. Rep. 1231 (2000).

Student's Settlement With College Statutory Bar to Suit Against Professor for Actions Outside Scope of Employment: Stansbury filed suit against Eastern Montana College (now Montana State University-Billings) and a professor, Lin, alleging that Lin had slandered him in class. Stansbury entered into a settlement agreement with the college containing language that he was not precluded from pursuing his case against Lin for actions outside the course of the professor's employment. The Supreme Court upheld the lower court's dismissal of the suit against Lin on the basis that the statute was an absolute bar against suits against employees of a state entity when the plaintiff has previously obtained a recovery from the state entity. 2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1983 Amendment: Substituted entire section (see Ch. 530, L. 1983, for text) for former text, which read: "(1) It is the purpose of this section to provide for the immunization and indemnification of public officers and employees sued for their actions, other than intentional tort or felonious acts, taken within the course and scope of their employment.

(2) In an action brought against any employee of a state, county, city, town, or other governmental entity for a negligent act, error, or omission or other actionable conduct of the employee committed while acting within the course and scope of his office or employment, the governmental entity employer shall be made a party defendant to the action.

(3) Recovery against a governmental entity under the provisions of parts 1 through 3 of this chapter shall constitute a complete bar to any action or recovery of damages by the claimant, by reason of the same subject matter, against the employee whose negligence or wrongful act, error, or omission or other actionable conduct gave rise to the claim. In any such action against a governmental entity, the employee whose conduct gave rise to the suit shall be immune from suit by reasons of the same subject matter if the governmental entity acknowledges or is bound by a judicial determination that the conduct upon which the claim is brought arises out of the course and scope of such employees' employment, unless the claim is based upon an intentional tort or felonious act of the employee.

(4) In any action in which a governmental entity employee is a party defendant, the employee shall be indemnified by the governmental entity employer for any money judgments or legal expenses to which he may be subject as a result of the suit unless the conduct upon which the claim is brought did not arise out of the course and scope of his employment or is an intentional tort or felonious act of the employee."

Sexual Harassment Claims by Court Reporter Against State Judge — State Not Obligated to Pay Settlement Made Without Its Consent: A court reporter filed a claim of sexual harassment against the District Court judge for whom she worked. The judge sought the costs of his defense, as well as indemnification, from the state. Eventually, the court reporter and the judge mediated the matter, with the state refusing to participate, and they entered into a settlement agreement. The state then filed a request seeking a judicial declaration that the state was not obligated to pay the settlement because the judge's harassment of the court reporter was not within the course and scope of his employment. The District Court ruled that the state was not obligated to pay the settlement because the judge had settled without the consent of the state as provided in 2-9-305(6)(c). The court reporter appealed and the Supreme Court affirmed, agreeing that the state was not obligated to pay the settlement because it had not agreed to it as required by law. St. v. Berdahl, 2017 MT 26, 386 Mont. 281, 389 P.3d 254.

Respondeat Superior Applicable to City Council Member Who Severely Criticized City Employee — Criticism Within Scope of Employment for Respondeat Superior but Not for Application of Legislative Immunity: Shoemaker, a member of the Thompson Falls City Council, severely criticized Denke, the city clerk and finance officer, in two letters to the editor and in a City Council meeting for her job performance that Shoemaker alleged caused the city to hire a CPA. Denke charged that Shoemaker's criticism was unlawful retaliatory conduct for her previous filing of a sexual harassment complaint against the Mayor. Following Kenyon v. Stillwater County, 254 M 142, 835 P2d 742 (1992), the Supreme Court held that Shoemaker was a city employee. The Supreme Court held that Shoemaker was acting as a member of the City Council when he signed the letters and that the city had admitted in an administrative hearing that Shoemaker was within the scope of his employment. The court held that: (1) Shoemaker didn't have to be Denke's supervisor for purposes of applying respondeat superior; (2) Shoemaker's unlawful retaliatory conduct was not within the official discharge of Shoemaker's duties for the purposes of legislative immunity under 27-1-804, but the conduct was within the scope of Shoemaker's employment for purposes of respondeat superior; and (3) the statement of the city in the Human Rights Commission administrative hearing that Shoemaker was acting as a member of the City Council constituted a judicial admission, was an "acknowledgment" under 2-9-305, and was binding upon the city for the purposes of its liability for retaliation. Denke v. Shoemaker, 2008 MT 418, 347 M 322, 198 P3d 284 (2008).

County Attorney Immunity for Handling of Streambed Preservation and Stalking Complaints — Summary Judgment Proper: The Madison County Attorney filed a misdemeanor complaint against Rosenthal for a possible streambed preservation violation, but later moved to dismiss the complaint when the state's expert was not confident that a violation had occurred. The County Attorney also forwarded a stalking complaint against Rosenthal to the Attorney General's office because of a possible conflict of interest. Rosenthal subsequently filed a malicious prosecution complaint and also claimed intentional and negligent emotional distress. The District Court determined that the prosecutor's conduct was within the scope of his authority and that he was entitled to absolute prosecutorial immunity and granted summary judgment. On appeal, the Supreme Court affirmed. The prosecutor properly exercised discretion both in filing the streambed protection complaint and then in dismissing the complaint when faced with the state expert's equivocation and was entitled to absolute immunity for this conduct. Regarding the handling of the stalking complaint, the allegedly injurious conduct arguably fell outside the County Attorney's quasi-judicial functions, so the court applied the test in Sacco v. High Country Independent Press, Inc., 271 M 209, 896 P2d 411 (1995), to determine whether the qualified immunity shield applied. Rosenthal asserted no violation of a clearly established constitutional right, so qualified immunity barred the suit. At the very least, the County Attorney was entitled to qualified immunity for his actions, and the District Court did not err in determining that, as a matter of law, the County Attorney was entitled to immunity, either absolute or qualified, for his actions in prosecuting the complaints against Rosenthal. Rosenthal v. Madison County, 2007 MT 277, 339 M 419, 170 P3d 493 (2007), following Losleben v. Oppedahl, 2004 MT 5, 319 M 269, 83 P3d 1271 (2004).

Federal Claims Against City Council Members Acting in Individual Capacities — No Attorney Fees for Prevailing City Council Members: In a federal suit based on 42 U.S.C. 1983, plaintiff sued City Council members in their individual capacities. The District Court held that plaintiff should have known that subsection (5) of this section shielded the City Council members from suit, summarily dismissed plaintiff's claim, and awarded the City Council members' attorney fees pursuant to the frivolous claim provisions of 42 U.S.C. 1988. On appeal, plaintiff relied on Martinez v. Calif., 444 US 277 (1980), and Miller v. Red Lodge, 2003 MT 44, 314 M 278, 65 P3d 562 (2003) (citing Reisdorff v. Yellowstone County, 1999 MT 280, 296 M 525, 989 P2d 850 (1999)), for the proposition that state law cannot immunize federal claims. The Supreme Court distinguished those cases as too broad a recitation of the immunity proposition, citing instead Felder v. Casey, 487 US 131 (1988), for the holding that when state courts entertain a federally created cause of action, the federal right cannot be defeated by the forms of local practice and that any assessment of the applicability of state law to federal civil rights litigation must be made in light of the purpose and nature of the federal right. The main objective of 42 U.S.C. 1983 is to ensure that individuals who have suffered a deprivation of constitutional or statutory rights are afforded relief through damages or injunction. Although affording immunity to the City Council members would not have thwarted the objective of the federal law, the Supreme Court nevertheless declined to conclude that plaintiff should have known that subsection (5) of this section shielded the City Council members from suit or to consider as unreasonable plaintiff's federal claims against the City Council members in their individual capacities. Plaintiff's claim was therefore not frivolous, and the City Council members were not entitled to attorney fees pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1988. Germann v. Stephens, 2006 MT 130, 332 M 303, 137 P3d 545 (2006), clarifying Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Immunity of Council Members From Suit Relating to Approval or Denial of Subdivision Plat Application by City Council: A legislative act is an action by a legislative body that results in the creation of law or declaration of public policy. An administrative act is an action taken in the execution of a law or public policy. The approval or denial of a subdivision plat application is an administrative act. Therefore, neither the governmental entity nor a member of it who acts for the entity is immune under 2-9-111 from suit based on the approval or denial. However, in this case, all the claims alleged by the developer suing over the conditions that the City Council attached to its approval of the preliminary plat application related to actions performed by City Council members acting as the City Council. Therefore, under this section, the individual Council members were immune from suit. Kiely Constr. v. Red Lodge, 2002 MT 241, 312 M 52, 57 P3d 836 (2002).

Section 1983 Action for Damages and Declaratory and Injunctive Relief — State Agency Held Not a "Person" — Individual or Official Capacity of Individual Defendants Determined — Test for Qualified Immunity in Damages Action — Remington Overruled: Orozco, an inmate in the Montana State Prison, brought a civil action for damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1983 against the Department of Corrections and Human Services (now Department of Corrections) and several Department employees for the denial of his due process rights in connection with the denial of his ability to earn good time credits. The Department moved for dismissal for failure to state a claim, based upon 11th amendment immunity. As to the Department, the Supreme Court held, citing Will v. Mich. Dept. of St. Police, 491 US 58 (1989), that because the Department has been created as part of the Executive Branch of state government, suing the Department is the same as suing the State of Montana, which is not a "person" for the purposes of a section 1983 action. In response to Orozco's argument that this section required him to join the Department as a party, the Supreme Court noted that there is nothing in the text of that section that requires that the state be joined as a party; the section provides only for the tender of a defense and payment of damages by the state if a state employee is sued. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that the District Court correctly dismissed the action for damages against the Department. As to the individual defendants, the Supreme Court held that state employees acting in their official capacities are likewise not "persons" for the purposes of a section 1983 action but that state employees acting in their individual capacities are "persons" within the meaning of section 1983. The Supreme Court noted that Orozco had not clearly indicated the capacities in which the individual defendants were being sued, and so it looked to other provisions of the complaint and to U.S. Supreme Court decisions in order to determine Orozco's intent and held that Orozco intended to sue the individual defendants in their individual capacities. For this reason, the Supreme Court held that the District Court erred in holding that the individually named defendants were not "persons" under 42 U.S.C. 1983 for the purposes of the action for damages. The Supreme Court also held that in enacting 53-30-105 (now repealed) mandating rules for the accrual of good time, the state had created a right to good time. The Supreme Court also held that the immunity analysis used in Remington v. Dept. of Corrections and Human Services, 255 M 480, 844 P2d 50 (1992), was incorrect in light of the later decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in Sandin v. Connor, 515 US 472 (1995), and overruled Remington, but, on the basis of the Sandin immunity analysis, determined that Orozco's liberty interest in the award of good time credits was not clearly established on the date of Orozco's hearing to reclassify him as a maximum security prisoner who was no longer entitled to earn good time credits. For this reason, the Supreme Court held that the Department employees who were sued in their individual capacities were to be given qualified immunity for the purposes of the action for damages but that the District Court improperly dismissed the action for declaratory and injunctive relief and remanded the case to the District Court for a determination of what process was due Orozco before his opportunity to earn good time was revoked and whether he received that process. Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009, 54 St. Rep. 200 (1997).

No Opportunity for Parties to Address Issues — Award of Attorney Fees Premature: An award of attorney fees based on this section is premature unless and until an appropriate record is created and the parties have a full and fair opportunity to address the issues. Clark v. Dussault, 265 M 479, 878 P2d 239, 51 St. Rep. 642 (1994).

Immunity for Government Employee Not Provided — Recovery for Same Conduct as Governmental Entity Barred: Absent a recovery from a governmental entity, this section does not preclude the filing of an action against a government employee. However, in a case in which the jury likely awarded damages against the entity first and the employee later for the same conduct, double recovery is barred by the plain language of subsection (5) of this section. Because plaintiff recovered damages from the entity at the time of the jury verdict, later recovery from the employee as an individual was barred and the award was stricken from the judgment. Story v. Bozeman, 259 M 207, 856 P2d 202, 50 St. Rep. 761 (1993).

Limited Application of Nondelegable Duty Exception to Respondeat Superior Doctrine: Application of the nondelegable duty exception to the respondeat superior doctrine is limited to instances of safety in which the subject matter is inherently dangerous. The Supreme Court declined to modify the presently accepted version of the doctrine by adopting the exception, set out in section 214 of Restatement (Second) of Agency, that a master or other principal who is under a duty to provide protection for or to have care used to protect others or their property and who confides the performance or duty to a servant or other person is subject to liability to others for harm caused to them by the failure of the agent to perform the duty. Noting that there are several reasons for and against extending the liability of an employer when an intentional tort is committed only because or by virtue of the employment situation, the court opted to leave adoption of such a major doctrinal change to the Legislature. Maguire v. St., 254 M 178, 835 P2d 755, 49 St. Rep. 688 (1992), followed in Estate of Strever v. Cline, 278 M 165, 924 P2d 666, 53 St. Rep. 576 (1996).

Summary Dismissal of Wrongful Discharge Claim Against County Attorney Acting in Official Capacity: When an action is brought against a county based on actionable conduct by an employee, the employee is immune from individual liability for the conduct if the county acknowledges that the conduct arose out of the course and scope of the employee's official duties. A County Attorney who dismissed his secretary when he took office was acting within the scope of his duties and was therefore immune from a wrongful discharge suit and was entitled to summary judgment on the claim. Kenyon v. Stillwater County, 254 M 142, 835 P2d 742, 49 St. Rep. 673 (1992), followed in Germann v. Stephens, 2006 MT 130, 332 M 303, 137 P3d 545 (2006). See also Baumgart v. St., 2014 MT 194, 376 Mont. 1, 332 P.3d 225, concerning a state employee.

City Not Liable for Actions of Employee — Respondeat Superior Inapplicable: Dagel sued the city of Great Falls under 42 U.S.C. 1983 for wrongful discharge and both negligent and intentional infliction of emotional distress, based on actions against her by Manzer, her city supervisor. Dagel alleged that under this section, the city was responsible for the individual acts of its agent, Manzer, and adopted them as its own. The District Court, in granting the city's motion for summary dismissal, cited numerous federal decisions holding that respondeat superior or vicarious liability is not a valid basis for recovery under 42 U.S.C. 1983. The Supreme Court adopted the guiding principles outlined in St. Louis v. Praprotnik, 485 US 112 (1988), for holding a municipality liable under sec. 1983: (1) liability attaches only for acts for which the municipality itself is actually responsible—those which the municipality has officially sanctioned or ordered; (2) only officials who have final policymaking authority may, by their actions, subject the government to liability; (3) whether a particular official has final policymaking authority is a question of state law; and (4) the challenged action must have been taken pursuant to a policy adopted by the official responsible under state law for making policy in that area of the city's business. Dagel v. Great Falls, 250 M 224, 819 P2d 186, 48 St. Rep. 919 (1991).

Additional Omnibus Insured — Tort Claims Act Not Shield — Employer's Insurance Secondary: When an employee of Butte-Silver Bow was involved in an auto accident while acting in the course and scope of his employment and driving his own car, Butte-Silver Bow was an additional omnibus insured under the employee's auto policy. The employee's personal insurance carrier was not shielded from liability by the state tort claims act. The employee's insurer was the primary insurer, and Butte-Silver Bow's insurer was the excess insurer. Guar. Nat'l Ins. Co. v. State Farm Ins. Co., 238 M 324, 777 P2d 353, 46 St. Rep. 1303 (1989).

Federal Action by Prisoner — City Not a Proper Defendant: A state prison inmate brought a civil rights action in federal District Court against his parole officers, a deputy sheriff, and the city of Deer Lodge. Because the parole officers were employed by the state, the Deputy Sheriff was employed by the county, and the plaintiff failed to oppose the city's motion for summary judgment, the city was properly dismissed as a defendant. Harvey v. Pomroy, 535 F. Supp. 78, 39 St. Rep. 657 (D.C. Mont. 1982).

Intentional Torts and Felonious Acts Excepted: Under this section, public officers and employees are immune from suit for actions they take within the course and scope of their employment, except for intentional torts and felonious acts. (Decided prior to 1983 amendment.) Dvorak v. Huntley Project Irrigation District, 196 M 167, 639 P2d 62, 38 St. Rep. 2176 (1981).

Personal Liability for Official Action Holding One in Contempt: Action against county officials in their personal capacity, arising out of plaintiffs' being held in contempt of court after refusing to leave court upon order of the Justice of the Peace, was properly dismissed as there was no basis for personal liability because the defendants acted in their official capacities only. Stickney v. St., 195 M 415, 636 P2d 860, 38 St. Rep. 1991 (1981).

No Waiver of Immunity From Suit in Constitution — State Officials Liable in Federal Civil Rights Suit: A former state employee sued the state for violations of his civil rights while he worked for the state. Under 2-15-104, the Department of Institutions (now Department of Corrections), the plaintiff's former employer, was held an alter ego of the state and not the sort of separate corporate entity held to be a citizen for purposes of federal diversity. The federal District Court held that neither Title 2, ch. 9, part 3, (prior to the 1983 amendments) nor the legislative history of Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., suggests an intent to submit the state to suit in federal court. The 11th amendment immunity of the state from suit is not waived. However, the court also held that 2-9-305 was intended to facilitate suit against the sovereign and its employees and that there was no evidence in that section of an intent to impart immunity to state officials as individuals in a federal civil rights suit under 42 U.S.C. § 1983 (1976). Holladay v. St., 506 F. Supp. 1317, 38 St. Rep. 285 (D.C. Mont. 1981).

Game Wardens: The rule of absolute state immunity which the Supreme Court applied to acts of the Attorney General and other prosecutors does not apply to acts of state Game Wardens in their capacity as law enforcement officers. It is the more limited form of statutory immunity that applies to law enforcement officers, including state Game Wardens. Orser v. St., 178 M 126, 582 P2d 1227 (1978), followed in Hill v. Burlingame, 244 M 246, 797 P2d 925, 47 St. Rep. 1580 (1990).

Intentional Torts: Game Wardens, acting within the scope of their duties as law enforcement officers, are not personally immune from suit for malicious prosecution, as such a suit falls within the statutory exception of intentional torts. The Legislature contemplated recovery against the state not only for the negligence of its employees but also for all other forms of actionable conduct, including intentional torts. Orser v. St., 178 M 126, 582 P2d 1227 (1978).

Attorney General's Opinions

County Attorney as Employee for Purposes of Lawsuit Regarding Administrative Actions: A County Attorney is not liable for civil damages for conduct within the scope of prosecutorial duties; however, that immunity does not extend to the discretionary administrative business of running a County Attorney's office. Thus, a County Attorney is considered a county employee for purposes of the Montana Comprehensive State Insurance Plan and Tort Claims Act whenever the County Attorney is named in a civil lawsuit for actions regarding county administrative business, such as the hiring and firing of staff. 44 A.G. Op. 29 (1992).

Trustee-Operated Fire District Liable for Indemnification: Employees of a fire district operated by trustees must be indemnified under the comprehensive state insurance plan and the Tort Claims Act by the fire district rather than by the county in which the fire district is located. 42 A.G. Op. 84 (1988), overruling a contrary holding in 35 A.G. Op. 71 (1974), and followed in 43 A.G. Op. 2 (1989).

Trustee-Operated Fire Service Area Liable for Indemnification: Employees of a fire service area operated by trustees must be indemnified under the comprehensive state insurance plan and the Tort Claims Act by the fire service area rather than by the county in which the fire service area is located. 42 A.G. Op. 84 (1988), overruling a contrary holding in 35 A.G. Op. 71 (1974).

Authority of County Officer to Retain Defense Counsel: An elected county officer is not required to obtain the consent of the County Attorney or the County Commissioners in order to retain counsel in defense of a suit brought by the County Attorney pursuant to 7-6-2323 (now repealed). The county must reimburse the officer for legal fees incurred in the defense of the action unless an exclusion, as provided in 2-9-305, applies. 41 A.G. Op. 34 (1985).

Indemnification by County in Action Against Officer: Pursuant to this section the county must indemnify its officials for costs, attorneys' fees, and personal liability resulting from actions taken by its officials unless the conduct upon which the claim is brought did not arise out of the course and scope of employment or is an intentional tort or felonious act. "Other actionable conduct", as used in this section, may include actions taken "under color of state law", as used in 42 U.S.C. § 1983. Nevertheless, this section's requirement that the governmental employer be joined in actions against its employees does not apply to actions under 42 U.S.C. § 1983. (Opinion issued prior to 1983 amendment.) 37 A.G. Op. 171 (1978).

Case Notes

Venue — Action Against Multiple Counties: In 1981, Silver Bow County erroneously reissued the registration number of plaintiff's vehicle to another automobile. The automobile was subsequently reported stolen. The vehicle was recovered but not shown as such on county records. Defendant, a Jefferson County Deputy Sheriff, saw plaintiff's vehicle and requested status information. The vehicle was shown as stolen. Plaintiff was arrested and later released upon discovery of the error. Plaintiff brought suit against both Silver Bow and Jefferson Counties in Silver Bow District Court seeking damages on several grounds. Jefferson County moved for a change of venue, which was denied. The Supreme Court found that if the provisions of the venue statutes and the Rules of Civil Procedure were applied strictly, plaintiff would be placed in an impossible situation whereby both counties were indispensable parties and either could object to venue and be entitled to a change or dismissal. The court, relying on State ex rel. Mont. Deaconess Hosp. v. Park County, 142 M 26, 381 P2d 297 (1963), affirmed the refusal to grant a change of venue because both counties were necessary parties and because venue was proper at least as to Silver Bow County. Hutchinson v. Moran, 207 M 330, 673 P2d 818, 40 St. Rep. 2081 (1983).

Personal Defense of Frivolous Action Against Official: Justice of the Peace was properly granted attorney fees where, through no fault of her own, she was forced to personally defend a frivolous action seeking to hold her personally liable for action she took in her official capacity. Attorney General's Opinions

Tort Claims Against State — Fee Regulation: This section requires an attorney representing a party to a tort claim against the state to file a copy of his contract of employment with the Department of Administration. The District Court of Lewis and Clark County has the power to regulate such fees in conjunction with claims that are not litigated. In the case of litigated claims, the District Court before which the case is tried has regulatory power. The method and extent of its regulation are matters for the court's discretion. 37 A.G. Op. 121 (1978).

2001 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 278 in introductory clause at beginning deleted "Except as provided in 15-1-402"; in (3) at end after "judgment or settlement" deleted "except that the levy may not exceed 10 mills"; in (4) in last sentence at end after "amortize the bonds" deleted "provided the levy for payment of any bonds, settlements, or judgments may not exceed, in the aggregate, 10 mills annually"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Chapter 574 at end of (3) deleted "except that the levy may not exceed 10 mills"; and at end of (4) deleted "provided the levy for payment of any bonds, settlements, or judgments may not exceed, in the aggregate, 10 mills annually". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Applicability: Section 64, Ch. 278, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] applies to special purpose districts beginning July 1, 2002."

1999 Amendment: Chapter 23 in introductory clause, (3), and (4) after "judgment" inserted "or settlement"; in (4) in last sentence after "bonds" inserted "settlements"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 18, 1999.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 23, L. 1999, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to all occurrences prior to [the effective date of this act] [effective February 18, 1999] for which a cause of action has not been filed and served upon a conservation district."

1989 Amendment: At beginning inserted exception clause relating to protested taxes. Amendment effective March 21, 1989.

Effective Date — Retroactive Applicability: Section 14, Ch. 213, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval [approved March 21, 1989] and applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to any tax appeal or tax paid under protest after December 31, 1983."

Case Notes

Instruction Concerning County's Satisfaction of Judgment: The District Court instructed the jury that it was not to concern itself with the manner in which Sanders County would meet its obligation as to judgment if rendered against it in this case. The District Court refused plaintiff's instruction on possible sources of payment. This was proper, since further instruction might have led the jury into speculation on issues not properly before it as trier of fact. Wollaston v. Burlington N., Inc., 188 M 192, 612 P2d 1277 (1980), followed in Eklund v. Wheatland County, 2009 MT 231, 351 M 370, 212 P3d 297 (2009).

Attorney General's Opinions

No Statutory Authority to Levy Taxes in Order to Fund Judicial Budget or Budget Deficit: This section does not grant counties the authority to levy taxes in response to a District Court order that a judicial budget or budget deficit be funded. 43 A.G. Op. 37 (1989).

Levy of County Property Taxes for Special Purposes: The mill levy limitation provided in 7-6-2501 does not apply to special levies authorized for particular purposes. Therefore, the mill levy authorized by 2-9-316, which is a special levy, is not subject to the limit provided in 7-6-2501. 39 A.G. Op. 34 (1981).

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 508 at beginning inserted exception clause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 1, 1997.

Case Notes

No Prejudgment Interest in Action Against State: The District Court held that 31-1-106 requires the state to pay prejudgment interest on any money collected by the Department of Public Health and Human Services in excess of federal Medicaid law. The Supreme Court reversed, concluding that 2-9-317 is unambiguous and allows no interest to be assessed against the state until 2 years after the date of entry of judgment. Blanton v. Dept. of Public Health and Human Services, 2011 MT 110, 360 Mont. 396, 255 P.3d 1229.

Erroneous Denial of Removal of Assessment of Postjudgment Interest When Principal Paid by City Within Two Years: Funke was awarded damages for injuries incurred when a deck collapsed, including 5% liability against the city of Polson. The District Court ordered that the judgment would bear interest at 10% from the date of the original judgment. The city paid its portion of the judgment within 2 years and filed a motion under Rule 60(a), M.R.Civ.P. (Title 25, ch. 20), to amend the judgment on grounds that it was a clerical error to charge the city interest when the principal was paid within 2 years of judgment as provided in 2-9-317. The motion was denied and the city appealed. The Supreme Court agreed that the District Court properly denied the Rule 60(a) motion because the attempt to shoehorn consideration of 2-9-317 into the clerical error category failed, inasmuch as the District Court did not intend to apply the statute when the judgment was entered, and because the city had not yet paid the judgment, application of the statute at that time was premature. However, the District Court's failure to subsequently apply 2-9-317 was an error of law. When the city paid the judgment within 2 years of entry of judgment, the portion of the judgment requiring the city to pay interest was rendered invalid. Thus, the assessment of postjudgment interest against the city was stricken and the case was remanded for further proceedings. Funke v. Estate of Shultz, 2009 MT 411, 353 M 492, 223 P3d 839 (2009).

Tort Judgment — Constitutionality: Application of this section to a tort judgment against the state does not offend Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., which provides that the State has no immunity from suit for injury to a person or property except as may be specifically provided by a two-thirds vote of each house of the Legislature. Interest on a judgment is not an integral part of the cause of action, and as interest is not a detriment arising from the wrongful act, it can be suspended by statute. Jacques v. Mont. Nat'l Guard, 199 M 493, 649 P2d 1319, 39 St. Rep. 1565 (1982), followed in Weber v. St., 258 M 62, 852 P2d 117, 50 St. Rep. 425 (1993).

Failure to Require Bond: Under this section, an officer may indemnify himself by requiring a bond of his deputy; failing to do this, neither the officer nor his surety may complain that they have suffered loss. Silver Bow County v. Davies, 40 M 418, 107 P 81 (1910).

County Treasurer: The obligation to account for all money coming into his hands by virtue of his office is imposed upon a County Treasurer by this section, as one of the conditions of his official bond. Gallatin County v. USF&G Co., 50 M 55, 144 P 1085 (1914), distinguished in School District v. Pondera County, 89 M 342, 297 P 498 (1931). See also, as to duty of a Sheriff, Well-Dickey Co. v. Benjamin, 74 M 170, 239 P 771 (1925).

Deputies Included Under Clerk of Court: A surety company, which had signed the bond of a Clerk of the District Court, was responsible for the official misconduct of his deputy to any party injured thereby by virtue of this section. Am. Bonding Co. v. St. Sav. Bank, 47 M 332, 133 P 367 (1913).

Signatures: The surety of an official bond, joint and several in character, is not released from liability thereon because of the failure of the principal to sign the bond. Deer Lodge County v. USF&G Co., 42 M 315, 112 P 1060 (1910).

Deputies: By subsection (2) of this section the illegal act or official misconduct of the deputy is expressly put in the same category as the illegal act or misconduct of the principal. Silver Bow County v. Davies, 40 M 418, 107 P 81 (1910).

District Court Clerk: Under this section, the liability of the sureties on the bond of a District Court Clerk for losses sustained by the county through the issuance of spurious jurors' and witnesses' certificates by the Clerk's chief deputy depended not on the fact that in executing and issuing the certificates the deputy was not technically guilty of forgery because he omitted to impress on the certificates the seal of the court as required by statute, but on the question whether their issuance in the form in which they were issued and under color of office operated as an effective cause of the county's loss. Silver Bow County v. Davies, 40 M 418, 107 P 81 (1910).

City Treasurer: The official bond of a City Treasurer must be conditioned in accordance with this section. Philipsburg v. Degenhart, 30 M 299, 76 P 694 (1904).

Officer Holding Over: Where a bond is given by an officer, such bond would also cover such officer where he holds over until his successor is appointed and qualified. State ex rel. Olsen v. Swanberg, 130 M 202, 299 P2d 466 (1956).

Officer as Own Successor: While a bond furnished by an appointive state officer protects the state for the time he holds over under the original appointment, it may not be made the basis of liability for his acts done as his own successor. State ex rel. Nagle v. Stafford, 99 M 88, 43 P2d 636 (1935).

Appointive State Officer: State officer holding over under his first appointment agreeably to the constitutional provision "until his successor is appointed and qualified" was not required to file a new bond, since the surety on the original bond must be presumed to have executed it with the statutory provision in mind that liability on an official bond shall continue so long as the officer bonded holds the office and to have assumed a liability equal to the possible duration of the officer's tenure. Approval by District Judge: The language of section 6-316, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-9-512(2)), was borrowed from the California political code. Adopting the construction placed upon it by the courts of that state, the failure of the District Judge to approve the bond of a County Treasurer will not be held to invalidate it or to release the surety thereon. Bonds of State Officers and Employees

2-9-602. Officers and employees to be bonded — coverage, form, amount.

Case Notes

Bonding Not Intended to Waive Immunity for Torts: The mandatory bonding requirements of this part do not constitute a waiver of sovereign immunity. Distinguishing the holding in Longpre v. Joint School District No. 2, 151 M 345, 443 P2d 1 (1968), the Supreme Court found nothing in the bonding statutes that implies a legislative intent to waive the immunity for torts committed by a bonded state officer or employee. Rather, the statutes are aimed at protection from the mishandling of state funds. Murphy v. St., 248 M 82, 809 P2d 16, 48 St. Rep. 335 (1991).

Filing Bond With Secretary of State: A state officer, holding over for failure of the Senate to confirm his successor but claiming to hold by virtue of a reappointment, qualified anew to the extent of filing his official oath and procuring an extension certificate of his original bond for the new term but failed to file the bond with the Secretary of State. Where the officer failed to qualify for his alleged second term as required by law, his successor having been duly appointed, confirmed, and qualified, the latter was entitled to the office. Recovery by Sheriff From Sureties: A Sheriff seized property in an attachment suit and turned it over to his successor, who sold it. The owners of the property sued the Sheriff and his successor for its conversion. The sureties on the Sheriff's indemnity bond were notified and defended the suit. The resulting judgment against the Sheriff was sufficient evidence of the Sheriff's right of indemnification to allow him to recover from the sureties the sum paid by him on the judgment. Tuttle v. Hardenberg, 15 M 219, 38 P 1070 (1895).

The attorney general, using a public process, should develop an orderly, consistent, internal management process for state agencies to evaluate the effects of proposed state actions on private property. Consistent with the Montana and United States constitutions, the attorney general should consider the following issues in developing guidelines:

(1) whether there is a constitutionally protected property right that will be affected;

(2) whether the proposed action would substantially advance a legitimate state interest;

(3) whether the action would deprive the owner of economically viable use of the property or result in a temporary or permanent physical invasion of the property;

(4) whether the action would damage the property;

(5) whether the action would require a property owner to dedicate a portion of the property to a public use or to grant an easement; and

(6) whether in balance, benefits of the proposed action justify the burden on private property. In addition, the attorney general may consider any other factors that bear upon the determination of whether a compensable taking has occurred, including new case law."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 501 in (1) in first sentence inserted "specific" and in second sentence substituted "written request by the applicant for the written statement of specific legal authority or within 30 days after the government act, whichever occurs last" for "government act"; and in (2) after "clearly cite the" inserted "specific" and at end inserted "and the specific reason for the government act". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 164 in definition of director inserted (b) providing that the term does not include the state director of Indian affairs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 6, 2009.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 313 substituted definition of data for definition of data and information technology resources that read: ""Data and information technology resources" means data processing mainframe, microcomputer hardware, peripherals, software, special forms, personnel, facility resources, maintenance, training, electronically stored data, or other related resources"; in definition of executive branch substituted "Article III, section 1, and Article VI of the Montana constitution" for "the Montana constitution, Articles III and VI"; inserted definition of information technology resources; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1987 Amendment: Inserted definition of data and information technology resources.

Case Notes

No Quasi-Judicial Immunity in Granting Medical License to Doctor Who Had Committed Unprofessional Conduct: Irrespective of whether the functions of the Board of Medical Examiners in investigating a license application of a doctor who had previously been subject to disciplinary action in other states for unprofessional conduct were discretionary actions, the Board was not operating in the context of a controversy or adversarial proceeding. Thus, the District Court committed error when it granted the state's motion for summary judgment based upon quasi-judicial immunity. Nelson v. St., 2008 MT 336, 346 M 206, 195 P3d 293 (2008).

Immunity of Juvenile Probation Officer for Discretionary Supervisory Acts: Completion of a factsheet by a juvenile probation officer regarding a youth who was on probation was a discretionary, quasi-judicial act. The probation officer was thus entitled to immunity from prosecution for alleged omissions of information from the factsheet, and summary judgment dismissing the probation officer from a suit by the victim of an injury caused by the youth was proper. Eklund v. Trost, 2006 MT 333, 335 M 112, 151 P3d 870 (2006).

No Federal Civil Rights Privacy Claim Against State or Municipal Entities: Barr sued the state and a municipal airport authority for violating his civil rights under 42 U.S.C. 1983 and 42 U.S.C. 1985 when the airport failed to hire him as a permanent security officer after discovering Barr's past public criminal record. The District Court summarily dismissed the claims, and the Supreme Court affirmed. In order for the municipality to be liable under the federal statutes, it was necessary for Barr to show that the municipality had a policy or custom that inflicted the injury of which Barr complained, which Barr could not show. Further, Barr's civil rights claims stemmed from a privacy invasion that did not occur, so he was unable to establish a federal privacy violation. Barr's claim against the state was also barred because states are not persons for purposes of the federal statutes. Barr v. Great Falls Int'l Airport Authority, 2005 MT 36, 326 M 93, 107 P3d 471 (2005). See also Monell v. Dept. of Social Services, 436 US 658 (1978), and Will v. Mich. Dept. of State Police, 491 US 58 (1989).

Section 1983 Action for Damages and Declaratory and Injunctive Relief — State Agency Held Not a "Person" — Individual or Official Capacity of Individual Defendants Determined — Test for Qualified Immunity in Damages Action — Remington Overruled: Orozco, an inmate in the Montana State Prison, brought a civil action for damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1983 against the Department of Corrections and Human Services (now Department of Corrections) and several Department employees for the denial of his due process rights in connection with the denial of his ability to earn good time credits. The Department moved for dismissal for failure to state a claim, based upon 11th amendment immunity. As to the Department, the Supreme Court held, citing Will v. Mich. Dept. of St. Police, 491 US 58 (1989), that because the Department has been created as part of the Executive Branch of state government, suing the Department is the same as suing the State of Montana, which is not a "person" for the purposes of a section 1983 action. In response to Orozco's argument that 2-9-305 required him to join the Department as a party, the Supreme Court noted that there is nothing in the text of that section that requires that the state be joined as a party; the section provides only for the tender of a defense and payment of damages by the state if a state employee is sued. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that the District Court correctly dismissed the action for damages against the Department. As to the individual defendants, the Supreme Court held that state employees acting in their official capacities are likewise not "persons" for the purposes of a section 1983 action but that state employees acting in their individual capacities are "persons" within the meaning of section 1983. The Supreme Court noted that Orozco had not clearly indicated the capacities in which the individual defendants were being sued, and so it looked to other provisions of the complaint and to U.S. Supreme Court decisions in order to determine Orozco's intent and held that Orozco intended to sue the individual defendants in their individual capacities. For this reason, the Supreme Court held that the District Court erred in holding that the individually named defendants were not "persons" under 42 U.S.C. 1983 for the purposes of the action for damages. The Supreme Court also held that in enacting 53-30-105 (now repealed) mandating rules for the accrual of good time, the state had created a right to good time. The Supreme Court also held that the immunity analysis used in Remington v. Dept. of Corrections and Human Services, 255 M 480, 844 P2d 50 (1992), was incorrect in light of the later decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in Sandin v. Connor, 515 US 472 (1995), and overruled Remington, but, on the basis of the Sandin immunity analysis, determined that Orozco's liberty interest in the award of good time credits was not clearly established on the date of Orozco's hearing to reclassify him as a maximum security prisoner who was no longer entitled to earn good time credits. For this reason, the Supreme Court held that the Department employees who were sued in their individual capacities were to be given qualified immunity for the purposes of the action for damages but that the District Court improperly dismissed the action for declaratory and injunctive relief and remanded the case to the District Court for a determination of what process was due Orozco before his opportunity to earn good time was revoked and whether he received that process. Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009, 54 St. Rep. 200 (1997).

Failure to Review Application for Self-Insurance — Quasi-Judicial Immunity Not Applicable: The Division of Workers' Compensation (now State Fund) admitted negligence for failing to conduct an adequate review of a corporation's financial ability to self-insure under plan No. 1, but claimed immunity under the rationale of Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988), for its acts as a government agency. The Supreme Court, noting that for immunity to apply, the function of the Division (now State Fund) must be quasi-judicial rather than administrative or ministerial, distinguished Koppen based on the lack of discretion necessary for the Division (now State Fund) to perform its statutory duty. Because simply performing this duty did not involve the use of quasi-judicial discretion, the act was purely ministerial and not protected by quasi-judicial immunity. The discretionary function exemption will not apply when a statute, regulation, or policy specifically prescribes a course of action for an employee to follow and the employee has no rightful option but to adhere to the directive. State ex rel. Div. of Workers' Comp. v. District Court, 240 M 225, 805 P2d 1272, 47 St. Rep. 1911 (1990), following Berkovitz v. U.S., 486 US 531, 100 L Ed 2d 531, 108 S Ct 1945 (1988). See also Meinecke v. McFarland, 122 M 515, 206 P2d 1012 (1949).

Quasi-Judicial Board With Other Hearing Procedure — Montana Administrative Procedure Act Not Applicable to Unemployment Insurance Claims: The unemployment compensation insurance law contains a complete procedure for hearing and determining undisputed claims for unemployment insurance. The Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board), as a quasi-judicial board, may consider not only the record made before the appeals referee but new evidence produced at the Board hearing. The provisions of MAPA are unworkable when an attempt is made to apply them to determine claims for unemployment insurance benefits. It is an incorrect interpretation of statutory law to hold that the Board has no power to overturn the findings of fact of the appeals referee. In reviewing the Board's decision, the District Court is limited by the provisions of 39-51-2410. Decker Coal Co. v. Employment Security Div., 205 M 1, 667 P2d 923, 40 St. Rep. 1056 (1983).

1995 Amendments — Coordination — Composite Section: Chapter 418 in (1)(h) substituted "department of public health" for "department of health and environmental sciences"; deleted former (1)(o) that read: "(o) department of state lands"; and inserted (1)(p) concerning Department of Environmental Quality. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 546 deleted former (1)(h) that read: "(h) department of health and environmental sciences"; in (1)(h) substituted "department of public health and human services" for "department of social and rehabilitation services"; in (1)(i), after "corrections", deleted "and human services"; deleted (1)(r) that read: "(r) department of family services"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Section 568, Ch. 546, provided that if Ch. 418 and Ch. 546 were both passed and approved, subsection (1)(h) was eliminated.

Because both chapters affected the subsection numbering in subsection (1), the codifier has changed the numbering to reflect the changes made by both chapters.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Section 571, Ch. 546, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 262 in (1)(j) substituted "department of corrections and human services" for "department of institutions". Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 512 in (1)(k) substituted "department of transportation" for "department of highways"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1987 Amendment: Inserted reference to Department of Family Services.

1981 Amendment: Deleted "department of community affairs" and "department of professional and occupational licensing" in (1); substituted "commerce" for "business regulation" in (1)(f).

Case Notes

Economic Advantage Inadequate Reason for Denial of Public Right to Observe Government Deliberations in Corrections Vendor Process: A newspaper company sought to restrain the Department of Corrections from excluding the public from meetings of the committee that reviewed proposals for operating private prison facilities. The District Court held that the public had no right to observe the negotiation phase of the committee's work, but that once negotiations were completed, the process by which the conclusions were arrived at must be open to public observation. Both parties appealed. The Supreme Court noted that as part of an Executive Branch agency, the Department and the committee were considered governmental bodies pursuant to this section for purposes of procurement and that under the constitutional right to know, proposals submitted by private vendors were considered documents of a public body or agency that, under 2-6-102, the public has a right to inspect. Under the two-part test in Missoulian v. Bd. of Regents, 207 M 513, 675 P2d 962 (1984), the only exception to the constitutional provision arises when the demand of individual privacy clearly exceeds the merits of public disclosure. The state contended that the meetings at issue were closed for economic advantage, but economic advantage is neither a privacy interest nor a sufficient reason for denying the public the opportunity to observe deliberations of public bodies or to examine public documents, including proposals submitted to the public body by a vendor, unless the proposal concerns a privacy interest involving legitimate trade secrets or individual safety. A public agency's desire for privacy does not provide an exception to the public's constitutional right to observe its government at work. To the extent that provisions in 18-4-304 or ARM 2.5.602 require exclusion of the public from the competitive bid process, those provisions are unconstitutional and unenforceable. 2001 Amendment: Chapter 255 in (2)(e) at end deleted "Section 17-7-138 does not apply to this subsection (e)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 16, 2001.

Termination Date Removed: Section 17, Ch. 417, L. 1997, and sec. 40, Ch. 532, L. 1997, removed the termination date for the amendments enacted by sec. 13, Ch. 23, Special Laws of November 1993.

1993 Special Session Amendment: Chapter 23 in (2)(e), at beginning of first full sentence, inserted "If the salary for an eliminated position is not redistributed as provided for under 2-18-1107"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective December 23, 1993, and terminates July 1, 1997.

Termination: Section 13, Ch. 23, Sp. L. November 1993, provided that the amendments to this section terminate July 1, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 601 inserted (2)(e) allowing a Department head to eliminate positions within the Department; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1989 Amendment: In (1)(h) and (2)(a), after "subject to law", deleted reference to state merit system.

Case Notes

Designation of Hearing Officer's Order as Final: The Commissioner of Labor and Industry is charged with the responsibility of investigating wage claims and holding hearings under Montana wage payment law, and under this section, the Commissioner may delegate these functions to a subordinate employee. Therefore, statute and Department rule clearly allow the decision of an appointed hearing examiner to be a final order. Hoven, Vervick, & Amrine, P.C. v. Comm'r of Labor, 237 M 525, 774 P2d 995, 46 St. Rep. 1024 (1989).

Administrative Interpretation of Statute: In determining the meaning of a statute, deference must be given to the interpretations given the statute by the officers and agencies charged with its administration. St. v. Wood, 205 M 141, 666 P2d 753, 40 St. Rep. 666 (1983).

Venue for Failure to File Tax Returns:

Tax returns are required to be filed with the Department of Revenue. The Department is required to be located in Helena, Montana. Section 46-3-101 (renumbered 46-3-111) provides that in all criminal prosecutions, trial shall be in the county where the offense was committed. The offense charged here was failure to properly file tax returns, so that venue was properly with Lewis and Clark County where Helena is located. St. v. Poncelet, 187 M 528, 610 P2d 698 (1980).

Venue of a criminal action charging intentional failure to file a properly completed Montana individual income tax return would lie in either Lewis and Clark County or the county in which defendants reside. But, since the complaint was filed in the former and no legal justification or prejudice was shown to support transfer, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court's change of venue from Lewis and Clark County. Dept. of Revenue v. Lane, 187 M 230, 609 P2d 300 (1980), following St. v. Bretz, 169 M 505, 548 P2d 949 (1976).

2003 Amendment: Chapter 114 in introductory clause and in (1), (2), (3), (4), and (6) after "data" deleted "and information technology resources". Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 313 in (6) substituted "include a general description of the existing security program and future plans for ensuring security of data and information technology resources in the agency information technology plan as provided for in 2-17-523" for "maintain an information technology plan, including a general description of the existing security program and future plans for assuring security of data and information technology resources"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 592, L. 1987, provided: "WHEREAS, data and information collected and maintained by state government are assets which require protection; and

WHEREAS, the increasing use of information technology in state government requires a systematic risk-management approach to minimize increased security threats to data and information technology resources; and

WHEREAS, it is desirable to create a greater awareness regarding the importance of security of state government data and information technology resources; and

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 322, L. 2017, provided: "WHEREAS, in 2015 the U.S. Supreme Court held in North Carolina State Board of Dental Examiners v. the Federal Trade Commission that members of state licensing boards on which a controlling number of decisionmakers are active market participants in the regulated profession are immune from federal antitrust liability for anticompetitive conduct as state actors only if the challenged restraint is clearly articulated and expressed as state policy and the state has and exercises active supervision over those types of board actions; and

WHEREAS, Montana's professional and occupational licensing board members include active market participants, and the Legislature intends to ensure that Montana law provides for the active supervision of boards as required by the U.S. Supreme Court decision for purposes of state action antitrust immunity; and

WHEREAS, this legislation seeks to continue to rely on the expertise provided by practicing members of the profession to regulate the profession and affirmatively chooses to afford a state action defense and thereby avoid personal legal liability for licensing board members."

Case Notes

Attachment for Administrative Purposes: An agency allocated to a department for administrative purposes is completely independent of the department in the exercise of its quasijudicial functions. Rules adopted by the department have no application to proceedings before the agency unless adopted by the agency. Bowen v. Liberty Mut. Ins. Co., 229 M 84, 745 P2d 330, 44 St. Rep. 1799 (1987).

Attorney General's Opinions

Appropriations — Legislative Control Over Marketing Assessment Funds: Although the control of the Legislature over appropriations to state agencies is based upon broad constitutional provisions, certain money may either be exempt from the appropriation process or the purposes for which that money may be appropriated may be limited by statute. Thus, the Legislature may control appropriations from the Wheat Marketing and Research Account, but those appropriations are subject to the statutorily stated purposes of the Account. Any attempt by the Legislature in an appropriation bill to alter the purposes for which appropriations from the Account are made is subject to the constitutional restriction that the purpose of legislation must be clearly stated in the title of the bill. 39 A.G. Op. 3 (1981).

Appropriation of Specially Assessed Funds — Due Process of Law: The Legislature may appropriate wheat research and marketing funds, which are funds derived from a special tax on the growers of wheat and barley, to the Centralized Services Division of the Department of Agriculture in order to pay for administrative services used by the Wheat Research and Marketing Committee because the Committee is required by law to use the services of the Division and that requirement implies a duty to pay for the services. Because the money appropriated is taxed to the grower for a specific purpose, the amount appropriated to the Centralized Services Division must be for a purpose substantially related to the purposes of the tax. 39 A.G. Op. 3 (1981).

Merger of Merit System Council With Department of Administration: The Merit System Council (now repealed) may enter into an agreement with the Department of Administration to allow the Department to perform staff functions for the Council provided the Council continues to retain its identity and exercise independent quasi-judicial, quasi-legislative, licensing, and policymaking functions as provided by law. 37 A.G. Op. 123 (1978).

Implied Amendment — Accountant Licensing: The laws relating to the Board of Public Accountants appear to have been impliedly amended by the Executive Reorganization Act and its duties transferred to the Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing (now Department of Commerce). When two acts are inconsistent on the same subject, the prior is treated as repealed by the latter. 35 A.G. Op. 58 (1974).

2-15-122. Creation of advisory councils.

Compiler's Comments

2015 Amendment: Chapter 361 in (5)(a) in second sentence after "annually" substituted inflation calculation that multiplies base income by PCE ratios and rounds the product for "using the formula provided in 15-6-134(2)(b)(ii) and (2)(b)(iii), except that the base income level and appropriate dollar amount must be $50 a day"; and inserted (11) defining PCE. Amendment effective April 29, 2015.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 34, Ch. 361, L. 2015, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to tax years beginning after December 31, 2014, and to the reappraisal cycle beginning January 1, 2015."

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Chapter 66 in (3)(b) at end substituted "creating authority" for "governor"; in (5)(a) in first sentence near middle after "not to exceed" increased $25 to $50 and inserted second sentence providing formula for annual inflation adjustment for maximum daily pay rate; in (10) in first sentence near end after "extended by the" substituted "appointing authority" for "governor or by the board of public education, the board of regents of higher education, the state board of education, the attorney general, the state auditor, the secretary of state, or the superintendent of public instruction for those advisory councils created" and after "subsection (1)" deleted "(c)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

Style changes were slightly different in the chapters. In each case, the codifier chose appropriate text.

1991 Amendment: In first sentence of (1)(c) and (10) added Secretary of State to list of entities that may create advisory councils.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 83 at end of (4) changed "2-15-102(7)" to "2-15-102(8)".

Chapter 509 in (1)(c) and (10), after "general", inserted "the state auditor". Amendment effective January 1, 1990.

Applicability: Section 11, Ch. 509, L. 1989, provided: "[This act] applies to persons applying for a license as an insurance agent, solicitor, or enrollment representative on or after January 1, 1990."

2-15-124. Quasi-judicial boards.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1985 Amendment: In (7) at beginning of first sentence substituted "Unless otherwise provided by law" for "Unless he is a full-time salaried officer or employee of this state or of a political subdivision of this state", in second sentence, after "their service as members" inserted exception clause and made minor changes in phraseology and inserted third sentence prohibiting ex officio members from receiving compensation but allowing travel expenses.

1983 Amendments: Chapter 83, in (2), deleted "and qualified" after "are appointed" in two places; in first sentence of (3), after "the senate", substituted "then meeting in regular session or next meeting in regular session following the appointment" for former next sentence, which read: "However, the governor may appoint a member to assume office before the senate meets at its next regular session to consider the appointment."

Chapter 672 increased per diem from $25 to $50 in (7).

Case Notes

No Quasi-Judicial Immunity in Granting Medical License to Doctor Who Had Committed Unprofessional Conduct: Irrespective of whether the functions of the Board of Medical Examiners in investigating a license application of a doctor who had previously been subject to disciplinary action in other states for unprofessional conduct were discretionary actions, the Board was not operating in the context of a controversy or adversarial proceeding. Thus, the District Court committed error when it granted the state's motion for summary judgment based upon quasi-judicial immunity. Nelson v. St., 2008 MT 336, 346 M 206, 195 P3d 293 (2008).

Properly Constituted Board Need Not Include Attorney Participation: Plaintiff appealed a District Court order upholding the denial by the Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board) of unemployment insurance benefits, claiming that the Board was improperly constituted because the attorney member did not participate in the benefits hearing. Affirming the District Court decision, the Supreme Court ruled that requiring all members, including the attorney member, to participate in a decision vitiates state law because this section requires only a majority of members to constitute a quorum to do business and only a majority vote to adopt a decision. Reynolds v. Pac. Telecom, 259 M 309, 856 P2d 1365, 50 St. Rep. 809 (1993).

Board of Medical Examiners — Immunity From Suit: In the exercise of its quasi-judicial authority, the Board of Medical Examiners is entitled to the absolute immunity from suit afforded executive officials. Koppen v. Bd. of Medical Examiners, 233 M 214, 759 P2d 173, 45 St. Rep. 1433 (1988).

Board of Realty Regulation Not Empowered to Award Damages — Complaint to Board Inadequate Notice of Legal Claim: The Board of Realty Regulation may only revoke or suspend a broker's license and has no power to award damages for negligence or fraud. Further, because the Board is not designated by law as a quasi-judicial board pursuant to this section, a complaint to the Board does not give adequate notice of the existence of a legal claim. Erickson v. Croft, 233 M 146, 760 P2d 706, 45 St. Rep. 1379 (1988).

Quasi-Judicial Board With Other Hearing Procedure — Montana Administrative Procedure Act Not Applicable to Unemployment Insurance Claims: The unemployment compensation insurance law contains a complete procedure for hearing and determining undisputed claims for unemployment insurance. The Board of Labor Appeals (now Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board), as a quasi-judicial board, may consider not only the record made before the appeals referee but new evidence produced at the Board hearing. The provisions of MAPA are unworkable when an attempt is made to apply them to determine claims for unemployment insurance benefits. It is an incorrect interpretation of statutory law to hold that the Board has no power to overturn the findings of fact of the appeals referee. In reviewing the Board's decision, the District Court is limited by the provisions of 39-51-2410. Decker Coal Co. v. Employment Security Div., 205 M 1, 667 P2d 923, 40 St. Rep. 1056 (1983).

Board of Dentistry Not to Reconsider Licensing Decisions of Board of Denturitry: Administrative agencies enjoy only those powers specifically conferred upon them by statute. They possess no common-law powers, and implied powers are limited only to those necessary for the effective exercise and discharge of powers and duties expressly conferred. Therefore, when the Board of Denturitry had no power to reconsider its licensing decisions, the Board of Dentistry, having succeeded to the functions of the Board of Denturitry, may not reconsider a prior decision of the Board of Denturitry to issue a denturist's license. 43 A.G. K-12 Public School Funding Study: Section 1, Ch. 580, L. 2001, provided: "Section 1. K-12 public school funding study — duties — hearings. (1) The governor and the superintendent of public instruction shall, within the provisions of the Montana constitution, conduct a study of funding for K-12 public schools, including but not limited to:

(a) analyzing the factors currently in law that are used to compute budget authority for schools to determine if additional factors or changes in those factors are necessary to equitably provide budget authority to public schools;

(b) determining the appropriate allocation of funding to adequately fund elementary, middle school, seventh and eighth grade, and high school programs;

(c) determining if a statewide salary schedule for school staff is possible under the constitutional provision for trustee management of school districts;

(d) determining if the current budget computations are prohibiting or discouraging local decisions to consolidate school districts;

(e) determining the adequacy and equity of the current statutory authority for public schools to access the funds necessary to provide facilities for school districts and state support for school facility costs;

(f) determining the adequacy and equity of current funding for pupil transportation;

(g) determining if appropriate disparity exists in the current local tax effort necessary to fund school districts;

(h) analyzing the current allocation of state funds to public schools to determine its equity;

(i) analyzing the relationship between increasing staffing levels in the classroom in the face of declining enrollment and the resulting financial impacts to school districts and the state;

(j) analyzing appropriate means for school districts to calculate ANB regarding nontraditional, part-time, or distance-learning students;

(k) determining if issues not listed in this section are affecting the equity of school funding in Montana and analyzing those issues;

(l) analyzing the school district structure that currently exists and determining if reducing the number of districts could provide efficiency in the operations of the districts and make existing resources available for classroom activities; and

(m) determining if the existence of 25 budgeted and nonbudgeted funds unreasonably restricts local decisionmakers.

(2) The governor, after consultation with the superintendent of public instruction, shall prepare and submit a preliminary report by December 31, 2001, on the findings and recommendations of the study to the education interim committee.

(3) (a) The education interim committee shall hold hearings and take public comment on the preliminary report prepared and submitted by the governor. The hearings may be held at various locations around the state to facilitate public comment on the governor's report.

(b) by August 1, 2002, the education interim committee shall provide to the governor for the governor's consideration a summary of the hearings and recommendations for changes to the report.

(c) The education interim committee may make any other recommendations on school funding that the committee considers appropriate. The education interim committee shall submit its recommendations and, if appropriate, prepare legislation for consideration by the 2003 legislature.

(4) Upon receipt of the summary and recommendations from the education interim committee, the governor shall issue a final report and, if appropriate, prepare legislation for consideration by the 2003 legislature.

(5) The governor may:

(a) appoint one or more advisory councils pursuant to 2-15-122 to assist in conducting the study;

(b) coordinate with any other legislative interim committee, as appropriate;

(c) request assistance from other legislative and executive branch agencies; and

(d) in addition to any legislative appropriation, accept donations for purposes of the study required in this section."

Amendment effective May 17, 1991.

Immunity — Compact Provisions Did Not Require Two-Thirds Vote of Legislature — One Provision Waived Immunity Instead of Granting Immunity — Other Provision Only Provided Immunity to Individuals: After many years of negotiation, representatives of the state of Montana, through the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, the Confederated Salish and Kootenai Tribes, and the United States agreed to the terms of a compact as a means of settling water rights disputes involving the tribes. In 2015, the Montana Legislature approved the Compact and concurrently enacted separate administrative and management provisions. After approval by the Legislature, the plaintiffs challenged specific sections of the Compact and administrative provisions based on an argument that Art. II, sec. 18, Mont. Const., required the Legislature to approve the Compact or its administrative provisions by a two-thirds vote of each house because they granted new immunities to the state. The Supreme Court held that none of the provisions required a two-thirds vote. As to the challenged provision in the Compact, the Supreme Court upheld the District Court and determined that the Compact provision at issue provided for a waiver of immunity, not a grant of new immunity. As such, the Compact on its face did not create any new immunity from suit and could be enacted by less than a two-thirds majority of each house. As to the challenged provision of the administrative provisions, the Supreme Court reversed the District Court and determined that the provisions did not establish or alter any immunity as to the state, counties, cities, towns, or other local governmental entities. To the contrary, the new immunities were specifically applied to designated individuals, including members of a board, an engineer, a designee, water commissioners, and any staff. Flathead Joint Bd. of Control v. St., 2017 MT 277, 389 Mont. 270, 405 P.3d 88.

United States Water Rights for Stockwatering in Pothole Lake — Reservation Based on 1926 Federal Reservation — Prior Reservation Not Limited by 1976 Act of Congress: The Water Court did not err in concluding that the United States owned reserved water rights for stockwatering by permittees in a pothole lake on federal grazing land based on Public Water Reserve (PWR) 107, which was signed by the President of the United States in April 1926. The original PWR 107 reserved "every spring or waterhole, located on unsurveyed public land." The broad language of the reservation clearly included the pothole lake and there was nothing to indicate that the original reservation had been reversed. A 1980 federal regulation did not retroactively unreserve water sources like the pothole lake that had been reserved since 1926. Rather, the regulation implemented statutory changes that Congress made in 1976 intended to limit future reservations of federal land. The BLM's failure to inventory the pothole was likewise not significant in light of the original withdrawal, and while the BLM could have submitted its claim to the Reserved Water Rights Compact Commission, it was not required to do so. The Supreme Court found no evidence that the Water Court made any determination based on contested issues of material fact. U.S. v. Barthelemess Ranch Corp., 2016 MT 348, 386 Mont. 121, 386 P.3d 952.

State Agency Lists as Mailing Lists: Agencies are prohibited from distributing a list of persons only if the intended use of such list is for unsolicited mass mailings, house calls or distributions, or telephone calls. The prohibition pertains only to lists of natural persons, not businesses, corporations, governmental agencies, or other associations. Agencies are not required to affirmatively ascertain the intended use for which the list is sought; a clear written disclaimer from the agency as to the proscriptions and penalty is sufficient. 38 A.G. 1991 Amendment: In (1), after "party", substituted "or in which the state has an interest" for "and all causes to which any county may be a party unless the interest of the county is adverse to the state or some officer thereof acting in his official capacity"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) to account for and pay over to the proper officer all moneys which may come into his possession belonging to the state or to any county"; in (3), near beginning after "cases", substituted "prosecuted or defended by him" for "in which he is required to appear" and deleted former second through fifth sentences that read: "The register must show the county, district, and court in which the cases have been instituted and tried and whether they are civil or criminal. If civil, the register must show the nature of the demand, the stage of proceedings, and, when prosecuted to judgment, a memorandum of the judgment, of any process issued thereon, and whether satisfied or not. If not satisfied, the register must show the return of the sheriff. If criminal, the register must show the nature of the crime, the mode of prosecution, the stage of proceedings, and, when prosecuted to sentence, a memorandum of the sentence and of the execution thereof, if the same has been executed, and if not executed, of the reason of the delay or prevention"; in (5), after "duties", inserted "or to prosecute or defend appropriate cases in which the state or any officer of the state in his official capacity is a party or in which the state has an interest"; deleted former (8) that read: "(8) to bid upon and purchase in the name of the state and under the direction of the board of investments any property offered for sale under execution issued upon judgments in favor of or for the use of the state and to enter satisfaction, in whole or in part, of such judgments as the consideration for such purchases"; deleted (9) that read: "(9) whenever the property of a judgment debtor in any judgment mentioned in the preceding subsection has been sold under a prior judgment or is subject to any judgment, lien, or encumbrance taking precedence of the judgment in favor of the state, under the direction of the board of investments, to redeem such property from such prior judgment, lien, or encumbrance. All sums of money necessary for such redemption must be paid out of any money appropriated for such purposes"; deleted (10) that read: "(10) when in his opinion it is necessary for the collection or enforcement of any judgment hereinbefore mentioned, to institute and prosecute, in behalf of the state, such suits or other proceedings as are necessary to set aside and annul all conveyances fraudulently made by such judgment debtors, the cost necessary to the prosecution must be paid out of any appropriations for the prosecution of delinquents"; in (7), after "commissioners", deleted "and other duties prescribed by law"; deleted (12) that read: "(12) to prescribe the form of blanks to be used by the clerks of the district courts in issuing commitments to the several state institutions, admission to which requires a court commitment"; inserted (8) requiring performance of other legal duties; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 27, 1991.

1983 Amendment: Deleted former (12), which read: "to report to the governor, at the time prescribed by 2-7-102, the condition of the affairs of his department, and to accompany the same with a copy of his docket and of the reports received by him from county attorneys".

Case Notes

Failure of District Court to Grant Motions to Dismiss as Directed by Attorney General for Government Misconduct — Violation of Separation of Powers: The Attorney General directed the Lincoln County Attorney to file motions to dismiss charges against certain criminal defendants for the reason that outrageous government misconduct had occurred in the course of the prosecution. The Lincoln County Attorney filed the motions, but they were denied by the District Court. In a proceeding for supervisory control, the Supreme Court held that the Attorney General was within his authority to direct the County Attorney to move to dismiss the charges and held that the Attorney General's conclusion that there had been outrageous government misconduct in the cases served as a basis under 46-13-401(1) for the District Court to dismiss the charges. The refusal of the District Court to dismiss the charges was an abuse of discretion and a violation of the doctrine of separation of powers. By refusing to grant the motions to dismiss, the District Court intruded upon the lawful functions of the County Attorney and the Attorney General, who belong to the Executive Branch of government. State ex rel. Fletcher v. District Court, 260 M 410, 859 P2d 992, 50 St. Rep. 992 (1993). See also St. v. Schneiderhan, 261 M 161, 862 P2d 37, 50 St. Rep. 1242 (1993).

Standing of Attorney General to Appeal P.S.C. Order: The Montana Power Company (M.P.C.) applied to the Public Service Commission (P.S.C.) for a rate increase of over $96.3 million. The P.S.C. granted only $4.1 million and denied in toto M.P.C.'s request to recover costs associated with Colstrip Unit 3. The M.P.C. appealed to District Court for review under 2-4-701. The judge reversed the P.S.C. order. The Attorney General filed notice of appeal. More than 60 days after the judge's order was entered, the P.S.C. also filed notice of appeal. The M.P.C. filed a motion to dismiss the appeal of the Attorney General for lack of standing and the appeal of the P.S.C.

as untimely. The Supreme Court granted the motion, holding that the Attorney General had no standing to represent the state on appeal since it was not an aggrieved party or a party to the proceedings before the District Court and because, in his official capacity, the Attorney General may not appeal a decision that is within the discretion of the P.S.C. as a party to the action. Mont. Power Co. v. Dept. of Public Service Regulation, 218 M 471, 709 P2d 995, 42 St. Rep. 1750 (1985).

Power of Attorney General to Institute Actions in District Court — Felony Prosecution Initiated by County Attorney: Although County Attorney may be ordered by Attorney General to initiate a felony prosecution in a District Court, the Attorney General has no power to initiate the action independent of the County Attorney. State ex rel. Woodahl v. District Court, 159 M 112, 495 P2d 182 (1972).

Weight of Opinion of Attorney General: While executive construction of a law in an opinion of the Attorney General is not binding upon the Supreme Court, even though acquiesced in by several legislative sessions, yet such interpretation is persuasive and it is entitled to respectful consideration and will be upheld if not palpably erroneous. State ex rel. Ebel v. Schye, 130 M 537, 305 P2d 350 (1956); State ex rel. Barr v. District Court, 108 M 433, 91 P2d 399 (1939).

Power of Attorney General to Institute Actions in District Courts — Common-Law Power: The statutes of this state do not authorize the institution of an action in the District Courts by the Attorney General on behalf of the state, but rather they specifically state that such an action must be brought by the County Attorney of the county; however, under the common-law powers and duties of the Attorney General, he can institute such an action where the public interest is affected and the state is a party in interest. State ex rel. Olsen v. P.S.C., 129 M 106, 283 P2d 594 (1955).

Common-Law Duties: Under Art. VII, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. (similar to Art. VI, sec. 4, 1972 Mont. Const.), and this section, imposing upon the Attorney General certain duties and "other duties prescribed by law", and in view of the fact that the office of the Attorney General, as it existed in England under the common law, was adopted as a part of the governmental machinery of this state, the common-law duties of that officer attach themselves to the office, in the absence of express restrictions, insofar as they are applicable and in harmony with our system of government. State ex rel. Ford v. Young, 54 M 401, 170 P 947 (1918).

County a Party — Service Required: The Attorney General, being by law the attorney of record in all causes pending in the Supreme Court to which a county may be a party and as such entitled to be served with a copy of the transcript and appellant's brief, an appeal by plaintiff in an action against a county may be dismissed for failure to so serve him. McIntosh Hardware Co. v. Flathead County, 32 M 254, 80 P 239 (1905).

Causes in Which the County Is a Party: The Attorney General must appear in all cases to which the state is a party, but there is no law which authorizes him to contract on behalf of the county, and the county cannot legally pay expenses incurred in printing briefs on behalf of the state in a criminal cause on appeal. Independent Publishing Co. v. Lewis & Clarke County, 30 M 83, 75 P 860 (1904), distinguished in St. v. Barry, 45 M 582, 124 P 774 (1912).

Assisting County Attorney — Authority: When the emergency arises calling the Attorney General to the assistance of the County Attorney, he necessarily has the authority to do anything that the inferior officer may do or, if the circumstances require it, undo what has already been done. Independent Publishing Co. v. Lewis & Clarke County, 30 M 83, 75 P 860 (1904); State ex rel. Nolan v. District Court, 22 M 25, 55 P 916 (1899).

Assistance of County Attorneys — Grand Jury Participation: The Attorney General, by virtue of the power conferred upon him, has the right to appear before the grand jury and examine witnesses before it in assisting a County Attorney. State ex rel. Nolan v. District Court, 22 M 25, 55 P 916 (1899).

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of County Commissioners to Employ Private Attorney: A County Attorney may not unreasonably withhold his consent to the employment of another attorney by the Board of County Commissioners to perform legal services in connection with the civil business of the county. The decision of a County Attorney to withhold his consent is subject to the supervisory authority of the Attorney General. 41 A.G. Op. 34 (1985).

Effect of Declaratory Judgment on Attorney General Opinion — Compensation of County Clerk and Recorder: In 1981, the Attorney General issued an opinion declaring it unlawful to pay the County Clerk and Recorder extra for serving as election administrator (39 A.G. Op. 7 (1981)). In 1984, a District Court held the reverse in a declaratory judgment. The opinion was not expressly overruled and remains valid. Although the parties to the declaratory judgment are bound, it is questionable that this judgment can serve as binding precedent for all judicial districts. The Attorney General is not bound by a declaratory judgment to which he is not a party and which does not explicitly overrule a previous opinion. Although the District Court opinion is entitled to weight, the Attorney General may reach a contrary result in his interpretation. 41 A.G. Op. 33 (1985).

Overlapping County-District Court Authority — Not Proper Subject of Opinion: Montana's District Courts are clothed with inherent and statutory power to do all that is necessary to render their jurisdiction effective, including the power to hire necessary court personnel and control them; but it appears that requiring District Court personnel to also abide by county policies and regulations is not an undue interference with the judicial branch. The scope of the judicial authority in this matter in relation to county authority is not an appropriate matter for an Attorney General opinion and would be more appropriately disposed of by either an understanding between the court and the county or a judgment in a court of proper jurisdiction. 39 A.G. Op. 38 (1981).

District Court Declaratory Judgment — Effect on Attorney General Opinions: The Attorney General, in issuing advisory opinions, is not bound by a conclusion of law expressed in a District Court declaratory judgment in an action to which the Attorney General is not a party. 38 A.G. Op. 112 (1980).

State Conservation Districts — Legal Representation: The Attorney General is responsible for civil legal representation upon request from supervisors of a state conservation district, but private counsel may be employed as Special Assistant Attorneys General. The compensation may be set by the supervisors and becomes a district obligation. County Attorneys' duty to represent districts extends only to giving their opinion in writing to the officers of the district on matters pertaining to their offices. 37 A.G. Op. 76 (1977).

Prosecutorial Discretion: A County Attorney need not file and prosecute every individual's complaint when there is insufficient evidence to warrant prosecution or when such a prosecution would not be in the interests of justice. 36 A.G. Op. 47 (1975).

Joint Employment of County Attorneys: A County Attorney, for purposes of administration, is jointly employed by both the county and the state. 36 A.G. Op. 32 (1975).

Authority to Issue Legal Opinions and Weight to Be Given: Only the Attorney General has specific authority to issue legal opinions to County Attorneys or other agencies of state and county government. Opinions issued by state officers or agencies which conflict with the Attorney General's opinion on the same question must yield to the Attorney General's opinion. 35 A.G. Op. 68 (1974).

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 68, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, the Public Employees' Retirement Board (PERB) administers and manages the assets of 10 separate retirement plans, with combined trust fund assets of over $4.2 billion and benefit payments of over $180 million to more than 18,000 retirees annually; and

WHEREAS, the PERB has a fiduciary obligation to its paying members, retirees, and taxpayers to adopt and implement investment, administrative, and other policies that safeguard the interests of the members, retirees, and taxpayers; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has the obligation and authority to oversee and supervise those investment, administrative, and other policies; and

WHEREAS, Montana statutes now require that the Governor submit to the Montana Senate for confirmation by the Senate the appointments to at least 65 various boards, committees, councils, and commissions; and

WHEREAS, among the 65 entities for which Senate confirmation is now required are Title 37 licensing boards, such as the Board of Plumbers, and regulatory boards, such as the Board of Milk Control; and

WHEREAS, the process of investigation and confirmation used by the Senate helps ensure that appointees to the 65 boards, committees, councils, and commissions are sincerely interested in the appointment, that they are responsive to the constituencies that they serve, and that they are legally and otherwise qualified for the appointment that they seek; and

WHEREAS, the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee believes that the functions, responsibilities, and authority of the members of the PERB are at least equal to some of the other boards, committees, councils, and commissions for which Senate confirmation is now required; and

THEREFORE, the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee recommends that the gubernatorial appointments to the PERB be made subject to confirmation by the Montana Senate."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 247 inserted "with the consent of the senate" in (2).

Chapter 474 substituted language of (5) relating to compensation pursuant to 37-1-133 for former text that read: "(5) The members of the board shall be compensated and reimbursed as are members of advisory councils in 2-15-122".

Language Not Codified: Chapter 474, L. 1981, contained the phrase "for boards allocated to the department of professional and occupational licensing" at the end of (5) of 2-15-1102. Chapter 274, L. 1981, instructed the Code Commissioner to change all references to the "department of professional and occupational licensing" to the "department of commerce" and reallocated the board of county printing from the department of community affairs to the department of commerce. With the reallocation and department name change the phrase becomes redundant and hence was not codified.

Not more than one member shall be appointed from a single county. However, a change of residence within the state after appointment does not alter a member's status"; in (2)(b)(i) at beginning of first sentence substituted provision for five regional representatives, who are voting members, for provision that read: "All members shall be residents of this state" and inserted second through fourth sentences relating to appointment from different geographic regions, as provided for by rule, and members who move to other regions; inserted (2)(b)(ii) through (2)(b)(xi) relating to the background of members and whether each is a voting or nonvoting member; inserted (2)(c) relating to appointment of a tribal member; inserted (4) and (5) stating that six voting members are a quorum and a tie vote is a negative vote; in (6) substituted first sentence relating to receipt of expenses for former sentence that read: "Each member shall receive compensation and travel expenses as provided for in 37-1-133" and inserted second sentence relating to compensation for the legislator member; inserted (7) relating to the number of and call for meetings, where they are held, and notice; in (8) substituted "Each voting member may serve for a maximum of two terms. Each term is for 4 years" for "Each member shall serve for a term of 5 years"; inserted (9) relating to removal of a member by the governor; in (10) in second sentence at end substituted "including an administrator" for "and 2-15-121(2)(d) does not apply" and inserted third sentence providing that the administrator is the board secretary and may represent the board in communications with state agencies; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2004.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 491, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, the 57th Legislature requested a study of veterans' issues, and the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee conducted numerous hearings, received expert testimony, and examined research during a 14-month period; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that, using 2000 data, Montana's population of nearly 107,000 veterans and an estimated 170,000 family members of veterans not only ranks

Montana second in the nation in the number of veterans per capita (11.9%) but also means that veterans and their family members constitute more than 25% of Montana's total population; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that more than 80,000 Montana veterans are combat-era veterans (more than 36,000 are Vietnam-era, more than 16,000 are Persian Gulf-era, more than 16,000 are World War II-era, and about 14,000 are Korean-era veterans) and that the largest group of veterans is now between 50 and 65 years of age; and

WHEREAS, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs estimates that more than 50% of combat theater veterans suffer from clinically serious and disabling posttraumatic stress disorder, that twice as many veterans as nonveterans experience homelessness, that many veterans have overlapping and complex needs encompassing medical and nursing home care, mental health and chemical dependency counseling, housing, transportation, education and training, job services, and family support services, and that the children and families of veterans who do not get the help that they need are themselves at risk; and

WHEREAS, these complex needs and a maze of federal, state, local, public, and private services demand a high level of interagency coordination and cooperation for effective service delivery to ensure that veterans and their families do not fall through the cracks and to avoid unnecessary cost-shifting from federal to state and local public assistance programs; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that current statutory language establishing the Board of Veterans' Affairs as the lead agency for veterans' affairs dates back to 1919 and that although the Board's duties and responsibilities have consistently evolved, statutory language has not kept pace; and

WHEREAS, the Board hires and supervises its own classified employees, who make up the Montana Veterans' Affairs Division, but the Board does not have rulemaking authority to implement programs; and

WHEREAS, the Board is administratively attached to the Department of Military Affairs, which has greatly assisted veterans and supported the Board but has no statutory authority over veterans' affairs; and

WHEREAS, a legislative performance audit requested by the Interim Committee revealed that although the Montana Veterans' Affairs Division is to be commended for doing a great job with limited resources and limited statutory guidance, it also revealed that new management tools and updated information management systems are needed to provide more consistency and to track and manage staff workload; and

WHEREAS, the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs spent about $175 million in Montana during fiscal year 2000, which ranked Montana 37th nationwide in per capita expenditures by the U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs on veterans; and

WHEREAS, the Interim Committee found that a statutory restructuring of powers, duties, and responsibilities for state veterans' affairs programs is essential, not only to address inadvertent statutory shortfalls and elevate the profile of state veterans' affairs, but also to better integrate benefit claims with human services programs so that eligible veterans and family members receive the federal compensation, benefits, and care that they have earned in self-sacrificing service in the armed forces of the United States of America."

Implementation: Section 14, Ch. 491, L. 2003, provided: "(1) The members of the board of veterans' affairs, established in 2-15-1205, who are members on the day before [the effective date of this act] [effective January 1, 2004] may continue to serve the remainder of their terms as described under the provisions of 2-15-1205.

(2) Appointments to the board made after [the effective date of this act] must be made as described in 2-15-1205(2)."

Board Transferred: Section 1, Ch. 271, L. 1983, provided: "The allocation of the board of veterans' affairs for administrative purposes is transferred from the department of social and rehabilitation services [now department of public health and human services] to the department of military affairs. Section 2-15-2202, MCA, is intended to be renumbered and recodified as an integral part of Title 2, chapter 15, part 12."

(1) Two of the members appointed by the Montana historical society and four of the members appointed by the Montana arts council shall serve 2-year terms.

(2) Two of the members appointed by the Montana historical society and two of the members appointed by the Montana arts council shall serve 3-year terms.

(3) Four of the members appointed by the Montana historical society and two of the members appointed by the Montana arts council shall serve 4-year terms."

Attorney General's Opinions

Responsibility for Identification of Potential Heritage Property: The historic preservation officer is required by 22-3-423 and 22-3-424 to share with state agencies the responsibility for identification of potential heritage properties on state-owned lands, and that responsibility may not be limited by an agency policy which restricts or abolishes the historic preservation officer's identification authority. 41 A.G. Op. 53 (1986).

Determination of "Heritage Properties" on State-Owned Land Within Exclusive Authority of Preservation Review Board: The state antiquities law gives exclusive authority to the Preservation Review Board to determine which properties on state-owned lands are "heritage properties" within the meaning of the law. 41 A.G. Op. 8 (1985).

2009 Amendment: Chapter 65 in (3)(a) after "five members" inserted "and three substitute members", at the end of (3)(a)(i), (3)(a)(ii), and (3)(a)(iii) inserted language providing for substitute members with the same qualifications as regular members to serve in place of absent members; inserted (3)(c) providing that a substitute member is entitled to the same compensation and per diem as other members; deleted former (4) and (5) that read: "(4) When the presiding officer is unable to participate in a proceeding before the board, the remaining members of the board shall select an individual who qualifies under subsection (3)(a)(iii) to serve in the place of the presiding officer in that proceeding. The individual selected shall participate in the decisions in that proceeding. There may be only one presiding officer replacement appointed and serving at any one time. The individual selected is entitled to the same compensation and per diem that members of the board receive.

(5) When a board member other than the presiding officer is unable to participate in a proceeding before the board, the remaining members of the board shall select a substitute member who possesses the qualifications described in subsection (3)(a)(i) or (3)(a)(ii), depending on the qualifications of the absent board member. The substitute member shall serve in place of the absent board member and participate in the decisions in that proceeding. A substitute board member is entitled to the same compensation and per diem that members of the board receive"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 2009.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 90 inserted (5) providing for a substitute member when a Board member other than the presiding officer is unable to participate in a proceeding before the Board; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 9, 1995.

1991 Amendment: In (3)(a)(i), after "members", substituted "who are full-time management employees in organizations with collective bargaining units or who represent management in collective bargaining activities" for "each having management experience involving collective bargaining"; in (3)(a)(ii), after "members", substituted "who are full-time employees or elected officials of a labor union or an association recognized by the board" for "each having experience as a member or employee of an employee organization"; and in (3)(b), at end, substituted "of the organizations they represent" for "represented by their experience".

Applicability: Section 2, Ch. 239, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to members appointed after [the effective date of this act]." Act effective October 1, 1991.

1983 Amendment: In (3)(a), after "governor" deleted "Two members shall represent management, two members shall represent employees or employee organizations of the state, and one member shall represent a neutral position", inserted (3)(a)(i), (3)(a)(ii), (3)(a)(iii), and

(3)(b) providing that the members be selected on the basis of certain experience and serve as impartial decisionmakers; and in (4) at beginning of subsection after "When the" substituted "chairperson" for "member representing a neutral position", after "before the board" substituted "the remaining members" for "an equal number of management and labor members", after "who shall be a" substituted "person who qualifies under subsection (3)(a)(iii)" for "neutral person", after "in the place of the" changed "neutral member" to "chairperson", and in second sentence after "additional" changed "neutral person" to "chairperson replacement".

1981 Amendment: Inserted (4) providing for replacements; and inserted (5) relating to vote requirements.

Title 24, chapter 5, ARM Office of Workers' Compensation Judge.

Attorney General's Opinions

Employees of Office of Workers' Compensation Judge — Exempt From Classification Plan: The question of whether or not the employees of the office of the workers' compensation judge are exempt from the state classification plan (Title 2, ch. 18) depended upon whether the office was part of the judicial branch or the executive branch. The similarities to state courts, the qualifications for office, the statutory provisions regarding the judge and the court, statutory construction, and the legislative intent derived from the history supported the conclusion that the office performs a judicial function. Therefore, the employees are employees of the judicial branch and exempt from the state classification plan. 38 A.G. Op. 27 (1979).

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 in (4) deleted former second sentence that read: "A member may not be appointed for more than two consecutive terms." Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 314 near beginning of (2), before "members", inserted "six"; and at beginning of first sentence of (4) deleted "Following the initial appointment of members to the board" and after "serve" inserted "staggered". Amendment effective April 12, 1993.

Transition to Staggered Terms — Appointments: Section 2, Ch. 314, L. 1993, provided: "(1) On September 1, 1995, the governor shall make appointments to the alternative health care board as follows:

(a) one person who is a Montana physician whose practice includes obstetrics, to serve a 4-year term;

(b) one person who is a public member, to serve a 3-year term;

(c) one person who is a direct-entry midwife, to serve a 2-year term; and

(d) one person who is a naturopath, to serve a 1-year term.

(2) At the expiration of the 1-year and 2-year terms provided for in subsections (1)(c) and (1)(d), the governor shall appoint the person designated to fill the position to serve a 4-year term. At the expiration of these 4-year terms, the physician 4-year term, and the public member 3-year term, appointments must be made in accordance with 2-15-1840 [renumbered 2-15-1730].

(3) On September 1, 1997, the governor shall make appointments to the board as follows:

(a) one person who is a direct-entry midwife, to serve a 1-year term; and

(b) one person who is a naturopath, to serve a 2-year term.

(4) At the end of the terms provided for in subsection (3), the governor shall appoint the person designated to fill the positions to serve a 4-year term. At the expiration of these 4-year terms, appointments must be made in accordance with 2-15-1840 [renumbered 2-15-1730]."

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent to Ch. 306, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 7 and 10] [37-26-304 and 37-26-201] grant to the board of naturopathic physicians [now alternative health care board] rulemaking authority to implement the provisions of this bill. It is the intent of the legislature that the board, at a minimum, adopt rules:

(1) specifying the scope of practice of naturopathic medicine;

(2) establishing license application and examination procedures, fees, and criteria for minimal educational and clinical requirements;

(3) developing procedures for the issuance, renewal, suspension, revocation, and reciprocity of licenses and procedures for certificates of specialty practice; and

(4) establishing investigatory procedures for processing complaints."

Severability: Section 20, Ch. 306, L. 1991, was a severability clause.

Section Not Codified: Section 2, Ch. 524, L. 1991, providing for initial appointments to the Alternative Health Care Board, was not codified.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 82 in (2) increased number of board members from 11 to 12; in (3)(a) at end after "medicine" inserted "including one member with experience in emergency medicine"; inserted (3)(f) to include a member who is a volunteer emergency medical technician; inserted (4)(b) requiring that the volunteer emergency medical technician must have a demonstrated interest in and knowledge of state and national issues involving emergency medical service; in (4)(d) after "medicine" inserted "emergency medical care"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 25, 2009.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 126 in (5) near beginning of third sentence after "may" deleted "upon notice and hearing"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

Chapter 519 in (3)(e) substituted "physician assistant" for "physician assistant-certified". Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 327 deleted former (5) and (6) that read: "(5) The member who is a licensed nutritionist may vote only on issues that affect the licensure and regulation of nutritionists.

(6) The member who is a licensed physician assistant-certified may vote only on issues that affect the licensure and regulation of physician assistants-certified"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 419 in (2) increased Board to 11 members from 10 members; inserted (2)(e) requiring one Board member to be licensed physician assistant-certified; in (4), at end after "at least 5 years", deleted "except that for 5 years after October 1, 1987, the number of years of licensure required for the nutritionist member is no greater than the number of years this act has been in effect"; inserted (6) regarding vote of physician assistant-certified; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 20, 1993.

1987 Amendment: Added licensed nutritionist to Board of Medical Examiners by increasing board size and inserting reference to member who is licensed nutritionist; in third sentence of (4), after "have practiced medicine", inserted "or dietetics-nutrition" and inserted exception clause at end of sentence; and inserted (5) relating to voting powers of the nutritionist member.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 243 increased the number of board members from seven to eight; decreased members having degree of doctor of medicine from six to five; added two members of the general public; deleted "except for public members" after "each member" in the third sentence of (4); deleted "however the year requirement of practice and residency shall be waived for the initial term of appointment of the member having the degree and license of doctor of osteopathy" at the end of (4); and substituted staggered 4-year terms for term of 7 years in (5).

Chapter 470 added a licensed podiatrist.

Composite Section: Chapter 243, L. 1981, deleted one doctor board member and added two public members while Ch. 470 added a podiatrist. Since there is no conflict created by these changes, the board now has nine members.

Osteopathy — Transfer of Regulatory Authority:

Preamble: The preamble to SB 393 (Ch. 87, L. 1981) read:

"WHEREAS, the sunset law, sections 2-8-103 and 2-8-112, MCA, terminates the Board of Osteopathic Physicians and requires a performance evaluation of the Board by the Legislative Audit Committee; and

WHEREAS, as a result of the performance evaluation, the Legislative Audit Committee recommends that the Board of Osteopathic Physicians be terminated and that regulation of osteopathy be transferred to the Board of Medical Examiners." Continuing Licensure of Current Osteopathic Licensees: Section 3, Ch. 87, L. 1981, provided: "Persons presently licensed by the board of osteopathic physicians shall continue to be eligible for licensure by meeting current qualifications for licensure. No new qualifications for licensure may be required of persons licensed prior to the effective date of this act [July 1, 1981]."

Transfer of Funds and Records: Section 4, Ch. 87, L. 1981, provided: "By the effective date of this act [July 1, 1981], all funds and records of the board of osteopathic physicians shall be transferred to the board of medical examiners."

Effective Date: Section 7, Ch. 87, L. 1981, provided: "This act is effective July 1, 1981, and the provisions of 2-8-121 do not apply to the board of osteopathic physicians."

Podiatry — Transfer of Regulatory Authority:

Preamble: The preamble to SB 392 (Ch. 470, L. 1981) read:

"WHEREAS, the sunset law, sections 2-8-103 and 2-8-112, terminates the Board of Podiatry Examiners and requires a performance evaluation by the Legislative Audit Committee; and

WHEREAS, as a result of the performance evaluation, the Legislative Audit Committee recommends that the Board of Podiatry Examiners be terminated, and that regulation of podiatrists be transferred to the Board of Medical Examiners." See State of Montana Report to the Legislature, Sunset Review Board of Podiatry Examiners, 79SS-8, Legislative Auditor, 1980.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 481 near beginning of first sentence in (2), after "dentists," deleted "one of whom shall serve as a nonvoting member" and after "denturist" substituted "two dental hygienists" for "one dental hygienist" and near middle of third sentence, after "appointment", deleted "except as provided in subsection (2)(b)"; deleted (2)(b) that read: "(b) The provision in subsection (2)(a) requiring a licensed member to have actively practiced in this state for at least 5 continuous years immediately before his appointment does not apply to the first denturist appointed to the board"; deleted former second sentence in (3) that read: "Each dentist appointed to the board for a statutory 5-year term shall serve the first year of the term as a nonvoting member of the board"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning of (2)(a) increased number of dentist Board members from four to five and provided that one would serve as a nonvoting member; and in (3) inserted second sentence requiring that each dentist appointed to Board serve the first year as a nonvoting member. Amendment effective March 29, 1992.

1987 Amendment: In (2)(a) substituted a denturist for a dentist on the Board and added a senior citizen as a public member of the Board, inserted exception clause referring to subsection (2)(b), and deleted the U.S. citizenship requirement; and inserted (2)(b) exempting first denturist member from 5-year practice requirement.

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 524, L. 1987, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana Initiative No. 97 created the Board of Denturitry; and

WHEREAS, Chapter 548, Laws of 1985, required the Legislative Audit Committee to conduct a review of the Board of Denturitry and to propose a bill to the 50th Legislature merging the Board of Denturitry and the Board of Dentistry if the Board of Denturitry has not licensed 30 denturists; and

WHEREAS, the Legislative Audit Committee has determined that the Board of Denturitry has not licensed 30 denturists."

1981 Amendments: Chapter 244 deleted the second and third sentences in (2) requiring appointments to be made from a list of names submitted by the Montana Dental Association and Montana Dental Hygienists' Association.

Chapter 247 inserted "with the consent of the senate" in (2).

Chapter 363 in (2), added a public member, deleted the requirement that the Governor appoint from a list submitted by the Montana Dental Hygienists' Association and the Montana Dental Association, and made minor changes in phraseology.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 224 in (2) in first sentence increased board membership from five to six and in second sentence inserted "one member must be a registered pharmacy technician"; in three places in (2)(a) after "licensed" inserted "pharmacist"; inserted (2)(b) requiring pharmacy technician member to have at least 5 consecutive years of practical experience and providing for board disqualification if active status ceases; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Saving Clause: Section 35, Ch. 224, L. 2003, was a saving clause.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 388 in (3) in second sentence after "serve" substituted "more than two consecutive full terms" for "consecutive 5-year terms on the board" and inserted third sentence providing that an appointment to fill an unexpired term does not constitute a full term; inserted (4)(b) providing that a member be removed from office upon refusal or inability to perform the duties of a board member in an efficient, responsible, and professional manner; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

Name Change — Directions to Code Commissioner: Pursuant to sec. 36, Ch. 308, L. 1995, in this section the Code Commissioner changed "university of Montana" to "university of Montana-Missoula".

1983 Amendment: In (1), changed "pharmacists" to "pharmacy"; in first sentence of (2)(a), substituted "Each licensed member must have graduated and received the first professional undergraduate degree from the school of pharmacy of the university of Montana or from an accredited pharmacy degree program that has been approved by the board." for "Each licensed member shall be a graduate of the college of pharmacy of the university of Montana or of a college or school of pharmacy accredited by the American council on pharmaceutical education."; inserted (2)(b) relating to public member qualifications; and in (3) changed "3-year" to "5-year" in first sentence and inserted second sentence concerning removal of a member from office.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 244 deleted language in (2) requiring the Governor to appoint members from a list of names submitted by the Montana pharmaceutical association.

Chapter 247 inserted "with the consent of the senate" in (2).

Chapter 362 changed provision for a three-member board to a five-member board; deleted the requirement that the Governor appoint from a list submitted by the Montana pharmaceutical association; required three members to be licensed pharmacists and two to be from the general public; provided for staggered 3-year terms; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Chapter 379 substituted requirement that board members be graduates of schools accredited by the council on pharmaceutical education for the requirement of recognition and approval of the schools or membership in the association of pharmacy schools near the middle of (2)(a); deleted "However, one member may be a registered pharmacist of 15 years' practical experience and actually engaged in the practice of pharmacy." after "before his appointment" near end of (2)(a).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 56 in (2)(a) and (2)(b) substituted current text related to board membership for former (2)(a), (2)(b), and (2)(c) that read: "(a) two members, each of whom has been a licensed hearing aid dispenser for at least 5 years, possesses a current audiologist license issued under Title 37, chapter 15, and has a master's level college degree;

(b) two members, each of whom does not hold a master's level college degree in audiology but has been a licensed dispenser and fitter of hearing aids for at least 5 years before being appointed to the board; and

(c) one public member who is either an otolaryngologist or a person who is not a licensed hearing aid dispenser or a licensed audiologist and who regularly uses a hearing aid because of a demonstrated hearing impairment"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective January 1, 2016.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 109 in (2) decreased number of board members from seven to five; deleted former (2)(a) that read: "(a) one member who shall hold or be eligible for a certificate of qualification from the American board of otolaryngology"; in (2)(a) near middle after "possesses" substituted "a current audiologist license issued under Title 37, chapter 15" for "national certification in audiology"; in (2)(c) at beginning substituted "one public member who is either an otolaryngologist or a person who is not a licensed hearing aid dispenser or a licensed audiologist and who" for "two public members, each of whom is not in the hearing health field and one of whom"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Severability: Section 54, Ch. 109, L. 2009, was a severability clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 481 in first sentence in (2) increased number of Board members from five to seven; in (2)(b) substituted language requiring two members to have been licensed hearing aid dispensers for 5 years, to be nationally certified, and to have a master's degree for "three members who have been licensed dispensers and fitters of hearing aids for at least 5 years before their appointment to the board"; in (2)(c) substituted language requiring two members who hold master's degree but have been licensed dispensers and fitters of hearing aids for 5 years before appointment for "one public member who is not in the hearing health care field"; inserted (2)(d) requiring two public members not in the hearing health care field, with one who uses hearing aid; and made minor changes in style.

1985 Amendment: In (2)(b) changed "qualified dispensers" to "licensed dispensers".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 244 deleted language in (2) and (3) requiring the Governor to appoint members from a list of names submitted by the Montana Academy of Oto-ophthalmology, Montana Speech and Hearing Association, and Montana Hearing Aid Dealers' Society; deleted former subsection (2)(d) providing for an alternate member; deleted the second sentence in (3) relating to filling a vacancy from a list; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Chapter 247 inserted "with the consent of the senate" in (2).

Chapter 444 deleted former subsection (2)(b), which required one member of the board to be selected from a list submitted by the Montana Speech and Hearing Association which member was to hold or be eligible for a certificate of clinical competence in audiology; inserted (2)(c) providing for a public member; and substituted "categories" for "list" in former subsection (2)(b) and in the former last sentence of subsection (3).

Composite Section: Chapter 244 and Ch. 444, L. 1981, amended the same subsections in several instances creating some inconsistencies in language. There were no apparent substantive conflicts and the Code Commissioner resolved the inconsistencies as follows:

(1) Chapter 444 restructured the board makeup, therefore its deletion of a member by striking subsection (2)(b) took precedence over Ch. 244, which amended (2)(b) with the intention of merely removing an appointment list requirement;

(2) Chapter 244 deleted the alternate board member provision by striking subsection (2)(d), therefore the minor amendment to (2)(d) made by Ch. 444 in order to accommodate the addition of a public member as a category was not codified; and

(3) Chapter 244 deleted the provision for filling vacancies by striking the second sentence of (3), therefore the minor amendment to that sentence made by Ch. 444 in order to accommodate the addition of a public member was not codified.

Severability: Section 54, Ch. 109, L. 2009, was a severability clause.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 492 inserted (4) regarding allocation of board to department for administrative purposes. Amendment effective October 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 230 in first sentence in (2) increased board membership from five to six and at beginning of second sentence increased number of licensed private psychologists on board from one to two; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1991 Amendment: In (2), in third sentence after "may not", substituted "serve consecutive 5-year terms" for "succeed himself" and increased time before member may be reappointed from 3 years to 5 years; and in (3) increased term from 3 years to 5 years. Amendment effective July 1, 1991, except rules adopted by Board of Psychologists may not be implemented until January 1, 1992.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent to Ch. 671, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it grants the board of psychologists the authority to make rules for establishing and administering a continuing education program for psychologists. It is intended that rules require the number of hours of continuing education necessary to maintain professional competency."

Transition — Initial Appointments: Section 7, Ch. 671, L. 1991, provided: "(1) On September 1, 1991, the governor shall appoint one person to a 5-year term on the board of psychologists.

(2) On September 1, 1992, the governor shall appoint one person to a 5-year term on the board and one person to a 1-year term on the board. At the expiration of the 1-year term, the governor shall reappoint the same board member to a 5-year term. At the expiration of the 5-year term, appointments must be made in accordance with 2-15-1851 [renumbered 2-15-1741].

(3) On September 1, 1993, the governor shall appoint one person to a 1-year term on the board and one person to a 2-year term. At the end of those terms, the governor shall reappoint those same board members each to a 5-year term. At the expiration of the 5-year terms, appointments must be made in accordance with 2-15-1851 [renumbered 2-15-1741]."

Applicability: Section 9, Ch. 671, L. 1991, provided that this section applies to new appointments to the Board of Psychologists made after July 1, 1991.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 247 inserted "with the consent of the senate" in (2).

Chapter 324 increased the board from three to five members; substituted the membership list for "The governor shall appoint all members, including a member filling a vacancy for an unexpired term, from the list of licensed psychologists in this state" in (2); deleted "Each member shall be a citizen of the United States and a resident of this state" from the end of (2); in (3) substituted the provision for staggered 3-year terms for "Each member shall serve for a term of 3 years".

2013 Amendment: Chapter 102 in (3) substituted current language for "Not more than two members of the board may be members of or affiliated with a school." Amendment effective October 1, 2013.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 243 in (1) inserted "barbers and"; in (2) in introductory clause increased membership from 7 to 9, provided for appointment by governor with senate's consent, and substituted "must include" for "may include"; deleted former (2)(a)(ii) through (2)(a)(iv) that read: "(ii) one licensed manicurist or licensed electrologist;

(iii) two persons who are members of or affiliated with a school of cosmetology; and

(iv) one public member who is not engaged in the practice of cosmetology, electrology, or manicuring"; in (2)(a) provided for 5-year residency and 5-year cosmetology work experience for cosmetologist members; inserted (2)(b) requiring one member to have been a licensed electrologist, esthetician, or manicurist in this state for 5 years; deleted former (2)(b) that read: "(b) Members are appointed by the governor with the consent of the senate"; inserted (2)(c) requiring three licensed barbers with 5 years residency and practice in this state; inserted (2)(d) requiring two public persons not practicing barbering, cosmetology, electrology, esthetics, or manicuring; in (3) deleted first and second sentences that read: "Each licensed member appointed shall have actively engaged in the profession of cosmetology, manicuring, or electrology for at least 5 years before his appointment and have been a resident of this state for at least 5 years immediately before his appointment. Each member shall be at least 18 years of age and a graduate of a high school or its equivalent"; at end of (3) after "school" deleted "of cosmetology"; inserted (4) providing for an alternative appointment if there is not a licensed barber or cosmetologist qualified and willing to serve on the board in one of the barber or cosmetologist positions; in (5) in first sentence increased term from 4 to 5 years and inserted second sentence providing that terms be staggered; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Severability: Section 25, Ch. 243, L. 2003, was a severability clause.

1989 Amendment: In (2)(a) expanded Board membership from four to seven members by adding one licensed manicurist or licensed electrologist and two persons who are members of or affiliated with a school of cosmetology; in (2)(a)(iv), after "electrology", inserted "or manicuring"; near beginning of first sentence of (3), after "licensed", deleted "cosmetologist", after "cosmetology" inserted "manicuring, or electrology", and at beginning of third sentence, after "No", inserted "more than"; and made minor changes in phraseology and form.

1987 Amendment: In (2) removed brackets from "appointed by the governor".

1981 Amendments: Chapter 106 substituted "licensed cosmetologists" for "members who may be appointed by the governor from a list of six persons recommended by the Montana state hairdressers' association" and added a public member at the beginning of (2); inserted "licensed cosmetologist" near the beginning of the second sentence of (2).

Chapter 247 inserted "with the consent of the senate" in (2).

Commissioner Clarification: In first sentence "[appointed by the governor]" was inserted by the Code Commissioner. Deletion of that language by sec. 3, Ch. 106, L. 1981, was an apparent oversight, since appointment is referred to several times without stating the appointing authority.

1989 Amendment: Deleted former (4)(a) that read: "(a) Within 30 days following July 1, 1979, the governor shall make initial appointments to the board of physical therapy examiners. He shall appoint one member each to hold office for terms of 1 year, 2 years, and 3 years, respectively. At the end of each member's appointed term, a member shall be appointed for a full 3-year term."

1987 Amendment: In (2) increased Board membership to five from three and inserted lead-in and (2)(a) through (2)(c) listing membership qualifications; in (3) deleted requirement that each member be a physical therapist; and in (4) inserted (b) allowing submission of physician nominees' names by the Montana Medical Association.

Initial Appointments of Physician and Public Member: Section 1, Ch. 55, L. 1987, provided in part: "A physician and a member of the general public must be appointed to the board on or before January 1, 1988, for a 3-year term." The provision was not codified because it is temporary.

1981 Amendments: Chapter 244 deleted language in (2) requiring the governor to appoint members recommended by the Montana chapter of the American physical therapy association; deleted the language in (3) that stated an appointee need not be a member of the Montana chapter of the association; and deleted (5) and part of (6) concerning listing of nominees and filling vacancies from the list.

Chapter 247 inserted "with the consent of the senate" in (2).

At least one of the outfitter members must be a person primarily engaged in the fishing outfitting business. Each outfitter member shall represent one of the five districts designated in 2-15-3402(2). Two qualified persons in each district must be nominated for appointment by the licensed outfitters residing in that district by submitting by mail a notarized ballot, in a form and manner prescribed by the board. The board shall also prescribe a procedure for selecting persons to be nominated by mail-in ballot. The two outfitters receiving the most votes must be nominated for appointment. The department of commerce is responsible for all notifications, reporting, and counting of ballots. Names of nominees must be submitted to the governor, who will select one outfitter from each district to be a board member.

(c) The governor shall also appoint one member who is an employee of the department of fish, wildlife, and parks and one member from the general public"; inserted (3) requiring subcommittee to review net client hunter use expansion requests, requiring majority vote of board to adopt resolution, motion, or other decision, and requiring that subcommittee consist of two hunting outfitters, two sportspersons, and one public member from board; at end of (5) substituted "appointed" for "elected"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 543, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, private property rights and free market principles will result in a certain amount of ebb and flow of outfitter presence statewide or in any particular geographical region; and

WHEREAS, approval or denial of an outfitter's request for expansion of client service base is predicated upon the state's broad power to regulate for the public health, welfare, and safety, which includes wildlife held in public trust, public hunting, private property rights, and private enterprise; and

WHEREAS, approval or denial of a net client hunter use expansion request must provide due process for outfitters and the opportunity for public comment under the Montana Administrative Procedure Act, including agency response to those public comments; and

WHEREAS, implementing the regulations necessary to meet the Legislature's goal of a reduction in new hunting use of areas by outfitters when the new use will cause undue conflict with existing hunting uses in the areas, providing necessary due process to outfitters, and providing for and responding to public comment will require time, staff, and resources not currently available in agency budgets."

Termination Provision Repealed: Section 1, Ch. 143, L. 1991, repealed sec. 14, Ch. 528, L. 1987, which terminated the 1987 amendments to this section July 1, 1991. Effective March 25, 1991.

1989 Amendment (Temporary): Inserted second sentence of (2)(b) requiring that at least one Board member be engaged in the fishing outfitting business, in fourth sentence substituted language providing for the nomination of Board by notarized mail-in ballot for language that provided for nominating and electing members at annual meeting, and inserted fifth, sixth, and seventh sentences regarding selection and nomination of persons and Department responsibility in election.

1989 Amendment (Effective July 1, 1991): Inserted second sentence of (2) requiring that at least one Council member be engaged in the fishing outfitting business, in third sentence substituted language providing for selection of Council by notarized mail-in ballot for language relating to nominating and electing members at annual meeting, inserted fourth sentence requiring Council to prescribe a nominating procedure, at beginning of fifth sentence substituted "The outfitter receiving the highest number of votes" for "A majority vote" and after "ballot" deleted "of all the outfitters in attendance at the meeting", at beginning of sixth sentence substituted "The outfitter receiving the second highest number of votes" for "At the election an alternate member" and after "be" substituted "the alternate member" for "elected by written ballot"; in (3), after "member", substituted "and the" for "or"; and made minor changes in style and grammar.

1987 Amendment: In (1) changed "Montana outfitters' council" to "board of outfitters"; substituted (2)(a), setting forth Board size and gubernatorial appointment, for former (2) and (3) that read: "(2) The council consists of seven members. Each member shall be a licensed outfitter and shall represent one of the seven fish and game administrative districts. A member shall be selected by the licensed outfitters residing in that district by election at an annual meeting of the outfitters to be held in the city where the regional headquarters is located during the month of March. A majority vote cast by written ballot of all the outfitters in attendance at the meeting shall determine the member from the district. At the election an alternate member shall also be elected by written ballot to serve if the member is unable to act.

(3) If a member or alternate resigns or a vacancy exists for any reason on the council, the council at its next official meeting after the vacancy occurs shall recommend to the director of the department of fish, wildlife, and parks the names of two licensed outfitters residing in the administrative region where the vacancy occurred to fill the vacancy for the remainder of the unexpired term. If a vacancy cannot be filled from that administrative region, the appointment must be made from an adjoining region. If a vacancy cannot be filled from an adjoining region, the appointment must be made from any remaining region. The director shall fill the vacancy from the names submitted"; inserted (2)(b) providing qualifications for Board members who are licensed outfitters; inserted (2)(c) requiring appointment of member from Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks and member of public; inserted (3) providing for vacancy on the Board; in (5) substituted "The board is allocated to the department of commerce for administrative purposes only as prescribed in 2-15-121" for "The council is allocated to the department"; inserted (6) governing compensation and travel expenses; and deleted former (6) and (7) that read: "(6) The council is not subject to the provisions of 2-15-122.

(7) Members of the council are entitled to be reimbursed and compensated as are members of advisory councils in 2-15-122(5)."

Transfer of Agency: Section 10, Ch. 528, L. 1987, provided: "Transfer of agency — name change — duties transferred. (1) The Montana outfitters' council is transferred to the department of commerce and is renamed the board of outfitters.

(2) The authority and functions of the department of fish, wildlife, and parks regarding licensing of outfitters and guides are transferred to the board of outfitters, and any reference in 87-4-122, 87-4-124, 87-4-125, 87-4-129, 87-4-131, and 87-4-143 to the department of fish, wildlife, and parks or to the department or director, meaning the department of fish, wildlife, and parks or the director of that department, is changed to the board, meaning the board of outfitters."

1983 Amendment: Near end of (2), changed "delegate" to "member" in three places; inserted (3) governing appointment to fill vacancies; and inserted (7) relating to compensation and reimbursement of members.

1981 Amendment: Changed "the district headquarters at 1:00 p.m. on the second Friday of March" to "the city where the regional headquarters is located during the month of March" and inserted "cast by written ballot" after "vote" in the middle of (2); changed "member" to "delegate" in the last two sentences of (2); and inserted "by written ballot" after "elected" in last sentence of (2).

Functions Transferred — 1983: Section 1, Ch. 287, L. 1983, provided: "(1) The functions of the department of administration of generally assisting political subdivisions, exercising oversight of financial and reporting systems, supervising records retention, and performing audits in Title 2, chapter 7, part 5; 2-9-702; 2-9-802; 7-1-4130; 7-1-4145; 7-1-4147; 7-1-4148; Title 7, chapter 2, part 49; 7-3-146; 7-3-153; 7-4-2634; 7-5-2132; 7-5-4124; 7-6-207; 7-6-209; 7-6-210 [now repealed]; 7-6-2114; 7-6-2203 [now repealed]; 7-6-2212 [now repealed]; 7-6-2302 [now repealed]; 7-6-2311 [now repealed]; 7-6-2314 [now repealed]; 7-6-2315 [now repealed]; 7-6-2322 [now repealed]; 7-6-2352 [now repealed]; 7-6-4111 [now repealed]; 7-6-4113 [now repealed]; 7-6-4205 [now repealed]; 7-6-4221 [now repealed]; 7-6-4225 [now repealed]; 7-6-4233 [now repealed]; 7-7-123; 17-6-103; 19-11-206 [renumbered 19-18-206]; 19-11-403 [renumbered 19-18-403]; 20-1-212; 20-9-203; 20-9-344; 20-9-504; 61-2-208; 85-7-1616; 85-7-1913; 85-7-2027; and 85-9-611 [now repealed] are transferred to the department of commerce. [Chapter 483, L. 2001, transferred the functions to the Department of Administration.]

(2) Any reference in the MCA to "department of administration" in the sections and parts listed in subsection (1) or related references to "department" or "director" (of the department of administration) are changed to "department" (of commerce) or "director" (of commerce)."

Department of Professional and Occupational Licensing Abolished — Functions Transferred to Department of Commerce: Section 3, Ch. 274, L. 1981, provided: "The department of professional and occupational licensing is abolished and its functions are transferred to the department of commerce. Unless inconsistent with this act, any reference in the MCA, including laws passed by the 47th legislature, to the "department of professional and occupational licensing" or "department" or "director" (of professional and occupational licensing) is changed to the "department of commerce" or "department" or "director" (of commerce)." Chapter 483, L. 2001, allocated the boards to the Department of Labor and Industry.

Professional and Occupational Licensing Boards — Reallocation: Section 4, Ch. 274, L. 1981, provided: "All boards allocated to the department of professional and occupational licensing under Title 2, chapter 15, part 16, are reallocated to the department of commerce under Title 2, chapter 15, part 18 [now allocated to the department of labor and industry under Title 2, chapter 15, part 17]. The code commissioner shall recodify those sections as an integral part of Title 2, chapter 15, part 18, and the provisions of Title 2, chapter 15, apply to those sections. The code commissioner shall change internal name and section number references accordingly."

Department of Community Affairs Abolished — Certain Functions Transferred to Department of Commerce: Section 6, Ch. 274, L. 1981, provided: "(1) The department of community affairs is abolished.

(2) The following functions of the department of community affairs are transferred to the department of commerce:

(a) allocation of state funds for public transportation in 7-14-102;

(b) acting as state administering agency for the Montana Economic Land Development Act under Title 15, chapter 24, part 13;

(c) relating to aviation and contained in 15-70-204 [now repealed], 15-70-221 [now repealed], Title 67, and 80-8-204;

(d) assisting development credit corporations, contained in 32-4-201;

(e) relating to recommendations concerning major facility siting and contained in 75-20-211, 75-20-216, and 75-20-501 [now repealed];

(f) prescribing standards for monumentation under 76-3-403;

(g) establishing minimum subdivision review rules under 76-3-502 and 76-4-129;

(h) planning and developing the state economy, contained in Title 90, chapter 1, part 1;

(i) furnishing advice concerning secondary industry development under 90-5-113; and

(j) furnishing facilities and information to the coal board under 90-6-204 and 90-6-207.

(3) Unless inconsistent with this act, any reference to the "department of community affairs" or "department" (of community affairs) in the sections listed in subsection (2) and in 2-8-103 are changed to "department of commerce" or "department" (of commerce).

(4) The divisions of the department of community affairs are abolished. Any reference in the sections listed in subsection (2) to a division in the department of community affairs is changed to "department" (of commerce).

(5) The governor may by executive order assign to a department in a manner consistent with this act functions allocated to the department of community affairs by the 47th legislature and not transferred by this act."

Functions of Department of Community Affairs Transferred: Section 7, Ch. 274, L. 1981, provided: "(1) The functions of the department of community affairs of auditing the accounts and financial transactions of political subdivisions and generally assisting political subdivisions in Title 2, chapter 7, part 5; 2-9-702; 2-9-802; 7-1-4121; 7-1-4130; 7-1-4145; 7-1-4147; 7-1-4148; Title 7, chapter 2, part 49; 7-3-146; 7-3-153; 7-4-2634; 7-5-2132; 7-5-4124; 7-6-207; 7-6-209; 7-6-210 [now repealed]; 7-6-2114; 7-6-2203 [now repealed]; 7-6-2212 [now repealed]; 7-6-2302 [now repealed]; 7-6-2311 [now repealed]; 7-6-2314 [now repealed]; 7-6-2315 [now repealed]; 7-6-2322 [now repealed]; 7-6-4111 [now repealed]; 7-6-4113 [now repealed]; 7-6-4205 [now repealed]; 7-6-4221 [now repealed]; 7-6-4225 [now repealed]; 7-6-4233 [now repealed]; 7-7-123; 17-6-103; 19-11-206 [renumbered 19-18-206]; 19-11-303; 19-11-403 [renumbered 19-18-403]; 20-1-212; 20-9-203; 20-9-344; 20-9-504; 61-2-208; 85-7-1616; 85-7-1913; 85-7-2027; and 85-9-611 [now repealed] and disposing of oil and gas severance taxes in 15-36-112 [now repealed] are transferred to the department of administration.

(2) Unless inconsistent with this act, any reference to "department of community affairs" in the sections listed in subsection (1) or to "municipal audit division" or "department" (of community affairs) in those sections or related reference to "department" (of community affairs) in related sections is changed to "department of administration"."

All of the above functions were further transferred to the Department of Commerce in 1983. Chapter 114, L. 1983, transferred the functions in 7-1-4121 and 15-36-112 (now repealed); the rest of the functions (except 19-11-303, which was repealed) were transferred by Ch. 287, L. 1983. Chapter 483, L. 2001, transferred the functions to the Department of Administration.

Boards Reallocated to Department of Commerce: Section 12, Ch. 274, L. 1981, provided: "The board of county printing, the board of aeronautics [now allocated to department of transportation], the coal board, and the office of state coordinator of Indian affairs [now allocated to governor's office], allocated to the department of community affairs under 2-15-1102 through 2-15-1104 [2-15-1811, renumbered 2-15-1026, 2-15-1812, renumbered 2-15-2506, and 2-15-1821] and 2-15-1111 [2-15-1813, renumbered 2-15-217], are reallocated to the department of commerce. The code commissioner shall recodify those sections in Title 2, chapter 15, part 18, and change internal name and section number references accordingly."

Reorganization Procedure: Section 18, Ch. 274, L. 1981, provided: "The provisions of sections 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 govern the merger of the department of community affairs, the department of professional and occupational licensing, and the department of business regulation into the department of commerce and the transfer of the various functions contained in this act."

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 607, L. 1987, provided: "This bill needs a statement of intent because it allows the department of revenue and department of commerce to adopt rules negotiating the administration of this act.

The rules will be necessary to effectively and efficiently collect the tax and disburse the funds. This includes rules clarifying persons subject to the tax, reporting requirements, recordkeeping requirements, qualification for funds requirements, delineation/clarification of the statutorily created council powers, and other requirements. Since this is a new tax in Montana, it is anticipated that many issues will arise requiring rulemaking for resolution.

The intent of the legislature in exempting certain facilities that charge rates not exceeding 60% of the state rate for state officers and employees traveling in Montana is to avoid taxing rooms that are primarily used by pensioners and similarly disposed persons who may use a hotel as a residence, but who nonetheless rent a room by the day or week. Such facilities may also rent rooms to drop-in trade from time to time, but such trade is not the primary business of the facility. Rules adopted should be sensitive to drawing the distinction authorized by the legislature."

1999 Enactment Not Codified: Because of the temporary nature of the enactment of the governor's local coal impact review council by Ch. 376, L. 1999, the code commissioner has not codified the enactment. Section 1, Ch. 376, L. 1999, provided: "Governor's local coal impact review council — purpose — report — authority to accept donations. (1) There is a governor's local coal impact review council. The council is attached to the department of commerce for administrative purposes only.

(2) The purpose of the council is to review and report on Montana's existing public policy regarding the impacts resulting from coal development and to develop findings, conclusions, and recommendations as to what the policies should be, both now and into the 21st century. The council shall, on or before December 1, 2000, prepare and deliver the report to the governor and, as provided in 5-11-210, to the 57th legislature.

(3) The council is composed of 10 members, each of whom must be appointed by the governor before July 15, 1999, as follows:

(a) one member from the coal board, established in 2-15-1821;

(b) two members, each of whom must be a county commissioner from a county within or containing a coal impact area;

(c) two members, each of whom must be either a mayor or city council or commission member from an incorporated city or town within a coal impact area;

(d) two members, each of whom must be a representative of the coal industry;

(e) one member who must be a state senator and one member who must be a state representative, each of whom must be from a coal impact area; and

(f) one member of the general public.

(4) For the purposes of this section, a coal impact area means the areas generally described in 90-6-207 affected by coal development.

(5) At its first meeting, the council shall elect from among its members a presiding officer and any other officers it considers to be necessary.

(6) Each member is appointed for a term of 2 years and serves at the pleasure of the governor.

(7) (a) Each member of the council except for the legislators appointed under subsection (3)(e), must be compensated as provided in 2-15-122(5).

(b) The legislative members of the council appointed under subsection (3)(e) must be compensated as provided in 5-2-302.

(8) On behalf of the council, the department of commerce may accept gifts, grants, or donations to cover the costs of the council's activities. The department shall account separately for any gifts, grants, or donations received on the council's behalf."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 376, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, coal development and its effects are important to Montana's society and economy; and

WHEREAS, the traditions of Montana public policy development are citizen-inclusive; and

WHEREAS, public policy exists in an ever more dynamic and complex world; and

WHEREAS, Montana's state government has been dealing with local coal development impact mitigation for nearly 25 years; and

(i) one member of the state senate;

(j) one member of the state house of representatives;

(k) a representative of the university-affiliated or satellite program on developmental disabilities created pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 6061;

(l) a representative of the state protection and advocacy system created pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 6041; and

(m) two representatives of nongovernmental in-state entities that are concerned with the provision of services to persons with developmental disabilities"; inserted (2) requiring the council to include one member from the senate and one member from the house of representatives; in (3)(a) inserted sentence pertaining to 1-year terms of council members and deleted former language that read: "Nine of the members appointed to the council pursuant to subsections (2)(a) through (2)(c) must be appointed by the governor"; inserted (3)(b) containing an introductory clause referring to members to be appointed by the governor; in (3)(b)(i) at beginning inserted "not less than one-half of the members" and after "appointed" deleted "The remaining members serving on the council pursuant to subsections (2)(a) through (2)(c) must be appointed by the governor"; in (3)(b)(ii) at beginning inserted "the remaining members"; deleted former (4) and (5) that read: "(4) Members appointed to the council to fulfill representation requirements of subsections (2)(d) through (2)(m) serve 1-year terms.

(5) At least one member appointed to the council pursuant to subsections (2)(a) through (2)(c) must be either:

(a) a person with a developmental disability who resides or previously resided in an institution; or

(b) an immediate relative or guardian of a person with a developmental disability who resides or previously resided in an institution"; in (4) near beginning after "council" deleted "pursuant to subsections (2)(a) through (2)(c)"; in (5) in first sentence at beginning inserted exception clause and after "department" inserted "of commerce" and inserted second sentence providing that the department shall remain the designated agency if the council responsibilities are delegated to a nonprofit corporation; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 478, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000, Public Law 106-402, requires each state to have a state council on developmental disabilities and to designate a state agency to provide support and administrative services to the council without interference or placement of conditions upon the operations of the council; and

WHEREAS, the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000 recognizes only one council in each state, which may take the form of a nonprofit corporation, and the state Developmental Disabilities Planning and Advisory Council is Montana's council; and

WHEREAS, the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000 further states that each state is required to designate a state agency to administer the federal funds, but that the designated state agency may not provide or pay for services for individuals with developmental disabilities."

2001 Amendment: Chapter 154 in (1) at end substituted "the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000, Public Law 106-402" for "the provisions of this section"; in (2) near beginning substituted "composed of 29 members" for "composed of at least 23 but no more than 25 members"; inserted (2)(a), (2)(b), and (2)(c) requiring inclusion of members with developmental disabilities and parents, guardians, or immediate relatives of children or certain adults with developmental disabilities; deleted former (2)(e) that read: "(e) two recognized professionals, one each in the disciplines of medicine and law"; inserted (2)(f) requiring inclusion of representative of program of services provided under Title V of the Social Security Act; in (2)(g) at beginning substituted "a representative of the programs of services" for "a representative of the program of services for persons with developmental disabilities"; deleted former (2)(h) that read: "(h) 12 persons, each of whom has a developmental disability or who is an immediate family member or guardian of a person with a developmental disability"; in (2)(k) and (2)(l) at beginning substituted "a representative" for "the director" and at end deleted "or a designee of the director"; in (2)(m) at beginning substituted "two representatives of nongovernmental in-state entities that are concerned with the provision of services" for "a representative of a statewide developmental disabilities service provider organization whose member agencies provide direct services"; deleted former (3)(a) and (3)(b) that read: "(a) Each member who serves on the council pursuant to subsection (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(c), or (2)(d) shall serve for a term concurrent with the respective term of the director of the agency that administers the program that the member represents. Upon the removal of an agency director from office, the representative's term as a member of the council is automatically terminated.

(b) Each member who serves on the council pursuant to subsection (2)(f) or (2)(g) must be appointed or reappointed annually by the governor"; in (3) at beginning of first sentence substituted "Nine of the members appointed to the council pursuant to subsections (2)(a) through (2)(c)" for "Eight of the members serving on the council pursuant to subsection (2)(e), (2)(h), (2)(k), or (3)(d)" and in second sentence near middle substituted "subsections (2)(a) through (2)(c)" for "subsection (2)(e), (2)(h), (2)(k), or (3)(d)"; inserted (4) pertaining to 1-year terms for certain members; inserted (5) providing for membership for a person with a developmental disability who resides or previously resided in an institution or an immediate relative or guardian of such a person; in (6) substituted "Members appointed to the council pursuant to subsections (2)(a) through (2)(c) may also be selected to represent the geographical regions and the racial and ethnic composition of the state, including American Indians" for "Representatives named to the council pursuant to this section, in addition to fulfilling the requirements listed in subsections (2)(a) through (2)(k), may also be selected to represent the following areas: psychology, social work, special education, and minority groups, including Native Americans with developmental disabilities. A minimum of one member of the council must represent each of these areas. In the event that the persons listed in subsections (2)(a) through (2)(k) do not represent all of the areas of psychology, social work, special education, and minority groups, including Native Americans with developmental disabilities, up to two representatives may be added to the membership of the council to represent not more than two of these groups"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 29, 2001.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 42 in (2)(i), after "U.S.C.", substituted "6061" for "6031"; and in (2)(j), after "U.S.C.", substituted "6041" for "6012". Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Chapter 171 in (2)(h) increased from 7 to 12 the number of developmentally disabled members; deleted former (2)(i) that read: "one member of each of the five regional councils provided for in 53-20-207, each of whom has a developmental disability or who is an immediate family member or guardian of a person with a developmental disability"; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 418 in (2)(a) substituted "public health" for "health and environmental sciences"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 546 in (2) reduced number of Council members from "at least 24 but no more than 26" to "at least 23 but no more than 25"; in (2)(a) substituted current language relating to representative under authority of Rehabilitation Act of 1973 for "the directors of the departments of social and rehabilitation services, health and environmental sciences, corrections and human services, and family services or their designees"; inserted (2)(b) relating to representative under authority of Older Americans Act of 1965; inserted (2)(c) relating to representative under authority of Title XIX of the Social Security Act; in (2)(d) substituted current language relating to representative under authority of Individuals With Disabilities Education Act for "the superintendent of public instruction or a designee"; in (3)(a), at beginning of first sentence after "member", deleted "or his designee", substituted "subsection (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(c), or (2)(d)" for "subsection (2)(a), (2)(b), (2)(h), or (2)(i)", and at end substituted "director of the agency that administers the program that the member represents" for "director or the superintendent of public instruction, as the case may be" and in last sentence, at beginning, substituted "Upon the removal of an agency director from office, the representative's" for "Upon his removal from office, his or his designee's" and at end, after "terminated", deleted "and his successor in office or his successor's designee is automatically a member of the council"; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Because one chapter amended the reference to the Department of Health and Environmental Sciences and the other chapter deleted the reference, the codifier has reflected the deletion.

Transition: Section 499, Ch. 418, L. 1995, provided: "The provisions of 2-15-131 through 2-15-137 apply to [this act]."

Section 571, Ch. 546, L. 1995, was a saving clause.

1991 Amendments: The Code Commissioner changed reference to the Department of Institutions to reference to the Department of Corrections and Human Services, pursuant to sec. 1, Ch. 262, L. 1991, directing the Code Commissioner to make the change whenever necessary in the Montana Code Annotated.

Chapter 443 in (2) increased number of Council members from 22 to no less than 24 and no more than 26; in (2)(a), near end after "institutions", inserted "and family services"; in (2)(c) substituted "two recognized professionals, one each in the disciplines of medicine and law" for "one recognized private professional in each discipline of medicine, law, psychology, social work, and special education"; in (2)(d) decreased number of members from Senate from two to one; in (2)(e) decreased number of members from House of Representatives from two to one; in (2)(f) substituted "seven persons each of whom has a developmental disability or who is an immediate family member or guardian of a person with a developmental disability" for "four consumers or representatives of consumers or consumer organizations in the discipline of developmental disabilities"; in (2)(g), after "who", substituted a person with a developmental disability or immediate family member or guardian of a person with developmental disability for a consumer or representative of consumers or consumer organizations in the discipline of developmental disabilities; inserted (2)(h) concerning membership of director of university-affiliated or satellite program on developmental disabilities; inserted (2)(i) concerning membership of director of state protection and advocacy system; inserted (2)(j) concerning membership of representative of statewide developmental disabilities service provider organization; in (3)(a), near beginning after "(2)(b)", inserted references to subsections (2)(h) and (2)(i); in (3)(c), near middle of first sentence after "(2)(g)", inserted references to subsections (2)(j) and (3)(d) and near beginning of second sentence, before "members", deleted "six" and after "council" inserted "pursuant to subsection (2)(c), (2)(f), (2)(g), (2)(j), or (3)(d)"; inserted (3)(d) concerning representation on Council of areas of psychology, social work, special education, and minority groups; and made minor changes in style.

Attorney General's Opinions

Authority of Council to Set Staff Salaries: In accordance with the more recent and specific language of 53-20-206 (now repealed) and the exclusionary language of this section (see 2005 amendment), the Developmental Disabilities Planning and Advisory Council (now Montana Council on Developmental Disabilities) has authority to set salaries of the Council's staff without reference to the state personnel classification plan established in 2-18-201. 44 A.G. Op. 1 (1991).

2005 Amendment: Chapter 78 near middle of first sentence substituted "Montana council on developmental disabilities" for "statewide developmental disabilities planning and advisory council". Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 478, L. 2003, provided: "WHEREAS, the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000, Public Law 106-402, requires each state to have a state council on developmental disabilities and to designate a state agency to provide support and administrative services to the council without interference or placement of conditions upon the operations of the council; and

WHEREAS, the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000 recognizes only one council in each state, which may take the form of a nonprofit corporation, and the state Developmental Disabilities Planning and Advisory Council [now Montana Council on Developmental Disabilities] is Montana's council; and

WHEREAS, the Developmental Disabilities Assistance and Bill of Rights Act of 2000 further states that each state is required to designate a state agency to administer the federal funds, but that the designated state agency may not provide or pay for services for individuals with developmental disabilities."

Effective Date: Section 6, Ch. 478, L. 2003, provided that this section is effective July 1, 2003.

Case Notes

State Auditor as Member of Hail Board — No Conflict of Interest: The State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is required to approve the form of all hail insurance policies issued in Montana and at the same time is required by law to sit as a member of the Board of Hail Insurance (Hail Board). The State Auditor is not compensated for service on the Hail Board, nor is there any compensation from any source for such duties. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is not financially interested in the Hail Board within the meaning of 2-2-102. Mtn. States Ins. Co. v. St., 218 M 365, 708 P2d 564, 42 St. Rep. 1657 (1985).

State Auditor as Member of Hail Board — Not Dual Office Holding: The State Auditor is a constitutional office with "such duties as are provided by law" (Art. VI, sec. 4, Mont. Const.). One of these prescribed duties is being a member of the Board of Hail Insurance established under 2-15-3003. The State Auditor does not hold dual offices by carrying out legislatively imposed duties. The only limitation on the Legislature in prescribing such duties is that the duties may not pertain to the legislative or judicial branch of government. Mtn. States Ins. Co. v. St., 218 M 365, 708 P2d 564, 42 St. Rep. 1657 (1985).

Appropriation for Intervention in Out-of-State Energy Proceedings: Chapter 200, L. 2017, appropriated money from the coal natural resource account to the department of justice for the department to participate in proceedings and related dockets before out-of-state utility or regulatory commissions that address planning for the future of coal-fired generation facilities located in Montana and directed the department to represent Montana's investment in coal-fired generation facilities by advocating for proper decommissioning and remediation, opportunities for long-term power replacement investments in Montana, and recovery of appropriate social costs, including commitments to benefit and pension plans and workforce and community reinvestment opportunities. Effective April 14, 2017.

Executive Reorganization Implementation: Title 82A, ch. 12, R.C.M. 1947 (now Title 2, ch. 15, part 20), was implemented by Executive Reorganization Order 3-72, dated Aug. 30, 1972, effective Sept. 1, 1972.

Case Notes

No Federal Civil Rights Privacy Claim Against State or Municipal Entities: Barr sued the state and a municipal airport authority for violating his civil rights under 42 U.S.C. 1983 and 42 U.S.C. 1985 when the airport failed to hire him as a permanent security officer after discovering Barr's past public criminal record. The District Court summarily dismissed the claims, and the Supreme Court affirmed. In order for the municipality to be liable under the federal statutes, it was necessary for Barr to show that the municipality had a policy or custom that inflicted the injury of which Barr complained, which Barr could not show. Further, Barr's civil rights claims stemmed from a privacy invasion that did not occur, so he was unable to establish a federal privacy violation. Barr's claim against the state was also barred because states are not persons for purposes of the federal statutes. Barr v. Great Falls Int'l Airport Authority, 2005 MT 36, 326 M 93, 107 P3d 471 (2005). See also Monell v. Dept. of Social Services, 436 US 658 (1978), and Will v. Mich. 2013 Amendment: Chapter 237 substituted second and third sentences for former second sentence that read: "It is the intent of 2-15-2013 to divert appropriate offenders who are at low risk for violence from incarceration to community programs based on restorative justice and to divert funds from the department of corrections to the department of justice to support an office of restorative justice and to support community programs based on restorative justice." Amendment effective July 1, 2013.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 237, L. 2013, provided: "WHEREAS, the Law and Justice Interim Committee examined the efficacy of restorative justice principles and practices within the criminal justice system as requested by Senate Joint Resolution No. 29 from the 2011 legislative session; and

WHEREAS, the Committee found that restorative justice programs have been established in Gallatin County, Lewis and Clark County, Missoula County, and Flathead County; and

WHEREAS, the Committee found that these programs have proven successful in significantly reducing incarceration rates and the risk that offenders will reoffend;

WHEREAS, this saves the state money that would otherwise need to be spent on providing additional jail and prison capacity at a per-inmate cost averaging about $90 a day or about $33,000 a year; and

WHEREAS, the local programs were initially supported by federal grant money passed through the Montana Board of Crime Control and technical assistance was provided by the Office of Restorative Justice established by the Legislature in 2001 and placed under the Department of Justice; and

WHEREAS, the Office of Restorative Justice under the Department of Justice is no longer functioning and no further restorative justice grants have been applied for."

Case Notes

Section 1983 Action for Damages and Declaratory and Injunctive Relief — State Agency Held Not a "Person" — Individual or Official Capacity of Individual Defendants Determined — Test for Qualified Immunity in Damages Action — Remington Overruled: Orozco, an inmate in the Montana State Prison, brought a civil action for damages pursuant to 42 U.S.C. 1983 against the Department of Corrections and Human Services (now Department of Corrections) and several Department employees for the denial of his due process rights in connection with the denial of his ability to earn good time credits. The Department moved for dismissal for failure to state a claim, based upon 11th amendment immunity. As to the Department, the Supreme Court held, citing Will v. Mich. Dept. of St. Police, 491 US 58 (1989), that because the Department has been created as part of the Executive Branch of state government, suing the Department is the same as suing the State of Montana, which is not a "person" for the purposes of a section 1983 action. In response to Orozco's argument that 2-9-305 required him to join the Department as a party, the Supreme Court noted that there is nothing in the text of that section that requires that the state be joined as a party; the section provides only for the tender of a defense and payment of damages by the state if a state employee is sued. Therefore, the Supreme Court held that the District Court correctly dismissed the action for damages against the Department. As to the individual defendants, the Supreme Court held that state employees acting in their official capacities are likewise not "persons" for the purposes of a section 1983 action but that state employees acting in their individual capacities are "persons" within the meaning of section 1983. The Supreme Court noted that Orozco had not clearly indicated the capacities in which the individual defendants were being sued, and so it looked to other provisions of the complaint and to U.S. Supreme Court decisions in order to determine Orozco's intent and held that Orozco intended to sue the individual defendants in their individual capacities. For this reason, the Supreme Court held that the District Court erred in holding that the individually named defendants were not "persons" under 42 U.S.C. 1983 for the purposes of the action for damages. The Supreme Court also held that in enacting 53-30-105 (now repealed) mandating rules for the accrual of good time, the state had created a right to good time. The Supreme Court also held that the immunity analysis used in Remington v. Dept. of Corrections and Human Services, 255 M 480, 844 P2d 50 (1992), was incorrect in light of the later decision of the U.S. Supreme Court in Sandin v. Connor, 515 US 472 (1995), and overruled Remington, but, on the basis of the Sandin immunity analysis, determined that Orozco's liberty interest in the award of good time credits was not clearly established on the date of Orozco's hearing to reclassify him as a maximum security prisoner who was no longer entitled to earn good time credits. For this reason, the Supreme Court held that the Department employees who were sued in their individual capacities were to be given qualified immunity for the purposes of the action for damages but that the District Court improperly dismissed the action for declaratory and injunctive relief and remanded the case to the District Court for a determination of what process was due Orozco before his opportunity to earn good time was revoked and whether he received that process. Orozco v. Day, 281 M 341, 934 P2d 1009, 54 St. Rep. 200 (1997).

Attorney General's Opinions

Procurement Act Inapplicable to Board of Crime Control Grants to Nongovernmental Agencies: Federal law allows states to subgrant certain federal funds to local governments and, in some cases, to nongovernmental agencies within the state. Certain grants made by the Board of Crime Control involve the passthrough of federal funding to local nongovernmental agencies that in turn provide crime control services within their communities to persons or entities that are not agencies of the state. The statutory grant of supervision over procurement contracts does not authorize the Department of Administration to supervise federally funded grants awarded by the Board of Crime Control to nongovernmental agencies. Therefore, the Montana Procurement Act, Title 18, ch. 4, does not apply to grants awarded by the Board of Crime Control to nongovernmental agencies to fund community projects. 52 A.G. Op. 5 (2008).

1987 Amendment: Changed name to Wheat and Barley Committee from Wheat Research and Marketing Committee.

Administrative Rules

Title 4, chapter 9, ARM Wheat Research and Marketing Committee.

Attorney General's Opinions

Appropriations — Legislative Control Over Marketing Assessment Funds: Although the control of the Legislature over appropriations to state agencies is based upon broad constitutional provisions, certain money may either be exempt from the appropriation process or the purposes for which that money may be appropriated may be limited by statute. Thus, the Legislature may control appropriations from the Wheat Marketing and Research Account (now the Wheat and Barley Account), but those appropriations are subject to the statutorily stated purposes of the Account. Any attempt by the Legislature in an appropriation bill to alter the purposes for which appropriations from the Account are made is subject to the constitutional restriction that the purpose of legislation must be clearly stated in the title of the bill. 39 A.G. Op. 3 (1981).

Appropriation of Specially Assessed Funds — Due Process of Law: The Legislature may appropriate wheat research and marketing funds, which are funds derived from a special tax on the growers of wheat and barley, to the Centralized Services Division of the Department of Agriculture in order to pay for administrative services used by the Wheat Research and Marketing Committee (now the Wheat and Barley Committee) because the Committee is required by law to use the services of the Division and that requirement implies a duty to pay for the services. Because the money appropriated is taxed to the grower for a specific purpose, the amount appropriated to the Centralized Services Division must be for a purpose substantially related to the purposes of the tax. 39 A.G. Op. 3 (1981).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1983 Amendment: At end of (1), after "appointed by the governor" substituted "and confirmed by the senate" for "from names submitted by farmer organizations having a general membership throughout the state"; and in (6), inserted last two sentences providing the Department may charge the Board for services commensurate with costs.

Administrative Rules

Title 4, chapter 4, ARM Board of Hail Insurance.

Case Notes

State Auditor as Member of Hail Board — No Conflict of Interest: The State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is required to approve the form of all hail insurance policies issued in Montana and at the same time is required by law to sit as a member of the Board of Hail Insurance (Hail Board). The State Auditor is not compensated for service on the Hail Board, nor is there any compensation from any source for such duties. Thus, the Supreme Court held that the State Auditor as ex officio Commissioner of Insurance is not financially interested in the Hail Board within the meaning of 2-2-102. Mtn. States Ins. Co. v. St., 218 M 365, 708 P2d 564, 42 St. Rep. 1657 (1985).

State Auditor as Member of Hail Board — Not Dual Office Holding: The State Auditor is a constitutional office with "such duties as are provided by law" (Art. VI, sec. 4, Mont. Const.). One of these prescribed duties is being a member of the Board of Hail Insurance established under 2-15-3003. The State Auditor does not hold dual offices by carrying out legislatively imposed duties. The only limitation on the Legislature in prescribing such duties is that the duties may not pertain to the legislative or judicial branch of government. Mtn. States Ins. Co. v. St., 218 M 365, 708 P2d 564, 42 St. Rep. 1657 (1985).

of alfalfa seed. These qualifications of members must continue during their terms of office"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 4, L. 1997, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that the alfalfa seed industry and the alfalfa leaf-cutting bee industry are closely related; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature also finds that it is in the best interest of the people of the State of Montana to promote economy in government regulation of industry; and

WHEREAS, it is the intent of the Legislature to combine with the Montana Alfalfa Seed Committee the duties, responsibilities, and representation of the Alfalfa Leaf-Cutting Bee Committee and to grant the Montana Alfalfa Seed Committee the authority to administer the Alfalfa Leaf-Cutting Bee Management Act and the Alfalfa Seed Industry Act."

Transition: Section 4, Ch. 4, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] merges the alfalfa leaf-cutting bee committee into the Montana alfalfa seed committee and revises the membership of the Montana alfalfa seed committee to accommodate the merger. Because there are now incumbents holding positions on both committees, the legislature intends for the governor to make membership adjustments when necessary on and after [the effective date of this act] [effective July 1, 1997], in accordance with 2-15-3004 as amended by [this act]."

Pursuant to sec. 6, Ch. 229, L. 2011, in (4) the Code Commissioner changed "livestock loss reduction and mitigation board" to "livestock loss board".

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 229, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the Legislature has been made aware that the name of the Livestock Loss Reduction and Mitigation Board is too long, too confusing, and does not adequately communicate the mission of the Board to the public; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature has been asked by Montana citizens to change the name of the Montana Livestock Loss Reduction and Mitigation Board to something simpler and better representative of the Board's public purpose; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature finds that it would be beneficial to the Board's mission and duties as that mission and duties are set forth in state law to change the name of the Livestock Loss Reduction and Mitigation Board to something simpler."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 2 in (1)(d) and (1)(e) after "board" deleted brackets around "of livestock". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 261, L. 2007, provided: "WHEREAS, wolves are firmly established in Montana, and the long-term presence of wolves depends on implementing a comprehensive program that balances the complex biological, social, economic, and political aspects of wolf management; and

WHEREAS, wolf depredation on livestock has the potential to negatively impact some individual livestock producers; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Wolf Management Plan and Final EIS adopted by the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks called for creation of a program to reduce the risk of losses of livestock to wolves and to reimburse livestock producers for losses; and

WHEREAS, a working group of more than 30 Montana citizens, state and federal agency personnel, and tribal representatives developed a comprehensive proposal for the "Montana Livestock Loss Reduction and Mitigation Program"."

Effective Date: Section 11(1), Ch. 261, L. 2007, provided that this section is effective July 1, 2007.

2007 Code Commissioner Correction: The code commissioner has inserted the bracketed language in (1)(d) and (1)(e) to clarify that certain references to the board refer to the board of livestock.

Absence of Public Service Commissioner From State on Military Duty — Vacancy in Office Not Created — No Additional Compensation:

Absence from the state attributable to active military duty does not result in a vacancy in the office of Public Service Commissioner. However, an elected member of the Public Service Commission may not receive additional compensation for simultaneous service in the Montana Army National Guard. 43 A.G. Op. 32 (1989).

When asked to clarify his opinion in 43 A.G. Op. 32 (1989), the Attorney General looked to the nature of service and the source of payment as affecting the right of a state officer to receive additional compensation, noting that a National Guard member engaged in federal service and thus compensated by the federal government is subject to the duties and may receive the benefits of federal law, while a member engaged in purely state-oriented service and thus compensated by the state is subject to state regulation. Therefore, Art. VI, sec. 5, Mont. Const., prohibits an elected member of the Executive Branch from accepting compensation from the state for service in the Montana Army National Guard, beginning with the first instance of dual compensation. Further, a public officer has a duty to repay unauthorized compensation and the state, through the State Auditor, has a corresponding right to compel repayment of the unauthorized compensation. 43 A.G. Op. 43 (1989).

VIII, sec. 37, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. VII, sec. 10, 1972 Mont. Const.), relating to judicial officers absenting themselves from the state for more than 60 consecutive days. Gullickson v. Mitchell, 113 M 359, 126 P2d 1106 (1942).

2-16-114. Facsimile signatures and seals.

Commissioners' Prefatory Note

The National Conference of Commissioners on Uniform State Laws was requested some years ago through the Council of State Governments to draft a uniform act permitting the use of facsimile signatures by fiscal officers of the states on particularly large bond issues. At the present time, in most states, all bonds issued by states must be signed by, as a rule, the State Treasurer. This requires hours of time to sign each and every bond that will ultimately be sold by the underwriters.

The Investment Bankers Association likewise has urged the passage of acts in various states permitting the use of facsimile signatures by imprint, engraving or by some other mechanical means.

When this act came into the Conference, it was determined, as a matter of policy, that the act should be broadened in its scope to include not only the issuance of securities, such as bonds, by the states, permitting the use of facsimile signatures, but should also be broadened to cover checks, drafts, and warrants issued by the states, as well as by all of the political subdivisions of the states, counties, school districts, cities, etc.; hence the present draft of the act is all inclusive and, if adopted, would permit the use of facsimile signatures by the various disbursing and fiscal officers of the governmental units and agencies involved. It would be a tremendous time saver in the operation of these various state offices. The act makes it a felony to copy or improperly use any facsimile signature or facility for making a facsimile signature.

Failure to Take Oath — Discharge at Will: Plaintiff served in the capacity of deputy clerk of the Supreme Court for 20 years. He ran for the Clerk of Court position but was defeated. The newly elected Clerk terminated plaintiff and appointed a new deputy. Plaintiff contended he was unlawfully discharged. Plaintiff was not appointed in writing as required by this section, nor did he subscribe, take, or file an oath of office as required by 3-2-406. When an officer's term is not definite, his appointment is at will. Section 2-16-213 provides that the term of the deputy clerk is at the pleasure of the appointing power. Under 2-16-501, an office becomes vacant upon refusal or neglect to file the official oath within the time prescribed. The court held that upon plaintiff's failure to file an oath of office, his term of office terminated and the Clerk of Court could at any time fill the vacancy by appointment. Conboy v. St., 214 M 492, 693 P2d 547, 42 St. Rep. 120 (1985).

Constitutionality: Article XIX, sec. 1, 1889 Mont. Const. (substantially the same as Art. III, sec. 3, 1972 Mont. Const.), requiring every public officer to take the official oath therein prescribed, is self-executing, mandatory, and conclusive upon the Legislature. Since the Legislature was not prohibited from requiring filing of oath, it could, as it did by this section, prescribe that such oath be filed without thereby rendering the section unconstitutional. State ex rel. Wallace v. Callow, 78 M 308, 254 P 187 (1927).

Operation and Effect:

This section is directory and not mandatory; but section 6-301, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-9-506(part)), relative to filing of official bond within time prescribed for filing oath, is mandatory. State ex rel. Wallace v. Callow, 78 M 308, 254 P 187 (1927).

HOLDOVER

Constitutional Provision: Under Art. XV, sec. 6, 1889 Mont. Const. (no comparable provision under 1972 Mont. Const.), the terms of office of municipal officers must not exceed 2 years. Under this section, every officer must continue to discharge his duties, although his term has expired, until his successor has qualified. It was held that unless the term of office of such officers as fixed by statute is so plainly at odds with that prescribed by the constitutional provision above as to be wholly inconsistent with it, the statute should be upheld. State ex rel. Sandquist v. Rogers, 93 M 355, 18 P2d 617 (1933).

Vacancy in County Office: Where vacancy occurs in county office, Board of County Commissioners has general power and duty to prevent a lapse of government in the office and the consequent suspension of public business. Even though the proper authority may omit to call an election or cannot do so under the particular emergency, nevertheless the Board need not by subsequent neglect or inaction permit the public business to be suspended, and upon the happening of either contingency the appointed incumbent, as temporary substitute, must perform duties of office until his successor has qualified, so that a lapse of government can never happen in any public office. State ex rel. Rowe v. Kehoe, 49 M 582, 144 P 162 (1914), explained in Bailey v. Knight, 118 M 594, 168 P2d 843 (1946).

Public Policy: This provision is one usually found in the codes of the states, being based upon public policy, which demands that if, from any cause, the new incumbent fails to qualify or if there has not been an election of any person, there should not be a vacancy in the office and a consequent suspension of public business. State ex rel. Neill v. Page, 20 M 238, 50 P 719 (1897).

Resignations: This section is applicable only to a case where term of office of incumbent has expired; it does not refer to case of vacancy caused by resignation. State ex rel. Neill v. Page, 20 M 238, 50 P 719 (1897).

TERM OF OFFICE

Deputy State Officer's Failure to Take Oath — Discharge at Will: Plaintiff served in the capacity of deputy clerk of the Supreme Court for 20 years. He ran for the Clerk of Court position but was defeated. The newly elected Clerk terminated plaintiff and appointed a new deputy. Plaintiff contended he was unlawfully discharged. Plaintiff was not appointed in writing as required by 2-16-205, nor did he subscribe, take, or file an oath of office as required by 3-2-406. When an officer's term is not definite, his appointment is at will. This section provides that the term of the deputy clerk is at the pleasure of the appointing power. Under 2-16-501, an office becomes vacant upon refusal or neglect to file the official oath within the time prescribed. The court held that upon plaintiff's failure to file an oath of office, his term of office terminated and the Clerk of Court could at any time fill the vacancy by appointment. Conboy v. St., 214 M 492, 693 P2d 547, 42 St. Rep. 120 (1985).

Removal of Director of Historical Society: Under this section, 22-3-104, and 22-3-107, power to remove Director of Historical Society lies in Society's Board of Trustees, and it may do so without notice or opportunity to be heard. State ex rel. MacGilvra v. District Court, 148 M 182, 418 P2d 874 (1966).

Employment Security Commission: Term of office of third member of employment security commission (since abolished) was not fixed by law; he therefore served at pleasure of the Governor. State ex rel. Bonner v. District Court, 122 M 464, 206 P2d 166 (1949).

Deputy Sheriff: The authority of a deputy sheriff may be revoked at any time with or without cause, and he holds no "term" of office. State ex rel. Rusch v. Bd. of County Comm'rs, 121 M 162, 191 P2d 670 (1948).

County Deputies and Assistants: Deputies and assistants of county officers enumerated in section 25-603, R.C.M. 1947 (since repealed), are not county officers since, under this section, they serve only at the will and pleasure of their respective principals. Adami v. Lewis & Clark County, 114 M 557, 138 P2d 969 (1943).

Calculation of Term Limits — "Current Term" Defined: Pursuant to 13-10-201, the phrase "current term" used in Art. IV, sec. 8, Mont. Const., means the term served after regular election to a full term of office. Under this definition, a candidate may file for office if, at the time the candidate begins to serve in, rather than file for, that office, the candidate will have had an 8-year break in service over a 16-year period. 54 A.G. Op. 4 (2012).

1999 Amendment: Chapter 51 in (1)(a) after "governor" deleted "$59,310"; in (1)(b) after "governor" deleted "$43,242"; in (1)(c) after "general" deleted "$54,329"; in (1)(d) after "auditor" deleted "$40,101"; in (1)(e) after "instruction" deleted "$47,208"; in (1)(f) after "officer" deleted "$44,615"; in (1)(g) after "officer" deleted "$43,242"; in (1)(h) after "state" deleted "$40,101"; in (1)(i) after "court" deleted "$39,044"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 15, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 417 in (1) deleted pre-1996 pay schedules for all officers (see 1995 Session Law for text); in (2), in first sentence, substituted "officials with similar titles to" for "officials similar to", at end of second sentence substituted "officials with similar titles" for "similar position", in third sentence substituted "official in Montana" for "similar position in Montana" and after "July 1" deleted "1997, the average is the new salary for that position", and at end of fourth sentence substituted "official" for "position"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 in (1), at beginning, inserted "Subject to subsection (2)"; substituted 1995 and 1996 pay schedules for 1992 pay schedule (see 1995 Session Law for text); inserted (2) requiring salary survey of Executive Branch officials; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1991 Amendment: Changed references to fiscal year to reflect current fiscal year; and increased salary of enumerated officials by $1,248 in each year of biennium. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 462 deleted Supreme Court Justices from the salary schedule. Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

Chapter 660 near beginning, after "fiscal year", substituted "1990" for "1986"; deleted Supreme Court Justices from the salary schedule; and substituted salary schedules for former schedule (see 1987 MCA for text of former schedule). Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1983 Amendment: Increased salaries authorized for fiscal year 1982 and fiscal years thereafter of certain elected officials for fiscal year 1984 and for fiscal years thereafter as follows: Governor, from $43,360 and $47,023 to $47,963 and $48,923; Lieutenant Governor, from $31,077 and $33,671 to $34,344 and $35,031; Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, from $44,447 and $48,204 to $49,168 and $50,151; Justices of the Supreme Court, from $43,360 and $47,023 to $47,963 and $48,923; Attorney General, from $39,555 and $42,887 to $43,745 and $44,620; State Auditor, from $28,685 and $31,071 to $31,692 and $32,326; Superintendent of Public Instruction, from $34,120 and $36,979 to $37,719 and $38,473; Public Service Commissioners other than chairman, from $31,077 and $33,671 to $34,344 and $35,031; Secretary of State, from $28,685 and $31,071 to $31,692 and $32,326; Clerk of the Supreme Court, from $27,870 and $30,185 to $30,789 and $31,404; and inserted Public Service Commission Chairman at $35,544 and $36,255.

1981 Amendment: Changed 1980 to 1982 in three places; increased in the two columns the annual salaries of the governor from $37,500 and $40,000 to $43,360 and $47,023; of the lieutenant governor from $26,800 and $28,700 to $31,077 and $33,671; of the chief justice of the supreme court from $39,000 and $41,000 to $44,447 and $48,204; of the justices of the supreme court from $38,000 and $40,000 to $43,360 and $47,023; of the attorney general from $34,500 and $36,500 to $39,555 and $42,887; of the state auditor from $24,500 and $26,500 to $28,685 and $31,071; of the superintendent of public instruction from $29,400 and $31,500 to $34,120 and $36,979; of the public service commissioners from $26,800 and $28,700 to $31,077 and $33,671; of the secretary of state from $24,500 and $26,500 to $28,685 and $31,071; and of the clerk of the supreme court from $23,875 and $25,750 to $27,870 and $30,185.

Case Notes

Deputy State Officer's Failure to Take Oath — Discharge at Will: Plaintiff served in the capacity of deputy clerk of the Supreme Court for 20 years. He ran for the Clerk of Court position but was defeated. The newly elected Clerk terminated plaintiff and appointed a new deputy. Plaintiff contended he was unlawfully discharged. Plaintiff was not appointed in writing as required by 2-16-205, nor did he subscribe, take, or file an oath of office as required by 3-2-406. When an officer's term is not definite, his appointment is at will. Section 2-16-213 provides that the term of the deputy clerk is at the pleasure of the appointing power. Under this section, an office becomes vacant upon refusal or neglect to file the official oath within the time prescribed. The court held that upon plaintiff's failure to file an oath of office, his term of office terminated and the Clerk of Court could at any time fill the vacancy by appointment. Conboy v. St., 214 M 492, 693 P2d 547, 42 St. Rep. 120 (1985).

Not Exclusive — District Judgeship Vacancy: This statute does not provide the exclusive method by which office of District Judge can become vacant. The retirement of a District Judge creates vacancy which must be filled by Governor. State ex rel. Jardine v. Ford, 120 M 507, 188 P2d 422 (1948).

Absence From State — Implied Amendment: Legislature had power to amend this section and 2-16-112, as it did by enacting 10-2-228 (now repealed), providing for officers' leave of absence or for their temporary suspension or relief from duty during military service, except insofar as the result would be violative of some provision of the Constitution such as Art. VIII, sec. 3, 1889 Mont. Const. (now Art. VII, sec. 10, 1972 Mont. Const.), relating to judicial officers absenting themselves from state for more than 60 consecutive days. Gullickson v. Mitchell, 113 M 359, 126 P2d 1106 (1942).

No Bond Filed — Still Holds Over Until New Appointee Is Confirmed by Senate: Any office becomes vacant under this section when person elected or appointed to it neglects, inter alia, to file his official bond within time prescribed, and the vacancy may be filled at once; but where the officer at fault occupies state office requiring confirmation by Senate, the appointment of successor is not effective to oust the incumbent until the new appointee is confirmed. State ex rel. Nagle v. Stafford, 99 M 88, 43 P2d 636 (1935).

Provisions, When Exclusive — No Senate Confirmation of Appointment: Where Commissioner of Agriculture, Labor, and Industry (since reorganized) was holding over until appointment and qualification of his successor and the appointment was not made until after adjournment of Legislature, preventing confirmation by Senate, there was no "vacancy" in the office as defined by this section, the provisions of which were exclusive and did not cover such a contingency; thus claim of appointee to office was without foundation. State ex rel. Nagle v. Stafford, 97 M 275, 34 P2d 372 (1934).

Lieutenant Governor Discharging Function of Resigned Governor — Office of Lieutenant Governor Not Vacant: Upon resignation of Governor and assumption of his duties and powers by Lieutenant Governor, no vacancy in office of Lieutenant Governor is created, he merely discharging functions of Governor under mandate of Constitution, and that by reason of being Lieutenant Governor. State ex rel. Lamey v. Mitchell, 97 M 252, 34 P2d 369 (1934). (Annotator's Note: See vacancy of office of Lieutenant Governor upon succession to Governor, Art. VI, sec. 6, Mont. Const.)

Construction — Prospective Effect: This section applies not only to persons, things, and conditions in being at time of its passage but also to such as came into existence thereafter and fell within its terms. State ex rel. Anderson v. Fousek, 91 M 448, 8 P2d 791 (1932).

Conviction of a Felony: Conviction of a felony under either state or federal laws results in vacancy in office. In determining whether, under this section, office of city policeman automatically becomes vacant upon his conviction of conspiracy (a felony) under the federal law, Supreme Court may not consider mitigating circumstances or fact that if defendant had appealed, the judgment might have been set aside. State ex rel. Anderson v. Fousek, 91 M 448, 8 P2d 791 (1932).

Police Officers as Incumbents: Member of city police force is incumbent of an office within this section. State ex rel. Anderson v. Fousek, 91 M 448, 8 P2d 791 (1932).

Filing of Bond — Lack of Requisite Approval: Where County Commissioner-Elect after refusal of District Judge to approve his bond filed a new one but did not present it to Judge for approval, there was no legal filing of it at any time and vacancy was properly declared. State ex rel. Wallace v. Callow, 78 M 308, 254 P 187 (1927).

Provisions, When Not Exclusive — Additional Judgeship Created: Upon creation of additional judgeship in a judicial district, a vacancy existed until filled by appointment by Governor, this section, enumerating the instances when vacancies occur, not being exclusive. State ex rel. Patterson v. Lentz, 50 M 322, 146 P 932 (1915).

Resignation Impliedly Arising — Acceptance of Another, but Incompatible, Office: Though it may be granted that a vacancy is not created by any circumstance not mentioned in this section, it does not follow that a resignation, which is mentioned therein as a cause of vacancy, may not impliedly arise upon acceptance of an incompatible office. On the contrary, the authorities are practically unanimous that, as to an office which incumbent may vacate by his own act, a resignation does occur upon his acceptance of another office incompatible therewith. The office of city purchasing agent being incompatible with that of Alderman of a city, the acceptance of the former by such officer was equivalent to his resignation as Alderman, and a vacancy was thereby created which the City Council was authorized to fill by a majority vote of the members then composing the Council. State ex rel. Klick v. Wittmer, 50 M 22, 144 P 648 (1914).

Tie Vote on Election — No Vacancy Created: An office becomes vacant on happening of certain events enumerated in this section, which enumeration is exclusive. The contingency of a tie vote not being provided for, when the two candidates for County Superintendent of Schools received an equal number of votes, there was no vacancy and the previous incumbent was entitled to hold office until successor was regularly elected. State ex rel. Chenoweth v. Acton, 31 M 37, 77 P 299 (1904). See, however, State ex rel. Jones v. Foster, 39 M 583, 104 P 860 (1909); State ex rel. Klick v. Wittmer, 50 M 22, 144 P 648 (1914).

Resignation: When a public officer tendered resignation to Governor, to be effective at discretion of Governor, and Governor in writing accepted the resignation to take effect on a certain date, the incumbent, on that date, ceased to be a public officer without any action by governing board. State ex rel. Neill v. Page, 20 M 238, 50 P 719 (1897).

Attorney General's Opinions

Absence of Public Service Commissioner From State on Military Duty — Vacancy in Office Not Created — No Additional Compensation:

Absence from the state attributable to active military duty does not result in a vacancy in the office of Public Service Commissioner. However, an elected member of the Public Service Commission may not receive additional compensation for simultaneous service in the Montana Army National Guard. 43 A.G. Op. 32 (1989).

When asked to clarify his opinion in 43 A.G. Op. 32 (1989), the Attorney General looked to the nature of service and the source of payment as affecting the right of a state officer to receive additional compensation, noting that a National Guard member engaged in federal service and thus compensated by the federal government is subject to the duties and may receive the benefits of federal law, while a member engaged in purely state-oriented service and thus compensated by the state is subject to state regulation. Therefore, Art. VI, sec. 5, Mont. Const., prohibits an elected member of the Executive Branch from accepting compensation from the state for service in the Montana Army National Guard, beginning with the first instance of dual compensation. Further, a public officer has a duty to repay unauthorized compensation and the state, through the State Auditor, has a corresponding right to compel repayment of the unauthorized compensation. 43 A.G. Op. 43 (1989).

De Facto Officials — No Vacancy: Local government officials elected on a nonpartisan basis rather than the partisan basis mandated by the adopted form of government serve as de facto public officials, and the statutory procedure for filling vacancies does not apply since no vacancies can be said to exist under this section. 41 A.G. Op. 37 (1985).

Loss of Office Caused by Change of Residency — Urban Renewal Agency Commissioner: Under 2-16-501, a member of a board of commissioners of an urban renewal agency loses his seat on the board if he ceases to be a resident of the municipality that created the board. 41 A.G. Op. 1 (1985).

Senate Vacancy Created at Time of Conviction: A vacancy was created in a senator's office at the time of his conviction of a felony, and any exercise of his voting privileges in his senatorial capacity after conviction is a nullity and of no legal effect. 35 A.G. Op. 97 (1974).

Procedure to Declare Vacancy in Legislature Upon Conviction of Felony: The proper procedure to declare that a vacancy exists in the office of a senator convicted of a felony is for the presiding judge who entered the judgment and sentencing of the senator to notify appropriate boards of county commissioners responsible for filling the vacancy. 35 A.G. Op. 97 (1974).

Case Notes

Not Applicable to Legislative Vacancies — 1889 Constitution:

In view of Art. V, sec. 45, and Art. III, sec. 29, 1889 Mont. Const., the method provided by this section for filling vacancies in office where no other "mode" is provided by law has no application to a legislative vacancy. State ex rel. Cutts v. Hart, 56 M 571, 185 P 769 (1919), explained in State ex rel. Greene v. Anderson, 113 M 582, 129 P2d 874 (1942).

This section does not, in view of Art. V, sec. 45, and Art. III, sec. 29, 1889 Mont. Const., authorize appointment by Governor to fill legislative vacancy, even though such vacancy occurred during session of Legislature. Legislator appointed by Governor was, at most, only a de facto officer. State ex rel. Cutts v. Hart, 56 M 571, 185 P 769 (1919), explained in State ex rel. Greene v. Anderson, 113 M 582, 129 P2d 874 (1942).

Operation and Effect: This section applies to all cases of vacancies where no mode is provided by law for filling the same. While consent of the board to an appointment by Governor is necessary where person is appointed to succeed one whose term has expired, where vacancy is to be filled in office under the board, the special provision relating to vacancies obtains, and the Governor alone must appoint, by granting a commission until end of next session of Legislature. Part 6
Montana Recall Act

Part Compiler's Comments

Severability and Construction: Section 25 of the Montana Recall and Advisory Recall Act, I.M. No. 73 (now the Montana Recall Act), approved November 2, 1976, read: "If any one or more articles, provision, section, subsection, clause, phrase or word of this act or the application thereof to any person or circumstance is found to be unconstitutional, the same is hereby declared to be severable and the balance of this part shall remain effective notwithstanding such unconstitutionality. All people named hereby declare that they would have passed this part, and each article, provision, section, subsection, sentence, clause phrase or word thereof, irrespective of the fact that any one or more article, provision, section, subsection, sentence, clause, phrase, or word be declared unconstitutional."

Part Case Notes

Recall Act — When Attorney Fees Available: Section 2-16-615 of the Montana Recall Act provides two procedural remedies, depending on the relief sought. If an official refuses to accept a proper recall petition, relief is by mandamus and attorney fees may be recoverable. If a legally insufficient recall petition has been accepted for filing, relief is by injunction and attorney fees are not available. Thus, the right to attorney fees depends on the underlying action and is not reciprocal. Further, the statute does not provide for relief by writ of prohibition. Braach v. Graybeal, 1999 MT 234, 296 M 138, 988 P2d 761, 56 St. Rep. 919 (1999), affirming Sheehy v. Ferda, 235 M 63, 765 P2d 722, 45 St. Rep. 2162 (1988).

Legal Sufficiency of Petition a Judicial Question: Under the Montana Recall Act, the legal sufficiency of allegations in a recall petition is a judicial as opposed to a political question and is to be decided by the District Court. Foster v. Kovich, 207 M 139, 673 P2d 1239, 40 St. Rep. 1949 (1983), followed in Sheehy v. Ferda, 235 M 63, 765 P2d 722, 45 St. Rep. 2162 (1988).

Effect of Failure to Comply With Statutes: When the basis for the recall of elected officials is purely statutory, failure to comply with the statutes is fatal to a recall attempt. Even if the recall procedure stems from a constitutional provision, failure to substantially comply with statutory provisions is fatal to the recall attempt. State ex rel. Palmer v. Hart, 201 M 526, 655 P2d 965, 39 St. Rep. 2277 (1982).

"Petition" — Definition: As used in this part, "petition" refers to the collective group of circulation sheets containing the voters' signatures. State ex rel. Palmer v. Hart, 201 M 526, 655 P2d 965, 39 St. Rep. 2277 (1982).

Attorney General's Opinions

High School Superintendent Not "Public Officer": A high school district superintendent appointed under 20-4-401 does not hold a "public office" within the scope of the Montana Recall Act. 42 A.G. Op. 50 (1988).

2-16-603. Officers subject to recall — grounds for recall.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Case Notes

Legal Sufficiency of Petition a Judicial Question: Under the Montana Recall Act, the legal sufficiency of allegations in a recall petition is a judicial as opposed to a political question and is to be decided by the District Court. Foster v. Kovich, 207 M 139, 673 P2d 1239, 40 St. Rep. 1949 (1983), followed in Sheehy v. Ferda, 235 M 63, 765 P2d 722, 45 St. Rep. 2162 (1988).

Meaning of "Official Misconduct": The meaning of the term "official misconduct", for the purposes of the Montana Recall Act, is the meaning set forth in 45-7-401 of the criminal code. Foster v. Kovich, 207 M 139, 673 P2d 1239, 40 St. Rep. 1949 (1983).

No "Official Misconduct" Found: The following are not adequate grounds for recall of a mayor: demotion of a police officer, failure to hold an orderly city council meeting, and use of vulgar language. Foster v. Kovich, 207 M 139, 673 P2d 1239, 40 St. Rep. 1949 (1983).

Sufficiency of Statement of Reason for Recall: Where recall petition stated the grounds for recall as being official misconduct, without specifying the alleged acts constituting misconduct, the petition is deficient because it does not acquaint the public, whose signatures are requested, with the alleged acts constituting misconduct, nor does it permit the official to respond and defend himself adequately against the allegation of misconduct. Steadman v. Halland, 197 M 45, 641 P2d 448, 39 St. Rep. 343 (1982), followed in Foster v. Kovich, 207 M 139, 673 P2d 1239, 40 St. Rep. 1949 (1983), and in Sheehy v. Ferda, 235 M 63, 765 P2d 722, 45 St. Rep. 2162 (1988).

Attorney General's Opinions

High School Superintendent Not "Public Officer": A high school district superintendent appointed under 20-4-401 does not hold a "public office" within the scope of the Montana Recall Act. 42 A.G. Op. 50 (1988).

Basis for Recall: An allegation that a public official voted in a manner contrary to the wishes, will, or desires of his constituents is not a sufficient ground for recall. The only bases for recall are enumerated in 2-16-603. 38 A.G. Op. 41 (1979).

2-16-612. Persons qualified to petition — penalty for false signatures.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 188 in (3) deleted former second sentence that read: "However, if a political subdivision is divided into election districts, a person must be a qualified elector in the election district to be eligible to sign a petition to recall an officer elected from that election district". Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

Case Notes

Percentage to Apply to Alderman's District: In a case arising out of a recall attempt of city officials, the District Court held that in order to recall an alderman, 20% of the electors of the entire municipality must sign the petitions. The Supreme Court disagreed. Construing 2-16-612(3) and 2-16-614 together, the court held that only 20% of the qualified electors of an alderman's district need to sign a recall petition. Kotar v. Zupan, 202 M 429, 658 P2d 1095, 40 St. Rep. 189 (1983).

2-16-613. Limitations on recall petitions.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1983 Amendment: In (2), after "petition" deleted "shall be filed"; after "officer" inserted "may be approved for circulation, as required in 2-16-617(3)".

Case Notes

Importance of Section: This section's limitations express a clear intent that the recall procedure not be lightly undertaken. State ex rel. Palmer v. Hart, 201 M 526, 655 P2d 965, 39 St. Rep. 2277 (1982).

Submission of Petition Prior to Proper Time: Submission of sample recall petitions that were required under 2-16-617 to be approved as to form in order to begin the recall process began the process and constituted a filing of the petitions in clear violation of this section's provision (prior to 1983 amendment) that a petition may not be "filed" against a person who has held office less than 2 months, when the submission occurred within 10 days of the officer's swearing-in. State ex rel. Palmer v. Hart, 201 M 526, 655 P2d 965, 39 St. Rep. 2277 (1982).

2-16-614. Number of electors required for recall petition.

Compiler's Comments

2009 Amendment: Chapter 188 in (3)(a) at beginning inserted exception clause; inserted (3)(b) regarding signatures for a recall petition for a county commissioner in a county that is divided into commissioner districts; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

2-16-615. Filing of recall petitions — mandamus for refusal.

Case Notes

Recall Act — When Attorney Fees Available: This section provides two procedural remedies, depending on the relief sought. If an official refuses to accept a proper recall petition, relief is by mandamus and attorney fees may be recoverable. If a legally insufficient recall petition has been accepted for filing, relief is by injunction and attorney fees are not available. Thus, the right to attorney fees depends on the underlying action and is not reciprocal. Further, the statute does not provide for relief by writ of prohibition. Braach v. Graybeal, 1999 MT 234, 296 M 138, 988 P2d 761, 56 St. Rep. 919 (1999), affirming Sheehy v. Ferda, 235 M 63, 765 P2d 722, 45 St. Rep. 2162 (1988).

Legal Sufficiency of Petition a Judicial Question: Under the Montana Recall Act, the legal sufficiency of allegations in a recall petition is a judicial as opposed to a political question and is to be decided by the District Court. Foster v. Kovich, 207 M 139, 673 P2d 1239, 40 St. Rep. 1949 (1983), followed in Sheehy v. Ferda, 235 M 63, 765 P2d 722, 45 St. Rep. 2162 (1988).

Warning and Heading Mandatory: During a recall petition drive, the warning provision required by 2-16-616 and the heading were omitted from some petitions. It was contended that these were clerical and technical errors. The Supreme Court held that the requirements of 2-16-616 are more than clerical or technical. The statutes are clear. The penalty provisions of the warning clearly mandate its inclusion. Kotar v. Zupan, 202 M 429, 658 P2d 1095, 40 St. Rep. 189 (1983).

Sufficiency of Statement of Reason for Recall: Where recall petition stated the grounds for recall as being official misconduct, without specifying the alleged acts constituting misconduct, the petition is deficient because it does not acquaint the public, whose signatures are requested, with the alleged acts constituting misconduct, nor does it permit the official to respond and defend himself adequately against the allegation of misconduct. Insufficient Statement of Reason Constituting Defect in Form: Where proposed recall petition was defective for lack of specificity in the statement of reasons for recall, the defect is one of form and was properly rejected by the Election Administrator. Steadman v. Halland, 197 M 45, 641 P2d 448, 39 St. Rep. 343 (1982).

Case Notes

Affidavit in Support of Recall Petition — "Best of Knowledge" Insufficient: Allegations in an affidavit seeking recall of a public official must be sworn to from the knowledge of the affiant and not from a lesser basis so that the electors, in voting on the recall petition, may rely on the truth of the grounds set forth. An affidavit based only on the "best" of the affiant's knowledge is deficient. Sheehy v. Ferda, 235 M 63, 765 P2d 722, 45 St. Rep. 2162 (1988).

Submission of Petition Prior to Proper Time: Submission of sample recall petitions that were required under this section to be approved as to form in order to begin the recall process began the process and constituted a filing of the petitions in clear violation of the provision in 2-16-613 (prior to 1983 amendment) that a petition may not be "filed" against a person who has held office less than 2 months, when the submission occurred within 10 days of the officer's swearing-in. State ex rel. Palmer v. Hart, 201 M 526, 655 P2d 965, 39 St. Rep. 2277 (1982).

Insufficient Statement of Reason Constituting Defect in Form: Where proposed recall petition was defective for lack of specificity in the statement of reasons for recall, the defect is one of form and was properly rejected by the Election Administrator. Steadman v. Halland, 197 M 45, 641 P2d 448, 39 St. Rep. 343 (1982).

Attorney General's Opinions

Withdrawal and Addition of Signatures: Signatures may be withdrawn from a recall petition up to the time when the filing officer finally determines that the petition is sufficient and so notifies the official named in the petition. Signatures may be added to a recall petition within 3 months after the form of the petition is approved. 41 A.G. Op. 94 (1986).

Rejection of Petition by Secretary of State: The Secretary of State may, under his approval powers relating to form, reject a petition for recall of a public officer if it is not based on the statutory grounds for recall. 38 A.G. Op. 41 (1979).

2-16-618. Forms not mandatory.

Warning and Heading Mandatory: During a recall petition drive, the warning provision required by 2-16-616 and the heading were omitted from some petitions. It was contended that these were clerical and technical errors. The Supreme Court held that the requirements of 2-16-616 are more than clerical or technical. The statutes are clear. 2-16-620. County clerk to verify signatures.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1983 Amendment: In (1), inserted "verify and" before "compare"; after "signatures of" substituted "each person who has signed the petition to assure that he is an elector in such county" for "the electors in such county with registration signatures on file in such clerk's office"; in middle of form in (1), substituted "in the manner prescribed by law" for "with the signatures of the registered voters as they appear upon the registration records of my office"; at beginning of (2), substituted "Such certificate is" for "Every such certificate shall be"; after "stated therein" deleted "and of the qualifications of the registered voters whose signatures are certified"; after "recall petition" substituted "may" for "shall"; near middle of (2), after "certified" deleted "provided that" and inserted "However"; in (3), substituted "portion of a petition" for "petition or any part of it"; increased the retention period from 15 to 30 days; after "days" inserted "following the receipt of that portion"; after "county clerk shall" inserted "certify the valid signatures on that portion of the petition and".

Case Notes

Fatally Faulty Signature Comparisons: This section's provision (prior to 1983 amendment) that the clerk "shall" compare signatures with registration signatures mandates that signatures be compared, and there was a substantial variance with that requirement that was fatal to the recall petition where clerk checked each signature against a computer listing of registered voters, compared the signature with the registration card signature if any question arose, compared 5 signatures out of 20 on each page of the petition with the registration card signature and if there was a mismatch compared all signatures on the page with the registration card, and reviewed all pages for possible duplications, for a spouse signing for the other spouse, and for other questionable signatures. State ex rel. Palmer v. Hart, 201 M 526, 655 P2d 965, 39 St. Rep. 2277 (1982), followed in Kotar v. Zupan, 202 M 429, 658 P2d 1095, 40 St. Rep. 189 (1983).

2013 Amendment: Chapter 120 in (1) at end inserted last sentence requiring report to be provided in electronic format. Amendment effective July 1, 2013.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 375 in (1) in second sentence after "department" deleted "periodically" and at end inserted language relating to summary information and reporting the information; in (2) in second sentence near end inserted "including buildings in Helena and in other areas", in third sentence near middle substituted "existing building or a build-to-lease building, including buildings in Helena and in other areas" for "building", and in last sentence substituted "real property" for "property for quarters"; in (4) at beginning deleted "For state agencies located in a city other than Helena"; inserted (5) relating to leases for more than 40,000 square feet or for longer than 20 years; inserted (6) relating to need for appropriated funds; inserted (7) defining public exigency; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2009.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 20 in (3)(b), at beginning, inserted "Subject to 2-17-108"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective February 12, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 530 in (4), at beginning of third sentence, deleted "State retail liquor stores, liquor retail agencies, and"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 25, 1995.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 7 in (3)(b), near beginning, substituted reference to Legislative Council for reference to Capitol Building and Planning Committee; and made minor changes in style.

1989 Amendment: Near beginning of first sentence of (1) substituted "determine the space required by" for "periodically survey the needs of", near middle substituted "allocate" for "assign", before "buildings" deleted "state", and after "buildings" substituted "owned or leased by the state, based on each agency's need" for "to such agencies" and inserted second sentence relating to Departmental identification of space used by each agency; inserted first three sentences of (2) regarding Department location of additional space; near end of (4), after "retail agencies", inserted "and offices of the law enforcement services division and motor vehicle division of the department of justice"; and made minor changes in phraseology and punctuation.

1985 Amendment: In (1) after "state agencies", deleted "located in Helena", and after "property for quarters", deleted "in Helena"; inserted (3) governing agencies other than those located in Helena.

1983 Amendment: In (1), inserted "other than the university system"; inserted (2) relating to the location of the House of Representatives and the Senate; and inserted (3) relating to allocation of space in the capitol.

Case Notes

Effect of 1985 Amendment of Law Enforcement Academy Statute: The 1985 amendment of 44-10-202 not only removed the requirement that the location of the Montana Law Enforcement Academy be at a university unit but also stripped the Department of Justice of the power to choose a site for the academy. The net effect was to require the Attorney General to get the approval of the Department of Administration before he can lease, rent, or purchase property for quarters under this section. Cornwall v. St., 231 M 58, 752 P2d 135, 45 St. Rep. 429 (1988).

Allocation of Space for Legislature: The Legislature is not a "state agency" within the meaning of this section, and although the Department of Administration can allocate space for the Legislature, the Legislature has the right as an independent body to determine where it will sit and must approve a relocation of the Senate chambers. (Decided prior to 1983 amendment.) Goodover v. Dept. of Administration, 201 M 92, 651 P2d 1005, 39 St. Rep. 1975 (1982).

2-17-103. Press room.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 20 substituted present section allowing allocation of space in the Capitol for former language that read: "The department of administration is required to provide for the use of representatives of the press a room on the third floor of the capitol to be used as a permanent press room." Amendment effective February 12, 1997.

1983 Amendment: After "the capitol" deleted "building, adjacent to the assembly hall of the senate".

2-17-105. Insurance on state buildings — use of proceeds — building replacement.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 422 in (1), at end, inserted last sentence providing for statutory appropriation; in (2), at beginning, deleted "These moneys are statutorily appropriated as provided in 17-7-502 and"; in (3), in first sentence after "responsible for the building may", substituted "request that" for "authorize" and at end deleted "and for this purpose the amounts available therefore are statutorily appropriated as provided in 17-7-502"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1991 Amendment: Substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1985 Amendment: In introductory clause of (2) inserted "are statutorily appropriated as provided in 17-7-502"; and in (3) near end of first sentence inserted "and for this purpose the amounts available therefor are statutorily appropriated as provided in 17-7-502".

1983 Amendment: At end of (1), substituted "state special revenue fund" for "bond proceeds and insurance clearance fund".

2-17-108. Allocation of legislative rooms and offices.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 20 substituted present section regarding allocation of legislative space in the Capitol for former language that read: "Notwithstanding the provisions of 2-17-101, the house of representatives and the senate shall continue to occupy and control the rooms and offices in the capitol building that they occupied and controlled during the 50th and 51st legislatures." Amendment effective February 12, 1997.

2-17-112. Fire protection for state-owned buildings — department of administration.

Compiler's Comments

2003 Amendment: Chapter 387 in first sentence after "firefighting" inserted "and hazardous materials storage" and at end after "problems" deleted "as determined by the state fire prevention and investigation program of the department of justice"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The department of justice shall review provisions for protection of state-owned buildings in connection with inspections conducted under 50-3-102"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

Name Change — Code Commissioner Correction: Section 1, Ch. 706, L. 1991, provided: "(1) The name of the state fire marshal is changed to the state fire prevention and investigation program of the department of justice.

(2) Unless inconsistent with [sections 1 through 36] [Ch. 706, L. 1991], wherever the term "state fire marshal" or "fire marshal" appears in the Montana Code Annotated, the code commissioner shall change the term to the "state fire prevention and investigation program of the department of justice", "fire prevention and investigation program" (of the department of justice), or "program", as appropriate. The code commissioner shall also conform internal references and grammar to these changes". As directed, the Code Commissioner has changed the term, as appropriate, wherever it appears in this section. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "each biennium" for "the next session of the legislature" in the first sentence of (1).

2-17-135. Lease or exchange of historic property.

Vehicle Purchases — Leasing Guideline: Section 1, Ch. 328, L. 2003, provided: "(1) (a) Prior to June 1, 2004, the office of budget and program planning, in conjunction with the motor vehicle pool, shall devise for use by state agencies a leasing preference guideline for light vehicles, as defined in 61-1-139 [now repealed]. The guideline is intended to encourage appropriate, cost-effective use of light vehicles. Factors to be addressed include multiple occupant use versus single occupant use, weather conditions at the time of use, and vehicle destination. The guideline must include stringent limitations on the use of personal vehicles at state expense, including a requirement that employees accept substitute vehicles when requested vehicles are not available.

(b) The leasing preference guideline must be submitted for review to the revenue and transportation interim committee by July 1, 2004.

(2) Subsection (1) applies to the motor pools of the Montana university system. The board of regents may exempt a purchase on a case-by-case basis." Effective July 1, 2003.

2-17-402. Seal on motor vehicles.

Compiler's Comments

1999 Amendment: Chapter 431 after "seal" substituted "logo, or other form of state ownership identification" for "8 inches in diameter"; and at end deleted "in accordance with the rules adopted by the department of transportation". Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 512 substituted references to Department of Transportation for references to Department of Highways. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 535 at end deleted "motor pool division"; and made minor change in style.

2-17-403. Requisitions for purchases.

of gasohol used. The purchase records must be reviewed by the legislative auditor during every financial audit of the entity"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 1999.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 70, L. 1999, provided: "WHEREAS, agriculture is a vital component of Montana's economy; and

WHEREAS, Governor Racicot has initiated Vision 2005, challenging a group of Montanans to devise strategies to increase the value of the state's raw agricultural products, specifically grain and wood; and

WHEREAS, raw agricultural materials, such as grain and wood, can be processed into high-octane fuel called ethanol; and

WHEREAS, ethanol is a clean, efficient, high-performance octane enhancer that replaces lead in motor fuel; and

WHEREAS, widespread use of ethanol could result in reducing the United States' reliance on imported oil; and

WHEREAS, eliminating the requirement that ethanol use in state vehicles be reported will reduce paperwork, making it easier for state employees to use ethanol-blended fuel, thus creating a larger market for the product and encouraging the establishment of ethanol production facilities."

Case Notes

State Vehicle Used for Private Purposes — Discharge Erroneous — Lack of Proper Policy: An employee of the state was discharged from employment because he used a state-owned vehicle for private purposes. He appealed the decision of the Department of Fish, Wildlife, and Parks, and the Board of Personnel Appeals ruled that though his discharge was properly justified, the Department had never adopted a policy regarding such use of vehicles and had not punished similar usage. Thus, the discharge was wrongful and he was entitled to reinstatement, but without backpay and benefits. Hutchin v. St., 213 M 15, 688 P2d 1257, 41 St. Rep. 1916 (1984).

Compiler's Comments

2005 Amendment: Chapter 321 in (1) near beginning deleted reference to department of fish, wildlife, and parks; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 56 in (1) at end of first sentence after "development" substituted "of the capitol complex" for "of state buildings in the immediate area of the capital city"; in (1)(c) at end substituted "capitol complex" for "immediate area of the capital city"; in (3) near beginning after "preserve" inserted "all publicly held" and after "capitol" inserted "complex"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2003.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 476 at beginning of (1) substituted "With advice from the council, the departments of administration and fish, wildlife, and parks" for "The department of administration" and in two places, before "master plan", inserted "long-range"; deleted former (3) that read: "The legislative council shall consult with and advise the Montana historical society on the placement of busts, statues, memorials, or art displays of a permanent nature within public areas of the capitol building. An item may not be permanently displayed unless approved by the legislature"; and made minor changes in style.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 7 at beginning of (1) substituted reference to Department of Administration for reference to Capitol Building and Planning Committee; at beginning of (2) and (5) substituted reference to Legislative Council for reference to Capitol Building and Planning Committee; substituted (3) regarding placement and display of material in the capitol building for former language in (2) concerning placement and display of material in the capitol complex; inserted (4) regarding preservation of capitol building artwork; at end of (5) deleted "complex"; and made minor changes in style.

1983 Amendment: Deleted (4), which read: "The committee shall serve as the legislature's representative in the preparation and implementation of plans for renovation and remodeling of the capitol. In this capacity the committee may decide, based on its study and analysis, the allocation and use of space in the capitol, including without limitation the location of legislative chambers and committee rooms following any remodeling. Allocation of space shall include adequate space in the capitol for the staff of the legislative finance committee, legislative audit committee, and the legislative council."

1981 Amendment: Added subsection (4) authorizing the committee to determine allocation and use of space in the Capitol by the Legislative Branch.

Case Notes

Decision on Location of Legislative Chambers — Legislative Approval Required: Prior to 1983 amendments, this section's provision that the Capitol Building and Planning Committee may decide the location of legislative chambers, when read together with the provision in 5-17-103 (renumbered 2-17-825) that the Committee shall report its recommendations to each regular session of the Legislature, means that the Committee must report its decision to the Legislature and that the Legislature is not bound by the decision of the Committee and may either approve or disapprove the decision. Since the decision must be approved by the Legislature, the Legislature did not unconstitutionally delegate its authority to the Committee in violation of the separation of powers provision of the Montana Constitution. Goodover v. Dept. of Administration, 201 M 92, 651 P2d 1005, 39 St. Rep. 1975 (1982).

Location of Legislative Chambers — Effect of Consent by Appropriation Under Statute: The Legislature's consent to certain construction or renovation, in the form of an appropriation or joint resolution, is required by 18-2-102. This section's directive to the Capitol Building and Planning Committee to decide the location of legislative chambers belies the contention that the Legislature consented, under 18-2-102, to relocation of the Senate chambers when the Legislature passed an appropriation for a capitol renovation project. Goodover v. Dept. of Administration, 201 M 92, 651 P2d 1005, 39 St. Rep. 1975 (1982).

Senate's Right to Decide Where It Will Sit: The Montana State Senate, a distinguished, honorable, and independent arm of the legislative body, has the right to determine where it will sit. Goodover v. Dept. of Administration, 201 M 92, 651 P2d 1005, 39 St. Rep. 1975 (1982).

2015 Amendment: Chapter 228 inserted (4)(g) concerning plaque, statue, or other item of tribute commemorating Sidney Edgerton; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2015.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 228, L. 2015, provided: "WHEREAS, Montana owes its creation in large part to the undaunted efforts of Sidney Edgerton, a self-made man who rose from hardship to being appointed Chief Justice of the Idaho Territory by President Abraham Lincoln in 1863; and

WHEREAS, at the request of Bannack City citizens, Chief Justice Edgerton bravely defied highway robbers, such as the Plummer Gang, and traveled from Bannack City to Washington, D.C., with thousands of dollars' worth of gold nuggets sewn into his overcoat so that he could demonstrate the importance of establishing a new territory; and

WHEREAS, in Washington, D.C., his efforts, along with other prominent leaders from the territory, were instrumental in persuading Congress to pass the act that established the Montana Territory on May 26, 1864, and in establishing Montana's boundaries so that they encompassed the Bitterroot Mountains, the Flathead Valley, and Butte and the surrounding area; and

WHEREAS, President Lincoln appointed Sidney Edgerton as the first territorial governor of Montana and he served in the post without a territorial secretary or federal financing; and

WHEREAS, Sidney Edgerton financed and kept Montana's territorial government running by spending a considerable sum of money out of his own pocket to pay the government's expenses; and

WHEREAS, Sidney Edgerton was an outspoken critic of slavery and a staunch abolitionist, which was not a popular position with some of those elected to the first Montana Territorial Legislature; and

WHEREAS, the 1867 Territorial Legislature renamed Edgerton County as Lewis and Clark County; and

WHEREAS, because of political contention during and after the Civil War, Sidney Edgerton's place in history was never fully recognized so that now he has been referred to as "the forgotten man who gave Montana its shape"; and

WHEREAS, Montana owes a debt of gratitude to Governor Edgerton for using his own money in establishing Montana; and

WHEREAS, it is fitting that Sidney Edgerton's significant contributions toward establishing this great state of Montana be duly recognized."

2013 Amendment: Chapter 221 inserted (4)(f) regarding plaque and memorial to commemorate Joseph P. Mazurek; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 17, 2013.

2011 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 50 inserted (1)(i) requiring plaque commemorating Francis Bardanouve and naming part of capitol in his honor; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 18, 2012.

Chapter 279 inserted (1)(j) referring to mural honoring historical contributions of women; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 27, 2011.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 50, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, Francis Bardanouve was a Blaine County farmer-rancher from near Harlem whose service in the Montana Legislature spanned 5 decades; and

WHEREAS, he was first elected to the Montana House of Representatives in 1958 and reelected 17 times; and

WHEREAS, until his retirement in January 1995, he served a total of 18 sessions, 10 as the tight-fisted chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee; and

WHEREAS, he was instrumental in establishing and transforming many of the institutions that most Montanans simply take for granted; and

WHEREAS, he secured passage of legislation creating the Board of Investments, but only after traveling at his own expense to several states to study their systems; and

WHEREAS, he spent time in each of the state mental and hospital institutions to experience them firsthand and worked hard for better conditions, becoming the champion for the deinstitutionalization of many patients warehoused at the state hospitals at Warm Springs and Boulder; and

WHEREAS, he pressed for funding of a full-time professional staff for the Legislative Council, replacing a system in which lobbyists and corporate lawyers often drafted legislation; and

WHEREAS, he led the charge for the creation of the office of the Legislative Fiscal Analyst that gave the Legislature the power to independently analyze and set budget policy and priorities for the state, and was fond of telling stories about how funding for programs had previously been set by relying on individual legislators keeping running totals on slips of paper they kept in their vest pockets and where analyses of any type did not exist and justifications were largely a product of friendships; and

WHEREAS, of all of his many accomplishments, he often said he had but one regret in life, that he never got to ride his horse over the beautiful landscape that encompassed the prison ranch at Deer Lodge; and

WHEREAS, he was still on the advisory board for the Montana State Prison when he died in March 2002 and, while in the Legislature, played a major role in turning the ranch from a business that consistently lost money to a viable business enterprise; and

WHEREAS, Francis Bardanouve was a humble man who never cared much for recognition and raised modesty to an art form; if he was aware of this proposal, he would likely kick up a fuss; and

WHEREAS, he was a compassionate man who always fretted about the well-being of his cattle, worrying about whether they had enough water and grass; and

WHEREAS, Representative Bardanouve was an ardent advocate of education and often demonstrated his dedication to and faith in the efficacy of higher education; and

WHEREAS, he was fearless and had a steel-trap mind; he was blessed with an earthy commonness that is so uncommon among most elected officials; and

WHEREAS, he constantly reminded his colleagues never to forget where they came from and not to let their positions go to their heads, commenting that "It never fails. All the sessions I have served in Helena, I go back to Harlem and someone passes me on the street and says, "Francis, where have you been all winter? Did you go down south?""; and

WHEREAS, Francis overcame a severe speech impediment after years of having been teased and taunted, disappearing without explanation in the winter of 1946 and going to Pennsylvania to have surgery on his cleft palate; and

WHEREAS, the most remarkable part of his transformation into an inspirational and persuasive speaker on the floor of the House of Representatives was when he met and later married Venus, his speech therapist, who was the love of his life and who at age 50 made him a stepfather to her three children; and

WHEREAS, Representative Bardanouve's reputation and legend epitomize everything that is good and honorable about public service; his life and contributions serve to remind us that very ordinary Montanans can overcome adversity and perform remarkable feats; and

WHEREAS, this recommendation is a small commemoration for all that Francis Bardanouve, a beloved son of Montana, contributed during his time in office and the examples he set for current and future public servants."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 279, L. 2011, provided: "WHEREAS, the art work decorating the Montana capitol conveys a narrative of the history of Montana and the significance of its government; and

WHEREAS, this ground we call Montana, on which Native American women met women from Europe, Asia, and Africa, bears the marks of generations of women's labor visible in the remains of tipi rings and homestead gardens, in the presence of one-room schools and university classrooms, in the storefronts of small businesses, and in the offices of corporations; and

WHEREAS, we know our culture through the stories of women like Pretty Shield, Mourning Dove, Dorothy Johnson, and Mildred Walker, through the beadwork, star quilts, pasties, and povitica made by thousands of women in homes across the state, and through the dozens of languages spoken by mothers to children on reservations and in immigrant communities that formed the fabric of Montana; and

WHEREAS, women in communities across Montana have pioneered the social institutions we now consider a part of community life because they stepped outside domestic roles to found libraries, museums, theaters, parks, playgrounds, schools, shelters, hospitals, labor unions, and social clubs; and

WHEREAS, women in Montana fought for and won the right to vote in 1914, 6 years before the passage of the Nineteenth Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, helped to send the first woman in American history to the U.S. Congress, have served and continue to serve in every branch of local, state, and tribal government, and have eloquently represented views across the entire spectrum of American politics; and

WHEREAS, with few exceptions, this story of Montana's past is not represented in the capitol's art, and a mural commemorating Montana women's contribution to the history and government of the state would enrich and more accurately tell Montana's story to its citizens and visitors alike."

Creation of Mural to Honor Women: Section 1, Ch. 279, L. 2011, provided: "(1) The capitol complex advisory council shall form a subcommittee, which may consist of council and noncouncil members, for the creation and placement of a mural to honor the historical contributions of women as community builders. Subcommittee members shall serve without additional compensation or reimbursement.

(2) The subcommittee shall:

(a) commission, through a competitive process, a qualified artist to create the mural described in subsection (3);

(b) solicit gifts, grants, and donations for the mural's creation and placement; and

(c) recommend to the council a specific location for the mural, which must be placed as provided in 2-17-808.

(3) The mural provided for in this section:

(a) must portray women in a manner that reflects a historical theme honoring Montana women as community builders in diverse roles, such as the center of the family, mothers, grandmothers, business leaders, educators, health care providers, and scientists;

(b) may not portray actual historical women, but must portray anonymous, unsung Montana heroines; and

(c) must be created in an artistic style consistent with the genre of artwork already in the capitol.

(4) The design, installation, maintenance, and funding of the mural is subject to provisions of the art and memorial plan adopted by the council pursuant to 2-17-804."

Contingent Voidness: Section 3, Ch. 279, L. 2011, provided: "If the capitol complex advisory council determines that the mural provided for in [section 1] cannot be accomplished pursuant to the criteria established in [section 1] within 5 years of [the effective date of this act], then [section 2] [amendments to 2-17-808] is void." Effective April 27, 2011. The mural was installed in January 2015.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 46 inserted (4)(e) concerning plaque and award commemorating Karl Ohs; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 20, 2009.

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 46, L. 2009, provided: "WHEREAS, Karl Ohs served the State of Montana honorably as a member of the Montana House of Representatives in 1995, 1997, and 1999 and as Lieutenant Governor from 2001 through 2004; and WHEREAS, Karl Ohs is widely regarded for the role that he played in negotiating a peaceful resolution to a standoff with the Montana Freemen in 1996."

2007 Amendment: Chapter 13 in (4)(c) at end inserted provision allowing placement of a plaque in a state building on the capitol complex commemorating the original headquarters of the Montana highway patrol; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 25 in (1) near beginning after "busts" inserted "plaques"; in (1)(b) at end inserted "and the women legislators' centennial"; deleted former (1)(d) that read: "(d) the portraits of Joseph K. 1993 Amendments: Chapter 7 at beginning substituted "legislative council may" for "committee shall", near middle substituted "related to its duties under 5-11-115(2) [renumbered 2-17-805(2)]" for "and present the report to the legislature as provided in 5-11-210", and deleted former second sentence that read: "To prepare its report and recommendations, the committee may receive assistance from the legislative council"; and made minor changes in style.

Chapter 349 at beginning substituted "may" for "shall"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Near middle of first sentence substituted "as provided in 5-11-210" for "at each regular session". Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

1983 Amendment: Inserted "for the purpose of assisting the legislature in determining if such recommendations should be implemented".

Case Notes

Decision on Location of Legislative Chambers — Legislative Approval Required: The provision in 5-17-102 (since amended and renumbered 2-17-805) that the Capitol Building and Planning Committee may decide the location of legislative chambers, when read together with this section's provision that the Committee shall report its recommendations to each regular session of the Legislature, means that the Committee must report its decision to the Legislature and that the Legislature is not bound by the decision of the Committee and may either approve or disapprove the decision. Since the decision must be approved by the Legislature, the Legislature did not unconstitutionally delegate its authority to the Committee in violation of the separation of powers provision of the Montana Constitution. Goodover v. Dept. of Administration, 201 M 92, 651 P2d 1005, 39 St. Rep. 1975 (1982).

Montana Electronic Government Services Act

Part Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 265, L. 2001, provided: "WHEREAS, dramatic changes in technology clearly point to a future where the state of Montana will need to conduct business electronically; and

WHEREAS, Montana's citizens and businesses are expecting state government to deliver more of its services and information through the Internet; and

WHEREAS, the offering of government services through electronic means can make businesses more effective and profitable and provide for greater convenience for citizens; and

WHEREAS, traditional means of obtaining government services will continue to be offered; and

WHEREAS, an optional method of providing government services can be established electronically; and

WHEREAS, the state of Montana is committed to offering government services electronically to its citizens and businesses."

Effective Date: Section 7, Ch. 265, L. 2001, provided: "[This act] [2-17-1101 through 2-17-1105 (2-17-1105 now repealed)] is effective on passage and approval." Approved April 19, 2001.

CHAPTER 18
STATE EMPLOYEE CLASSIFICATION, COMPENSATION, AND BENEFITS

Chapter Compiler's Comments

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 6, Sp. L. August 2002, provided: "WHEREAS, the savings from wages and some overhead costs through the implementation of a freeze on hiring will assist with the budget emergency."

State Government Hiring Freeze: Section 1, Ch. 6, Sp. L. August 2002, provided: "Fiscal year 2003 hiring freeze — exemption. (1) Except as provided in subsections (2) and (3), an agency of state government, as defined in 2-18-601, may not hire any employee after [the effective date of this act].

(2) An agency may hire an employee if that agency's approving authority, as defined in 17-7-102, approves the hiring in writing and transmits the approval to the governor's office of budget and program planning for input into the statewide accounting, budgeting, and human resources system. An approving authority may approve the hiring of an employee to protect the public health, safety, and welfare of the citizens of the state and to avoid significant disruptions to critical state services. The governor's office of budget and program planning, in conjunction with the state personnel division of the department of administration, shall, within 30 days of [the effective date of this act], develop general criteria that are to be used by the governor for executive branch agencies and that may be used by other approving authorities to determine which vacant positions may be exempted from the hiring freeze.

(3) This section does not apply to the Montana university system." This provision was not codified because it is temporary.

Effective Date: Section 2, Ch. 6, Sp. L. August 2002, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval." Approved August 13, 2002.

Termination: Section 3, Ch. 6, Sp. L. August 2002, provided: "[This act] terminates June 30, 2003."

Alternative Classification and Pay System: Section 1, Ch. 417, L. 1997, provided: "Competency-based personnel systems. The department [of administration] shall develop an alternative classification and pay system that is consistent with the market-based approach to pay administration but that emphasizes individual skills, competencies, and contributions in addition to the criteria provided in 2-18-202. The compensation system must provide for the means of identifying the requisite skills and competencies necessary for the state and its separate departments and agencies to provide service excellence to Montana's citizens. Each agency, when possible, shall implement the compensation plan in a manner that results in a flatter management structure. Employee recruitment, selection, evaluation, and compensation must be based, at least in part, on the demonstration of these necessary skills and competencies. The department shall develop the alternative system in consultation with employee representatives. The department shall test the effectiveness of the program through the implementation of pilot projects. Insofar as a pilot project applies to employees of a collective bargaining unit, its implementation is a negotiable subject under 39-31-305. The department shall present a proposal for an alternative system to the 56th legislature."

Severability Clause: Section 17, Ch. 440, L. 1973, was a severability clause.

Chapter Administrative Rules

Title 2, chapter 21, ARM State Human Resources Division.

Chapter Case Notes

Prospective Legislative Change in Compensation: An employee's right to compensation vests or accrues only after the employee has performed the required services for that pay period. Thus, highway patrol officers had no vested rights to continue to receive 1% longevity increases in salary that were established by a statute repealed when the state pay plan was established and when their base pay under the pay plan included earned longevity, because such prospective alteration of salary prior to vesting is permissible. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

Statutes Fixing Terms and Conditions of State Employment — Presumed Not to Be Contractual: Highway patrolmen had no vested right to receive 1% longevity increases established by a statute repealed when the state pay plan was instituted. Unless the circumstances and language of the statute manifest a legislative intent to create private rights of a contractual nature, enforceable against the state, a statute fixing certain terms of public employment, such as salary or compensation, is presumed not to create contractual rights but merely to declare a policy to be pursued until the Legislature declares otherwise. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

General Provisions

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Employees of Office of Workers' Compensation Judge — Exempt From Classification Plan: The question of whether or not the employees of the office of the workers' compensation judge are exempt from the state classification plan (Title 2, ch. 18) depended upon whether the office was part of the judicial branch or the executive branch. The similarities to state courts, the qualifications for office, the statutory provisions regarding the judge and the court, statutory construction, and the legislative intent derived from the history supported the conclusion that the office performs a judicial function. Therefore, the employees are employees of the judicial branch and exempt from the state classification plan. 38 A.G. Op. 27 (1979).

Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 7 in definitions of competencies and occupation substituted reference to position for reference to job; inserted definition of competitive pay zone; deleted former definition of entry salary that read: ""Entry salary" means the entry-level base salary for each occupational pay range"; in definition of market salary substituted "median base salary" for "midpoint in an occupational pay range, based on the average base salary"; deleted former definition of occupational pay range that read: ""Occupational pay range" means a range of pay, including an entry salary, market salary, and maximum salary, for a specific occupation within a specific pay band. An occupation may have more than one occupational pay range. An occupational pay range must fit within the appropriate pay band"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 deleted definition of anniversary date that read: ""Anniversary date", except as modified in part 3 of this chapter, means the month and day on which an employee began the most recent period of uninterrupted state service"; inserted definition of benchmark; inserted definition of broadband classification plan; inserted definition of broadband pay plan; deleted definition of class that read: ""Class" means one or more positions substantially similar with respect to the kind or nature of duties performed, responsibility assumed, and level of difficulty so that the same descriptive title may be used to designate each position allocated to the class, similar qualifications may be required of persons appointed to the positions in the class, and the same pay rate or pay grade may be applied with equity"; deleted definition of class series benchmark that read: ""Class series benchmark" means a representative position within a class series that is used to illustrate the application of the job evaluation factors that are used to classify positions in the classification plan. A benchmark description describes the duties and responsibilities assigned and the factors applied to the class series benchmark"; deleted definition of class specification that read: ""Class specification" means a written descriptive statement of the duties and responsibilities characteristic of a class of positions and includes the education, experience, knowledge, skills, abilities, and qualifications necessary to perform the work of the class"; in definition of employee at end deleted "from the statewide classification system"; in definition of entry salary substituted "occupational pay range" for "grade provided in 2-18-312"; deleted definition of grade that read: ""Grade" means the number assigned to a pay range within a pay schedule in part 3 of this chapter"; inserted definition of job evaluation factor; deleted definition of market ratio that read: ""Market ratio" means an employee's base salary divided by the market salary for the employee's pay grade"; in definition of market salary substituted "occupational pay range" for "pay grade provided in 2-18-312"; inserted definition of occupation; inserted definition of occupational pay range; inserted definition of pay band; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 56 inserted definition of telework; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

Chapter 75 in definition of employee inserted (b) excluding student intern from definition; in definition of short-term worker in (e) in two places inserted "of this chapter"; inserted definition of student intern; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 558 inserted definition of competencies; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 339 inserted definitions of permanent employee, seasonal employee, short-term worker, and temporary employee; deleted definitions of permanent position, seasonal position, and temporary position (see 1997 Session Law for former text); in definition of job sharing, after "position", deleted "that is considered an aggregate or permanent position"; in definition of permanent status, at end after "period", deleted "in a permanent position"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 inserted definitions of anniversary date, class series benchmark, and market ratio; in definition of market salary inserted "midpoint in a pay grade provided in 2-18-312, based on the" and substituted "comparable occupations" for "occupations comparable to occupations in a grade provided in 2-18-312"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1991 Amendment: Inserted definitions of base salary, entry salary, and market salary. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

Constitutional Officers: The elected officials enumerated in Art. VI, sec. 1, Mont. Const., are the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Secretary of State, Attorney General, Superintendent of Public Instruction, and Auditor.

Case Notes

Judgment Against "State" Binding Against Two Agencies — Retirement Benefits Setoff Barred as Compulsory Counterclaim: During a longstanding dispute by firefighters employed by the Montana Air National Guard and involving several separate lawsuits, the plaintiff was fired and began receiving retirement benefits. The plaintiff sued "the State" for reinstatement of employment, lost wages, employment benefits during the period of termination, liquidated damages, and attorney fees and costs. After other firefighters' suits were decided in the firefighters' favor, the plaintiff settled with the Department of Military Affairs (DMA) for reinstatement, lost wages, lost annual leave and sick leave benefits, retirement contributions that the DMA would have made during the termination period, and attorney fees and costs of suit. After settlement, the Public Employees' Retirement System (PERS) claimed that it was entitled to repayment of the retirement benefits that the plaintiff had been paid before reinstatement. The DMA and PERS agreed to offset the settlement damages by the retirement amount. The Supreme Court held that the state's setoff claim was barred as a compulsory counterclaim, that both agencies were bound by the DMA's settlement agreement because they were the same party collectively known as the "State of Montana", and that the plaintiff was entitled to the full settlement amount without setoff. Peters v. St., 285 M 345, 948 P2d 250, 54 St. Rep. 1185 (1997).

Permanent Status Protection: Where department employee had achieved "permanent status" in one position and was subsequently promoted to another position on a probationary basis and terminated when she did not perform satisfactorily, she remains on a permanent status and must be accorded the same protections as a permanent employee, including a showing by the Department of just cause for termination. 1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 84, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 2-18-102 requires the department of administration to adopt administrative rules containing personnel policies and 2-18-401 authorizes the department to adopt rules regarding the operation of the state central payroll system.

The legislature intends that rules containing personnel policies should address employee records, performance appraisals, grievances, discipline, reductions in force, recruitment, selection, and training.

The legislature intends that rules concerning payroll deductions should address the payroll deduction process and should set criteria for the kinds of payments that can be made through payroll deductions. Examples of types of payroll deductions that should be addressed by the rules are payment of insurance premiums, bank and credit union payments, charitable contributions, and wage garnishments."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 562, L. 1995, provided: "WHEREAS, Article XIII, section 4, of the Montana Constitution is unambiguous in its intent of prohibiting conflict between public duty and private interest for members of the Legislature and for all state and local government officers and employees."

Severability: Section 25, Ch. 562, L. 1995, was a severability clause.

Case Notes

State's Administrative Rules Abrogate "At Will" Employment Relationship — Due Process Required: Plaintiff sued, alleging constructive discharge from state employment. The District Court dismissed the complaint for failure to state a claim on which relief can be granted. The Supreme Court reversed, holding that the state's adoption of administrative rules that limit discharge of an employee without a showing of "just cause" confer upon employees a specified term of employment and create a property interest in the continuation of that employment. Adoption of the rules abrogated the "at will" employment relationship. The property interest in continued employment is protected by the due process provisions of the state and federal constitutions. Boreen v. Christensen, 267 M 405, 884 P2d 761, 51 St. Rep. 1014 (1994).

State Employee Preference as Tie-Breaker: The intent, interpretation, and constant application of the Department of Administration policy on preference in rehiring state employees who lose their jobs because of a reduction in force, as outlined in ARM 2.21.5007, are that the policy is to be applied as a tie-breaker preference, not an absolute preference. Easy v. Dept. of Natural Resources and Conservation, 231 M 306, 752 P2d 746, 45 St. Rep. 631 (1988).

Circumstances Warranting Good Faith Discharge — Claim Not Stating Public Concern — Summary Judgment Proper: An employee was issued reprimands, notices of corrective discipline, and notices of punitive discipline but still failed to perform assigned duties or correct job inadequacies. He had the chance to rebut charges of incompetency but chose not to do so. He had the right of grievance but failed to exercise it. His claim of wrongful discharge did not state a public policy concern, but rather was a personal matter. The Supreme Court declined to interfere with the employer's right to manage its affairs and hire employees who will perform their jobs so long as there is a standard of discipline and the employer abides by it in good faith. Summary dismissal of the wrongful discharge claim was proper. Belcher v. Dept. of State Lands, 228 M 352, 742 P2d 475, 44 St. Rep. 1591 (1987).

The phrase appeared in this section and was changed by the Code Commissioner as directed.

1991 Amendments — Instructions to Code Commissioner: The Code Commissioner changed "department of institutions" to "department of corrections and human services", pursuant to sec. 1, Ch. 262, L. 1991, directing the Code Commissioner to make the change wherever necessary in the Montana Code Annotated. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 447 inserted (16) concerning state racing stewards; and made minor change in style. Amendment effective April 16, 1991.

Chapter 507 inserted (17) relating to executive director of Montana Wheat and Barley Committee; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

1989 Amendments: Chapter 316 inserted (14) relating to Montana Board of Science and Technology Development. Amendment effective March 24, 1989.

Chapter 613 inserted (15) exempting executive director and employees of state compensation mutual insurance fund; and made minor change in phraseology. Amendment effective April 21, 1989.

Chapter 660 at end of (10) inserted "or family services"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 161 inserted (13) relating to the lottery security position.

Chapter 581 in (11), relating to the Board of Investments, inserted "executive director, and three professional staff positions".

1983 Amendment: In (9) relating to the Montana School for the Deaf and Blind, inserted "and live-in houseparents".

Case Notes

State Firefighter Reclassification Plan Violative of Fair Labor Standards Act: In 1985, the U.S. Supreme Court in Garcia v. Metropolitan Transit Authority, 469 US 528, 83 L Ed 2d 1016, 105 S Ct 1005 (1985), reversed previous case law that excluded state jobs from coverage under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (FLSA), making FLSA provisions binding on state and local governments. Under the FLSA, a firefighter must be paid at the overtime rate if the firefighter's tour of duty exceeds 212 hours in 28 days. The Montana Department of Military Affairs employed certain firefighters, the cost of whose jobs was paid by the federal government through a cooperative arrangement with the state. In response to Garcia, the Department proposed changes in the manner in which the firefighters were paid and, in 1986, an exclusion from the state pay matrix was granted under this section. Following the reclassification, the firefighters' wages were reduced. The firefighters sought compensation for unpaid "straight time" and for discrimination in violation of the FLSA. The state's economic necessity argument failed because under Blanton v. Murfreesboro, 856 F2d 731 (6th Cir. 1988), the state could not prove that the wages were reduced from fiscal concern that was not attributable to the extra cost of complying with the FLSA nor could the state show that it could not augment federal funds with state funds or implement a different plan without violating the FLSA. The state's contention that the firefighters were not reclassified in response to their assertion of coverage under the FLSA because violations were not asserted until 1988 also was invalid because under Drollinger v. Ariz., 962 F2d 956 (9th Cir. 1992), the FLSA also prohibits violations in anticipation of assertions of coverage. The state's argument that the firefighters ratified the wage cuts when they signed agreements reducing their hourly wage also was incorrect because under Barrentine v. Ark.-Best Freight Sys., 450 US 728, 67 L Ed 2d 641, 101 S Ct 1437 (1981), employees' rights under the FLSA cannot be abridged by contract or otherwise. Cumulatively, the uncontroverted evidence established a state violation of the FLSA, and summary judgment was proper. Tefft v. St., 271 M 82, 894 P2d 317, 52 St. Rep. 357 (1995).

Attorney General's Opinions

Chief Water Judge Not Subject to State Leave Policies — Executive Branch Not to Supervise Judicial Branch: Although the Chief Water Judge is appointed and not elected, the Chief Water Judge is a judicial officer and is not subject to the vacation leave policies of the Department of Administration. This interpretation of the statutes is also required by the application of the separation of powers clause of the Montana Constitution. To hold otherwise would subject a judicial officer to control by the Executive Branch of state government and not to the control of the Montana Supreme Court or the Judicial Standards Commission. 48 A.G. Op. 2 (1999).

Authority to Classify Positions of State Librarian and Director of Montana Historical Society: Although repeals by implication are not favored, it would frustrate the purpose of the classification and pay plan law to hold that the positions of state librarian and Director of the Montana Historical Society are exempt from classification when the Legislature has not expressly approved such exemption in 2-18-103. Thus, the provisions of 22-3-107 and 22-1-102, which authorize the Board of Trustees of the historical society and the State Library Commission to set salary, are superseded by the classification and pay plan law, Title 2, ch. 18, parts 1 through 3. The Board and the Commission retain the authority to hire and to assign duties and responsibilities. 40 A.G. Op. 68 (1984).

Employees of Office of Workers' Compensation Judge — Exempt From Classification Plan: The question of whether or not the employees of the office of the workers' compensation judge are exempt from the state classification plan (Title 2, ch. 18) depended upon whether the office was part of the judicial branch or the executive branch. The similarities to state courts, the qualifications for office, the statutory provisions regarding the judge and the court, statutory construction, and the legislative intent derived from the history supported the conclusion that the office performs a judicial function. Therefore, the employees are employees of the judicial branch and exempt from the state classification plan. 38 A.G. Op. 27 (1979).

Attorneys — State Classification and Pay Plan: Exemptions to the state classification and pay plan do not apply to attorneys employed by state agencies who are commissioned as Special Assistant Attorneys General, unless those attorneys are under the immediate supervision or control of the Attorney General. 37 A.G. Op. 95 (1977).

Public Employee Classification Plan: The state employee classification plan is applicable to employees of state agencies administered by the merit system. 36 A.G. Op. 29 (1975).

2-18-104. Exemption for personal staff — limit.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 339 in (1), at end after "from", substituted "parts 1 through 3 and 10" for "the application of 2-18-204, 2-18-205, 2-18-207, and 2-18-1011 through 2-18-1013". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1989 Amendment: Deleted former (4) that read: "(4) A person occupying an exempt position under 2-18-103 or this section may not receive an increase in compensation unless the person changes positions or successfully completes a probationary period in fiscal year 1988 or 1989." Amendment effective July 1, 1989.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (4) freezing compensation for exempt positions.

1983 Amendment: In (3), increased number of exempted staffers from 5 to 10 and at end deleted "and must be approved by the department according to criteria approved by the department".

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1983 Amendment: In (2), substituted language allowing unexpended balances to be transferred to second year in a biennium to offset pay increases for former text that read: "Appropriated funds not spent at the end of the fiscal year shall revert to the fund from which appropriated."

Case Notes

Prospective Legislative Change in Compensation: An employee's right to compensation vests or accrues only after the employee has performed the required services for that pay period. Thus, highway patrol officers had no vested rights to continue to receive 1% longevity increases in salary that were established by a statute repealed when the state pay plan was established and when their base pay under the pay plan included earned longevity, because such prospective alteration of salary prior to vesting is permissible. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

Statutes Fixing Terms and Conditions of State Employment — Presumed Not to Be Contractual: Highway patrolmen had no vested right to receive 1% longevity increases established by a statute repealed when the state pay plan was instituted. Unless the circumstances and language of the statute manifest a legislative intent to create private rights of a contractual nature, enforceable against the state, a statute fixing certain terms of public employment, such as salary or compensation, is presumed not to create contractual rights but merely to declare a policy to be pursued until the Legislature declares otherwise. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1985 Amendment: In (2) substituted language providing that job-sharing benefits are to be provided in the same manner as for permanent part-time employees for former text that read: "Employee holiday pay, annual leave, sick leave, and health benefits for a full-time equivalent position filled by job sharing must be divided on a pro rata basis between the persons filling such position."

Legislative Intent — Report: Section 4, Ch. 684, L. 1983, provided: "The legislature intends that the state permit job sharing in certain positions when it is done to maintain or increase efficiency in such positions and actively promote the hiring of new employees or the filling of vacant positions by using job sharing. The legislature does not intend that the state actively promote replacement of current full-time employees with job sharing employees. The legislative fiscal analyst shall report to the 49th legislature on the success of agencies in implementing this intent."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 75 in definition of employment inserted (a)(v) regarding engagement as student intern; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 339 in (1), near middle after "hiring for", deleted "a position of"; in (3) inserted definition of employment and deleted definition of position (see 1997 Session Law for former text); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent to Ch. 506, L. 1991, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because [sections 1 and 2] [2-18-111 and 18-1-110] direct the commissioner of labor and industry to adopt rules to implement [sections 1 and 2] [2-18-111 and 18-1-110]. It is the intent of the legislature that the rules also be designed to assist the commissioner of labor and industry to enforce the provisions of [sections 1 and 2] [2-18-111 and 18-1-110] and to investigate complaints of any violations of law, as provided in [sections 1 and 2] [2-18-111 and 18-1-110]."

Applicability: Section 7, Ch. 506, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to hiring for vacancies in state agency or state construction project positions within an Indian reservation that occur after [the effective date of this act] [effective October 1, 1991]."

Conditions of Tribal Affiliation Applicable to Indian Hiring Preference — Status of Individual Indian Not Controlling: Schmasow claimed that the Native American Center (NAC) should have hired her as executive director pursuant to an Indian employment preference provision, 25 U.S.C. 450e(b), that was contained in the NAC's contract with the Indian Health Service. The NAC instead hired Shield, another Indian, but Schmasow contended that Shield did not qualify for the employment preference because he was a member of the Little Shell Chippewa Tribe, which is not a federally recognized tribe listed by the U.S. Secretary of the Interior under 25 U.S.C. 479a-1. The District Court concluded that Shield was eligible for the preference, and Schmasow appealed. In affirming the District Court, the Supreme Court held that in order to satisfy the definitions of Indian and Indian tribe in the preference law, one must establish that the hired person's tribe is itself eligible for the health care benefits and that the status of an individual Indian is not controlling. The Little Shell Chippewa Tribe fits the definition of Indian tribe because it is part of an Indian community that receives federal Indian funding for special programs and services, even though it is not a federally recognized tribe. Because Shield was an enrolled member of the Little Shell Chippewa Tribe, he satisfied the definition of Indian and was eligible for the hiring preference. Schmasow v. Native Am. Center, 1999 MT 49, 293 M 382, 978 P2d 304, 56 St. Rep. 198 (1999).

2-18-201. Implementation and maintenance of broadband classification plan.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 in (1) substituted "implement and maintain a broadband classification" for "develop a personnel classification" and substituted "all state positions in state service" for "all state positions and classes of positions in state service following hearings involving affected employees and employee organizations"; in (2) substituted "implement and maintain a broadband classification" for "develop a classification"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 545 inserted second sentence regarding development of a Legislative Branch classification plan. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1995 Transition: Section 81, Ch. 545, L. 1995, provided: "(1) The members of the legislative council, as provided in 5-11-101, the members of the legislative finance committee, as provided in 5-12-202, the members of the legislative audit committee, as provided in 5-13-202, and the members of the environmental quality council, as provided in 5-16-101, must be appointed as soon as possible following [the effective date of this section] [effective April 27, 1995].

(2) To implement the changes provided in [this act], the office of the legislative council, the office of budget and program planning, and the department of administration shall establish all necessary authorizations during the accounting preparation process known as the "turnaround" process, beginning in April or May 1995, to administer the several appropriations made by any means to programs of the legislative branch agencies consolidated under [sections 3 and 4] [5-2-503 and 5-2-504] for fiscal year 1996 or 1997 or the biennium ending June 30, 1997, as appropriations to a single legislative agency while maintaining the specific identification, legislative intent, and purpose for which the appropriations were made. During this transition, the executive director may authenticate documents as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act]. Appropriate changes on the statewide budgeting and accounting system and the payroll, personnel, and position control system must also be made and authorized as required to accomplish the purposes of [this act].

(3) Personnel and property of the environmental quality council are transferred to the legislative services division effective July 1, 1995."

Authority of Council to Set Staff Salaries: In accordance with the more recent and specific language of 53-20-206 (now repealed) and the exclusionary language of 2-15-2204 (renumbered 2-15-1869), the Developmental Disabilities Planning and Advisory Council (now Montana Council on Developmental Disabilities) has authority to set salaries of the Council's staff without reference to the state personnel classification plan established in this section. 44 A.G. Authority to Classify Positions of State Librarian and Director of Montana Historical Society: Although repeals by implication are not favored, it would frustrate the purpose of the classification and pay plan law to hold that the positions of state librarian and Director of the Montana Historical Society are exempt from classification when the Legislature has not expressly approved such exemption in 2-18-103. (b) the same title can be used to identify each position in the class"; in (2) substituted "to individuals with the same occupation within an occupational pay range" for "under the same conditions with equity to each position within the class"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) A class may consist of only one position"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

Board Modification of Hearings Examiner Findings Warranted Regarding Classification of Child Support Enforcement Investigators: Under 2-4-704 and St. v. Shodair Hosp., 273 M 155, 902 P2d 21 (1995), a reviewing court may reverse a decision by the Board of Personnel Appeals if it was arbitrary or capricious or characterized by an abuse of discretion or a clearly unwarranted exercise of discretion. Here, the Board properly rejected a portion of a hearings examiner's findings that 80% of child support enforcement investigators' work involved case monitoring, and, absent substantial evidence, it was error for a District Court to find that the Board's rejection was improper. Further, the Board was correct in concluding that the hearings examiner mistakenly omitted the investigators' proposed findings regarding establishment duties, and the District Court erred in holding that the Board's modified findings failed to reflect the investigators' predominant duties under the predominant duty rule. St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002).

Board of Personnel Appeals Not Bound by Findings and Conclusions of Hearings Examiner — District Court Bound by Board Conclusions if Correct: The interpretation of an administrative rule and an agency's policy is a question of law, and in its final order, an agency may reject or modify a hearings officer's conclusion of law and interpretation of administrative rules in the proposal for decision. As the final administrative authority in the state employee classification process, the Board of Personnel Appeals must review and interpret applicable rules promulgated by the Department of Administration. Thus, the Board is not bound by a hearings officer's conclusions and interpretations. However, the District Court is bound by the Board's conclusions of law and interpretation of administrative rules, if correct. In the present case, the Board reasonably interpreted applicable employee classification rules and correctly concluded that child support enforcement investigators were improperly classified in violation of this section, and the District Court erred in reversing the Board's final order. St. Personnel Div. v. Child Support Investigators, 2002 MT 46, 308 M 365, 43 P3d 305 (2002). See also Weber v. Pub. Department to Develop Guidelines for Classification — Board Limited to Determining Proper Classification: Certain highway patrol officers successfully appealed to the Personnel Division of the Department of Administration to have their grade raised pursuant to 2-18-203 (see 2007 amendment). In response, other officers filed a grievance pursuant to 2-18-1011, seeking reclassification of their positions and grades. Appeal was permissible under 2-18-203 as it existed at the time. The Division reclassified their positions using a "five factor" formula. The affected officers appealed their resulting grade reassignment to the Board of Personnel Appeals, which issued an order to the Division requiring reclassification of certain positions. The Board subsequently rejected the Division's classification recommendations and upheld the so-called "practice" of maintaining a grade difference between supervisors and persons they supervise. In the subsequent appeal from the classification process used by the Division, the Supreme Court held: (1) the Division's failure to follow a "practice" or "rule of thumb" is not an abuse of discretion because it followed the factors set forth in its rules and offered legitimate reasons for deviating from the "practice"; (2) the Board is limited to determining whether a position is properly classified; (3) the function of developing guidelines for classification is assigned to the Department; and (4) the state has a legitimate interest in preserving the state pay classification system, and the amended statute rationally relates toward effectuating that objective. St. Personnel Div. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 235 M 208, 766 P2d 1300, 45 St. Rep. 2324 (1988).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 in (1) in first sentence near beginning substituted "review the job evaluation factor of positions" for "continuously review all positions", inserted "may", and substituted "the occupations for the positions" for "classifications" and in second sentence near beginning after "to be made to" deleted "class specifications, class series", substituted "pay bands" for "classes", and near end substituted reference to positions factored in blue-collar pay plan for "blue-collar and teachers' classification plans"; in (2) at end of first sentence substituted "pay band" for "class" and in second sentence near beginning substituted "pay band assigned to an occupation and benchmarks" for "grade assigned to a class and factors assigned to class series benchmarks"; in (3) substituted "pay band allocation" for "classification"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 42 in (1), in second sentence after "teachers'", deleted "and liquor store clerks'"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 in (1), near middle, substituted "class specifications" for "classification specifications", inserted "class series benchmarks", after "positions" substituted "to classes" for "in the classification specifications", and at end substituted "Title 39, chapter 31" for "the Collective Bargaining Act"; in (2), in second sentence, inserted "and factors assigned to class series benchmarks"; in (3) deleted last sentence that read: "This provision shall not affect a classification or position appeal already in process on April 26, 1977"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "the allocation or reallocation of a position to a class" in (2) for "any changes in classifications or positions"; added last sentence of (2) relating to grade assigned to class is not appealable; deleted "or position" after "retroactive pay for a classification" near the beginning of (3).

Board Power in Classification Appeal — Resolution of Grievance: Under this section and the holding in St. Personnel Div. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 235 M 208, 766 P2d 1300 (1988) (also known as the Mead decision), in a classification appeal, the Board of Personnel Appeals is limited to determining whether a position is properly classified. If the Board determines that the position is improperly classified and the employee is therefore aggrieved, the Board can resolve the grievance under 2-18-1012 by ordering the State Personnel Division to reclassify the employee's position and, as appropriate, order other remedies, such as retroactive pay. In the present case, the Board exceeded its authority by granting retroactive pay even though there was no finding of improper classification or that the employees were aggrieved. St. Personnel Div. v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 255 M 507, 844 P2d 68, 49 St. Rep. 1087 (1992), distinguishing Hutchin v. St., 213 M 15, 688 P2d 1257 (1984).

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 310, L. 1983, read: "WHEREAS, Article II, section 4, of the Montana Constitution prohibits discrimination against any person in the exercise of his or her civil rights on the basis of sex; and

WHEREAS, Montana laws prohibit compensation of women "less than that paid to men for equivalent service"; and

WHEREAS, pay disparities between men and women still exist in Montana in general and in state government in particular because of both overt sex discrimination and subtle biases which, although more difficult to recognize, inherently undervalue the work of women; and

WHEREAS, statistics for state government employees in Montana reveal that, for the 15-month period ending March 31, 1982:

(1) the average female employee earned only 69.4% as much as the average male employee;

(2) females held 90.2% of all clerical positions, 32.5% of all professional positions, 17.8% of all managerial positions, and 1.7% of all skilled craft jobs; and

(3) compared to large private-sector employers in Montana (in 1978), a woman employed by state government is half as likely to be a professional or managerial employee as her private-sector colleague; and

WHEREAS, studies being conducted throughout the states are revealing that jobs dominated by women are accorded less value than comparable jobs dominated by men; and

WHEREAS, state government in Montana should serve as a model for the equal employment opportunity that is required under the State's Constitution and state and federal statutes and by our basic commitment to human rights and human dignity."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 349 near beginning of first sentence, after "shall", substituted "periodically evaluate" for "as provided in 5-11-210, report to the legislature the status of the study of the comparable worth standard and" and near middle, after "schedules", inserted "and statutes", near beginning of second sentence substituted "may" for "shall", and deleted third sentence that read: "The department shall continue to make such reports until the standard is met"; and made minor changes in style.

1991 Amendment: Near beginning inserted reference to 5-11-210. Amendment effective March 20, 1991.

Part 3
Compensation Determination

Part Compiler's Comments

Study of Protective Services Professionals' Pay Schedules: Section 1, Ch. 363, L. 1997, provided: "(1) The department shall study, with the cooperation of the department of justice, the department of transportation, the department of corrections, and other state agencies with personnel who will be included on the schedule, a pay schedule for protective services professionals. The pay schedule must be implemented for the period beginning July 1, 1999, and ending June 30, 2001. Insofar as the pay schedule applies to employees of a collective bargaining unit, its implementation is a negotiable subject under 39-31-305.

(2) "Protective services professional" means:

(a) a highway patrol officer, as defined in 61-1-305 [now repealed], except the chief, as defined in 61-1-302 [now repealed];

(b) an agent, as described in 44-2-111;

(c) a person authorized by the department of transportation or the department of justice to conduct an inspection pursuant to 61-9-501;

(d) a person whose primary work function is to supervise or otherwise guard persons incarcerated in a component of the department of corrections described in 53-1-202(2); or

(e) a person in an occupation identified by the department that is similar to those in subsections (2)(a) through (2)(d)."

Report to Legislature: Section 2, Ch. 363, L. 1997, provided: "By November 1, 1998, the department of administration shall submit to the 56th legislature a report on the results of the study conducted pursuant to [section 1] [not codified, see compiler's comment above for section text]. The report may contain proposed legislation to implement the pay schedule developed pursuant to [section 1] [not codified, see compiler's comment above for section text]."

Effective Date: Section 3, Ch. 363, L. 1997, provided: "[This act] is effective July 1, 1997."

Committee on State Employee Compensation — Temporary: Section 14, Ch. 660, L. 1989, provided: "(1) (a) There is a committee on state employee compensation.

(b) The governor shall appoint seven members to the committee. Two of the members must be representatives of employee organizations and have knowledge of or experience in negotiating the pay schedules provided in 2-18-312 through 2-18-315 [2-18-312 through 2-18-315 now repealed].

(c) The president of the senate shall appoint one senator and the speaker of the house of representatives shall appoint one representative to the committee.

(2) A committee member shall serve until the committee terminates on July 1, 1991. A vacancy on the committee must be filled in the same manner as the original appointment.

(3) The governor shall appoint the chairman and vice chairman of the committee. The committee shall meet upon the call of the chairman or at the request of five members. Five members constitute a quorum to transact business.

(4) A member is entitled to compensation as provided in 2-15-122(5).

(5) The committee shall:

(a) examine policies governing state employee compensation in Montana;

(b) study compensation policies of other comparable governmental and private sector entities;

(c) review professional literature and research on compensation issues;

(d) analyze and assess various components of the Montana state employee compensation system;

(e) identify problems with the state employee compensation system and options for resolving these problems. State employees and managers may be surveyed to assist in identifying these problems and options.

(f) develop recommendations to maximize employee productivity and promote quality governmental services within available funding; and

(g) report its findings, recommendations, and any proposed legislation to the governor and the 52nd legislature.

(6) The state personnel division, department of administration, and the legislative council shall provide staff assistance to the committee." Effective May 11, 1989, and terminates July 1, 1991.

Part Case Notes

Implementation of Department Directors' Pay Plan Prevented by Governor — No Violation of Separation of Powers — No Impairment of Contract: Directors of two Executive Branch agencies notified employees that employees would be eligible for reinstatement of pay plan steps lost to multigrade promotions. The Governor prohibited the proposed plan. Plaintiffs sued, claiming that the Governor acted unconstitutionally. The Supreme Court held that the Department of Administration's broad powers and duties relating to the state pay plan must be read in conjunction with the Governor's statutory duties of supervision, approval, appointment, and direction over executive agency departments while also taking into consideration the Governor's constitutional status as chief executive officer of the state. The doctrine of separation of powers is not violated when the Governor exercises the very sorts of powers and duties authorized by the Legislature in the statutes. Because the directors' offer was gratuitous and there was no consideration for the offer, no contract was formed under which the employees gained any vested rights to the reinstatement of the lost steps. Past consideration (the employees' prior work) is not sufficient to support a promise. Because there was no contract, there were no contractual obligations that were impaired by the Governor's action. Mont. Pub. Employees Ass'n v. Office of Governor, 271 M 450, 898 P2d 675, 52 St. Rep. 523 (1995).

State Firefighter Reclassification Plan Violative of Fair Labor Standards Act: In 1985, the U.S. Supreme Court in Garcia v. Metropolitan Transit Authority, 469 US 528, 83 L Ed 2d 1016, 105 S Ct 1005 (1985), reversed previous case law that excluded state jobs from coverage under the federal Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (FLSA), making FLSA provisions binding on state and local governments. Under the FLSA, a firefighter must be paid at the overtime rate if the firefighter's tour of duty exceeds 212 hours in 28 days. The Montana Department of Military Affairs employed certain firefighters, the cost of whose jobs was paid by the federal government through a cooperative arrangement with the state. In response to Garcia, the Department proposed changes in the manner in which the firefighters were paid and, in 1986, an exclusion from the state pay matrix was granted under 2-18-103. Following the reclassification, the firefighters' wages were reduced. The firefighters sought compensation for unpaid "straight time" and for discrimination in violation of the FLSA. The state's economic necessity argument failed because under Blanton v. Murfreesboro, 856 F2d 731 (6th Cir. 1988), the state could not prove that the wages were reduced from fiscal concern that was not attributable to the extra cost of complying with the FLSA nor could the state show that it could not augment federal funds with state funds or implement a different plan without violating the FLSA. The state's contention that the firefighters were not reclassified in response to their assertion of coverage under the FLSA because violations were not asserted until 1988 also was invalid because under Drollinger v. Ariz., 962 F2d 956 (9th Cir. 1992), the FLSA also prohibits violations in anticipation of assertions of coverage. The state's argument that the firefighters ratified the wage cuts when they signed agreements reducing their hourly wage also was incorrect because under Barrentine v. Ark.-Best Freight Sys., 450 US 728, 67 L Ed 2d 641, 101 S Ct 1437 (1981), employees' rights under the FLSA cannot be abridged by contract or otherwise. Cumulatively, the uncontroverted evidence established a state violation of the FLSA, and summary judgment was proper. Tefft v. St., 271 M 82, 894 P2d 317, 52 St. Rep. 357 (1995).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 430 in (4) at beginning inserted "When fiscally able", near middle after "on the basis of competency" deleted "internal equity", and at end substituted "pay progression, and other nondiscriminatory factors, while considering pay relationships within an agency or pay unit" for "when fiscally able"; in (5) at end of first sentence after "nine pay bands" inserted "including occupational wage ranges based on an occupation and its job evaluation factor", at beginning of second sentence substituted "Each occupational wage range" for "Each pay band", near end of second sentence substituted "minimum, a market midpoint" for "minimum salary", and inserted last sentence providing for a salary less than the minimum salary; in (6)(a) substituted "market midpoints" for "market rates"; in (6)(b) substituted "the occupational wage range for each occupation" for "salary ranges for each pay band"; deleted former (6)(c) that read: "(c) recommend competitive pay zones"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

Severability: Section 19, Ch. 430, L. 2017, was a severability clause.

2015 Amendment: Chapter 438 in (1) substituted current text concerning a biennial salary survey for former text that read: "(1) It is the intent of the legislature that compensation plans for state employees, excluding those employees excepted under 2-18-103 or 2-18-104, be based on an analysis and comparison of the municipal and state government labor markets in North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, and Wyoming as provided by the department from the national compensation association of state governments salary survey and other information relative to the state government salaries and compensation in those states. For the biennium beginning July 1, 2013, the department shall determine this information before pay raises are implemented. For legislative sessions following the biennium beginning July 1, 2013, the department shall submit to the office of budget and program planning as a part of the information required by 17-7-111:

(a) an analysis of how Montana government employee salaries and other compensation compare to the municipal and state government salaries in North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, and Wyoming; and

(b) an analysis of the labor market as determined by the department in a biennial salary survey"; in (4) at end of first sentence after "competitiveness to" substituted "the external labor market when fiscally able" for "the municipal and state government labor markets in North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, and Wyoming. The intent is to bring all pay bands to the same relationship percentage of the market rate midpoint salary comparison when fiscally able"; in (5)(c) after "pay zones" deleted "with the municipal and state government labor markets in North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, and Wyoming using the national compensation association of state governments salary survey and other relevant information for those states"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 5, 2015.

2013 Amendment: Chapter 385 in (1) after "2-18-104" substituted current language for "be based, in part, on an analysis of the labor market as provided by the department in a biennial salary survey. The salary survey must be submitted to the office of budget and program planning as a part of the information required by 17-7-111"; inserted (1)(a) regarding comparison to government salaries in neighboring states; inserted (1)(b) regarding labor market analysis by biennial salary survey; in (4) substituted "the municipal and state government labor markets in North Dakota, South Dakota, Idaho, and Wyoming. The intent is to bring all pay bands to the same relationship percentage of the market rate midpoint salary comparison" for "external labor markets"; in (6)(c) after "zones" inserted reference to government labor markets in neighboring states using specified survey and other information; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2013.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 7 deleted former (1) that read: "The purpose of this part is to provide the market-based compensation necessary to attract and retain competent and qualified employees in order to perform the services that the state is required to provide to its citizens"; in (1) near middle after "be based" inserted "in part"; at beginning of (2) deleted "Except as provided in 2-18-110" and after "adjustments" inserted "if any"; deleted former (4) that read: "Pay provided for in 2-18-303 may not be increased through collective bargaining after adjournment of the legislature"; in (3) near beginning after "increases" inserted "if any"; in (4) near middle substituted "competency" for "merit"; in (5) deleted former third and fourth sentences that read: "The department shall adopt an entry salary, market salary, and maximum salary for each occupation within each pay band. These salary ranges are also known as occupational pay ranges"; in (6)(b) after "establish" inserted "salary ranges for each" and after "band" deleted "levels"; in (6)(c) substituted "recommend competitive pay zones" for "set occupational pay ranges for all occupations"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 in (2) in first sentence near end inserted "biennial"; in (3) after "pay adjustments" deleted "and pay schedules", after reference to 2-18-303 deleted "and in 2-18-312", and near end before "legislature" deleted "59th"; in (4) near beginning after "Pay" deleted "levels", substituted reference to 2-18-303 for reference to 2-18-312, and before "legislature" deleted "59th"; in (5) substituted "increases" for "schedules", substituted reference to 2-18-303 for reference to 2-18-312, and near end before "legislature" deleted "59th"; inserted (7) regarding broadband pay plan; inserted (8) requiring department to takes action based upon biennial salary survey; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 6 in (2) near middle of first sentence after "2-18-104" deleted "and excluding employees compensated under 2-18-313 and 2-18-315"; in (3), (4), and (5) near middle after "2-18-312" deleted "2-18-313, and 2-18-315" and at end substituted "59th legislature" for "58th legislature"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

2003 Amendment: Chapter 552 in (3), (4), and (5) substituted "58th legislature" for "57th legislature". Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 553 in (3), (4), and (5) substituted "57th legislature" for "56th legislature". Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 558 throughout section substituted "56th legislature" for "55th legislature"; and inserted (8) authorizing board of regents to negotiate with representatives of classified staff of university system. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 42 in (2), (3), (4), and (5) deleted reference to 2-18-314; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Chapter 417 in (2), after "2-18-313", substituted "and" for "through"; and in (3), (4), and (5), after "2-18-312", substituted "2-18-313, and" for "through" and substituted "55th legislature" for "54th legislature". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 in (3), after "2-18-110", deleted "and 2-18-305(4)", inserted "pay adjustments and", and inserted "2-18-303 and in"; in (3), (4), and (5) substituted "54th legislature" for "53rd legislature"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1993 Amendments: Chapter 349 near end of (2), after "survey", substituted second sentence regarding submission of the salary survey for former language that read: "report to the legislature at the start of each legislative session".

Chapter 640 in (3), (4), and (5) substituted "53rd" for "52nd". Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1991 Amendment: In (1), before "compensation", inserted "market-based"; in (2), after "that", deleted "for the biennium ending June 30, 1991" and inserted remainder of subsection concerning analysis of the labor market based on a salary survey; at beginning of (3) inserted exception clause; in (3), (4), and (5) substituted "52nd legislature" for "51st legislature"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

1991 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent to Ch. 720, L. 1991, provided: "In order to recruit and retain competent and qualified public employees to perform required services for the state, it is the intent of the legislature to provide for a state employee compensation system based on the prevailing compensation practices found in relevant public sector and private sector labor markets.

(1) To achieve this goal, 2-18-301 requires that the department of administration provide a salary survey report to the legislature. The report may include, but is not limited to:

(a) data showing the average salaries paid to employees in Montana's labor market for comparable positions;

(b) recommendations for administering the pay increases provided in 2-18-303; and

(c) recommendations for adjusting the pay schedules provided in 2-18-312 [now repealed] in order to maintain an internally equitable and competitive salary structure for Montana state employees.

(2) Labor markets relevant to state employees must have positions comparable to those in Montana state government and must compete with state government for qualified employees."

1989 Amendment: Near beginning of (2) substituted "1991" for "1989"; and in (2)(a), (2)(b), and (2)(c) changed "50th legislature" to "51st legislature". Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1987 Amendment: In three places in (2) changed "2-18-311" to "2-18-312", in three places, before "legislature", changed "49th" to "50th", and after "June 30" changed "1987" to "1989".

1986 Amendment: The amendment was contingent on renegotiation of collective bargaining agreements; since such contingency didn't occur, the amendment terminated.

1985 Amendment: In introductory clause of (2) substituted "1987" for "1985"; and in (2)(a), (2)(b), and (2)(c) substituted "49th legislature" for "48th legislature".

1983 Amendment: In (2), substituted "1985" for "1983"; in (2)(a) through (2)(c) before "2-18-311" deleted "[the adjusted schedules under]", and substituted "48th legislature" for "47th legislature".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "1983" for "1981" in (2); substituted "47th legislature" for "46th legislature" in (2)(a), (2)(b), and (2)(c).

2017 Amendment: Chapter 430 in (1) near middle substituted "fiscal year 2018" for "fiscal year 2016" and at end substituted "June 30, 2017" for "June 30, 2015"; in (2) substituted provision for negotiable implementation of plan for employees within collective bargaining unit for "An employee's base salary may be no less than the minimum salary of the pay band to which the employee's position is allocated"; and in (3) near middle of first sentence substituted "February 15, 2018" for "January 15, 2016", at end of first sentence substituted "1%" for "50 cents an hour", near middle of second sentence substituted "February 15, 2019" for "January 15, 2017", and at end of second sentence substituted "1%" for "50 cents an hour". Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

2015 Amendment: Chapter 438 in (1) substituted "2016" for "2014" and "2015" for "2013"; and in (3) substituted current text concerning employee base salary for "Funds appropriated under section 4, Chapter 385, Laws of 2013, must be used to increase the base pay for each employee. The base pay of employees must be increased as determined by the executive branch, including those subject to the provisions of Title 39, chapter 31, with particular attention to the lower pay bands and those who did not receive a base pay increase during the biennium beginning July 1, 2011." Amendment effective May 5, 2015.

2013 Amendment: Chapter 385 in (1) substituted "fiscal year 2014" for "fiscal year 2010" and substituted "June 30, 2013" for "June 30, 2009"; and in (3) substituted current language concerning base pay increase for "All full-time employees whose base pay is $45,000 or less annually will receive a one-time lump-sum payment of $450 for the first full pay period after July 1, 2009. All part-time employees who are regularly scheduled to work 20 hours or more per week and whose base pay is $21.635 per hour or less will receive a one-time lump-sum payment of $225 for the first full pay period after July 1, 2009." Amendment effective July 1, 2013.

Reporting of Implementation of Pay Increase: Section 5, Ch. 385, L. 2013, provided: "By December 31, 2013, and December 31, 2014, each agency shall submit to the legislative finance committee and the legislative fiscal analyst a report in an electronic format on the implementation of pay increases under 2-18-303 and the impacts of them on the lower pay bands."

2009 Amendment: Chapter 7 in (1) after "year" substituted "2010" for "2008" and after "June 30" substituted "2009" for "2007"; deleted former (1)(b) that read: "Effective on the first day of the first complete pay period that includes October 1, 2007, the base salary of each employee must be increased by 3%. Effective on the first day of the first complete pay period that includes October 1, 2008, the base salary of each employee must be increased by 3%"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2)(a) Effective October 1, 2007, and October 1, 2008, the appropriation that represents 6/10 of 1% of the salary for each full-time equivalent position must be allocated to each agency to distribute to its employees for reasons including but not limited to market progression, job performance, or employee competencies.

(b) To the extent that this distribution applies to employees within a collective bargaining unit, the distribution is a negotiable subject under Title 39, chapter 31. The amount of money allocated to agencies and available to distribute to members of each bargaining unit must be determined by multiplying the salaries of the total number of full-time equivalents in the bargaining unit by 6/10 of 1%.

(c) The allocation described in subsection (2)(b) may not be distributed to members of a collective bargaining unit until the employer's collective bargaining representative receives written notice that the employee's collective bargaining unit has ratified a pay addendum to the collective bargaining agreement specifying the distribution"; in (2) after "less than the" substituted "minimum salary of the pay band to which the employee's position is allocated" for "pay band entry salary for the employee's assigned occupation"; inserted (3) providing one-time lump-sum payments for certain employees; in (4)(a) near beginning after "pay" substituted "adjustment" for "increase"; deleted former (5) that read: "The current wage or salary of an employee may not be reduced by the implementation of the broadband pay plan"; in (5)(a) in first sentence after "salaries" deleted "and biennial salary increases", in second sentence after "base salary" deleted "and any biennial salary increase", and in fourth sentence at beginning after "base salary" deleted "and biennial salary increases"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2009.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 deleted former (1) that read: "(1) The pay schedule provided in 2-18-312 must be implemented as follows:

(a) The pay schedule provided in 2-18-312 indicates the entry salary and market salary for each grade for positions classified under the provisions of part 2 of this chapter.

(b) Each employee newly hired by the state of Montana must be hired at the entry rate, except as provided in subsections (5) through (9)"; in (1)(a) near middle substituted "2008" for "2006" and at end substituted "2007" for "2005"; in (1)(b) near middle of first sentence substituted "October 1, 2007" for "an employee's anniversary date during the fiscal year ending June 30, 2006" and at end substituted "3%" for "3.5% or $1,005, based upon 2,080 annual hours in a pay status, whichever is greater", in second sentence near middle substituted "October 1, 2008" for "an employee's anniversary date during the fiscal year ending June 30, 2007" and at end substituted "3%" for "4% or $1,188, based upon 2,080 annual hours in a pay status, whichever is greater", and deleted former last sentence that read: "For employees hired on or before September 30, 2005, the anniversary date is October 1"; inserted (2) regarding allocation of appropriation effective October 1, 2007, and October 1, 2008; in (3) inserted "pay band" and at end substituted "occupation" for "grade"; deleted former (2) that read: "(2) The pay schedule provided in 2-18-312 and the provisions of subsections (1)(a) through (1)(d) of this section do not apply to those employees who are members of collective bargaining units that have collectively bargained to participate in a separate or alternative classification and pay plan or who are covered under subsections (5) and (6) of this section"; in (4)(a)(i) at beginning deleted "If the legislature authorizes a pay increase for state employees", near middle inserted "provided for in subsection (1)(b)", inserted "collective", and after "has ratified a" deleted "completely integrated"; in (4)(a)(ii) near beginning after "ratification of a" deleted "completely integrated"; in (4)(b) substituted "adjustments provided for in this section" for "pay schedules and adjustments provided in 2-18-312 and"; in (5) at end substituted "broadband pay plan" for "pay schedules provided for in 2-18-312"; deleted former (5) through (8) that read: "(5) The department may authorize a separate pay schedule for classes of medical professionals if the rates provided in 2-18-312 are not sufficient to attract and retain fully licensed and qualified professionals.

(6) (a) The department may develop and implement an alternative pay and classification plan for certain classes, occupations, and work units. Pay for employees in the alternative pay and classification plan may be established and changed based on demonstrated competencies and accomplishments, on the labor market, and on other situations defined by the department.

(b) To the extent that the plan applies to employees within a collective bargaining unit, the implementation of the plan is a negotiable subject under 39-31-305.

(7) The department may develop programs that enable the department to mitigate problems associated with difficult recruitment, retention, transfer, or other exceptional circumstances. To the extent that the program applies to employees within a collective bargaining unit, it is a negotiable subject under 39-31-305.

(8) The department shall review the competitiveness of the compensation provided to all occupations under this part. If the department finds that substantial problems exist with recruitment and retention because of inadequate salaries when compared to competing employers, the department may establish criteria allowing an adjustment in pay or classification to mitigate the problems. To the extent that these adjustments apply to employees within a collective bargaining unit, the implementation of these adjustments is a negotiable subject under 39-31-305"; in (6)(a) in first sentence near end substituted "the broadband pay plan" for "an alternative pay and classification plan"; in (6)(d) at beginning deleted "(i) Except as provided in subsection (9)(d)(ii)"; deleted former (6)(d)(ii) that read: "(ii) The first survey must be completed by January 1, 2006, for the plan to be implemented for the first full pay period in fiscal year 2007"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 238 in (1)(d) at end after "hour" deleted "or by a lesser amount so that the employee's base salary after the increase does not exceed the maximum salary of the pay grade as provided in subsection (1)(f)"; in (1)(f) at beginning inserted "Subject to subsection (1)(d)" and near middle after "that amount" inserted "plus an amount equal to 25 cents an hour" (amendment in (1)(f) rendered void by Ch. 421 amendment); and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 15, 2005.

Chapter 421 in (1)(c) after "fiscal year" substituted "2006" for "2004" and at end substituted "2005" for "2003"; in (1)(d) in first sentence after "includes" deleted "January 1, 2005" and inserted reference to employee's anniversary date during fiscal year ending June 30, 2006, and after "increased by" substituted reference to 3.5% or $1,005, whichever is greater for "an amount equal to 25 cents an hour or by a lesser amount so that the employee's base salary after the increase does not exceed the maximum salary of the pay grade as provided in subsection (1)(f)", inserted second sentence increasing salaries in fiscal year ending June 30, 2007, by 4% or $1,188, and inserted third sentence establishing anniversary date of October 1 for employees hired on or before September 30, 2005; deleted former (1)(f) that read: "(f) The maximum salary for each grade is determined by subtracting the entry salary from the market salary and adding that amount to the market salary"; in (2) after "provisions of" substituted "subsections (1)(a) through (1)(d)" for "subsection (1)" and after "those" substituted reference to employees in collective bargaining units or those covered in subsections (5) and (6) for "teachers or blue-collar occupations compensated under the pay schedules provided in 2-18-313 and 2-18-315"; deleted former (3) that read: "(3) The pay schedules provided in 2-18-313 and 2-18-315 must be implemented as follows:

(a) (i) The pay schedules provided for in 2-18-313 indicate the annual compensation for teachers employed under the authority of the department of corrections or the department of public health and human services for fiscal years 2004 and 2005.

(ii) The compensation of each teacher on July 1, 2003, is the same as it was on June 30, 2003.

(iii) Effective on the first day of the first complete pay period that includes January 1, 2005, the base salary of each teacher employed in the department of public health and human services and the department of corrections is the amount provided for the teacher's step and education level under 2-18-313(2). This subsection (3)(a)(iii) does not provide for a step advancement.

(b) The pay schedules provided in 2-18-315 indicate the maximum hourly compensation for fiscal years ending June 30, 2004, and June 30, 2005, for employees in apprentice trades and crafts and other blue-collar occupations recognized in the state blue-collar classification plan who are members of units that have collectively bargained separate classification and pay plans.

(c) The compensation of each employee on the first day of the first pay period in each fiscal year is that amount corresponding to the grade occupied on the last day of the preceding fiscal year"; deleted former (4)(a)(ii) that read: "(ii) If ratification of a completely integrated collective bargaining agreement, as required by subsection (4)(a)(i), is not completed by the date on which a legislatively authorized pay increase is implemented, retroactivity to that date may be negotiated"; in (3)(b) after "2-18-312" deleted "2-18-313, 2-18-315"; in (4) after "2-18-312" deleted "2-18-313, and 2-18-315"; inserted (9) providing for alternative pay and classification plan for highway patrol officers; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 26, 2005.

The amendments to this section made by sec. 2, Ch. 6, L. 2005, and sec. 1, Ch. 421, L. 2005, were rendered void by sec. 7, Ch. 421, L. 2005, a coordination section.

Name Change — Directions to Code Commissioner: Pursuant to sec. 18, Ch. 36, L. 2005, in (9)(a) in third sentence substituted "sheriff's offices" for "sheriff departments".

Retroactive Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 238, L. 2005, provided: "[This act] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to January 1, 2005."

Preamble: The preamble attached to Ch. 421, L. 2005, provided: "WHEREAS, it is in the best interests of the citizens of Montana to travel safely on the streets and highways of Montana; and

WHEREAS, the Legislature created the Montana Highway Patrol to protect and serve the people of Montana and to ensure their safety when traveling on Montana's roadways; and

WHEREAS, the population of the State of Montana has increased by 223,412 persons (by 32%) in the past 30 years; and

WHEREAS, the total number of vehicles registered in the State of Montana has increased from 668,717 to 1,059,565 (by 53%) in the past 30 years; and

WHEREAS, economic loss to the citizens of the State of Montana associated with motor vehicle crashes increased from $106.6 million in 1973 to $780 million in 2003 (by 732%); and

WHEREAS, the Montana Highway Patrol had 220 uniformed officers 30 years ago and has only 206 today, despite an increase of 5 billion highway miles a year driven over that same period and despite being given additional statutory law enforcement obligations; and

WHEREAS, the standing House and Senate State Administration Committees of the 58th Legislature, recognizing the unique nature of law enforcement services and the importance of retaining qualified law enforcement personnel, directed the Attorney General to report to the State Administration and Veterans' Affairs Interim Committee on recruitment and retention efforts, to conduct a salary survey, and to develop draft legislation to implement recommendations; and

WHEREAS, in addition to the salary survey conducted by the Attorney General, the Montana Legislative Audit Division conducted a separate salary survey of the Sheriff departments in the eight counties where the Montana Highway Patrol district offices are located, including the headquarters in Helena; and

WHEREAS, an entry-level officer for the Montana Highway Patrol is paid $4.50 an hour ($9,360 a year) less than the average entry-level officer in those eight county Sheriff's departments; and

WHEREAS, the Montana Highway Patrol continues to lose officers to other law enforcement agencies after absorbing the cost of training those officers, which places additional hardships on the patrol; and

WHEREAS, in the past 11 years, 62 of the 80 officers (78%) that left the Montana Highway Patrol for nonretirement purposes went to other law enforcement agencies for higher salaries; and

WHEREAS, Montana Highway Patrol officer positions have been placed into the alternative pay and classification plan, which allows market-based salary survey adjustments, to recruit and retain officers; and

WHEREAS, market-based salary information from county Sheriff departments, which are recruiting and hiring Montana Highway Patrol officers because of higher salaries, is readily available to establish market-based salary rates to compensate Montana Highway Patrol officers and reduce attrition in these positions; and

WHEREAS, this act is intended to allow the Montana Highway Patrol to be in a position to hire, train, and retain competent officers to ensure that Montana roadways are kept safe for all travelers."

2003 Amendment: Chapter 552 in (1)(c) substituted "2004" for "2002" and "2003" for "2001"; deleted former (1)(d) that read: "(d) Effective on the first day of the pay period that includes an employee's anniversary date during the fiscal years ending June 30, 2002, and June 30, 2003, the employee's base salary must be increased by 4% or by a lesser amount so that the employee's base salary after the increase does not exceed the maximum salary of the pay grade as provided in subsection (1)(f). An employee's base salary increases resulting from subsection (1)(e) and this subsection may not exceed a maximum of 4% in each fiscal year. For employees hired on or before September 30, 1994, the anniversary date is October 1"; inserted (1)(d) relating to 25 cents an hour pay increase; in (3)(a)(i) substituted "2004" for "2002" and "2005" for "2003"; in (3)(a)(ii) in two places substituted "2003" for "2001"; deleted former (3)(a)(iii) that read: "(iii) On the first day of the first pay period that includes October 1 of each fiscal year, a teacher employed under the authority of the department of public health and human services or the department of corrections before October 1, 1994, shall advance one step on the appropriate pay schedule adopted in 2-18-313. A teacher hired after October 1, 1994, shall advance on the teacher's actual anniversary date"; inserted (3)(a)(iii) relating to certain teachers; in (3)(b) substituted "2004" for "2002" and "2005" for "2003"; in (4)(a)(i) at beginning inserted "If the legislature authorizes a pay increase for state employees" and at end deleted "covering the biennium ending June 30, 2003"; in (4)(a)(ii) and (4)(a)(iii) substituted "the date on which a legislatively authorized pay increase is implemented" for "July 1, 2001"; near end of (4)(a)(iii) after "that they were receiving" deleted "as of June 30, 2001"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2003.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 553 in (1)(c) substituted "2002" for "2000" and "2001" for "1999"; in (1)(d) in first sentence substituted "2002" for "2000" and "2003" for "2001" and in first and second sentences substituted "4%" for "3%"; in (3)(a)(i) substituted "years 2002 and 2003" for "years 2000 and 2001"; in (3)(a)(ii) in two places substituted "2001" for "1999"; in (3)(b) substituted "2002" and

"2003" for "2000" and "2001"; in (4)(a)(i) substituted "2003" for "2001"; in (4)(a)(ii) and (4)(a)(iii) substituted "2001" for "1999"; in (6) substituted "classes of medical professionals" for "medical doctors" and at end substituted "qualified professionals" for "qualified physicians"; in (7)(a) in first sentence after "classification plan" deleted "through demonstration projects"; in (7)(b) in two places substituted reference to a plan for reference to a project; deleted former (7)(b)(i) that read: "(i) The department may develop demonstration projects for protective service and public safety classes, information technology classes, brand inspector classes in the department of livestock, managers in the department of commerce, counselors and resident care aides at the Montana chemical dependency center, health care facility surveyors at the department of public health and human services, classes in the department of revenue, and any other class or work unit appropriate for a demonstration project, as determined by the department"; deleted former (7)(b)(iii) that read: "(iii) No employee whose position is excepted from the provisions of this section under this subsection (7)(b) will receive a pay increase for the fiscal years ending 2000 and 2001 less than that prescribed under this section"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 558 in (1)(c) substituted "fiscal year 2000" for "fiscal year 1998" and at end substituted "June 30, 1999" for "June 30, 1997"; in (1)(d) at beginning substituted first two sentences providing for increasing employee's base salary during fiscal years ending June 30, 2000, and June 30, 2001, for former sentence that read: "Effective on the first day of the pay period that includes an employee's anniversary date during the fiscal years ending June 30, 1998, and June 30, 1999, an employee's market ratio must be compared to the target market ratio in the matrix that corresponds to the employee's grade level and completed years of uninterrupted state service"; deleted former (1)(d)(ii) that provided matrix for target market ratios (see 1999 Session Law for former text); deleted (1)(d)(iii) that read: "(iii) On the first day of the pay period that includes an employee's anniversary date during the fiscal years ending June 30, 1998, and June 30, 1999, the employee's base salary must be increased to the greater of:

(A) the market salary for the employee's grade multiplied by the target ratio that corresponds to the employee's grade level and completed years of uninterrupted state service not to exceed 4%;

(B) if under subsection (1)(d)(iii)(A), progression from one target market ratio to the next exceeds 3%, then the employee's base salary increased by the amount of that progression plus 1%; or

(C) the employee's base salary as it was on the last day of the pay period immediately preceding the pay period that includes the employee's anniversary date, plus 1%"; in (3)(a)(i) substituted "fiscal years 2000 and 2001" for "fiscal years 1998 and 1999"; in (3)(a)(ii) substituted "July 1, 1999" for "July 1, 1997" and substituted "June 30, 1999" for "June 30, 1997"; in (3)(b)(i) substituted "June 30, 2000, and June 30, 2001" for "June 30, 1998, and June 30, 1999"; in (4)(a)(i) substituted "June 30, 2001" for "June 30, 1999"; in (4)(a)(ii) substituted "July 1, 1999" for "July 1, 1997"; in (4)(a)(iii) substituted "July 1, 1999" for "July 1, 1997" and substituted "June 30, 1999" for "June 30, 1997"; at end of (6) after "physicians" deleted "at the state institutions"; inserted (7) directing department to develop and implement alternative pay and classification plan through demonstration projects for certain classes, occupations, and work units; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1997 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 42 in (1)(c)(i), (3)(a)(i), and (3)(b)(ii) deleted reference to fiscal year 1996; in (2), (3), (4)(b), and (5) deleted reference to 2-18-314; deleted former (1)(c), (1)(d)(iii), and former (3)(a)(ii) that addressed pay calculations for 1995 and fiscal year 1996; in (2), after "teachers", deleted "liquor store occupations"; deleted former (3)(b) that referred to pay schedules provided in 2-18-314 and compensation of employees covered by those schedules; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Because certain amendments in Ch. 42 were intended to delete material no longer in effect because it related to former years and that material was used in Ch. 417 as a basis for Ch. 417 amendments, the material deleted in Ch. 42 was retained in this section.

Chapter 417 in (1)(c) substituted "1998" for "1996", substituted "employee is entitled" for "employee hired before July 1, 1995, is entitled", substituted "1997" for "1995", and at end deleted "plus, on the employee's anniversary date that occurs on or after September 30, 1995, the increases provided in subsection (1)(d), if applicable"; in (2)(d) substituted "1998" for "1996" and "1999" for "1997" and after "matrix" deleted "in subsection (1)(d)(ii)"; in (1)(d)(ii) substituted "The matrix for the target market ratios is as follows" for "As provided in subsection (1)(d)(i), the following matrix must be used to compare an employee's market ratio to the target market ratio that corresponds to the employee's grade level and completed years of uninterrupted state service"; in (1)(d)(iii), at beginning, deleted "If", substituted "1998 and "June 30, 1999" for "1996", after "June 30, 1999" deleted "the employee's market ratio is less than the target market ratio that corresponds to the employee's grade level and completed years of uninterrupted state service", and near end substituted "greater of" for "lesser of"; in (1)(d)(iii)(A), at end, inserted "not to exceed 4%"; inserted (1)(d)(iii)(B) relating to progression through target market ratios; in (1)(d)(iii)(C), at end, substituted "the employee's anniversary date, plus 1%" for "October 1, 1995, plus 5%"; deleted (1)(d)(iv) that read: "(iv) If, on the first day of the pay period that includes an employee's anniversary date during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1997, the employee's market ratio is less than the target market ratio that corresponds to the employee's grade level and completed years of uninterrupted state service, the employee's base salary must be increased to the lesser of:

(A) the market salary for the employee's grade multiplied by the target ratio that corresponds to the employee's grade level and completed years of uninterrupted state service; or

(B) the employee's base salary as it was on the last day of the pay period immediately preceding the pay period that includes October 1, 1996, plus 6%"; deleted former (1)(f) that read: "(f) an employee's base salary may not exceed the maximum salary for the employee's grade. The salary of an employee may not be reduced because of this provision"; deleted (1)(h) that read: "(h) An employee's market ratio, as it was on the last day of the pay period immediately preceding the pay period that includes October 1, 1996, may not be reduced as a result of the adjustment of the pay ranges provided in 2-18-312(2)"; in (2), after "teachers", deleted "liquor store occupations" and after "2-18-313" substituted "and" for "through"; in introductory clause of (3), after "2-18-313", substituted "and" for "through"; in (3)(a)(i) substituted "1998 and 1999" for "1996 and 1997"; in (3)(a)(ii), in two places, substituted "1997" for "1995"; in (3)(a)(iii), after "human services", inserted "or the department of corrections"; deleted former (3)(a)(iv), (3)(a)(v), and (3)(b) that read: "(iv) On the first day of the first full pay period during the month that includes the teacher's anniversary date, a teacher employed under the authority of the department of corrections shall advance one step on the appropriate pay schedule adopted in 2-18-313.

(v) On the first day of the first pay period that includes October 1 of each fiscal year, a teacher employed by the Montana school for the deaf and blind shall advance one step on the teacher pay matrix used by the school.

(b) (i) The pay schedules provided in 2-18-314 indicate the maximum hourly compensation for fiscal years ending June 30, 1996, and June 30, 1997, for those employees in liquor store occupations who have collectively bargained separate classification and pay plans.

(ii) The compensation of each employee on the first day of the first pay period in fiscal year 1996 or 1997 is that amount corresponding to the grade occupied on the last day of the preceding fiscal year"; in (3)(b)(i) substituted "1998" for "1996" and "1999" for "1997"; in (3)(b)(ii) substituted "each fiscal year" for "fiscal year 1996 or 1997"; in (4)(a)(i) substituted "1999" for "1997"; in (4)(a)(ii) and (4)(a)(iii), in three places, substituted "1997" for "1995"; in (4)(b) substituted "2-18-312, 2-18-313, 2-18-315" for "2-18-312 through 2-18-315"; in (5) substituted "2-18-312, 2-18-313, and 2-18-315" for "2-18-312 through 2-18-315"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 455 in (1)(a), after "and market salary", deleted "for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1994, and June 30, 1995"; in (1)(c), at beginning, deleted "Except as provided in subsection (1)(e)", substituted "1996" for "1994", in two places substituted "1995" for "1993", and inserted final clause regarding increases on employee's anniversary date; substituted (1)(d) regarding employee's market ratio at various grades and market salary for former (1)(d) that read: "(d) Except as provided in subsection (1)(e), on the first day of the first complete pay period in January 1995, each employee hired before January 1, 1995, is entitled to the amount of the employee's base salary as it was on December 31, 1994, plus 1.5%"; inserted (1)(h) regarding an employee's market ratio; in (3)(a)(i), after "annual compensation for", deleted "the contracted school term" and substituted "1996" for "1994" and "1997" for "1995"; in (3)(a)(ii) substituted "on July 1, 1995" for "on the first day of the first pay period in July 1993" and substituted "the same as it was on June 30, 1995" for "determined by the teacher's level of academic achievement and years of experience"; substituted (3)(a)(iii) and (3)(a)(iv) concerning institutional teachers for former (3)(a)(iii) and (3)(a)(iv) that read: "(iii) On the first day of the first complete pay period of each fiscal year, each teacher shall advance one step on the appropriate pay schedule adopted in 2-18-313.

(iv) On the first day of the first complete pay period of each fiscal year, each teacher employed by the Montana school for the deaf and blind shall advance one step on the teacher pay matrix used by the school"; inserted (3)(a)(v) regarding teachers employed by the Montana School for the Deaf and Blind; in (3)(b)(i), (3)(b)(ii), (3)(c)(i), and (3)(c)(ii) substituted "1996" for "1994" and "1997" for "1995"; inserted (4) regarding collective bargaining units and agreements; adjusted subsection references; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

Chapter 546 in (1)(a), after "market salary", deleted "for the fiscal years ending June 30, 1994, and June 30, 1995"; deleted former (1)(c) that read: "(c) Except as provided in subsection (1)(e), on the first day of the first complete pay period in fiscal year 1994, each employee hired before July 1, 1993, is entitled to the amount of the employee's base salary as it was on June 30, 1993"; deleted former (1)(d) (see Ch. 455 note); at end of (3)(a)(i) substituted "department of corrections or the department of public health and human services" for "department of corrections and human services or the department of family services for fiscal years 1994 and 1995"; deleted former (3)(a)(ii) that read: "(ii) The compensation of each teacher on the first day of the first pay period in July 1993 is determined by the teacher's level of academic achievement and years of experience"; in (3)(b)(i), after "compensation", deleted "for fiscal years ending June 30, 1994, and June 30, 1995"; in (3)(b)(ii), after "employee", deleted "on the first day of the first pay period in fiscal year 1994 or 1995"; in (3)(c)(i), after "compensation", deleted "for fiscal years ending June 30, 1994, and June 30, 1995"; in (3)(c)(ii), after "pay period", deleted "in fiscal year 1994 or 1995"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Other than the changes to reflect the revised agency names, the changes made by Ch. 546 were designed to remove obsolete language from this section. Chapter 455 rendered the same language effective by adding language and revising the dates of applicability. The Code Commissioner has retained the stricken language where necessary for the grammatical construction of the new language added by Ch. 455 and has reflected the agency function changes in Ch. 546.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 640 in (1)(a) substituted "1994" for "1992" and "1995" for "1993"; in (1)(b) substituted "subsections (6) and (7)" for "subsections (7) and (8)"; in (1)(c) and (1)(d) substituted "subsection (1)(e)" for "subsection (1)(g)"; in (1)(c) substituted "1994" for "1992" and in two places substituted "1993" for "1991"; deleted former (1)(c)(i) and (1)(c)(ii) that provided for a 60-cent-per-hour raise in 1991 and an additional 1/8 of 1% of the base salary, as it is after the 60-cent raise, for each percentage point that the base salary, as it is after the 60-cent raise, is below the market salary for the grade; in (1)(d), at end, substituted "January 1995, each employee hired before January 1, 1995, is entitled to the amount of the employee's base salary as it was on December 31, 1994, plus 1.5%" for "fiscal year 1993, each employee hired before July 1, 1992, is entitled to the amount of the employee's base salary as it was on June 30, 1992"; deleted (1)(d)(i) through (1)(d)(iii) that provided for a 45-cent-per-hour raise in July 1993, plus 1/8 of 1% for each percentage point that the base salary, as it is after the raise, is below the market salary for the grade, minus 20 cents an hour; deleted former (1)(e) and (1)(f) that provided for a 20-cent-per-hour raise in January 1993 and for a determination of the number of percentage points that a salary is below the market salary by dividing the salary by the market salary for the grade, multiplying by 100, and subtracting that total from 100; in (1)(f), at beginning of first sentence, deleted "Except as provided in subsections (5) through (8)", substituted "maximum" for "market", after "salary" deleted "by a percentage greater than the percentage that the market salary", and near end, before "grade", deleted "grade exceeds the entry salary for that"; inserted (1)(g) stating that each grade's maximum salary is the entry salary subtracted from the market salary, plus the difference; in (3)(a)(i) and (3)(a)(ii) substituted "1994", "1995", and "1993" for "1992", "1993", and "1991", respectively; in (3)(a)(iii), before "pay period", inserted "complete"; inserted (3)(a)(iv) stating that at the beginning of each year, teachers at the school for the deaf and blind advance one step on the school's pay matrix; in (3)(b)(i), (3)(b)(ii), (3)(c)(i), and (3)(c)(ii) substituted "1994" and "1995" for "1992" and "1993"; deleted former (4) that provided that a bargaining unit member could not receive raises until the unit ratified an agreement for the biennium ending June 30, 1993, and that if an agreement was not reached by July 1, 1991, retroactivity to that date could be negotiated and unit members received the salary they received on June 30, 1991; in (6) deleted provision that to maintain pay plan equity, if a majority of registered nurses classified under part 2 of this chapter are granted a pay plan exception through a collective bargaining agreement, then all other classified registered nurses must receive the same salary, except that no nurse's salary could be reduced; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1991 Amendments — Instructions to Code Commissioner: The Code Commissioner changed "department of institutions" to "department of corrections and human services", pursuant to sec. 1, Ch. 262, L. 1991, directing the Code Commissioner to make the change wherever necessary in the Montana Code Annotated. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Chapter 720 throughout section changed references to fiscal years to reflect the current biennium; in (1)(a) substituted "entry salary and market salary" for "annual compensation" and after "grade" deleted "and step"; substituted (1)(b) concerning hire at entry rate with certain exceptions for former text that read: "Each new employee shall advance from step 1 to step 2 of a grade after successfully completing 6 months of probationary service. The anniversary date of an employee must be established at the end of the probationary period in accordance with rules promulgated by the department"; substituted (1)(c), (1)(d), and (1)(e) concerning computation of pay in fiscal years 1992 and 1993 for former text that read: "(i) The compensation of each employee on the first day of the first pay period in fiscal year 1990 is that amount corresponding to the grade and step occupied on the last day of fiscal year 1989.

(ii) The compensation of each employee on the first day of the first pay period in fiscal year 1991 is that amount corresponding to the grade and step occupied on the last day of fiscal year 1990"; inserted (1)(f) concerning market salary adjustment; inserted (1)(g) providing a minimum base salary; inserted (1)(h) limiting base salary; in (3)(a)(ii), at end, substituted "years of experience" for "the step occupied on June 30, 1990"; substituted (3)(a)(iii) concerning teacher step advancement for former text that read: "(iii) On the first day of the first pay period in July 1989, each teacher shall advance three steps on the appropriate pay schedule for fiscal year 1990 from the step that he occupied on June 30, 1989"; in (7) inserted last sentence concerning pay exception for nurses; in (8), near beginning before "occupations", deleted "registered nurses and other"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

1989 Amendment: In (1)(a) substituted "1990" and "1991" for "1988" and "1989"; near middle of (1)(c)(i) substituted "1990 is" for "1988 shall be" and at end substituted "1989" for "1987"; in (1)(c)(ii) substituted "1991 is" for "1989 shall be" and at end substituted "1990" for "1988"; near middle of (2), before "teachers", deleted "institutional"; at end of (3)(a)(i) substituted "1990" and "1991" for "1988" and "1989"; substituted (3)(a)(ii) regarding teacher pay for former subsection that read: "The compensation of each teacher on the first day of the first pay period in July 1987 shall be that amount which corresponds to his level of academic achievement and the step occupied on June 30, 1987"; in (3)(a)(iii) substituted "1990 is" for "1988 shall be", before "achievement" inserted "academic", and at end substituted "1990" for "1987"; in (3)(b)(i), (3)(b)(ii), (3)(c)(i), and (3)(c)(ii) substituted "1990" and "1991" for "1988" and "1989"; at end of (4)(a)(i) substituted "1991" for "1989"; in (4)(a)(ii) and (4)(a)(iii) substituted "1989" for "1987"; inserted (8) regarding adjustment after a review of competitiveness; corrected internal references; and made minor changes in phraseology and punctuation. Amendment effective May 11, 1989.

1987 Amendments: Chapter 609 in (3)(a)(i), after "department of institutions", inserted "or the department of family services".

Chapter 621 in (3)(a)(i) through (3)(a)(iii) set all yearly references forward 2 years.

Chapter 661 throughout section, except in (3)(a), changed "1985" to "1987", "1986" to "1988", and "1987" to "1989"; in (1), (2), and (6), after "provided in", deleted "2-18-311 and"; in (1)(a), (4), and (5) changed "2-18-311" to "2-18-312"; in (1)(a), after "June 30", changed "1986" to "1988, and June 30, 1989"; deleted former (1)(b) that read: "(b) The pay schedule provided in 2-18-312 indicates the annual compensation for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1987, for each grade and step for positions classified under the provisions of part 2 of this chapter"; in (1)(c)(ii) changed "1985" to "1988"; deleted former (1)(d)(iii) that read: "(iii) In compliance with rules adopted to implement this part, each employee is eligible on his anniversary date to advance one step in the pay matrix for fiscal year 1987. However, if the employee's anniversary date falls between (inclusive) July 1 and the first day of the first pay period of fiscal year 1987, he will advance one step on the first day of that pay period"; in (4)(b), after "provided in", changed "2-18-313" to "2-18-312"; and made minor changes in phraseology. Amendments to (3)(a) voided by sec. 4, Ch. 621, L. 1987, but see amendment note for Ch. 621.

1986 Amendment: The amendment was contingent on renegotiation of collective bargaining agreements; since such contingency didn't occur, the amendment terminated.

1985 Amendment: Throughout section (except (1)(d)(ii) and (iii)) substituted "1985" for "1983", "1986" for "1984", and "1987" for "1985"; in (1)(d)(ii) substituted "1985" for "1984"; in (1)(d)(iii), in first sentence substituted "1987" for "1984 and fiscal year 1985", and in second sentence substituted "1987" for "1984 or 1985, as the case may be".

1983 Amendment: Throughout section before each cite or series of cites (except at end of (7)), deleted "[the adjusted schedule under]" or "[the adjusted schedules under]"; throughout section (except first sentence of (1)(d)(i)) substituted "1984" for "1982" and "1985" for "1983"; in (1)(d)(i), (3)(a)(ii), (4)(a)(ii), and (4)(a)(iii) substituted "1983" for "1981"; in (1)(d)(iii) at end of first sentence substituted "for fiscal year 1984 and fiscal year 1985" for "each fiscal year".

1981 Amendment: Substituted "1982" for "1980" in (1), (3)(a)(i), (3)(b) and (3)(c); substituted "1983" for "1981" in (1), (3)(a)(i), (3)(b), (3)(c), and (4); substituted "1981" for "1979" in (1)(d), at the end of (3)(a)(ii) and (4); substituted "1981" for "1980" in (3)(a)(ii); substituted "first pay period in July, 1982" for "first pay period in July, 1981" in (3)(a)(iii); substituted "step" for "grade" in (3)(a)(ii) and (iii); made minor grammatical changes.

Attorney General's Opinions

First Pay Period in Fiscal Year: The phrase "first pay period in" a fiscal year means the first pay period any part of which lies within the fiscal year. Thus, the first pay period of fiscal year 1981 begins June 29, 1980, requiring the use of the pay matrix at 2-18-312 (now repealed) beginning that day. 38 A.G. Op. 70 (1980).

2-18-304. Longevity allowance.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 81 in (1)(a) after reference to 2-18-303 deleted "or 2-18-312"; in (1)(b) inserted "10 years of uninterrupted state service"; and made minor changes in style. Section 24(2) of Ch. 81 provided that this section is effective on the first day of the first full pay period in fiscal year 2008.

Applicability: Section 25(1), Ch. 81, L. 2007, provided: "(1) [Section 12] [2-18-304] applies to all current state employees who have 10 or more years of uninterrupted service."

2005 Amendment: Chapter 6 in (1) near beginning after "2-18-312" deleted "2-18-313, or 2-18-315"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2005.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 558 inserted (1)(b) increasing longevity allowance at 15- and 20-year increments; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1999.

1997 Amendments: Chapter 42 deleted (1)(a)(i) that applied to longevity allowances calculated in 1995; and in (1)(a) deleted reference to 2-18-314. Amendment effective March 12, 1997.

Chapter 339 inserted (3) providing that for the purposes of calculating longevity, employment as a short-term worker does not apply toward years of service. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Chapter 417 deleted (1)(a)(i) that read: "(i) Effective July 1, 1995, through the last day of the pay period immediately preceding the pay period that includes October 1, 1995, in addition to the compensation provided for in 2-18-303, 2-18-312, 2-18-313, 2-18-314, or 2-18-315, each employee who has completed 5 years of uninterrupted state service must receive 9/10 of 1% of the employee's base salary multiplied by the number of completed, contiguous 5-year periods of uninterrupted state service"; and in (1)(a), at beginning, deleted "Effective on the first day of the pay period that includes October 1, 1995" and after "2-18-313" deleted "2-18-314". Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1995 Amendment: Chapter 455 in (1)(a)(i), at beginning, inserted first clause providing effective dates of compensation, inserted "2-18-303", and at end, after "must receive", deleted "the greater of"; deleted former (1)(a)(i) that read: "(i) $10 a month"; inserted (1)(a)(ii) regarding longevity pay; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 14, 1995.

1991 Amendment: In (1)(a)(ii) substituted "9/10 of 1% of the employee's base salary" for "10% of the difference between the base compensation for his grade and step (where applicable) and the base compensation for the next highest grade and corresponding step (where applicable)"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 29, 1991.

1987 Amendment: In (1), before "2-18-312", deleted "2-18-311".

1986 Amendment: The amendment was contingent on renegotiation of collective bargaining agreements; since such contingency didn't occur, the amendment terminated.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) providing method to determine years of service.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 593, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to service performed after July 31, 1984."

1983 Amendment: In (1) before "2-18-311" deleted "[the adjusted schedules under]".

Case Notes

Prospective Legislative Change in Compensation: An employee's right to compensation vests or accrues only after the employee has performed the required services for that pay period. Thus, highway patrol officers had no vested rights to continue to receive 1% longevity increases in salary that were established by a statute repealed when the state pay plan was established and when their base pay under the pay plan included earned longevity, because such prospective alteration of salary prior to vesting is permissible. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

Statutes Fixing Terms and Conditions of State Employment — Presumed Not to Be Contractual: Highway patrolmen had no vested right to receive 1% longevity increases established by a statute repealed when the state pay plan was instituted. Unless the circumstances and language of the statute manifest a legislative intent to create private rights of a contractual nature, enforceable against the state, a statute fixing certain terms of public employment, such as salary or compensation, is presumed not to create contractual rights but merely to declare a policy to be pursued until the Legislature declares otherwise. In re the Wage Appeal of Highway Patrol Officers v. Bd. of Personnel Appeals, 208 M 33, 676 P2d 194, 41 St. Rep. 154 (1984).

Attorney General's Opinions

"Year of Service": A state employee must be in a pay status for 2,080 hours in order to be credited with a year of service for longevity accrual purposes. (Annotator's note: This was decided prior to 1985 amendment.) 40 A.G. Op. 61 (1984), overruled in 48 A.G. Op. 19 (2000), in which, pursuant to Phillips v. Lake County, 222 M 42, 721 P2d 326 (1986), the term "year of service" was construed to mean a calendar year.

2-18-306. Determination of weekly or hourly pay rate.

Case Notes

Inclusion of District Construction Allowance in Base Pay for Purposes of Calculating Overtime Pay: Plaintiff employees' union sought a declaratory judgment that the district construction allowance (DCA) paid to eligible state employees should be included in their base pay for purposes of calculating overtime compensation. The District Court found that the DCA should not be included in the base pay and granted summary judgment to defendant state agency. On appeal, the Supreme Court reversed, holding that the District Court erred in granting summary judgment. Defendant did not meet its burden of showing that the DCA fit plainly and unmistakenly within one of the exceptions to the federal Fair Labor Standards Act (FLSA), 29 U.S.C. 201 through 219. The FLSA exceptions are to be narrowly construed against the employer asserting them, and the employer bears the burden of showing that the employee fits within the terms of the exception. All remuneration that does not fall within one of the seven exclusionary clauses of the FLSA must be added into the total compensation received by the employee before the hourly pay rate is determined. In the present case, the expenses at issue were not incurred on the employer's behalf or for its benefit or convenience, but rather the money was reimbursement for normal, everyday expenses incurred by the employee for traveling to and from work and thus could not be excluded from the regular rate as reimbursement for travel expenses under 29 U.S.C. 207(e)(2). Further, the agency could not be relieved of liability under the Portal-to-Portal Act of 1947 (PPA), 29 U.S.C. 251, et seq., because under the PPA, that relief does not extend to an employer if the activity is compensable by either an express provision of a written or nonwritten contract in effect, at the time of the activity, between the employer and the employee, the employee's agent, or the collective bargaining representative, as was the case here. Mont. Pub. Employees Ass'n v. Dept. of Transportation, 1998 MT 17, 287 M 229, 954 P2d 21, 55 St. Rep. 60 (1998).

Award of Liquidated Damages Under Fair Labor Standards Act — Findings Regarding Damage Amount Proper: Absent a showing by the state that its act or omission giving rise to a violation of the Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 (FLSA) was in good faith and that the state had reasonable grounds for believing that the act or omission was not a violation of the FLSA, the award of liquidated damages under 29 U.S.C. 216(b) and 29 U.S.C. 260 by the District Court was not error or an abuse of discretion. Further, evidence by plaintiffs that they had worked hours for which they were not properly compensated, based on reasonable inferences, entitled them to damages based on a reasonable approximation. Tefft v. St., 271 M 82, 894 P2d 317, 52 St. Rep. 357 (1995).

Payroll Systems

Part Administrative Rules

Title 2, chapter 21, subchapter 31, ARM Payroll rules.

2-18-401. Central payroll system — department to provide for inclusion of agencies.

Compiler's Comments

1995 Amendments: Chapter 84 inserted third sentence that read: "The department shall adopt rules to implement the state central payroll system." Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

Chapter 308 at end of first sentence, after "system", deleted "and the vocational-technical centers"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1995.

1995 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 84, L. 1995, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because 2-18-102 requires the department of administration to adopt administrative rules containing personnel policies and 2-18-401 authorizes the department to adopt rules regarding the operation of the state central payroll system.

The legislature intends that rules containing personnel policies should address employee records, performance appraisals, grievances, discipline, reductions in force, recruitment, selection, and training.

The legislature intends that rules concerning payroll deductions should address the payroll deduction process and should set criteria for the kinds of payments that can be made through payroll deductions. Examples of types of payroll deductions that should be addressed by the rules are payment of insurance premiums, bank and credit union payments, charitable contributions, and wage garnishments."

1993 Amendment: Chapter 188 in two places substituted reference to Department of Administration for reference to State Auditor; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1993.

1989 Amendment: At end of first sentence inserted "including units of the Montana university system and the vocational-technical centers". Amendment effective April 20, 1989.

1989 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 592, L. 1989, provided: "This bill requires the state auditor to provide for the inclusion of the units of the university system and the vocational-technical centers into the state central payroll system.

The legislature recognizes the need to include the five vocational-technical centers under the central payroll system by July 1, 1989, when the vocational-technical center employees become employees of the board of regents.

The legislature further recognizes the complexity and enormity of the task of including all units of the Montana university system under the central payroll system. Therefore, the legislature intends that the information services division of the department of administration, in consultation with the state auditor and under the direction of the office of budget and program planning, conduct a study to be performed and finalized by November 1, 1989. The purpose of the study is to determine the necessary modifications and costs required for the university system to be included under a uniform state central payroll, personnel, and position control system. It is expected that the state auditor and the information services division of the department of administration work closely with the board of regents and each unit of the Montana university system to ensure that a systematic implementation of each unit on the uniform state central payroll, personnel, and position control system as approved by the office of budget and program planning be completed no later than January 1, 1991."

Appropriation: Section 3, Ch. 592, L. 1989, provided an appropriation to the Department of Administration and to the State Auditor to conduct the study and implement the state central payroll, personnel, and position control system for the University System and the vocational-technical centers. See 1989 Session Law for text of the appropriation.

Exception to County Travel Policy — Certain County Officers Entitled to Actual Travel Expenses: In attending the annual state convention for the office held, a County Attorney, Sheriff, Assessor, or Justice of the Peace is entitled to reimbursement for actual travel expenses. These expenses may exceed the levels established in a county travel policy. 42 A.G. Op. 124 (1988).

Authority of County Commissioners to Adopt Meal and Lodging Expense Regulations: Section 2-18-501 does not, by its own terms, govern meal and lodging expense payments to county officers or employees. Except as may otherwise be specified statutorily, a Board of County Commissioners with general governmental powers may adopt rules and regulations providing for payment or reimbursement of reasonable meal and lodging expenses incurred by county officers or employees in the performance of official duties. 40 A.G. Op. 77 (1984).

Travel Expenses of County Tax Appeal Board: Members of the County Tax Appeal Boards are only entitled to travel and per diem as provided by the general state travel and per diem statutes. 35 A.G. Op. 16 (1973).

Amendment effective March 22, 2007.

2005 Amendment: Chapter 112 in (2)(a) near end before "allowed" substituted "48.15% of the mileage rate" for "52% of the low mileage rate"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

2002 Amendment: Chapter 4 in (1) substituted references to motor vehicles for references to automobiles; in (2)(a) substituted language concerning reimbursement when using a privately owned motor vehicle for "When the individual is authorized to operate a privately owned vehicle even though a government-owned or leased vehicle is available, a rate of 3 cents less per mile than the mileage rate allowed by the United States internal revenue service for the current year must be paid"; in (2)(b) substituted references to motor vehicle for references to vehicle and inserted "and a notice of unavailability of a government-owned or leased motor vehicle or a specific exemption is attached to the travel claim, then"; inserted (3) relating to reimbursement for persons other than state employees; in (4) substituted "motor vehicle" for "automobile"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective August 13, 2002.

1999 Amendment: Chapter 558 in two places after "allowed by the United States internal revenue service" substituted "for the current year" for "for the preceding year". Amendment effective May 6, 1999.

Retroactive Applicability: Section 15, Ch. 558, L. 1999, provided: "[Section 8] [amending 2-18-503] applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to mileage expenses incurred on or after April 1, 1999."

1997 Amendment: Chapter 439 in (6), in first sentence, substituted "policies" for "rules" and inserted second sentence exempting policies from Montana Administrative Procedure Act; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to SB 370 (Ch. 622, L. 1979) provided: "A statement of intent is included with this Bill because the Committee wished to clarify the reasons for and conditions under which increased compensation is granted to owners of private aircraft when used for state business.

1. The intent of this increase is to permit adequate compensation for the use of private aircraft when used for state business.

2. It is also the intent of this Bill that the Department of Administration provide rules to insure the necessary computation and documentation of the savings effected by, or the necessity for, the use of private aircraft rather than the use of state motor vehicles for state business. This cost-efficiency documentation pertains to Section 1, subsection (6) of Senate Bill No. 370."

Case Notes

Entitlement of Judges to Actual and Necessary Expenses: Statutory travel expenses as applied to District Judges and Supreme Court Justices are unconstitutional as Judges are entitled to their actual and necessary expenses for travel, subsistence, and lodging to meet constitutional mandate that their salaries shall not be diminished during their term of office. In re Expense of Judges, 168 M 170, 541 P2d 345 (1975).

Mileage Payable — "Earnings" Within Exemption Statute: Mileage payable to County Assessor for official travel constitutes "earnings" within 25-13-614 exempting earnings necessary for debtor's family, the term being broader than "wages" and "salary". Williams v. Sorenson, 106 M 122, 75 P2d 784 (1938).

Attorney General's Opinions

Mileage Reimbursement for Constables: Parties involved in civil litigation in Justice's Court who desire to have legal process served by a constable should prepay the cost of service based upon the estimated round-trip mileage involved and the mileage reimbursement rate established in this section. A constable should be reimbursed for travel only upon the amount of miles actually traveled at the legally established rate. Any difference between the amount paid by the parties to litigation for service of process by a constable and the amount that the constable is reimbursed accrues to the benefit of the local governing body providing the service. 42 A.G. Op. 15 (1987).

Use of Private Vehicles on State Business — Rate of Reimbursement: A state agency may permit its employees to use personal vehicles while on state business regardless of the availability of state motor pool vehicles. A state employee who uses a personal vehicle on state business must be reimbursed as provided in the applicable subsection of 2-18-503, even though the rate may exceed the rate allowed for state motor pool vehicles. 37 A.G. Op. 172 (1978).

Mileage Rates for Juvenile Probation Officers: A county is not entitled to a refund from the state for mileage payments to juvenile probation officers in excess of 15 cents per mile. 37 A.G. Op. 55 (1977).

Expenses of Juvenile Probation Officers: The Montana Youth Court Act governs the payment of expenses and mileage for juvenile probation officers. 36 A.G. Op. 50 (1976).

Part 6
Leave Time

Part Attorney General's Opinions

Public Employee Supplementing Workers' Compensation With Sick Leave Classified Under Leave-With-Pay Status — Accrual of Vacation and Sick Leave Credits on Prorated Basis: Employees who supplement their workers' compensation benefits with accrued sick leave are classified under leave-with-pay status as to the sick leave hours converted to pay. As such, the employees are entitled to accrue vacation and sick leave credits for the converted hours on a prorated basis. 56 A.G. Op. 1 (2016).

Collective Bargaining Agreement — Days of Leave in Addition to Legal Holidays: The Board of County Commissioners may enter into an agreement with county employees that grants a day of paid leave in addition to the enumerated legal holidays. The collective bargaining provision in question merely provides an additional paid day off to attend the county fair for those employees covered by the contract. The provision does not make "fair day" a "legal holiday" nor does it suggest that an employee may accumulate "fair days" as vacation. The provision contravenes no statutory determination of employee benefits. The provision falls within the area that is a proper subject for collective bargaining. 38 A.G. Op. 116 (1980).

Employee Benefits: Title 2, ch. 18, part 6, establishes maximum and minimum benefits which may not be varied through collective bargaining or other negotiation. 38 A.G. Op. 20 (1979).

2017 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 175 in definition of short-term worker in (b)(i) at beginning substituted "may be" for "is" and after "legislative agency" inserted "without using a competitive process", in (b)(iv) substituted "a permanent position" for "another position", in (b)(v) after "benefits provided in this part" deleted "or the group insurance benefits provided in part 7", and inserted (b)(vi) regarding discharge without cause; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2017.

Chapter 370 in definition of employee near middle inserted "members of the instructional or scientific staff of a community college"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 9, 2017.

Effective Date — Applicability: Section 3, Ch. 370, L. 2017, provided: "[This act] is effective on passage and approval [approved May 9, 2017] and applies to contracts entered into and signed on or after [the effective date of this act]." Effective May 9, 2017.

2009 Amendment: Chapter 185 in introductory clause after "part" deleted "except 2-18-620"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective April 9, 2009.

Saving Clause: Section 5, Ch. 185, L. 2009, was a saving clause.

2007 Amendment: Chapter 503 inserted definitions of common association, contracting employer, member, and plan; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 11 in definition of short-term worker in (a) at beginning inserted "for the executive and judicial branches" and inserted (b) defining term for legislative branch; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

Chapter 75 in definition of employee at end inserted "and student interns"; inserted definition of student intern; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

Chapter 582 in definition of sick leave in (a) at end after "family or" deleted "for a permanent state employee who is eligible for parental leave under the provisions of 2-18-606" and inserted (b) outlining additional circumstances for which an employee is entitled to a leave of absence with pay for sick leave; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective May 6, 2005.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 314 in definition of agency inserted (b) excepting the state compensation insurance fund; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2001.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 339 inserted definition of short-term worker; deleted definition of sick pay plan (see 1997 Session Law for former text); in definition of permanent employee substituted "means a permanent employee as defined in 2-18-101" for "means an employee who is assigned to a position designated as permanent on the appropriate list of authorized positions referenced in 2-18-206 and approved as such in the biennium budget"; in definition of seasonal employee substituted "means a seasonal employee as defined in 2-18-101" for "means an employee assigned to a position designated as seasonal on the appropriate agency list of authorized positions referenced in 2-18-206 and for which the agency has a permanent need but which is interrupted by the seasonal nature of the assignment"; in definition of temporary employee substituted "means a temporary employee as defined in 2-18-101" for "means an employee assigned to a position designated as temporary on the appropriate agency list of authorized positions referenced in 2-18-206, created for a definite period of time not to exceed 9 months"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 260 inserted definition of holiday.

Chapter 756 at end of definition of sick leave inserted "or for a permanent state employee who is eligible for parental leave under the provisions of 2-18-606".

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 756, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, maternity leave regulations now provide that maternity leave is based solely on a state employee's disability due to pregnancy but do not require proof of medical disability for the first 6 weeks after birth; and

WHEREAS, this rule is arbitrary in that it excludes employees from parental leave when employees seek to establish families through means other than childbirth; and

WHEREAS, this rule is against public policy in that it fails to recognize the equal contributions to societal well-being of both families created through adoption and families created through childbirth."

1981 Amendment: Added definition of sick-pay plan.

Case Notes

Deaf and Blind School Employee Contracts Not Personal Services Contracts — Employees Entitled to Annual Leave and Holiday Pay Accrued: Employees of the Montana School for the Deaf and Blind signed standard form year-to-year employment contracts that granted them "all holidays and annual leave to which [the employee] is entitled under state law" and "all employee benefits to which [the employee] is entitled under the laws of the State of Montana". The employees were required to work evenings and to be on call much of the time. Nevertheless, the employees were required to complete time cards showing employment for only 8-hour days and were paid for only that time. The employees submitted a claim to the Board of Public Education for annual leave and holiday pay accrued but not paid and sued the Board when it refused to pay them. The Board defended, claiming that the employees' contracts were personal services contracts and that therefore the employees were exempt from the definition of an "employee" under this section. The Supreme Court held that the District Court properly granted summary judgment for the employees because the employees were not hired on an ad hoc basis because of the highly technical nature of their employment—rather, the employees are year-round employees given the benefit of the state group health plan and given grade and pay increases on state payroll accounting forms. The Supreme Court concluded that to hold otherwise would mean that all state employees are hired under personal services contracts and no state employee is entitled to annual leave and holiday pay, a construction that the Supreme Court determined would be unreasonable. Corwin v. Bd. of Pub. Educ., 272 M 14, 898 P2d 1227, 52 St. Rep. 589 (1995).

Temporary Employment — No Recall Rights: A labor agreement provided that an employee would not have recall rights under a seniority clause unless he was employed for 6 continuous months. A union employee was hired to temporarily replace an injured permanent employee and worked for a period 2 days short of 6 months. The injured employee returned but worked only 3 days. Twenty days later, the union employee was rehired for a period 1 day short of 6 months. The employer then hired a permanent employee to replace the union employee, who contended the contract was violated by the employer's failure to recall him for the permanent position. Recall rights were not earned by the union employee under the contract because the position fell short of 6 months on both occasions. The 20-day break in employment represented a substantial break in service; therefore, the employment was not continuous or renewable. Local 1334 v. Great Falls, 233 M 432, 760 P2d 99, 45 St. Rep. 1611 (1988).

Mountain View School Teachers as State Employees: Individuals employed to teach at Mountain View School are not employed by a school district and so do not meet the statutory definition of "teacher" in 20-1-101. Therefore, the instructors are considered state employees entitled to the leave benefits provided for other state employees. Mtn. View Educ. Ass'n v. Mtn. View School, 227 M 288, 738 P2d 1288, 44 St. Rep. 1089 (1987).

"Schoolteacher" — Higher Education Faculty Not Included: The plain and ordinary meaning of "schoolteacher" does not encompass higher education faculty, including community college faculty members, especially since community college faculty members are ultimately answerable to the Board of Regents. Community college faculty members are state employees for purposes of entitlement to payment for accumulated sick leave. Rippey v. Bd. of Trustees, 210 M 396, 682 P2d 1363, 41 St. Rep. 1117 (1984), followed, with regard to the fact that "teacher" does not include a community college instructor for tenure purposes, in Talley v. Flathead Valley Community College, 259 M 479, 857 P2d 701, 50 St. Rep. 889 (1993).

School Superintendent: For the purpose of interpreting his contract, school superintendent was classified as a schoolteacher under this part. Bitney v. School District, 167 M 129, 535 P2d 1273 (1975).

Public Employee Supplementing Workers' Compensation With Sick Leave Classified Under Leave-With-Pay Status — Accrual of Vacation and Sick Leave Credits on Prorated Basis: Employees who supplement their workers' compensation benefits with accrued sick leave are classified under leave-with-pay status as to the sick leave hours converted to pay. As such, the employees are entitled to accrue vacation and sick leave credits for the converted hours on a prorated basis. 56 A.G. Op. 1 (2016).

Chief Water Judge Not Subject to State Leave Policies — Executive Branch Not to Supervise Judicial Branch: Although the Chief Water Judge is appointed and not elected, the Chief Water Judge is a judicial officer and is not subject to the vacation leave policies of the Department of Administration. This interpretation of the statutes is also required by the application of the separation of powers clause of the Montana Constitution. To hold otherwise would subject a judicial officer to control by the Executive Branch of state government and not to the control of the Montana Supreme Court or the Judicial Standards Commission. 48 A.G. Op. 2 (1999).

Regional Airport Authority Employee Entitled to Credit for Sick and Vacation Leave Earned With Other Public Entity: A regional airport authority is a public entity and, upon satisfaction of relevant statutory criteria, is required to give credit for sick and vacation leave earned by its airport police officers during employment with other public entities. 44 A.G. Op. 27 (1992).

Elected Officials: All state, county, and city officers having the legal status of elected officials are excluded from the definition of employee in 2-18-601. 38 A.G. Op. 12 (1979).

County Employee Elected to Public Office: A county employee who is elected or appointed to a public office of the state, county, or city thereby terminates his employment and is entitled to receive vacation and sick leave benefits accumulated during his employment, unless he falls within the mandatory leave provision of 2-18-620 (now repealed). 38 A.G. Op. 12 (1979).

Hospital District Employees — Vacation and Sick Leave: Employees of county hospital districts are employees of a subdivision of the county and are therefore entitled to receive the vacation and sick leave benefits provided public employees. 37 A.G. Op. 102 (1977).

County Superintendent of Schools: An elected County Superintendent of Schools is not an "employee" for the purposes of this part. 37 A.G. Op. 4 (1977).

Definition of "Employees": This section does not repeal by implication the section excluding elected officials and schoolteachers from the definition of "employees". 37 A.G. Op. 4 (1977).

2-18-603. Holidays — observance when falling on employee's day off.

Compiler's Comments

1997 Amendment: Chapter 339 inserted (1)(c) providing that a short-term worker may not receive holiday pay; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1981 Amendment: Substituted "a day off with pay either on the day preceding the holiday or on another day following the holiday in the same pay period or as scheduled by the employee and his supervisor" for "a day off either on the day preceding or the day following the holiday" in (1); inserted the phrase "provided the employee is in a pay status on his last regularly scheduled working day immediately before the holiday or on his first regularly scheduled working day immediately after the holiday" at the end of the first sentence in (1); substituted "pay" for "paid holiday time off based only on the number of hours scheduled" in (1); added the phrase "on a prorated basis according to rules adopted by the department of administration or appropriate administrative officer under 2-18-604" at the end of (1).

Attorney General's Opinions

Pay for Holidays — 10-Hour Days — Collective Bargaining for County Employees: A county may collectively bargain that public employees who work 10-hour days for 4 days per week are to be paid for 10 hours on holidays that fall on their regularly scheduled workday. 53 A.G. Op. 4 (2010).

Holiday Pay Applicable to County Road Employees Who Work Ten-Hour Days: County road and bridge department employees regularly working 10-hour days 4 days a week are entitled to 8 hours' pay under this section for all nonworked holidays. 43 A.G. Op. 14 (1989).

Holidays and Vacations: Section 2-18-603, which generally entitles each state, city, and county employee to a day off on the day preceding or following a holiday which falls on the employee's regular day off, is applicable to full-time salaried employees of a county hospital district. Vacation and holiday leave time for public employees are cumulative. If a holiday or its complement under 2-18-603 falls during a public employee's annual vacation, that day should not be counted against leave time. If counted against leave time, the employee must be given a paid day off at a later time to make up for the lost holiday. A public employee may be required to work on a holiday or its complement under 2-18-603. However, a public employee who works a holiday or its complement must be either compensated for the lost holiday or given an opportunity to take a paid day off at a later time. The holiday provisions of 2-18-603 apply to full-time, salaried public employees. They do not apply to part-time, temporary, or seasonal employees who are paid on an hourly or per diem basis for work actually performed. 38 A.G. Op. 16 (1979).

Nonteaching School Employees — Public Employees: Nonteaching school district employees are public employees and thus entitled to the legal holidays enumerated in 1-1-216 just as are all other public employees. They are not entitled to the school holidays enumerated in 20-1-305. 37 A.G. Op. 96 (1977), overruling in part 36 A.G. Op. 105 (1976). (Annotator's Comment: This opinion not to take effect until the 1978-79 school year.)

Employment Contract Providing for Extra Pay for Working Holidays: An employment contract providing that public employees are entitled to extra pay for working on a paid holiday applies fully to employees called to work on the day they were to have off in place of a holiday under this section. 37 A.G. Op. 44 (1977).

Coverage of Act: All public employees, including nonteaching school district employees, who are covered by the vacation, sick leave, and holiday provisions are entitled to paid days off on legal holidays. 36 A.G. Op. 105 (1976), overruled in part by 37 A.G. Op. 96 (1977).

Department Rules Upheld — Leave Time — Agency Interpretation Entitled to Substantial Weight: The Department of Administration's comprehensive set of rules, adopted under this section, explicitly recognizes that vacation and sick leave credits are accrued on an hourly basis. In construing statutes, the interpretation of the administrative body is entitled to substantial weight. Here, agency's interpretation was applied to public employees at the local level. 39 A.G. Applicability: Section 173, Ch. 480, L. 1997 provided: "(1) [Sections 1 through 156] [Title 42, chapters 1 through 8, chapter 8 renumbered in Title 52, chapter 8, part 1] apply to proceedings commenced on or after October 1, 1997.

(2) A petition for adoption filed prior to October 1, 1997, is governed by the law in effect at the time the petition was filed.

(3) The putative father registry requirements apply to children born on or after October 1, 1997."

Preamble: The preamble to Ch. 756, L. 1991, provided: "WHEREAS, maternity leave regulations now provide that maternity leave is based solely on a state employee's disability due to pregnancy but do not require proof of medical disability for the first 6 weeks after birth; and

WHEREAS, this rule is arbitrary in that it excludes employees from parental leave when employees seek to establish families through means other than childbirth; and 2005 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 11 in (6) substituted "2-18-601" for "2-18-101". Amendment effective October 1, 2005.

Chapter 75 in (6) in two places inserted reference to student intern; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 24, 2005.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 339 in (5) near beginning after "employees", deleted "do not" and after "credits" substituted "but may not use the credits until after working for 6 qualifying months" for "except that a temporary employee who is subsequently hired into a permanent position within the same jurisdiction without a break in service and temporary employees who are employed continuously longer than 6 months may count as earned leave credits for the immediate term of temporary employment"; inserted (6) providing that a short-term worker may not earn vacation leave credits; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (6) relating to leave accrual for employees with temporary reductions in hours of work.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 328, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it authorizes the public employees' retirement board to adopt rules providing that a retirement system member whose hours have been temporarily reduced as a result of a budget deficit receives the same retirement benefits as if the reduction had not occurred. The legislature intends that public employees suffer no loss of retirement benefits because reduced work hours are instituted to avoid employee layoffs. The legislature directs the board to develop equitable procedures for protecting retirement benefits for members of the public employees', Montana highway patrolmen's, sheriffs', Montana state game wardens' [now game wardens' and peace officers'], municipal police officers', and Montana unified firefighters' retirement systems."

1987 Applicability: Section 6, Ch. 328, L. 1987, provided: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to employees as defined in 2-18-601 whose hours were reduced from 40 hours a week to less than 40 hours a week as a result of a budget deficit on or after January 1, 1986, and who were employees on the effective date of this act." Effective April 2, 1987.

1985 Amendment: In (1) deleted former second sentence that read: "For calculating vacation leave credits, 2080 hours (52 weeks x 40 hours) shall equal 1 year."

1985 Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 593, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to service performed after July 31, 1984."

1983 Amendment: At end of (4), deleted "exceeding 15 working days".

Case Notes

Statutory Qualifying Period for Unpaid Vacation Not Controlled by Policy or Collective Bargaining Agreement: Under 2-18-617, an employee is eligible to recover unused vacation leave only if the employee has worked for the 6-month qualifying period set out in this section. The statutory qualifying period is separate from and not controlled by any probationary period that a local governing body establishes by policy or negotiation of a collective bargaining agreement. Poeppel v. Flathead County, 1999 MT 130, 294 M 487, 982 P2d 1007, 56 St. Rep. 525 (1999).

Employees: Term "employees" was used in section 59-1001, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-18-611, 2-18-612, and 2-18-614), in its generic sense to include all employees of the state or its agencies, including nonteaching school district employees. Teamsters Local 45 v. Cascade County School District, 162 M 277, 511 P2d 339 (1973), distinguished, for circumstances involving community college instructors, in Talley v. Public Employee Supplementing Workers' Compensation With Sick Leave Classified Under Leave-With-Pay Status — Accrual of Vacation and Sick Leave Credits on Prorated Basis: Employees who supplement their workers' compensation benefits with accrued sick leave are classified under leave-with-pay status as to the sick leave hours converted to pay. As such, the employees are entitled to accrue vacation and sick leave credits for the converted hours on a prorated basis. 56 A.G. Op. 1 (2016).

Vacation and Sick Leave to Accrue for Police and Firefighters Injured on Duty: Police officers and firefighters who are injured in the line of duty and who receive salary benefits under 7-32-4132 and 7-33-4133 through the usual payroll system in the same manner as if they were still on regular duty accrue vacation and sick leave credit pursuant to 2-18-611 and 2-18-618. 52 A.G. Op. 7 (2008), overruling a contrary holding in 42 A.G. Op. 114 (1988).

Supplementation of Workers' Compensation Benefits With Annual Leave Not Allowed: Section 39-71-701 provides that a worker is eligible for temporary total disability benefits after suffering a total loss of wages. The term "wages" is defined in 39-71-123 to include remuneration at the regular hourly rate for vacations and sickness periods. If annual leave benefits are paid, then the employee is not suffering a total loss of wages and is not eligible for workers' compensation benefits. Therefore, a state agency may not supplement workers' compensation wage loss benefits with annual leave upon the request of an employee. 44 A.G. Op. 33 (1992).

Compensation of Police Officer Injured on Duty — No Accrual of Leave: Under 7-32-4132, a police officer of a first- or second-class municipality who is injured in the performance of duty is entitled to the difference between any workers' compensation benefits received and the officer's regular salary. However, 7-32-4132 does not provide for accrual of either vacation or sick leave benefits during the period of disability. 42 A.G. Op. 114 (1988), overruled in 52 A.G. Op. 7 (2008) to the extent that police officers and firefighters who are injured in the line of duty and who receive salary benefits under 7-32-4132 and 7-33-4133 through the usual payroll system in the same manner as if they were still on regular duty accrue vacation and sick leave credit pursuant to 2-18-611 and 2-18-618.

Vacation and Sick Leave Benefits: Nonteaching employees of school districts and postsecondary vocational-technical centers are entitled to vacation and sick leave benefits. 38 A.G. Op. 20 (1979).

Holidays and Vacations: Section 2-18-603, which generally entitles each state, city, and county employee to a day off on the day preceding or following a holiday which falls on the employee's regular day off, is applicable to full-time salaried employees of a county hospital district. Vacation and holiday leave time for public employees are cumulative. If a holiday or its complement under 2-18-603 falls during a public employee's annual vacation, that day should not be counted against leave time. If counted against leave time, the employee must be given a paid day off at a later time to make up for the lost holiday. A public employee may be required to work on a holiday or its complement under 2-18-603. However, a public employee who works a holiday or its complement must be either compensated for the lost holiday or given an opportunity to take a paid day off at a later time. The holiday provisions of 2-18-603 apply to full-time, salaried public employees. They do not apply to part-time, temporary, or seasonal employees who are paid on an hourly or per diem basis for work actually performed. 38 A.G. Op. 16 (1979).

County Employee Elected to Public Office: A county employee who is elected or appointed to a public office of the state, county, or city thereby terminates his employment and is entitled to receive vacation and sick leave benefits accumulated during his employment, unless he falls within the mandatory leave provision of 2-18-620 (now repealed). 38 A.G. Op. 12 (1979).

Hospital District Employees — Vacation and Sick Leave: Employees of county hospital districts are employees of a subdivision of the county and are therefore entitled to receive the vacation and sick leave benefits provided public employees. 37 A.G. Op. 102 (1977).

County Superintendent of Schools: An elected County Superintendent of Schools is not an "employee" for the purposes of this part. 37 A.G. Op. 4 (1977).

Vacation Leave Computed From Date of Employment: State, city, and county full-time employees are entitled to annual vacation leave with pay pursuant to this section, provided they have been "continuously employed for a period of 6 calendar months" computed from date of employment rather than July 1, 1975, the effective date of this part. 36 A.G. Op. 14 (1975).

2007 Amendment: Chapter 61 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective October 1, 2007.

1985 Amendment: Inserted (2) providing method to determine years of employment.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 593, L. 1985, provided: "This act applies retroactively, within the meaning of 1-2-109, to service performed after July 31, 1984."

Employees: Term "employees" was used in section 59-1001, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-18-611, 2-18-612, and 2-18-614), in its generic sense to include all employees of the state or its agencies, including nonteaching school district employees. School District Employees: Full-time nonteaching employees of county school district were entitled to vacation benefits under section 59-1001, R.C.M. 1947 (now 2-18-611, 2-18-612, and 2-18-614), adjusted retroactively to date of their employment subject to the 2-year Statute of Limitations placed upon liability created by statute and reduced by vacation benefits received under contract negotiations or administrative regulations. Change to Ten-Hour Work Day — Leave Time Calculated on Hourly Basis: Accrued employee leave time is calculated on an hourly basis for the purpose of determining the amount of leave time credited to employees who change from an 8-hour work day to a 10-hour work day. 39 A.G. Op. 15 (1981).

Holidays and Vacations: Section 2-18-603, which generally entitles each state, city, and county employee to a day off on the day preceding or following a holiday which falls on the employee's regular day off, is applicable to full-time salaried employees of a county hospital district. Vacation and holiday leave time for public employees are cumulative. If a holiday or its complement under 2-18-603 falls during a public employee's annual vacation, that day should not be counted against leave time. If counted against leave time, the employee must be given a paid day off at a later time to make up for the lost holiday. A public employee may be required to work on a holiday or its complement under 2-18-603. However, a public employee who works a holiday or its complement must be either compensated for the lost holiday or given an opportunity to take a paid day off at a later time. The holiday provisions of 2-18-603 apply to full-time, salaried public employees. They do not apply to part-time, temporary, or seasonal employees who are paid on an hourly or per diem basis for work actually performed. 38 A.G. Op. 16 (1979).

2007 Amendments — Composite Section: Chapter 47 inserted (2)(b) providing that vacation leave contributed to the sick leave fund is nonrefundable and not eligible for cash compensation upon termination; inserted (4) allowing contribution of vacation leave to the sick leave fund; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

Chapter 503 in (2)(a) in introductory clause near middle after "the employee" inserted "and who has worked the qualifying period set forth in 2-18-611" and at end inserted "either"; in (2)(a)(i) after "leave" substituted "if the employee is not subject to subsection (2)(a)(ii)" for "assuming that the employee has worked the qualifying period set forth in 2-18-611"; inserted (2)(a)(ii) providing when an employee is entitled to conversion of unused vacation leave balance to an employer contribution to health care expense trust account; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 143 inserted (4) allowing school districts to provide for cash compensation in lieu of accumulation of vacation leave. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1993 Amendment: Chapter 115 at beginning of (1)(a) inserted exception clause; inserted (1)(b) requiring a public agency head to actively manage vacation leave for agency employees; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective March 18, 1993.

Case Notes

Statutory Qualifying Period for Unpaid Vacation Not Controlled by Policy or Collective Bargaining Agreement: Under this section, an employee is eligible to recover unused vacation leave only if the employee has worked for the 6-month qualifying period set out in 2-18-611. The statutory qualifying period is separate from and not controlled by any probationary period that a local governing body establishes by policy or negotiation of a collective bargaining agreement. Poeppel v. Flathead County, 1999 MT 130, 294 M 487, 982 P2d 1007, 56 St. Rep. 525 (1999).

Denial of Accrued Benefits Not Unconstitutional: State employees, dismissed because of criminal and sexual misconduct investigations, appealed a summary judgment, alleging that the refusal by the Department of Social and Rehabilitation Services (now Department of Public Health and Human Services) to pay accrued vacation benefits violated the double jeopardy and equal protection clauses of the federal constitution. The Supreme Court held that the employees' failure to meet the statutory prerequisite to receive the accrued vacation benefits does not equate to violating a law and facing double jeopardy. Similarly, the terminated employees failed to establish any grounds to support an equal protection discrimination violation. Stuart v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 256 M 231, 846 P2d 965, 50 St. Rep. 48 (1993).

Failure to Exhaust Administrative Remedies Not Bar to Constitutional Challenge: The appellants did not request a hearing when the state agency they worked for terminated them for cause and indicated that it would not pay them for accrued leave. The lower court ruled that the appellants could not challenge the constitutionality of the state law concerning accrued leave because they had not exhausted their administrative remedies. The Supreme Court reversed on the basis that an individual does not have to submit to the provisions of a law he claims is unconstitutional before he can seek a declaratory ruling on the issue of constitutionality. Stuart v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 247 M 433, 807 P2d 710, 48 St. Rep. 238 (1991).

Rights Waived by Failing to Pursue Administrative Remedy: The appellants filed a suit in District Court, alleging that they had been denied due process when the state failed to pay them for accrued leave after they were terminated for cause. The Supreme Court held that the appellants had never requested a departmental hearing and their failure to pursue their administrative remedies amounted to an implied waiver of their rights. Stuart v. Dept. of Social and Rehabilitation Services, 247 M 433, 807 P2d 710, 48 St. Rep. 238 (1991).

School Superintendent: When the contract of the superintendent was silent as to accumulation of annual leave, the court applied the 30-day policy of government employees of this section, although the superintendent was not covered by this section. Bitney v. School District, 167 M 129, 535 P2d 1273 (1975).

Attorney General's Opinions

Annual Cash-Out of Vacation Benefits Impermissible: If excess annual leave is accumulated, it must be used according to the conditions established in this section or it is forfeited. The statutory language clearly establishes a legislative intent that public employees do not have the option of cashing out accumulated but unused vacation leave. The state's general policy encouraging collective bargaining between public employees and their employers is not sufficient to overcome the clear legislative intent. Therefore, Montana law does not permit a public employer to offer a cash-out benefit to employees whereby the unused accumulated vacation leave credits of a public employee who is not terminating employment are bought back by the employer. 46 A.G. Op. 25 (1996).

Beginning of Fiscal Year — Computation for Compensation: Sick or annual leave for employees terminated as laid off on June 30, 1979, should be computed by reference to the pay matrix in effect on that date. 38 A.G. Op. 70 (1980).

County Employee Elected to Public Office: A county employee who is elected or appointed to a public office of the state, county, or city thereby terminates his employment and is entitled to receive vacation and sick leave benefits accumulated during his employment, unless he falls within the mandatory leave provision of 2-18-620 (now repealed). 38 A.G. Op. 12 (1979).

County Superintendent of Schools: An elected County Superintendent of Schools is not an "employee" for the purposes of this part. 37 A.G. Op. 4 (1977).

2-18-618. Sick leave.

Compiler's Comments

2007 Amendment: Chapter 47 in (9) near beginning of first sentence after "sick leave" inserted "or accumulated vacation leave"; and in (10) at end after "sick leave" inserted "or vacation leave". Amendment effective July 1, 2007.

Contingent Effective Date: Section 19(2), Ch. 272, L. 2001, provided that the version effective on occurrence of contingency is "effective on the date that the secretary of state receives certification from the department of administration pursuant to [section 13] [not codified] that the commissioner of internal revenue has determined that the plan established pursuant to [sections 1 through 10] [Title 2, chapter 18, part 13] is qualified for a tax exemption pursuant to section 501(c)(9) of the Internal Revenue Code." On August 1, 2003, the Department of Administration certified to the Secretary of State that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue had determined that Montana's Voluntary Employees' Beneficiary Plan is exempt from federal income tax under section 501(a) of the Internal Revenue Code. Section 501(a) exempts organizations described in section 501(c) so the contingency, which referred to section 501(c)(9), was met.

2001 Amendment: Chapter 272 in (6) at beginning inserted exception clause; in (7) near beginning after "pursuant to this section" inserted "or who, pursuant to 2-18-1311, converts unused sick leave to employer contributions to a health care expense trust account" and at end after "been compensated" inserted "or for which the employee has received an employer contribution to the health care expense trust account"; in (9) in first sentence near beginning after "An employee" inserted "of a state agency" and at end after "accumulated sick leave" inserted "irrespective of the employee's membership or nonmembership in the employee welfare benefit plan established pursuant to 2-18-1304"; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective on occurrence of contingency.

Saving Clause: Section 17, Ch. 272, L. 2001, was a saving clause.

1997 Amendment: Chapter 339 inserted (5) providing that a short-term worker may not earn sick leave credits; and made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1997.

1991 Amendments: Chapter 25 in second sentence of (8) substituted "state employee group benefits advisory council, provided for in 2-15-1016" for "sick leave advisory council provided for in 2-15-216".

Chapter 758 made minor changes in style. Amendment effective July 1, 1991.

Applicability: Section 5, Ch. 758, L. 1991, provided: "[This act] applies to a reduction in force occurring on or after July 1, 1991."

1989 Amendment: Inserted (9) relating to establishment of a local government sick leave fund; and made minor changes in phraseology.

Repeal of Sunset Provision: Section 3, Ch. 707, L. 1985, which terminated 2-18-618(8) July 1, 1989, was repealed by sec. 1, Ch. 65, L. 1989. Repealer effective June 30, 1989.

1987 Amendment: Inserted (9) relating to sick leave accrual for employees with temporary reductions in hours of work.

1987 Statement of Intent: The statement of intent attached to Ch. 328, L. 1987, provided: "A statement of intent is required for this bill because it authorizes the public employees' retirement board to adopt rules providing that a retirement system member whose hours have been temporarily reduced as a result of a budget deficit receives the same retirement benefits as if the reduction had not occurred. The legislature intends that public employees suffer no loss of retirement benefits because reduced work hours are instituted to avoid employee layoffs. The legislature directs the board to develop equitable procedures for protecting retirement benefits for members of the public employees', Montana highway patrolmen's, sheriffs', Montana state game wardens' [now game wardens' and peace officers'], municipal police officers', and Montana unified firefighters' retirement systems."
